

ELLEN G. WHITE ESTATE

LETTERS AND MANUSCRIPTS VOL. 4 (1883-1886)

Ellen G. White

Table of Contents

Table of Contents	2
1883	12
Letters	12
Lt 1, 1883	12
Lt 2, 1883	33
Lt 3, 1883	36
Lt 3a, 1883	45
Lt 4, 1883	46
Lt 5, 1883	47
Lt 6, 1883	51
Lt 7, 1883	61
Lt 8, 1883	68
Lt 9, 1883	73
Lt 10, 1883	79
Lt 11, 1883	81
Lt 12, 1883	89
Lt 13, 1883	90
Lt 14, 1883	92
Lt 15, 1883	97
Lt 15a, 1883	99
Lt 16, 1883	102
Lt 17, 1883	104
Lt 18, 1883	111
Lt 19, 1883	112
Lt 20, 1883	114
Lt 21, 1883	118
Lt 22, 1883	121
Lt 23, 1883	124
Lt 24, 1883	127
Lt 25, 1883	131
Lt 26, 1883	133
Lt 27, 1883	136
Lt 28, 1883	138
Manuscripts	140
Ms 1, 1883	140
Ms 2, 1883	144
Ms 3, 1883	151
Ms 4, 1883	152
Testimonies Garbled by Eli Curtis	153
The First Omission	154
The "Shut Door" Defined	155
An Unreasonable Conjecture	157
A Misquotation	158
The Seal of God	159
Renouncing the Sabbath	159
"Time Nearly Finished"	159
Last-Day Scoffers	162
The Enmity Against Christ	163
Ms 5, 1883	167
Sermon by Mrs. White	167

Ms 6, 1883	179
Ms 7, 1883	180
Ms 8, 1883	181
Ms 9, 1883	182
Ms 10, 1883	189
Ms 11, 1883	190
Ms 12, 1883	193

1884

195

Letters

195

Lt 1, 1884	195
Lt 2, 1884	196
Lt 3, 1884	199
Lt 4, 1884	205
Lt 5, 1884	210
Lt 6, 1884	214
Lt 7, 1884	219
Lt 8, 1884	220
Lt 9, 1884	226
Lt 10, 1884	230
Lt 11, 1884	239
Lt 11a, 1884	243
Lt 12, 1884	247
Lt 13, 1884	252
Lt 14, 1884	255
Lt 15, 1884	261
Lt 16, 1884	265
Lt 17, 1884	266
Lt 18, 1884	272
Lt 19, 1884	274
Lt 19a, 1884	279
Lt 20, 1884	284
Lt 21, 1884	290
Lt 22, 1884	292
Lt 22a, 1884	295
Lt 23, 1884	297
Lt 24, 1884	299
Lt 25, 1884	300
Lt 26, 1884	303
Lt 27, 1884	306
Lt 28, 1884	308
Lt 29, 1884	310
Lt 30, 1884	315
Lt 31, 1884	318
Lt 32, 1884	319
Lt 33, 1884	320
Lt 33a, 1884	321
Lt 33b, 1884	322
Lt 34, 1884	323
Lt 35, 1884	324
Lt 36, 1884	325
Lt 37, 1884	327
Lt 38, 1884	328

Lt 39, 1884	330
Lt 40, 1884	331
Lt 41, 1884	333
Lt 42, 1884	334
Lt 43, 1884	338
Lt 44, 1884	339
Lt 45, 1884	341
Lt 46, 1884	342
Lt 47, 1884	343
Lt 47a, 1884	345
Lt 47b, 1884	346
Lt 48, 1884	347
Lt 49, 1884	349
Lt 50, 1884	353
Lt 51, 1884	357
Lt 52, 1884	361
Lt 53, 1884	364
Lt 54, 1884	368
Lt 54a, 1884	370
Lt 55, 1884	373
Lt 56, 1884	377
Lt 57, 1884	381
Lt 58, 1884	384
Lt 59, 1884	386
Lt 60, 1884	388
Lt 61, 1884	391
Lt 62, 1884	394
Lt 63, 1884	396
Lt 64, 1884	398
Lt 65, 1884	399
Lt 66, 1884	406
Testimony to the Monterey Church	406
Manuscripts	413
Ms 1, 1884	413
Ms 2, 1884	414
(Sermon by E. G. White at the Los Angeles Campground, 2:30 p.m., May 13, 1884)	414
Ms 3, 1884	417
(Notes on a sermon by Mrs. Ellen G. White, Los Angeles Campground, Wednesday, 6 a.m., May 14, 1884.)	417
Ms 4, 1884	420
(Notes on a sermon by Mrs. E. G. White, Los Angeles Campground, Thursday, 6 a.m., May 15, 1884.)	420
Ms 5, 1884	422
(Notes on a sermon by E. G. White, Los Angeles, California, May 16, 1884.)	422
Ms 6, 1884	425
Ms 7, 1884	428
(Notes on a Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White at Oakland, California, Sabbath p.m., May 24, 1884.)	428
Ms 8, 1884	432
Ms 9, 1884	434
Ms 10, 1884	436
Ms 11, 1884	437
Ms 12, 1884	440
Ms 13, 1884	441
Ms 14, 1884	456
Ms 15, 1884	457

Ms 16, 1884	463
Ms 17, 1884	467
1885	468
Letters	468
Lt 1, 1885	468
Lt 2, 1885	477
Lt 3, 1885	478
Lt 4, 1885	479
Lt 5, 1885	490
Lt 6, 1885	493
Lt 7, 1885	498
Lt 8, 1885	509
Lt 9, 1885	511
Lt 10, 1885	512
Lt 10a, 1885	519
Lt 11, 1885	522
Lt 12, 1885	523
Lt 13, 1885	528
Lt 14, 1885	529
Lt 15, 1885	539
Lt 16, 1885	543
Lt 17, 1885	547
Lt 18, 1885	549
Lt 19, 1885	550
Lt 20, 1885	553
Lt 21, 1885	555
Lt 22, 1885	557
Lt 23, 1885	564
Lt 24, 1885	585
Lt 25, 1885	590
Lt 26, 1885	595
Lt 27, 1885	599
Lt 28, 1885	600
Lt 29, 1885	602
Lt 30, 1885	604
Lt 31, 1885	606
Lt 32, 1885	608
Lt 33, 1885	610
Lt 34, 1885	612
Lt 35, 1885	614
Lt 36, 1885	625
Lt 37, 1885	628
Lt 38, 1885	633
Lt 39, 1885	641
Lt 40, 1885	644
Manuscripts	646
Ms 1, 1885	646
Ms 2, 1885	647
Sermon in the Tabernacle	647
Ms 2a, 1885	659
Ms 3, 1885	660
Ms 4, 1885	671

Ms 4a, 1885	678
Ms 4b, 1885	707
Ms 5, 1885	714
Ms 6, 1885	723
Ms 7, 1885	727
Ms 8, 1885	731
Ms 9, 1885	735
Ms 10, 1885	739
Ms 11, 1885	744
Ms 12, 1885	748
Ms 13, 1885	752
Ms 14, 1885	753
Ms 15, 1885	757
Ms 16, 1885	763
Ms 16a, 1885	767
Ms 17, 1885	795
Ms 18, 1885	801
Open-Air Meetings	801
Ms 19, 1885	803
Ms 20, 1885	808
Ms 21, 1885	816
Ms 22, 1885	818
Ms 23, 1885	826
About Miles Grant	826
Ms 24, 1885	835
Labors in Switzerland	835
Ms 25, 1885	851
First Visit to Denmark	851
Ms 26, 1885	861
First Visit to Sweden	861
Ms 27, 1885	882
First Visit to Norway	882
Ms 28, 1885	895
Labors in Switzerland	895
Ms 29, 1885	902
First Visit to Italy	902
Ms 29a, 1885	919
Ms 30, 1885	922
Labors in Switzerland	922
Ms 30a, 1885	930
Ms 31, 1885	932
Ms 32, 1885	934
Ms 33, 1885	936
Ms 34, 1885	945
Ms 34a, 1885	947
Ms 34b, 1885	950
Ms 35, 1885	953
Ms 36, 1885	960
Ms 37, 1885	969
1886	976
Letters	976
Lt 1, 1886	976
Lt 2, 1886	977

A Dream Concerning J. E. White	981
Lt 3, 1886	988
Lt 4, 1886	1003
Lt 5, 1886	1004
Lt 6, 1886	1010
Lt 7, 1886	1015
Lt 7a, 1886	1027
Lt 8, 1886	1032
Lt 9, 1886	1041
Lt 10, 1886	1045
Lt 11, 1886	1056
Lt 11a, 1886	1061
Lt 11b, 1886	1066
Lt 12, 1886	1070
Lt 13, 1886	1073
Lt 14, 1886	1076
Lt 15, 1886	1077
Lt 16, 1886	1078
Lt 17, 1886	1083
Lt 18, 1886	1086
Lt 19, 1886	1091
Lt 19a, 1886	1104
Lt 20, 1886	1107
Lt 21, 1886	1111
Lt 22, 1886	1126
Lt 23, 1886	1128
Lt 23a, 1886	1134
Lt 24, 1886	1136
Lt 25, 1886	1138
Lt 26, 1886	1141
Lt 27, 1886	1142
Lt 28, 1886	1143
Lt 29, 1886	1146
Lt 29a, 1886	1152
Lt 30, 1886	1156
Lt 31, 1886	1159
Lt 32, 1886	1166
Lt 33, 1886	1170
Lt 34, 1886	1176
Lt 34a, 1886	1199
Lt 35, 1886	1219
Lt 36, 1886	1221
Lt 37, 1886	1224
Lt 38, 1886	1227
Lt 38a, 1886	1230
Lt 38b, 1886	1231
Lt 39, 1886	1235
Lt 40, 1886	1239
Lt 41, 1886	1241
Lt 42, 1886	1243
Lt 43, 1886	1247
Lt 44, 1886	1255
Lt 45, 1886	1263

Lt 46, 1886	1266
Lt 47, 1886	1267
Lt 47a, 1886	1276
Lt 48, 1886	1284
Lt 49, 1886	1290
Lt 50, 1886	1294
Lt 51, 1886	1297
Lt 52, 1886	1308
Lt 52a, 1886	1318
Lt 53, 1886	1320
Lt 54, 1886	1325
Lt 55, 1886	1327
Lt 56, 1886	1336
Lt 57, 1886	1339
Lt 58, 1886	1343
Lt 59, 1886	1346
Lt 60, 1886	1351
Lt 61, 1886	1360
Lt 62, 1886	1364
Lt 63, 1886	1370
Lt 64, 1886	1376
Lt 65, 1886	1381
Lt 66, 1886	1388
Lt 66a, 1886	1391
Lt 67, 1886	1395
Lt 68, 1886	1396
Lt 69, 1886	1399
Lt 70, 1886	1400
Lt 71, 1886	1409
Lt 72, 1886	1410
Lt 72a, 1886	1418
Lt 73, 1886	1422
Lt 74, 1886	1426
Lt 75, 1886	1429
Lt 76, 1886	1433
Lt 77, 1886	1437
Lt 78, 1886	1442
Lt 79, 1886	1446
Lt 80, 1886	1447
Lt 81, 1886	1452
Lt 82, 1886	1454
Lt 83, 1886	1457
Lt 84, 1886	1461
Lt 84a, 1886	1472
Lt 85, 1886	1476
Lt 91, 1886	1488
Lt 92, 1886	1490
Lt 92a, 1886	1493
Lt 93, 1886	1496
Lt 94, 1886	1499
Lt 95, 1886	1501
Lt 96, 1886	1506
Lt 97, 1886	1509

Lt 97a, 1886	1516
Lt 98, 1886	1517
Lt 99, 1886	1519
Lt 100, 1886	1523
Lt 101, 1886	1527
Lt 102, 1886	1531
Lt 103, 1886	1536
Lt 104, 1886	1538
Lt 105, 1886	1541
Lt 106, 1886	1545
Lt 107, 1886	1547
Lt 108, 1886	1550
Lt 108a, 1886	1557
Fragments of letters	1557
Lt 109, 1886	1560
Lt 110, 1886	1563
Lt 111, 1886	1568
Lt 112, 1886	1571
Lt 113, 1886	1574
Lt 114, 1886	1581
Lt 115, 1886	1584
Lt 116, 1886	1589
Lt 117, 1886	1591
Lt 118, 1886	1597
Lt 119, 1886	1598
Lt 120, 1886	1603
Lt 121, 1886	1611
Lt 122, 1886	1613
Lt 123, 1886	1616
Lt 124, 1886	1617
Lt 125, 1886	1618
Manuscripts	1624
Ms 5, 1886	1624
Ms 6, 1886	1631
Ms 6a, 1886	1636
(Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White, June 27, 1886, Orebro, Sweden.)	1636
Ms 7, 1886	1648
Ms 7a, 1886	1654
Ms 8, 1886	1662
(Morning talk.)	1662
Ms 9, 1886	1666
(Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White.)	1666
Ms 10, 1886	1673
Ms 11, 1886	1679
Ms 12, 1886	1687
Ms 13, 1886	1688
Ms 14, 1886	1692
Ms 15, 1886	1693
Ms 15a, 1886	1702
Ms 15b, 1886	1706
Ms 15c, 1886	1713
Ms 16, 1886	1714
(Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White, Grimsby, England, Sept. 19, 1886)	1714

Ms 17, 1886	1723
Ms 19, 1886	1724
Ms 19a, 1886	1731
Ms 20, 1886	1737
Ms 21, 1886	1744
Ms 22, 1886	1745
Ms 23, 1886	1751
Ms 24, 1886	1760
Ms 25, 1886	1763
Ms 26, 1886	1766
The Importance of Obedience	1770
Ms 27, 1886	1773
Ms 28, 1886	1778
Ms 29, 1886	1781
Ms 30, 1886	1785
Ms 31, 1886	1789
Ms 32, 1886	1792
Ms 33, 1886	1793
Ms 34, 1886	1800
Ms 35, 1886	1801
Ms 36, 1886	1805
Ms 37, 1886	1806
Ms 37a, 1886	1820
Ms 38, 1886	1821
Ms 39, 1886	1826
Ms 40, 1886	1830
Ms 41, 1886	1835
Ms 42, 1886	1841
Ms 43, 1886	1847
Ms 44, 1886	1852
Ms 45, 1886	1857
Ms 46, 1886	1862
Ms 46a, 1886	1867
Ms 47, 1886	1870
Ms 48, 1886	1875
Ms 49, 1886	1880
Ms 50, 1886	1886
Ms 51, 1886	1890
Ms 52, 1886	1892
Ms 53, 1886	1895
Ms 54, 1886	1899
Ms 55, 1886	1909
Ms 56, 1886	1921
Ms 57, 1886	1928
Ms 58, 1886	1934
Ms 59, 1886	1941
Ms 60, 1886	1944
Ms 61, 1886	1950
Labors in Switzerland—No. 4	1950
Ms 62, 1886	1958
Second Visit to Italy	1958
Ms 63, 1886	1989
Ms 64, 1886	1992

Labors in Switzerland—No. 5	1992
Addition to Ms 64, 1886	1994
Ms 65, 1886	1998
Second Visit to Sweden	1998
Ms 66, 1886	2015
Second Visit to Norway	2015
Ms 67, 1886	2025
Second Visit to Denmark	2025
Ms 68, 1886	2032
Labors in Switzerland	2032
Ms 69, 1886	2037
Second Visit to Great Britain	2037
Ms 70, 1886	2041
First Visit to France	2041
Ms 71, 1886	2050
Third Visit to Italy	2050
Ms 72, 1886	2054
Labors in Switzerland	2054
Ms 73, 1886	2057
Falling Stars—Italy	2057
On the Cars En Route for Bienne From Basel	2058
Mountains and Rocks	2058
Ms 74, 1886	2060
Ms 75, 1886	2066
Ms 76, 1886	2078
Ms 77, 1886	2081
Ms 78, 1886	2085
Ms 79, 1886	2088
Ms 80, 1886	2096
Ms 81, 1886	2105
Morning Talk	2105
Ms 82, 1886	2109
Morning Talk	2109
Ms 83, 1886	2114
Ms 84, 1886	2123
Ms 85, 1886	2132
Ms 86, 1886	2133
Ms 87, 1886	2142
Ms 88, 1886	2146
Ms 89, 1886	2151

1883

Letters

Lt 1, 1883

Andrews, J. N.

Healdsburg, California

March 29, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in TSB 34-35; 2MCP 461, 463; UL 102; OHC 363; Ev 96; 3MR 318, 337; 9MR 370; 10MR 8.

Dear Brother Andrews:

I have heretofore written you several letters and never sent them, so I attempt to write you again. I know your temperament is peculiar, and I have felt that you were not able even to bear the truth if it conflicted with your ideas. I met Brother Gardner and anticipated a visit with him to learn something in regard to Europe but was forced away from Oakland, unable to bear the coast climate. I hear nothing from brother [S. N.] Haskell in regard to Europe. He will be on this coast in about three weeks.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 1

You remember I wrote you from Texas to obtain a wife before you returned to Europe. Do you suppose I would have given you such advice if I had had no light upon the matter? Be assured, no such counsel would have been given you without good reason. I was shown [that] you follow your own judgment and your own ideas altogether too tenaciously. If you were more willing to be counseled by those you should confide in and trust less to your own feelings and impressions, the result for yourself and for the cause of God would be far better.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 2

I was shown that you made a mistake in starting to Europe without a companion. If you had, before starting, selected you a godly woman who could have been a mother to your children, you would have done a wise thing, and your usefulness would have been tenfold to what it has been.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 3

You are not a domestic man. You were in no way qualified to take charge of your children; you were unprepared to manage these children and fill the place of father and mother to them. The advice, the caution, the care a young growing girl needs, you are ignorant of; and the comforts and conveniences you could have had in your domestic arrangement, you did not think of. Your mind and your thoughts had been given to other things. You needed many things you did not have which you could have easily obtained if you had had any experience and if there had been one who had a right to tell you how to arrange your housekeeping, not after the European customs but after American conveniences.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 4

You felt you were a martyr missionary, but it was not so. In your letters your words were of that character that the impressions received by your brethren called out their sorrow and their sympathies for you. They would have plucked out their eyes for you.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 5

Now, my dear and much respected brother, this is a weakness in your character which is your birthright, which has been a grievous hindrance to you through all your religious experience. The association of the two families, Stevens and Andrews, fostered this evil. You were too much blinded to the detriment of both families, but the tendency was strengthened to crave for sympathy, to love to be pitied, to be regarded as one suffering privations, and as a martyr. This spirit has been with you and grown in you. Any who viewed matters as you did, who accepted your views and ideas of matters, were cherished as your best friends, while you were not drawn toward those who, from a sense of duty, differ from you in plans and the execution of them. You did not see and understand the nature, the cause, and [the] result of this trait in your character. It has strengthened in you a disposition to dwell upon your own self, to talk of your trials and of your troubles, and every time you have spoken of them you have regarded them in an intense light and your craving for sympathy has increased.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 6

God did not decree that you should die, but the course you have pursued in following your own judgment and dwelling on your own impressions has been a species of fanaticism. God was not in it; you have magnified your own afflictions. You have seemed to take satisfaction in enshrouding yourself in clouds of gloom and talking over and over where others have done you wrong and where you have suffered in consequence. The enemy has magnified these matters before you until molehills have been increased to the proportion of mountains, and these imaginative sufferings have been a reality to you.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 7

While you were living at Sister Harris', you had the same complaints to make. You thought you were enduring great privations, and the sympathies of many were drawn out in your behalf. They came to me with the matter, and my sympathies were awakened, but when I had an opportunity to learn the facts, I knew that there was a deception on your mind [and] that these feelings had no foundation in facts. It was a vivid imagination that had been cultivated and strengthened by sympathy of your friends who were not wise, who did not possess sanctified judgment. Your sympathetic friends have been worse to you than your enemies in their pity and sympathy to you. I know whereof I write.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 8

Now if you go down into the grave, I do not want you should go down in a deception. I advised you not to go back to Europe without a wife. This was not from my own mind. The Lord knew what was best for you. I have been shown more recently that errors and mistakes would have been avoided had you pursued this course.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 9

Your family is not as it should be. I was shown one who it were better had she never connected with you—Sister Oyen. She is self-confident; she has a high opinion of herself, and she takes the position in reference to you in many respects as a wife. How much better would it be for you if you had a good wife to care for you and perform the duties of a wife. The matter as it now stands is not right. This is not the person to help you. She accepts all you say; she credits all your imagining; she sympathizes with all your conversation in regard to your trials.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 10

Now, Brother Andrews, this is a species of selfishness to keep your mind dwelling upon yourself. It is not at all like the apostle Paul, who was a man of infirmities, yet himself was the last subject of his thoughts. He had trials such as you have never experienced nor ever will be called upon to endure, and yet he turns away from these; he does not dwell upon them, but magnifies the grace of God.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 11

Your wife was the subject of disease and death. Your grief was just as intense as all your other troubles. You hugged the grief to your bosom, you loved to dwell upon it, and you allowed your mind and thoughts to be selfishly occupied with your grief, and as a consequence your health suffered. Then your daughter's death was indeed a sad blow, but others have passed through the same under more trying circumstances. You allowed this affliction to unman you; you dwelt upon it, you talked of it, you aggravated your soul over a matter you could not change or help. It was a sin to take any of these afflictions as you have done.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 12

I know whereof I speak. If the mind is permitted to be clouded with grief, the food is not digested, and as a result the system is not well nourished.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 13

As we are not our own, as we are bought with a price, it is the duty of every one who professes to be a Christian to keep his thoughts under the control of reason and oblige himself to be cheerful and happy. However bitter may be the cause of his grief, he should cultivate a spirit of rest and quietude in God. The restfulness which is in Christ Jesus, the peace of Christ, how precious, how healing its influence, how soothing to the oppressed soul! However dark his prospects, let him cherish a spirit to hope for good. While nothing is gained by despondency, much is lost. While cheerfulness and a calm resignation and peace will make others happy and healthy, it will be of the greatest benefit to one's self. Sadness and talking of disagreeable things is encouraging the disagreeable scenes, bringing back upon one's self the disagreeable effect. God wants us to forget all these—not look down but up, up!4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 14

Sadness deadens the circulation in the blood vessels and nerves, and also retards the action of the liver. It hinders the process of digestion and of nutrition and has a tendency to dry up the marrow of the whole system. You are a dyspeptic. Mental depression causes dyspepsia, and this aggravates the mental disorder, and unless you can be induced through change of some kind to be attracted away from yourself and from your complaints, you will cut short your life, and while you do live, [you will] be unable to think healthfully and to work healthfully. Your imagination will play you tricks, your fancy will lead you to wrong conclusions, your imagination will be diseased; you take for reality impressions in which there is no truth and for which there is no foundation. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 15

You have been alone too much and yet you choose this rather than to be connected with others. If you had now some very light physical employment it would divert your thoughts from yourself and be of great advantage to you. It would not have been any injustice to your children if you had taken a good wife, but it would have been justice and mercy to them. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 16

If those around you are of that class who do not seek to turn your conversation and the current of your thoughts, if they sympathize with all your impressions as if they were a reality, the less you have of the society of this class, the better. They are not your friends but your worst enemies. The Lord would have you be cheerful. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 17

You have buried dead friends; so have I; but I dare not ask, "Why hast Thou cast me into the furnace? Why have I been afflicted again and again?" The answer comes back to me down along the lines, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know afterwards." [John 13:7.] 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 18

God's purposes are often veiled in mystery; they are incomprehensible to finite minds; but He who sees the end from beginning knows better than we. What we need is to cleanse us from earthliness, to perfect our Christian character that the robe of Christ's righteousness shall be put upon us. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 19

It has been unfortunate for your children in some respects that they had not a different element brought into their education. You have succeeded in binding them to yourself, but there are chapters in their experience they have not had opened to them which were essential for the makeup and development of their character. In some things you have not an evenly balanced mind; to reproduce these defects in your children would not be the best for them. You have not been wise in giving your children your mold of character by education. They ought to have had one who by right could correct their errors and at the same time lead them onward and upward to a purer and more perfect development of character.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 20

You have been very anxious [that] your children should come up free from vicious habits which characterize the youth of this age; in this you have been successful; but you had not the ability to carry them forward and upward to thorough development of the ability God had given them.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 21

Your caution has kept your son back; you have not allowed him to take responsibilities; you have not prepared the way that he should know how to work and use his own mind, while you should guide that mind. You had not the qualities in you to place the right mold upon his character so that he would feel his individual responsibility. You have taught him to rely upon you in the smaller matters as well as [the] larger until he is the shadow of yourself. And now, when he is a man in years, he is but a child as far as individual independence is concerned. You have not seen the necessity of his perfecting his experience by practice. Of course he will make mistakes in learning, but he will never learn unless he is trusted to do things, to think and to act and [to] feel that he is a responsible agent.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 22

From the very first of your commencing your work in Europe, you ought to have had one connected with you who would dare to differ with you in your plans and the execution of them, if he saw defects and errors in these plans. There should have been some one with whom you could consult about the work in your home and in the cause of God. One man's mind and one man's judgment should not be woven through the entire work. You have been engrossed in study and books and have not duly considered [that] the one great and important part of your work was to allow and teach others to work with you. Lay upon them the burdens and care of very many things you have done yourself which have been extra draughts upon your precious strength, that have used up your vitality so that you had not the strength to devote to duties far more important. This was the course my husband pursued in many things.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 23

Now, my dear brother, many of your sorrows and trials have occurred because of defects in your character and [the] manner of labor [that] has been presented before your mind; and you are so constituted that you could not bear that your course of action should be questioned, and you have thought it a personal injury done to you which has been the cause of your physical weakness and mental gloom; but, my brother, this is not in all respects the true light in which you should view this matter.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 24

You have been censured many times unjustly; you have been counseled and entreated for your good, which by you has been construed into reproof. You have been too often inclined to think your opinion infallible, and your early experience in connection with early associates has deepened this opinion; and it has let you in later years to treat others, wiser even than yourself, as children in knowledge, especially where yourself was concerned. This has been your infirmity.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 25

There have been your near and dear associates in your early experience who have flattered you, petted you, and construed your defects into virtues. Now these needed no strengthening, but to be depressed, to be held in check, to be reformed, which would have saved you many hours of suffering of mind and increased your usefulness in a great degree in the work and cause of God. I would send away the deception which has for long years enveloped your mind in darkness. Oh that I could send away this impression that you are continually suffering through the wrong course others have pursued towards you! Oh that you look away yourself, cease to bemoan yourself, and trust yourself fully and entirely in the hands of Jesus! Think of His love! Talk of His goodness and His mercy!4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 26

My dear brother, you should have been working to the end to have all about you do all they can do. Very many things you have continued to retain, and have done [the things] your son should have done, [so] that if you should, in the providence of God, leave the work, he could take it and carry it forward. You should, as well as every responsible man, be urging responsibilities upon others, that as the work extends, others can work as well as you.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 27

God never designed that you should mold your son or any other man to work according to your peculiar style, but according to their own ability which God has given them. You have held things in Europe from advancing because you wanted them to go according to your plans and your ideas, and you have thought they had better not go at all than not follow the exact channel you had marked out. You should have done less yourself and taught your son how to work, how to take responsibilities. If there are mistakes made, kindly and patiently teach him how to improve. This is the very way to educate and bring up helpers in the work and cause of God so that your son and your brethren may be growing all the while in talent by improving the talent God has given them.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 28

The work will not advance in Europe until there shall be men of different minds to affect different individuals. You are keeping the work encircled in your own arms, which will never do. It will not grow as God has designed it should. You have peculiarities that are detrimental to the advancement and healthy growth of the work. Unless it shall go in the channel you have marked out, you would not have it go at all.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 29

Your concentrativeness has been carried to great lengths, to settle down in one groove, to wish to remain there undisturbed, although changes could be made for the better; yet disease has had the effect to make you regard with great reluctance any change, even though it would be better in every respect. You had certain plans and ideas that you were hoping to accomplish, and you could not seem to get your mind upon anything else. Those whose minds had not been on the strain as yours could see where great improvements could be made; but their counsel has appeared to you calculated to injure you and injure the work. You have been exceedingly pained because you thought they did not understand the matter as well as you, and you have not been inclined to follow the plans or to be advised to make any change in your manner of living or in your location or in your plans of operation. This is partially owing to disease and to an erroneous imagination.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 30

A formal routine is to be avoided by all laborers in the work and cause of God. There has ever been a drawback in your labors in writing and preaching because if you could not have all things move forward with perfection you would not have them move at all. And while you are getting ready to do something, the opportunity has passed for doing anything you hoped to do that would have resulted in great good in the advancement in the work. While we are getting ready to do a great work, if we are not prompt, the opportunity for doing a small work passes; a good work, if not so thorough and perfect, passes by and nothing at all is done, waiting to do everything by rule.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 31

Oh how much has been lost through ministers getting ready to do some great thing by and by and neglecting to improve present opportunities of doing something, although it may appear small and crude! The love of approbation and praise should not be in the hearts of God's workmen. Human applause amounts to more harm than good; reaching but for human sympathy is another dangerous indulgence. It flatters, it deceives, it ruins. And all laborers should not be too exacting, [should] not make self a theme of thought and dwell upon their suffering. You see errors in your brethren; but if you are not responsible for these errors, you should not enshroud your soul in gloom and despondency.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 32

You have too often sacrificed your own happiness because your brethren did not come up to your ideas of duty. You cannot drive them by forever dwelling upon their delinquencies. Their combativeness and opposition is at once raised. Dwell upon the perfection of Christ's character, making no allusion to them, and if they really love Jesus, they will be softened and subdued and will of themselves come into the right position.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 33

My dear brother, you reproduce your trials and past grievances by talking of them. Sister Oyen listens to all these recitals and encourages the conversation by her abundant sympathy. She does you no good in this. Someone should be with you who will call your attention from yourself and from unpleasant subjects and introduce matters of a cheerful character. I tell you, God is not glorified by any such themes of conversation. You magnify your trials; you magnify your self-sacrifice; and magnify the errors of your brethren. "Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report ... think on these things." [Philippians 4:8.] Look away to Jesus, the eternal reward, the immortal inheritance. There is a safe channel for our thoughts. We may think all we please here and with perfect safety. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 34

It was a mistake in permitting you to go into the field, the important missionary field, alone. One or two more should have stood with you engaged in the work, not [to] be under your supervision, not [to] follow your ideas, but for you to counsel together and move harmoniously, [so] that the weak traits in the character might not have a predominating power upon the work in Europe, that each should move in perfect harmony with the other. But left as you have been, almost alone, you have felt that any division from your ideas and your plans was a wrong done you. You have pursued that plan of labor that no one could connect with you for they were not men after your own mind. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 35

If you could find one or two who should accept all your plans and who should sympathize fully with your grievances, in your judgment they would be just the men for the place, but they would not be the wise laborers whom God would choose, for this class would ruin the work in Switzerland. Man seeth not as God seeth. He would connect with you kindhearted, true, earnest workers who would in all kindness differ from your plans and from your opinions and feelings from a sense of duty when they saw the cause of God demand it. There should have been men of experience at this time fully qualified to be entrusted with the work, and these men should have been sharing the responsibilities, learning how to bear them. Everything you can make others do will be giving them intelligence in the work. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 36

You have not wanted men should come to Europe, fearing they would not do the work just after your plan, and you would not trust them. This is not right. God did not want it thus. You see that your brethren do not do as you wish them to do. After you have done what you think is your duty to them, then you should go forward, trusting in the Lord to touch their hearts. You should not allow your spirit to grieve over their imperfections. By so doing you disqualify yourself for doing them good. If you pass along, doing your work given you of God, showing that you rely upon the Mighty One, [being] a sunshiny Christian, showing that you are living in the light of the Sun of Righteousness, that you are walking in the light as He is in the light, [you will see that] the trials you bemoan were designed for your good. If you have not profited by them, if they have not proved an advantage to you in many respects, it is because you have not received these adversities in the right spirit. God designed all these trials, not to discourage, but to develop a class of Christian virtues which seldom are seen in the sunshine of prosperity.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 37

Faith, patience, forbearance, heavenly-mindedness, trust in your wise heavenly Father are the perfect blossoms which mature amidst clouds and disappointments and bereavements. God designs you and I should both know the discipline of adversity. [You are] not to mourn and distress your soul over the providence of God, but say from the heart, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted" [Psalm 119:71]; that you could from the heart say, "I have been deprived of earthly dependence that I might trust more continually in my Saviour."4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 38

It may seem that invincible forces are arrayed against you, but dare you look at these adverse powers? Look away and cry out, "Greater is He that I love and whom I serve than all the powers of darkness!" It is faith, trusting faith, that you need. As long as you are true to yourself, no adverse powers of earth or hell will be able to destroy your peace or make you unhappy. Your unhappiness is of your own creating. If you fear God, you need fear nothing else. Oh my brother, nine-tenths of all your trials are born of your imagination. There are thousands who have had far greater real troubles and have not made themselves unhappy over them, but maintained a cheerfulness in God.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 39

Did the great apostle to the Gentiles make any real sacrifice when he exchanged Pharisaism for the gospel of Christ? We answer, No! With decided purpose he turned away from wealth and from friends and social distinction, from public honor, and from his kinsmen whom he loved fervently and earnestly. He chose to link his name and his destiny with that of a people he had regarded as low and the offscouring of all things; but for the sake of Christ he suffered the loss of all things.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 40

His labors were more abundant than any of the disciples, his stripes above measure. He was beaten with rods, stoned, shipwrecked, in deaths oft. He was in peril by land and sea, in the city and in the wilderness, from robbers and from his own countrymen. He prosecuted his mission under continual infirmities, in painfulness, in weariness, in watchings often, in cold, in nakedness. When he became Paul the aged, and the crown of martyrdom was to be his, he was left almost alone. When he answered the bloodthirsty Nero, no man stood with him, but all men forsook him, leaving him alone. But did Paul devote his precious time to the relation of his grievous abuses? No, he called the attention from himself to Jesus. He did not live for his own happiness, yet he was happy. Amid all his conflicts, that which he felt the keenest were trials brought him in consequence of false brethren; yet he presents a cheerful front. "I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation." [2 Corinthians 7:4.] And in the last days of his life, with a martyr's death in full view, he exclaims with satisfaction: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." And fixing his eye upon the immortal future, which had been the grand, inspiring motive of his whole career, he adds, in full assurance of faith, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day"—and then this man who had lived for others forgets himself—"and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." [2 Timothy 4:7, 8.] Oh noble man of faith!4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 41

God did not design [that] you should walk a path of loneliness and suffer privation in any respect, amid plenty. When you first went to Europe, the people did not understand you, and you did not understand them. Had you then had a good wife who understood the wants and means essential for the comforts of domestic life, you would have avoided great evils; but your ideas and your plans were strictly carried out to your inconvenience, to the hindrance of the work. You have not understood yourself, and some of a different tendency of mind should have been connected with you who would have given a more cheerful, hopeful, encouraging feature to the work. In connection with you, such an element would have placed an altogether different stamp upon the work in Switzerland, while it has been managed and carried almost solely by yourself. Should you through sickness or any cause be removed from it, it would be difficult for one to take it where you left it and place a different mold upon it. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 42

God designs that more minds than one shall engage in this work. This missionary field needs a different element woven into the progress of the cause. If any changes are suggested where improvements can be made, it produces a most painful impression upon your mind. I am aware of this as I write, and I scarcely dare open to you that which has been opened to me, but in your last letter you asked me to give any light I had for Europe. How would I be clear if I did not comply with this request? 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 43

You have shut yourself within yourself. You think you know just how the work shall go, and your brethren in Switzerland will not now cooperate with any effort that you do not lead out in, fearing it would be disrespect to you; and you have not had the faculty to engage them in taking responsibilities in connection with you. You have felt that these brethren were not giving you aid and sympathy as they should, and they have not; but why? Because they have not been educated to do this and have not been drilled to help financially. Had they been instructed as they should have been from the first, the cause would today be self-sustaining; but it is not. Switzerland has to be carried by the American brethren; and your feelings are deeply grieved because all the means you desired have not come from your American brethren. Your very necessity was sufficient excuse for you to press your demands upon your brethren in Switzerland which, had it been done wisely, it would have been the best thing for the mission and for those who were accepting the truth. These brethren investing the means in the cause and in the work would have felt a greater personal interest in the work from the very fact they had invested something in it.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 44

You have been liberal with your own means to aid others when you were not called upon, neither was it the best to do this. This has brought you into strait places, and then have come feelings that in America they had neglected you, while at the same time you have not plainly expressed your wants and made known your situation. There has not been all that prompt attention given to the situation on every occasion that ought to have been, but there has been no design to cripple your efforts for the want of means. God lays no sin to their charge for there has not been any wilful neglect.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 45

Knowing your peculiarities of character, it was not wise to permit you to go to Europe alone to engage in the work. You follow impressions too much; you think your impressions are as the voice of God, when your impressions were not always infallible and safe to follow. You have not discernment of character. You worship intellect. If a man has learning, you place high hopes upon him if he embraces the truth. You will dispense to him means and will give him every advantage in influence, when he may use both to work against the cause of present truth and connect with those who would do us harm. You could not see and understand that Brother Repton was one who was not united with us in heart and soul. This man was allowed to draw largely from the treasury until it was exhausted—for what purpose? To carry out his own plans, to fulfill his own purposes. But very little good did he do in the missionary work. He was united with us when means were wanted, but his influence was strengthening others who had no interest with our work much of the time. For this reason you should have [had] the help of other brethren to supply this deficiency in your character—[this] want of discernment.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 46

Those who have sent you aid from America, those who have given to you most liberally are the ones who stand as possessing superior piety and spiritual perfection; those who have sympathized with you the most have been reckoned as your very best friends. Now God places no such estimate upon these very persons you esteem so highly. Some of these very ones will move impulsively and be wrought up to do great things for poor, suffering Brother Andrews, while they will do great injustice to the worthy objects, Christ's little ones, humble children of God right in their midst.⁴*LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 47*

Your feelings must not be regarded as infallible, and your impressions need to be criticized by other and clearer minds. You have had a great dread of any one coming from America, fearing they would question your labors and present some changes that should be made, when you should have greeted any help that was brought to you from your brethren as a godsend. When any proposition has been made for improvement in the work, you have not cooperated with them, but met them with "You do not understand the people in Switzerland and the people in England and Norway."⁴*LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 48*

More missionaries must enter these fields and learn the wants of these fields. It has not been in the order of the Lord, when you first entered the field, that you should have so few to cooperate with you. It was not in His order that you should stand alone for reasons already given. It has not been in His order that one man's mind should plan and devise and execute the work to be done in these different fields of labor. He would have the several laborers in Europe [hold] council meetings together oft, as the brethren in America [do], advising and counseling and laying open the plans for criticism and for improvement that the work should not be narrowed and circumscribed to certain limits to bear a certain mold of one man's education and character. There should be perfect agreement in the work, and if there is but one man in Switzerland who understands the people of Switzerland, the General Conference should select men who have ability to go to Europe and put themselves in the way of knowing the people in Switzerland, in England, and in Norway, and take the position of knowing every field of labor and having a general oversight of all. Switzerland is only one part of the great field, and the workers there are shut up so closely to themselves, as though that were the whole world; so with England and with Norway. There has not one-tenth been done that could have been accomplished had the efforts been more general and more extended.⁴*LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 49*

Your fears, my dear Brother Andrews, have led you to neglect to present before your brethren the necessity of their doing all that was in their power to do and not rely upon help from America. They should have been educated long ago to self-denying, beneficent effort to carry forward the work in their own country. You have been so fearful that someone would think you wanted their means, you have neglected to educate them. Many feel no spirit of self-sacrifice, no burden of labor, and no special interest in the work. If anyone has been at liberty to connect with you, you have not felt at liberty to connect with them. You thought one more would add to the expense, and much time has been lost when you could avail yourself of opportunities to secure help. You have not done so. You have thought it unnecessary.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 50

Now my dear brother, no longer must you feel thus; no longer must it be left for you to say what help shall come to Switzerland. Your feebleness is sufficient excuse for you to lay off these responsibilities. While the means to run these missions has been drawn from America, it was the duty devolving upon the General Conference to have a voice in the matter [as to] who should work in Switzerland, in England, and Norway. Much time has been lost in consequence of these fields not being sufficiently manned.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 51

Christ sent out His disciples two and two. He connected an impulsive, bold, ardent Peter with the more mild and loving John. These men were diverse in character; one would reach a class that the other could not; where John might be wanting in decision, Peter would supply the deficiency. When Peter was rash and impetuous, John's patience, forbearance, and love would have an influence to counteract this spirit, which would do harm if not modified. God did not design that Peter should mold John to his ideas and his style of character; and He did not design that John should take Peter in hand; but He designed [that] both should exert an influence for good on each other and work together in perfect harmony, each blending together in their labor, each having a correcting influence over the other; each was to preserve his individuality and each labor according to his several ability.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 52

There is where Elder [J. N.] Loughborough has made a great failure. His plans are the plans to a minutia; no one must have any plans of his own, but all must accept and work after his plans and follow his judgment if they worked at all. There was left no chance for other minds to plan and to execute.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 53

Elder Matteson makes a similar mistake. He encircles the work; he is the center around which everything must revolve. He must place his mold upon everything. Every one of these is working from a wrong principle, and are not giving the Lord a chance to work through other minds and other talents. God wants these men to not take so much burden on themselves and give Him place to work through whom He will.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 54

Elder [D. T.] Bourdeau should be in Europe. He was not right when there first, but there is work that he can do, and the way should be open before him not to connect with Elder Andrews, but to labor in some part of the field. If he will learn the lessons God designs he should, he will be qualified to put his ability to good use among his countrymen. The Lord will soon come to reckon with His servants. The doings and trusts of all will be scrutinized.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 55

The brethren in Switzerland are far behind. They have let worldly interests separate their affections from God; they have not done the work they ought to have done in advancing the truth. The order of providence in relation to His people is advancement, progression. Continual advancement is the way of holiness, rising higher and higher in the knowledge and love of God.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 56

According to the faith and obedience of God's people will be the fulfillment of His promise. God is unchangeable—the same yesterday, today, and forever. Faith must be exercised in all our prayers, for it has not lost its power, nor humble obedience its reward. If our brethren, who profess to believe the truth, would show their faith by their works, they would honor God and be enabled to convince many souls that they have the truth, for according to their faith and their obedience will they realize the fulfillment of the promises of God and be endowed with power from on high.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 57

God has chosen a people out of the world. They are peculiarly distinguished and favored of God and will work the works of God. Time is short and our efforts will not be needed long in bringing souls to repentance. God has committed to His servants in Switzerland sacred trusts or talents which have not been put out to the exchangers; and the day of reckoning is not far distant when every slothful servant will receive as his works have been.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 58

We are all of us responsible agents from the lowest unto the greatest, and all are invested with the goods of heaven. Light and truth are not to be hid under a bushel but [are] to shine forth and be reflected to others. The varied trusts are proportioned to our several capabilities. He has given to every man his work. Now there are those who can labor for the Master who have not done what they could have done in warning the world. God does not expect of any one talents which they cannot give. There has not been with many, any disposition to use their ability unselfishly in the upbuilding of our Redeemer's kingdom. There is needed, with some deep, earnest heart work, a consecration by the surrendering of the soul to God. Unless the root be holy there can be no sound fruit. There are men whom God calls upon to give themselves to God. He wants you all to be workers.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 59

I call upon you, my brethren in Switzerland, to awaken to your solemn obligations. Those whose means, opportunities, and abilities are greatest have the greatest responsibilities. God calls upon you to put the same tact and sharpness and diligence into your work for Him that you put into your temporal matters. You ought, many of you, to be now experienced men in working in God's cause. How little have many of you invested, how little have you been willing to sacrifice! God will hold you accountable for souls who are in the darkness of error. You who have seen the light of present truth, put out this talent to the exchangers; labor with your whole souls to convert others to the truth. Work, all work as best you can. He does not expect the lowly, uneducated Christian to fight like the champion of faith. He does not expect from poverty the alms it has not to give; nor from the feeble, sick, and suffering the active energies of those blessed with health. But spend no time in mourning that you cannot glorify God by talents He never gave you and for which you are not responsible. Though you may be restricted to the one talent, use that one well, and God will accept your efforts according to what man hath, and not according to what he hath not. Let not one remain idle, aspiring after great things in order to do great service, but do what you can with earnest fidelity.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 60

I call upon you, my brethren and sisters in Switzerland, do the work resting upon you now, although it may be small in your sight; awaken to a sense of your solemn responsibility for the right employment of all your talents entrusted to you by the Lord. The rill does not say, I need not pursue this narrow course because I am not a river. The humble shrub need not say, I will not try to grow because I am not a forest tree. The lamp does not say, I will not shine because I am not a star; nor the star, I need not shine because I am not a sun. Oh let every one do all he can in his sphere and God asks no more.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 61

But the work was represented to me as almost standing still in Switzerland when it should be grandly triumphant. Jesus has been shedding His light upon us age after age. One generation after another has been receiving additional light and truth, and these hereditary trusts put into the hands of His apostles have descended to us with increased light appropriate for our time.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 62

What are you doing with this truth, ye hired servants of Jesus Christ? What are you doing in the vineyard? The Lord Jesus has paid you the wages of His own blood and His own sufferings to secure your willing services. Do you sense you are not your own, that your time is not your own? Your property is not your own, that you are bought with a price? You belong to Jesus Christ to work for Him, to suffer for Him, to deny self for His sake. Do you feel that all you have is a loan from the Master? That you are stewards of His grace? The humblest service, the lowliest gift may become consecrated if performed with a willing heart. God help you arise from your deathlike stupor and work for the salvation of your countrymen.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 63

D. T. Bourdeau is far from being a perfect man; but he has an individuality, and he must labor very much in his own harness or he can do nothing. Now the laborers in Europe, England, Norway, and Switzerland should be counseled and advise with one another. Elder Loughborough will never advance the work very far in England. His narrow plans, his limited ideas, his mind concentrated on little mountains so much, he gives the wrong mold to the work. Oh how hard it is to overcome the traits of character and education received in childhood! How difficult to work out and away from self! How hard to not make our own individual ideas and our own plans infallible. God help us all to learn of Him, to have mutual esteem for one another and work with perfect harmony to the one great end to disseminate light.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 64

The work in every field opened in Europe has been made to bear the impress of the men who opened them. In a degree this is as it should be, if these minds are evenly balanced. If their defects are to be reproduced, it is an error and will greatly retard the important work. In the first place these missionaries called of God should wheel into the service every available help possible, for time is short. Had you, my brother, worked more through an interpreter in the place of studying so much to speak the language, you would have been working your way into the hearts of the people and into the language too, and kept up better courage all the time.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 65

Now, Elder [B. L.] Whitney is coming to Switzerland. Do not mark out his way and make him feel that he must look to you in all his movements. He must not follow the track you have passed over.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 66

He must be left to bear the mold of God. He will, if humble and waiting upon God, understand the divine will concerning his work and mission. You have been long sick and feeble; you have viewed many things in an intense light. Now we do not want that Elder Whitney should fall into the same error. You have excused in a great degree the brethren in Switzerland from doing what they ought to have done long ago to make the work self-sustaining in Switzerland. Now we do not want this error should be reproduced in Brother Whitney's labors. You have concentrated your efforts mostly in one locality. Now this must not be acted over by Brother Whitney. Time is short; the message is to be carried to all nations, tongues, and people. You are now in feeble health and cannot endure exposure. Elder Whitney is young. Leave him as free as possible to seek counsel of God and do his work according to the ability which God has given him, even if it does not exactly meet your ideas.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 67

We are none of us infallible, and none of us should allow himself to become set and exacting. Let every soul lift the weight he can. Let them release you of every responsibility they can. Let other minds devise and execute plans. God does not mean we shall be stereotyped in our ways and ideas. While we must rivet our souls to the eternal Rock, we must be continually laying upon this foundation gold, silver, and precious stones—a variety of material. Let every man work who can work. The very best general is not the one who does the most work himself, but one who will obtain the greatest amount of labor from others. Such generalship is greatly needed in Europe in order to make the work a grand success.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1883, par. 68

Lt 2, 1883

Whitney, B. L.

Healdsburg, California

March 30, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 10MR 8.

Dear Brother [B. L.] Whitney:

I have sent you a letter containing some things which the Lord has shown me in regard to Elder [J. N.] Andrews. You can see by reading this letter that our own people have made mistakes in regard to Elder Andrews. Much means has been sent to this mission that is controlled by Elder Andrews. I believe he is sincere but through disease views things in a perverted light. His imagination is at fault. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 1

At an early date in our Advent experience after the passing of the time in '44, then Elder Andrews was greatly deceived. His imagination and impressions and feelings were his guide and nearly ruined him. Could I have an interview with you, I would talk in regard to some things I will not write. Now Elder Andrews I highly respect, but his feelings and his imaginations must not rule you. You must not go to Europe to have Elder Andrews' head control your movements. He imagines things which have no foundation and in which there is no truth. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 2

He has given the impression of great sufferings when he has endured no more than ordinary laborers in their first experience in this work. Many things have been sent to him while there were those close by the donors who were overlooked and neglected, who needed means far more than Elder Andrews. But from his earliest years he has been drawing on others for sympathy and he has continued to the present time to be sustained by the sympathy of his brethren and all connected with him; he has a diseased imagination. Those who are prompt to send him means whenever he thinks he needs it are to him the elect—precious in the sight of the Lord, and those he imagines are not fully in sympathy with all his imaginations he regards are not favored of God. Now all the feelings are the product of a diseased mind.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 3

Many have asked, "Will Brother Andrews die?" I answer, "I think he will; and I could not pray for his life, for I consider he has held and is still holding the work in Switzerland." It is most difficult to correct him and to change his plans or his course of action in anything. Should you propose to do this, as you will most surely have to do if God sends you to Europe, he will not regard you as his friend. If you pet all his ideas and sympathize with all his feelings, then you are the beloved of God, right in all respects. I tell you these things I know.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 4

But I would caution you, Do not confine yourself to Switzerland, neither settle down to learn the French language, but become acquainted first with the condition of the whole European mission. Do not consider you are to be dictated to by Elder Andrews, Elder [J. N.] Loughborough or Elder [J. G.] Matteson. You are God's man of opportunity. You must look to God and trust in God and learn of God and obtain an experience in prayer and faith that you have not yet obtained. God will help you if you rely wholly upon Him. He is to be your Teacher and your Guide.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 5

After you have ascertained the situation of the field, then you will understand better how to labor and make your efforts tell at every stroke. But do not settle down to be molded by Elder A., Elder L., or Elder M. Not one of these is laboring to the best advantage. They carry out their ways and their plans, and their own peculiar traits of character are being conformed and strengthened and defects being reproduced in those who believe them to be perfect men. I have kept all the things written in my lengthy epistle to myself, and this is for your eyes and your wife's eyes to trace alone.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 6

I would advise you not to go into Elder Andrews' family. Your wife is not a strong woman and must have careful consideration if she keeps able to work and have the care of her family. You must see [that] more and extra care does not come upon her.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 7

A sympathy has been awakened for Elder Andrews that is not called for. The very ones who would make so great an excitement over him will permit those who are just as worthy to pass along without sympathy or pity. God is not in this great attention paid to one man. When I saw how the work had been held and the mold placed upon it in Switzerland, my heart was filled with anguish. While it is our duty to love and care for Elder Andrews, it is not our duty to deify him. It is not those who sympathize with him the most who are his best friends. It is not those who would concede to every proposition he may make that are being led and guided of the Lord. His sufferings have been very much of his own creating through his own course which he was determined to pursue.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 8

Now, Brother Whitney, no one knows of this but yourself and my Willie [White] and Brother and Sister I. I do not want Elder Andrews injured, neither do I want the cause of God to bear the hindrance and the mold of his diseased imagination. Move cautiously. Sister Oyen should have no connection with Elder Andrews. She is self-conceited, full of self-importance, and is no help to Elder Andrews.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 9

May God bless you and yours on your long journey and in your most difficult mission.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1883, par. 10

Lt 3, 1883

Smith, Uriah

Healdsburg, California

July 31, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 3SM 350-351; 8MR 64-65.

Dear Brother Smith:

I have been very, very sad to learn of Brother [C. W.] Stone's untimely death. I feel deeply over this sad ending of his life, and I have no evidence that he was prepared. I fear he had not a spotless character. The last letter I wrote to him was very pointed. I feared if he did not heed the testimony of the Spirit of God which had appealed to him so many times, that the Lord would not protect him from Satan's devices. The news has made my heart like lead. And a great fear comes over me that the Lord will not protect others who have so manifestly slighted His warnings.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 1

I fear for you, my brother. I have the tenderest feelings of pity and respect for you, while I know you are steadily going into darkness; and if the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness! I see the very workings of the enemy I have been shown for years would come.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 2

I had hoped to complete my last book and get it before the people that they might be warned of important events, but I shall not be able to complete the book before I go East.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 3

This makes me more earnest, more anxious, in regard to you. I know that you are under a deception, and unless you break away from William Gage and others in no better condition, the Lord will let you go with them to your certain ruin; and unless you all change your position you will be left in darkness. I know where you stand. I know your danger, and I feel the worth of your soul. I do not want you should lose your crown. I have felt reluctant to write. I know when one is in the position you are in, truth is turned to error and light to darkness. 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 4

I have been waiting to see what you would do in putting in the paper something to vindicate the right. You have had ample time. I ask you, Would you, if you stood in the light, allow such statements as have been made in regard to my husband being dishonest, without correcting the matter and setting it right? Where are you, Brother Smith? Have the rebels obtained your sympathy and your confidence? Why do you not do justice by my husband's name and reputation? And why do you keep entirely silent and let the dragon roar? For myself I care not. My peace is not disturbed, but I do care for the watchmen whom God has placed on the walls of Zion who ought to give the trumpet a certain sound. You certainly ought to do something for your own sake, for Christ's sake, for the truth's sake. Why do you not let the right appear? Why do you remain as silent as the dead? Is this the way you defend the truth? Have we not a right to expect something better of you than this? 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 5

You may say Sister White is stirred. I am stirred with deep sorrow for you. Well might Joshua challenge you, "Art thou for us, or for our adversaries?" Joshua 5:13. Truth will triumph. I expect these raids will be made against me till Christ comes. There is not an opposer of our faith but that makes Mrs. White his text. They begin to oppose the truth and then make a raid on me. What have I done? If evil, then let them bear witness of the evil. We have men here on this coast that are in communion with men on that end of the line—Cassidy, Swinnerton, Torr. These are active as the devil could make them. 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 6

Cassidy was reprov'd in testimony, and his wife said it was all true of him. He said it was all true of his wife. But they began to find fault with the testimony, and after he had nearly crushed the life out of the church in Petaluma, he left them because they passed a vote of censure upon him. Since that time he has made all manner of statements accusing my husband of dishonesty. 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 7

When Torr came to Petaluma, he followed close after Cassidy. Mrs. White was his theme. The Lord sent me to Petaluma and gave me a testimony of great power to bear. Torr was convicted. I stayed at his house, and he said he had seen and heard me and he was settled now that all these reports and statements were false. He felt very tender. I saw that he did not have family prayer. I urged myself forward, prayed with them and pled with them to pray morning and night with their children. He had taken the position that social meetings were not in the order of God—that family prayer was a non-essential. But his heart was melted under the power of the Spirit of God, and he urged me with tears to come and speak to them at Petaluma as often as I could. He said, “Maybe you do not know, Sister White, how we prize these visits. They are of great value to us—beyond estimate.”4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 8

Well, Long’s book came out and Green’s book—these most weak and contemptible productions. I waited for you and others to speak of these, as you stood in the responsible positions you do as watchmen on the walls of Zion and should warn the people. As editor of the paper you have every means within your reach.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 9

Now Torr has changed. He did not take up his duties. He did not follow the light. He seemed to enjoy the suggestions and statements of these tracts, and sent them everywhere. Next he was without an anchor, and he began to read Tom Paine and has come out an infidel. He says there is no personal devil—no pre-existence of Christ, no prayer is called for. He is sowing his seeds of death.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 10

Brother [W. M.] Healey has broken up his partnership with him, for he has given up the Sabbath and is running his mill upon the Sabbath. Cassidy is seen in drinking saloons on the streets in Petaluma. These are the men who are set on fire of hell to make me appear in the worst light possible; and I—what have I done? I have borne the testimony God has given me to bear, which they both had light [that it] was from God, for His Spirit witnessed to the testimony; and when they refused the light and evidence, the Spirit of the Lord left them.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 11

The time has come when if light is not cherished it leaves the one who rejects it in very dense darkness, and strong and startling developments are made quickly. Things move rapidly now. We are nearing the end. Why, I ask, is all this zeal against me? I have attended to my business given me of God. I have injured no one. I have spoken to the erring the words God has given me. Of course I could not compel them to hear. Those who had the benefit of Christ's labors were just as enraged against Him as the enemies are against me.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 12

I have done only my duty. I have spoken because compelled to speak. They have not rejected me but Him who sent me—Him who has given me my work.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 13

But I do feel so sorry that you should be so entangled with a party who has the spirit of the dragon. I am watched; every word I write is criticized; every move I make is commented upon. I attended the Southern camp meeting and went to Los Angeles and to San Jose, and these watchers, vultures, report that I am out of Healdsburg because they had got enough of me there. The friends at Healdsburg are my warmest, kindest, and best friends—only too glad to have me with them. When I go East, I expect it will be conjectured I am obliged to leave for they made it too hot for me here. These are the words that pass from lip to lip.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 14

Now I want you to look candidly at these things. How much courage you have infused into this element and given the enemies of the truth to arise and make the raid they have on me, I cannot determine; you may never know till the judgment. I leave my work and its results until we gather about the great white throne. Do you see the Spirit of Christ in this watching, in these suspicions, in these conjectures, these suppositions? What right have they to suppose, to conjecture, to misinterpret my words, to misstate me as they do?4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 15

But there will be a class who loves just this kind of food. They are scavengers, not looking candidly to see what good my writings and my testimonies have done, but like Satan, the accuser of the brethren, [they are] looking to see what evil they can find, what mischief they can work, what word they can twist and put their wicked construction upon to make me a false prophet.4LtMs, Lt 3,

1883, par. 16

Do you train in this company or are you noncommittal—standing on neutral ground? Do you love these men who are tearing and devouring the flock and unsettling the faith of our brethren and sending them adrift, and using your name and influence to do this baleful work? Do you hear the voice of God speaking through them? Do you discover precious fruit that they bear? I see the same satanic spirit, only more plainly developed, that has been manifested the past forty years.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 17

The Lord has given me words of reproof for William Gage. It was truth but he would not accept it. You have made this man your counselor. You linked up with one whose course of life has not been devoted or spiritual; in short, who never has known what the influence of the Spirit of God was upon the heart. And I warned you, because the Lord bade me do this. But you refused to hear—not my words but the Lord’s words. You have chosen your way, and as the result you are in darkness. I know this to be the case. I sense your peril; I warn you again. Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die? Will you give sanction to the enemy? Will you prove an unfaithful sentinel and let the enemy into the camp? Will you prove untrue, or will you show yourself to be a man of God, fully on the Lord’s side?4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 18

Suppose you and William Gage and the Marion party and Green and McLearn all unite your best efforts in seeking to make my testimonies of none effect. Suppose you try to make the people believe them to be untrue, and you do tear them out of the hearts of the people. What have you gained? What great good have you achieved? Will the people be more zealous, more circumspect? Will they be less worldly-minded? Will they be less licentious? Will they be more earnest in the faith?4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 19

You have seen the result of those who have tried this. You see that God has connected the testimonies with the work from its very rise. Tear them from the work and you tear the faith of God’s people to pieces. Do you want to meet your work in the judgment? You may all do your utmost, and you will not prevail. If this work be of God, it will live and survive all the raids, all the Korah, Dathan, and Abiram disaffections, all the Jannes and Jambres assaults and resistance and apostasies. I grieve that such men as you give themselves to this work of the devil; that you should be found giving encouragement to this satanic dragon- spirit is too sad for me to contemplate.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 20

I believe you will wrench yourself from this snare of Satan. But oh, for Christ's sake, cut loose from William Gage! Not that I think his case hopeless, but I know you darken counsel by words; you strengthen one another, for God has shown this to me. He is to you an agent of Satan. He has led your mind in a channel of doubt. He is at work under the cover and disguise. He has influenced you. You will deny this, but that makes no difference. That which the Lord has shown me I know is correct. You are in darkness and you and he are not light-bearers now in the office. Your influence is for evil. You are scattering from Christ and from the truth. Remember it is all written in the book, and you will meet the record of all these started doubts, this unbelief which is having a demoralizing influence in the office and everywhere, in a harvest you will not care to reap.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 21

I wish you would come to the camp meetings. I know that it would be a blessing to you. If you follow the pattern you have started upon, you are as surely separating from God as others who have pursued the same course; but you are so blinded you cannot see it. Jesus loves you! All heaven is interested in your welfare.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 22

You say you were willing Milton should come out to California where he would have a better opportunity to start again and take up Christian duties. Just as long as you remain where you are there is no hope for Milton. When his father comes to the light and takes his position squarely on the right side, then I have not a doubt but your son will have a strength to take his stand. But until this is done, I have no hope that anything we can do will move him. He knows just where you stand, and he is waiting to see what course his father is going to take.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 23

Never was Satan working with greater zeal than now. He is an accuser of the brethren. He deludes. He casts his bewitching power upon minds and they seem mesmerized. Oh, that you could see! Oh, that you could understand and make your way at once to the light!4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 24

I feel an intense interest for you, that Satan shall not triumph over you. I want you to triumph over Satan. Oh, now break the fetters of the enemy. I tell you, in the fear of God, you are in imminent danger. You are preparing for yourself a harvest that you will not wish to reap. I want to say there is not a shade of dishonor that should rest upon my husband's name, and you know it. He scorned to do a dishonest action. Lies may be sent afloat, now that he is dead, and you may stand by and see his name covered with reproach and blackness and make no effort to vindicate him who stood by your side for more than a score of years.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 25

Is this as Christ would have it? You know that my husband was strictly, conscientiously honest. You certainly know this; then why do you keep silent and let the vultures tear his reputation to pieces, when you stand as editor of the Review, and have every means in your hands to vindicate his honor against the insinuations and the suggestions of these satanic agents? You could show a remarkable zeal to defend McLearn—of whose reputation you knew nothing—one who had done nothing for the cause of God and had made no sacrifices for the truth. But when my husband's lips are palsied by death, when he cannot answer for himself, when his brethren should vindicate his character, you are voiceless; you have nothing to say. Why cannot you speak, you who were associated with him in his work? Why do such men as Green and McLearn enlist your sympathy, unless the bewitching power of Satan through these agents has so bewildered you that you cannot discern between righteousness and truth, and error and deception?4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 26

I present this sharply as it is. I already have about one hundred pages prepared, and if no one moves, I shall do my duty and leave you to answer to God for the neglect of yours. Do you know, my dear brother, that the Lord wanted to save you from the very position you are in today, and that is the reason He sent you warnings and reproofs? The great light you have had, and the experience you have had in the work only make Satan more determined to delude and ensnare you and then drive you where he will. He knows that many love you and have confidence in you and will be brought into great perplexity and doubt and may, through your example, make shipwreck of faith. This is why I was so burdened.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 27

The Lord gave me no rest day nor night until I wrote you at Battle Creek the warnings which you would not accept; that Gage treated in the frivolous, irreverent manner he did, which cast off all its solemn influence on many minds. And these very men, McLearn and Green, would never have ventured as they have but for the influence of William Gage and yourself. William Gage has worked under cover, in disguise. He is not a man who has ever had the fear of God strongly before him. And when you linked with him, you separated from God.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 28

We have had several rebellions—Stephenson and Hall; Brinkerhoff and Snook and Carver—and now we have another of like character doing precisely as his former brethren have done. And we shall have just such disaffection to meet, just such rebellion, until the close of time. Some will go with these elements who have had great light and rich experiences, but who, because they did not follow the light, came to follow darkness and perished. I cannot endure the thought that Satan will succeed in overcoming you. The end is near. Will you break this power that has held you spellbound? Will you recover yourself out of the snare of Satan? Will you fall upon the Rock, Christ Jesus, and be broken? You must consider your position. You must change your course of action for you are separating farther and farther from God. God calls you to come up on higher and holier ground.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 29

When you bind yourself in holy covenant to God, you will separate from idols and things unclean. The light you have had, the blessings you have received, the high and holy calling you have had, all forbid that you should be in your present position, in bondage to unholy, unsanctified elements of the world or in friendship with the enemies of God. You are required to come out, to be separate and to maintain a holy character as a son of God. When you obey God you will have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. I feel deeply in earnest. I again appeal to you to take your stand on the side of Christ and humiliate your soul and disappoint the enemy. The people now who believe must know where you stand—what side you are on. Sacred obligations are resting upon you. How will you meet these claims? Again I entreat, break the chains of Satan. Be again a free man.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 30

In love.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1883, par. 31

Lt 3a, 1883

Smith, Uriah

Healdsburg, California

July 31, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 3MR 318-319.

Dear Brother Smith:

The very sad news of Elder [C. W.] Stone's sudden death has reached me today. It so overcame me I was unable to sit up much of any through the day. A terrible conviction forced itself upon me that he was not prepared; he had not washed his robes of character and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. But we leave him with the Lord who will judge righteously. 4LtMs, Lt 3a, 1883, par. 1

It is not wise to defer the preparation for eternity one day, no not an hour. This calamity speaks decidedly to every one of us to not neglect a vital connection with God. Satan is watching his chances to secure souls to himself, and unless we have God's protection, he will break forth in violence, and his angels will be set at work to do some marked mischief. The terrible tornadoes, the railroad disasters, the calamities at sea are because of Satan's wrath. The Lord does not work a miracle to protect those who are constantly working against Himself and strengthening the powers of darkness. 4LtMs, Lt 3a, 1883, par. 2

And this is only the beginning. Their hearts will not repent because they are fully set in them to do evil and that continually. These disasters, which should make men afraid, are now regarded only by those who fear for their own personal safety, themselves and those connected with them. 4LtMs, Lt 3a, 1883, par. 3

[Unfinished?]

Lt 4, 1883

Haskell, S.N.

Duplicate of Lt 19a, 1884.

Lt 5, 1883

Brethren

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 1883

This letter is published in entirety in 13MR 329-333.

Brethren:

Brethren, we are far behind in our missionary work, both at home and in foreign countries. We are a people who claim to believe solemn and sacred truth, and our works in proclaiming the truth should correspond to our profession. Great trouble will soon arise among the nations which will not cease until Jesus comes. The world is becoming more and more lawless. The churches are united in their efforts to restrict religious liberty. What are we as a people doing in this crisis? Are we purifying our souls by obedience to Christ's words? Are we humbling our hearts before God and confessing our sins? Are we seeking with earnestness and contrition of soul Him who is the source of our strength? Are we claiming the promises, believing that Jesus pardons our transgressions and forgives our sins? Are we educating ourselves to overcome all temptation to murmur and complain?4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 1

Brethren, as never before we need to press together, unitedly following with calm faith and confidence Him who has prepared His throne in the heavens and whose kingdom ruleth over all. God has not forsaken His people, and our strength lies in not forsaking Him. Christ died to redeem us. By the infinite price with which He ransomed us He has shown His love for us. He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should believe in Him and have eternal life.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 2

With pity and compassion, with tender yearning, the Lord is looking upon His tempted and tried people. For a time the oppressors will be permitted to triumph over those who know God's holy commandments. All are given the same opportunity that was granted to the first great rebel to demonstrate the spirit that moves them to action. It is God's purpose that every one shall be tested and proved to see whether he will be loyal or disloyal to the laws which govern the kingdom of heaven. To the last, God permits Satan to reveal his character as a liar, an accuser, and a murderer. Thus the final [triumph] of his people is made more marked, more glorious, more full and complete. The words of the prophet will then be fulfilled, "The day of vengeance is in my heart, and the year of my redeemed is come." [Isaiah 63:4.] The song of God's people will be, "The Lord reigneth; let the people tremble: he sitteth between the cherubims, let the earth be moved. The Lord is great in Zion; he is high above his people." [Psalm 99:1, 2.]4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 3

Now and onward to the close of time the people of God should be wide-awake, not trusting in their own wisdom, but wholly in the wisdom of their Leader. They should set aside days for fasting and prayer. Entire abstinence from food should not be required, but they should deny themselves the food they usually enjoy and partake of [a] plain, simple diet. No one should lift up his soul unto vanity, walking in self-indulgence and pride, for this is a time that demands genuine humiliation and most earnest prayer. We are nearing the most important crisis that has ever come upon the world. If we are not wide-awake and watching, it will steal upon us as a thief. Satan is preparing to work through his human agencies in secrecy.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 4

There is in our churches a decided want of love for Christ and for one another. Christlike simplicity is looked upon as weakness. There is little clear spiritual discernment. Wrongs remain unconfessed. The transgression condemned in the law of God is on the increase in our borders. Sin is cherished, and the result is hardness of heart. Because those who are handling sacred things do not walk in the light, that light is becoming darkness to them, and how great is that darkness. They are making strange mistakes in reading character. Men who do not possess moral worth are exalted, while those who are endeavoring to seek the Lord and walk in His steps are not appreciated. This danger will become more and more apparent. We must awake to the perils that are opening around us. All Pharisaism, all self-righteousness must be separated from the soul. Then we shall realize that we need Christ's righteousness, and we shall accept it by faith.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 5

In our conferences it is revealed that the brethren do not see eye to eye in understanding the Word of God. There is among us a manifest want of searching the Scriptures. We must know the reasons of our faith. The importance and solemnity of the scenes opening before us demand this, and on no account must the spirit of complaining be encouraged. Are you in danger of cherishing malice, bitterness, and wrath if plans are introduced that do not harmonize with your ideas? Is not this indulging a war spirit rather than a spirit of meekness and humility? Might you not better search the Scriptures together, with earnest prayer?4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 6

Ever we need to manifest kindness and true courtesy. We may have to plead most earnestly before legislative councils for the right to exercise independent judgment, to worship God according to the dictates of our conscience.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 7

Thus in His providence God has designed that the claims of His Holy law shall be brought before men in the highest authority. But as we do all we can as men and women who are not ignorant of Satan's devices, we are to manifest no bitterness of feeling. Constantly we are to offer prayer for divine aid. It is God alone who can hold the four winds until the angels shall seal the servants of God in their foreheads.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 8

The Lord will do a great work in the earth. Satan makes a determined effort to divide and scatter His people. He brings up side issues to divert minds from the important subjects which should engage our attention. Individually we are to feel the importance of uniting in the firm bonds of Christian fellowship. With one heart and mind we are to prepare for the conflict, with faith laying our petitions before the mercy seat. The throne of God is arched by the bow of promise, and the prayers offered in simplicity and faith will be heard. It is God's glory to answer the supplications of His people.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 9

I have been instructed in regard to the danger of drawing apart. Let us leave to Satan and his agents the cruel world of accusing and faultfinding. Our work is to repent before God because of our unbelief and want of love for Him who died for us and for one another. The gold of love and faith is wanting in our ranks. Christ declares, "Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love." [Revelation 2:4.] 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 10

Many are holding the truth only with the tips of their fingers. They have had great light and many privileges. Like Capernaum they have been exalted to heaven in this respect. In the time of test and trial that is approaching, they will become apostates unless they put away their pride and self-confidence, unless they have an entire transformation of character. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1883, par. 11

Lt 6, 1883

Andrews, R. F.

NP

1883

Portions of this letter are published in 9MR 165-168.

Dear Brother:

The conversation we had has left a disagreeable impression upon my mind. Do not think me severe in my remarks in regard to the Chicago mission. You spoke with great satisfaction about the way the mission was carried forward: that Brother Thompson and those connected with him were willing to do any way to get along; that they had a little bit of a room in a loft, and there they were preparing their food and were doing a good work in the most economical way.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 1

Your ideas are not correct. The light which God has given us, precious above the price of silver and gold, is to go forth in a manner to give character to the work.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 2

These brethren are not above the infirmities of humanity, and unless attention is given to the health of their bodies, their work must be greatly embarrassed. Those who stand at the head of the work and fill responsible positions should not permit such things to exist. They should educate the people to give of their means that no such pinched want should be experienced by the workers. As the stewards of God, the responsibility rests upon men to see that one or two do not have all the sacrificing to do, while others are ease-loving, eating, drinking, and dressing without thought of these sacred missions or of their own duty with reference to them.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 3

I have been shown, Elder Andrews, that you do not take a right view of the work; you do not realize its importance. You have failed to bring the people up and to educate them in the true spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion. You have feared to urge duty upon wealthy men. And when you have made a feeble effort in the right direction, and they begin to make excuses and to find a little fault with some one in regard to the management of the work to cover their own selfishness, the impression is left upon your mind that perhaps it is so; and this subterfuge, which has worked in them the seeds of doubt and unbelief, has taken root in your own heart. Seeing this, they turned it to their account and learned just how to treat your efforts.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 4

When they were encouraging doubt and unbelief in regard to the testimonies, you have not done what you should have done to uproot this. You should have shown them that Satan was always picking flaws and criticizing and accusing the brethren, questioning and laying reproach upon the brethren, and that it was unsafe to be in any such a position.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 5

This same kind of work was carried on in Oregon and Washington Territory until the truth was quenched in many hearts. We should give this spirit no quarter for it is death to any church and death to any that indulge in it; and it makes Satan glad.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 6

My brother, you have not taken a course to encourage men to give themselves to the ministry. In the place of bringing the work down to a low figure, it is your duty to bring up the minds of people to understand that the "laborer is worthy of his hire." [Luke 10:7.] And if these men feel the missionary spirit, they will economize in every way possible that they may have it in their power to help these missionaries.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 7

The churches need to be impressed with the fact that the duty is resting upon them to give to the cause of God, to be true, and to deal honestly with God and not to be guilty of the worst kind of robbery, that of robbing God of tithes and offerings; and when settlements are made, not to force the workers to accept small remuneration because there is a want of money in the treasury. Many have been defrauded of their just dues in this way, and it is just as criminal before God as for one to keep back the wages of those who are employed in any other regular business.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 8

There are many who want to go out and labor in our several conferences—who have ability, but no courage—because they must have means to support their families. It is the worst kind of generalship to allow conferences to stand still or to fail to settle their honest debts. There is a great deal of this done, and wherever it is done, God is displeased. If the president does his duty and the laborers do theirs, impressing upon the minds of the people in the various fields and churches where they labor the character of the crime of robbing God of tithes and offerings; and if these laborers have the true spirit of devotion and a burden for the work, God will make their labors a blessing to the people, and fruit will be seen as the results of their toils.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 9

The ministers have failed greatly in their duty to so labor with the churches. They should have educated, trained, and disciplined the people to be workers in the cause of God. There is important work to be done aside from the work of preaching. It is to build up, elevate, and bring every member of the church into working order. Had this been done as God designed it should be, there would be many more in the field as laborers than there are now. And furthermore, if the ministers in the churches would do their duty to educate every church member, rich and poor, to accept and work after the Lord's plan to give of his substance as God has prospered him, there would be a full treasury to pay the honest debts of the workers. And this would greatly advance the missionary effort in all our borders.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 10

God has shown me that many souls are in danger of eternal ruin through selfishness and worldliness. And the watchmen are guilty because of neglecting their duty; they do not watch for souls as they that must give account, and this Satan is exulting to see. How successfully he controls the minds of men! And how wonderfully he works through the very ones that think themselves devoted to the work of God, to cause them to neglect to warn, to reprove, to exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine! This is a branch of the work neglected by the ministers, and God will hold them responsible.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 11

It is not God's order that someone should follow after those who do not do their duty and bind off their unfinished work. It is not the duty of the conference to be at the extra expense of employing other laborers to follow after and pick up the dropped stitches of these negligent workers. It is the duty of the president of the conference to have an oversight of the laborers and their work and to teach them to be faithful in these things, for no church can prosper that is robbing God.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 12

The spiritual dearth in our churches is frequently the result of an alarming prevalence of selfishness in their midst; and for this cause their eyes cannot be single to the glory of God. Their selfish, worldly pursuits and schemes have interposed between them and their God. These are double-minded, clinging to the world, fearing if they should let it go, the Lord would cease to care any longer for them. And so they will take care for themselves—anxious, troubled, distressed for themselves, holding to their large farms and adding more, robbing God in tithes and offerings so that God’s work is crippled on every hand.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 13

Such a showing in your conference testifies that you are not laboring as the apostle Paul labored: “Whereof I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you, to fulfil the word of God; even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory.” Does the Word leave this mark in us? If not, then we do not bear the divine credentials. “Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man, in all wisdom; that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus.” Colossians 1:25-28.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 14

Here is something that is of more importance than every earthly consideration. Men are to be educated; men are to be taught in all wisdom. Have these ministers that connection with God, that separation from the world and worldly ambition and worldly lust? Have they that close walk with their God that by faith they can give the right mold to the ones for whom they labor? “Whereunto,” says Paul, “I also labor, striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily.” [Verse 29.]4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 15

This should be the experience of every minister of Jesus Christ. And for the want of this kind of labor the churches are destitute of the power and grace of God. The day of the Lord is coming on apace, and the people are not getting ready for it, to stand in the day of His appearing. It is in this day of His preparation that He will work a strange work upon the earth. The church has within its borders cold, worldly, sensual men and women. Where is our faith, what is our calling, what is the fruit of our labors? The presidents of our conferences are so fearful that some one else will be preferred before them [that] they bar the way against the introduction of other talents; and God's displeasure is kindled against this spirit.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 16

Men who have the true missionary spirit, humbly engaged in their work, have to meet and labor against this condition of things resulting from the careless and half-hearted course of those ministers who preach but do not labor to keep the churches in order and to faithfully discharge those other duties which are not agreeable to do. They endure privation, hardships, and rebuffs, that the work may advance and prosper, while others seem to think that their faithfulness is an encroachment upon their labors, and they stand back and fold their hands and render no assistance. The converting power of God should come upon these ministers. Then there will be hope for the churches, and their labors will improve. Give humble men your support and encouragement if they consent to accept the work of picking up your dropped stitches. They will have their reward at last, though they receive no credit in this life.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 17

Brother Sawyer made no complaint to me, but I told him not to present himself before the conference in clothes that were not at all decent. He told me that he had no money to buy clothes. I then investigated the case and drew out facts from him of the wages he had received. He was working fully as hard as yourself and in not near as agreeable [a] business, for his labors were more taxing and less appreciated; but these things were not taken into consideration in the settlement. Now I present this one case to represent your true condition as it is and to impress you with the state of things as they are in your conference as they were presented to me.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 18

You have neglected an important part of your work as a president of a conference. You have not educated the people to work with all their means and abilities, engaging all their earthly powers in the cause of God. You have been raising a family when you should have been bringing many sons and daughters to God. You have been hedging up your own way, as many of our ministers are doing, in which they show their great want of wisdom and the possession of that true missionary spirit to deny self, lift the cross, and push the work of the Master.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 19

Should your ideas be narrowing instead of broadening and enlarging? Yet this has been the case. You have had secular interests which have taxed you both mentally and physically, exhausting those powers which should have been given without reserve to the work of God.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 20

But what need have I to present this, and more than this, to you? Have I not presented this matter before you in the conference and urged it upon ministers and presidents? You have not been faithful in your conference; while you have tied men to yourself, you have not united them to the self-sacrificing Redeemer. You have not harnessed them to the car of progress. Your conference is in a deplorable condition, all for the want of a thorough-going, judicious minister who will bind off the edges that his work may not ravel out and present an unpolished appearance.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 21

Yours is not the only conference that is in this condition. The condition of Iowa makes angels weep; Wisconsin is years behind; and Illinois, in some respects, is at loose ends. The ministers that ought to be encouraged in the field have no inducement. They cannot live upon the small wages allowed them. The Word of God declares, "The hire of your laborers are kept back by fraud." [James 5:4.] This is generally understood to apply to wealthy men who employ servants and do not pay them for their labor; but it means more than this; it applies with great force to those that are enlightened by the Spirit of God, who act out and work in any degree upon the same principle that these men do in hiring servants to do their work, and then grind them down to the lowest price.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 22

There has been work you ought to have done that you have not done: to preach the truth everywhere just as it is, pleasant or unpleasant: to impress upon the churches and individuals their God-given responsibilities in tithes and offerings, in selling, and giving alms; impressing them that God had entrusted them with means that must be used to advance His work, that they were handling the Lord's money. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 23

The question is asked, "Will a man rob God?" And the reply comes, just as it will come from the conference over which you have presided, "Wherein have we robbed thee?" The answer comes from God's messenger, "In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: ... even this whole nation." [Malachi 3:8, 9.] The same sacred obligation rests upon you and upon the people. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 24

You have not done your duty as an overseer of the churches of God in Illinois. You have abilities, but home cares and home responsibilities have borne heavily upon you. These things hedge you about so that it makes it almost an impossibility for you to use your tact, your ability, and strength, to the great work entrusted to you. Ministers who fill their houses with children take cares upon themselves which God never designed they should. The management of these self-imposed burdens detracts from their usefulness, their devotion, their time, and their duties in the service of God. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 25

All this is because they do not feel the necessity of having their works correspond with their faith. The cause of the Lord does not stand before them as the all-important thing. They do not see that it demands the entire manhood. His work is not made the highest and holiest of all; self and selfish plans, and the execution of them, interpose between them and God's holy work. And the children come forth from your management showing deficiency in training and molding of character. The churches are suffering from the same management. Stitches are dropped all along the way and not carefully picked up and kept up. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 26

Oh my brother, there is work for you to do. It is a solemn thing to die, but it is a far more solemn thing to live. Your ideas are not high, devoted, broad, and noble. The whole conference feels the want of an education that they do not possess. There are men that would come up to the help of the Lord if they only had someone to lead the way.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 27

There are grumblers, murmurers, and skeptics, and your labors have not been of that character to produce a healthy state of things in the conference. Unbelief has not been suppressed and faith encouraged in the "Testimonies." A high state of spirituality has not existed, therefore spiritual things have not been discerned. There is a great want of spirituality, devotion, self-sacrifice, and self-consecration to the work for these times as they are. What can be done for the people? What can be done for the president? Under the present administration there will not be much change for the better; things will not be placed on a much better basis while murmurings in regard to the General Conference and excuses for the neglect of duty are encouraged rather than repressed. I mourn for you, a man possessing ability and yet so little advancement to show in your conference.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 28

You have robbed the workers of their just dues by the small amount you have granted them. You have belittled the sacred work of God. The ministers have had to suffer in consequence of your not doing your duty to them and to the churches. You wanted to please and not incur displeasure. But you have incurred the displeasure of the Chief Shepherd for you have, both by precept and example, allowed the people to do wrong. What can be done in this matter? What can be done?4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 29

Will the ministers awake? Will the presidents take the "Testimonies" of mercy which God has given them? Will they do something, and do it now? Will they heed the prayer of Jesus, "I sanctify myself that they may be sanctified"? [John 17:19.] Generally, the people rise no higher than the minister or the president. If he is a devoted man, losing self and selfish interest in Jesus Christ, his example will have a telling power in that direction on the people.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 30

There was neglect anciently on the part of Israel. God established them in the land of Canaan and said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee” [Hebrews 13:5], but there was to be an aggressive warfare carried on between them and the inhabitants of the land. His words to Joshua were, “And there remaineth yet very much land to be possessed.” [Joshua 13:1.] This was a rebuke to them. God would have had this land filled with His own people who loved and feared Him, but to their shame the land was not taken up, and the idolatrous Canaanites were permitted to come in and gain strength until God’s name became less and less a power in their midst and His glory less and less manifested with them. This applies in one sense to Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, and many other states where there has been time enough and enough of opportunities to have extended the truth and to have made it a power to lead the churches up to God. He has entrusted you with capital, might, means, and intellect. He has given you opportunities and privileges, but these presidents have not had the devotion, the wisdom, courage, and unswerving fidelity to make the most of these blessings, to plant the cross of Christ in triumph in their conferences. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 31

Had the president of Illinois Conference counselled, encouraged, and sustained the ministers there, and had they labored with wise generalship and devotion, souls might have been saved that are now in the ranks of Satan. They might have been keeping the Sabbath today. This is so in every conference to a greater or less degree, but it is especially so in the Illinois Conference. God pity the people, is my prayer. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 32

The field is the world. There has been in several of these conferences a spirit of jealousy, a desire to stand ahead. And influences have been shut away from them that God would have blessed them with had they only prized them and put self and self-honor and love of supremacy out of their hearts and out of their borders. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 33

Should the proposition be made either in the conference of Wisconsin or Illinois to change gifts, there would be a spirit that would spring into life among the churches and oppose it. They know that there needs to be a work done that has not been done. If the attitude of the president is an unsanctified one, if it is selfish and self-serving, then he will have an influence to gather sympathy and to excite [in the churches] the spirit of faultfinding and complaining about general decisions. [They will] make the matters just as hard for the conference as they can, giving the impression that the conference is unjust. A man can absorb a sympathy to himself that has not its origin in the love of Christ but in an unsanctified disposition to carry the matter through, as though injustice had been done to the president.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 34

I was shown that had these men been consecrated manifestly to the work, had they been wise, sanctified workers for God, they would have had eyesight to discern the situation and to understand that there must come a different element into the conference that it might receive a different mold than that they were giving it. But the presidents and ministers who are standing as watchmen on the walls of Zion have not watched and [have not] been preparing with unswerving fidelity to give the warnings to the people. They have needed their own eyes anointed with eyesalve. The enemy has worked surprisingly in their midst; but they are as blind men and discern it not. Thus it has been with the conferences in Illinois, in Wisconsin, and in Iowa. Soothing powders have been given to the people, with a few exceptions. They are not aroused; they are not alarmed; they are not making ready for the day of the Lord; they are asleep, and the people are asleep. The day, the day of God's wrath is upon us.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 35

“Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins.”
Isaiah 58:1.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 36

Wake up, wake up, brethren; make decided moves for God! We are in the day of God's preparation, and yet you are asleep.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 37

Elder Andrews, health reform is one branch of the work, and while you have stood indifferent to this point, you have been backsliding. You have a work to do to subdue your sensual passions and control your appetite. God has spoken on this point, and while you do as you do, you show to the people that the “Testimonies” have no influence upon you.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1883, par. 38

Lt 7, 1883

Kellogg, Henry W.

NP

1883

Portions of this letter are published in 3BC 1163; 7BC 935; SD 271.

H. W. Kellogg:

The Lord has been letting light shine upon His people. Brother Henry Kellogg, the Lord would have you occupy a different position. Take less responsibility and have less of larger things to attend to and cultivate habits of order, of neatness, looking after the littles, stopping the leaks.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 1

But one point was shown me as a marked defect in your character. You are not kind and courteous to all employed, as one in your position should be. Those who deal with minds should ever be kind. You have almost completely weaned yourself from the workers in the office because you are not kind and courteous as God would have you to be. Some will not love you if you pursue a straightforward course and do not justify their wrongs; but if this integrity with an eye single to God's glory is pursued, you will have enemies, while at the same time you will have strong friends.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 2

The apostle Paul exhorts, be gentle unto all men. [2 Timothy 2:24.] The outsiders must not see in you sharp traits of character which will leave a reproach upon your holy faith. In your position you are giving sermons daily. Your character should be after the divine Model, manifesting a spirit of kindness and love.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 3

Come close to young men under your charge; love them; treat them tenderly; they are the purchase of the blood of Christ. Remember that in every word that proceeds from your lips there may be a barbed arrow in the tone or in the ideas expressed.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 4

You want the love of Jesus in your heart that will flow out of your heart through your lips; and in your attitude to others, love, mercy, and truth are attributes you must cultivate daily. In order to do this you must become a faithful worker in the church. Your position requires it. You cannot fill your position to God's acceptance unless you are an active, working Christian, for your example will be an encouragement to others to do as you do.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 5

God wants you to take a higher position, in love. You can do it. Never command, but direct, advise. This is your duty as God's servant. Win souls. Win the confidence of the young and those who labor in connection with the work.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 6

You do not meet the requirements of God. God demands not merely a business service for which you are paid, but a personal service as Christ's servant. It is not enough that men give their means; He requires that they give themselves unreservedly to His service. God desires a personal service, whatever may be one's business and calling. Vicarious service in giving our substance is not enough, for this does not meet the requirement of God.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 7

There is a responsibility resting upon you, my brother, that you have not met. You must not be a passive receiver; you must give out the light received from the throne of grace. The earth receives light and heat and rain and dew and testifies of the same in the yielding harvest, in the fruits, grains, and flowers. The same with yourself. The cause of Christ must be advanced. Souls must be saved through your instrumentality. The command is double: to be hearers and doers of the Word. Receive not only yourself, but impart to others the precious gift. Take it to your home; let it be diffused there. Take it to the office, and let the light shine forth there in kindly, considerate words. Praise rather than censure; direct but not command.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 8

First be assured of your acceptance with Christ, then plead in faith that you may be sanctified, qualified for your work that you may be prepared to do it, feeling that you are under [a] sacred commission to let your light shine. Let the Christian principles be revealed in your words, in your spirit.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 9

You are God's missionary, not to go to foreign lands, but to labor earnestly, prayerfully, lovingly for your workmen with whom you are connected. They need converting grace as much as the far-off heathen. While some may have to go to the ends of the earth, God has a field for home missionaries.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 10

Opportunities have been lost that you might have improved. There are possibilities for work to be done by you for Jesus that you have never dreamed of. A Christian is a Christ-like man, a Christ-like woman who is active in God's service, who is present at the social meeting, whose presence will encourage others also. Religion does not consist in works, but religion works; it is not dormant. The pure religion of Jesus is the fountain from which flow streams of charity, love, self-sacrifice. If ye love Me, ye will do the works of my Father, is the lesson Jesus sought to impress upon the minds of His disciples. There is a great deal of shirking responsibilities in religious life which God condemns.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 11

With the love of Christ in the heart, the lips will utter His praise and magnify His name. There will be a pressure upon the soul filled with Christ's love. "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." This is not applicable to the pulpit alone, but to every true child of promise. If we have received pardoning grace, this is our warrant to present in word and action this unspeakable love to those with whom we are connected.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 12

It is your duty now to be sentinel over yourself to win affection, not by conceding one principle of truth, but in exemplifying Christ, in being considerate, in being kind, in avoiding everything that savors of dictatorial authority. Show in words, in actions that you love the workers, every soul of them, because they are the purchase of the blood of Christ. You must change your spirit of sharpness. You must show Christ in all your deeds, not let any cause be given to say of you that you are dishonest or a sharper. God has lent you talents to be used. You have been almost as it were an idler in the church. You are apt to place too large an estimate upon giving, and we undervalue the personal notice, attention and ministry which money cannot procure.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 13

Satan is at work constantly to ruin souls; he tempts the youth, he

tempts all engaged in the office; but let no temptation come through you. Discourage no one; provoke no one. Things will go wrong with every one; sadness and discouragement press every soul; then a personal presence, a friend who will comfort and impart strength, will turn back the darts of the enemy that are aimed to destroy. Christian friends are not half as plentiful as they should be. In hours of temptation, in a crisis, what a value is a true friend! Satan at such times sends along his agents to cause the trembling limbs to stumble; but the true friends who will counsel, who will impart magnetic hopefulness, the calming faith that uplifts the soul—oh, such help is worth more than precious pearls!4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 14

God wants you to come into more sympathetic personal relations with those connected as workers in the office. Be true to those souls; love them and do not wound their souls with sharp orders or sharp reproofs. This must be overcome. You must discipline yourself. Be firm, decided, unyielding, but courteous, kind, and Christ-like. Let your voice be oftener heard kindly, with hope melting with tenderness, trembling with love. The kind, thoughtful, sympathetic, personal effort has wrought miracles. It is this the office needs in great abundance. Remember you are working for eternity. We must meet all these souls we are brought in contact with in the judgment. What impressions have we given them as Christ's representatives? Let only sweet, fragrant odor be diffused.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 15

God wants you, Brother Kellogg, to use the ability he has given you, not merely as a business manager, but as one who can put out his talents to the exchangers. Glorify God, exercise your ability in meeting. Let the conscientious fear of God be upon you in all your business transactions. What a door of usefulness is open before you to lead the young to Jesus! Show yourself a friend to the young by showing a regard for them, an interest in them.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 16

God requires [that] one in your position should be wholly dedicated to Himself; this is just as essential in your position as for the minister who carries the Word of life to the people. The Word of God enjoins upon every soul who follows Christ, "whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.” [1 Corinthians 10:31.] The minister’s mind is directed in one channel that encourages devotion and consecration and sanctification. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 17

In your position you are exposed to numerous temptations, exposed to the atmosphere which surrounds souls that is poisonous to the health of spirituality. In the first place you must be in the world and yet not of the world. You must stand at your post of duty, guarding the interests of the institution that it shall not be lost by unprincipled men, and yet not become unprincipled yourself. You are working from a different standpoint than the worldling. God’s cause will not be honored or advanced by any sharp dealing because this is the world’s custom. You must make a business of serving God. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 18

While in the world you are not to live as they live and practice dishonesty and sharpness in deal, because this is the world’s custom. God’s sons and daughters must show they are of heavenly extraction. The great man in God’s sight is he who, in the midst of crowds, of cares, and financial pressure, keeps his soul unpolluted, unstained, without one blot of worldly pollution. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 19

Firmly relying upon God by prayer and faith, the soul will stand firm in moral independence, yet with perfect kindness, love, and goodness. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 20

The temptations of society are met and resisted, communion is maintained with God, and the communication between your soul and God enables you to transmit to others, through your social relations, the choicest blessings which Heaven has to bestow. These will be trying positions to maintain. Wrongs and prejudices existing in society, in the church, and in those working in the office, will have to be met, which no Christian can sanction without losing the favor of God. While he seeks to set these things right, he has a power behind him, for the Lord of hosts is his rearward. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 21

Exact and impartial justice will be seen in all his dealings, but his duty does not end here. God requires more. He demands of you to love as Christ has loved souls. He demands of you compassion for the suffering, the erring, those who are subject to Satan's temptations. He demands of you kindness, courtesy to even the unfortunate, a generous consideration of the feelings of others. These are men who have trouble. Young who have supposed grievances, whether they are fancied or real, are in trouble and need help, and God lays you under obligation not to cut and wound, but to help them. The Spirit of Jesus must be seen in your life, in your character, in your administrations toward all—unbelievers and those who are followers of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 22

My brother, we are working for time and for eternity. You must so order your intercourse and deal with the world as to secure for yourself a calm, hallowed peace, while you leave a record behind of godly example that your good will not be justly evil spoken of.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 23

You have a work to do, changes to make in your business life, in your religious life, or you will not stand around the great white throne with a spotless record. God has a work for you to do in the church, or you will not be a living stone, but a dead, lifeless stone. You must cultivate the same spirit of tender love, you must cherish kindly affection for all you associate with in your particular labor in the office and your business associations in the world.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 24

[You are] not to pattern the evils which you see, but to guard jealously your own spirit lest you manifest unsanctified traits of character. Take time to pray; take time to help in the church, to show a good example in this respect, and you will find your own social life will be much happier. There is no man who would appreciate the blessings of God more than yourself, but you have thought that the special blessing of God was not for you. But it is for you, and you must not be content without it. You must surrender yourself to God. He has a more high and noble work for you to do.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 25

Be frank and open in all your work with your brethren. Counsel together. Make no move without counselling with your brethren and then taking God into your council. Jesus will preside in your council meetings if you invite Him. When you or others move on your own finite judgment then the Lord leaves you to your own course and to feel its results. We need Jesus' help and wisdom and grace to execute any and every work in His cause.⁴*LtMs, Lt 7, 1883, par. 26*

Lt 8, 1883

White, W. C.

Oakland, California

January 4, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 209.

Dear son Willie:

I received the few lines you have written and do not blame you for not writing more fully for I know how much care and perplexity you must have and how many burdens you must have to bear. I have prayed most earnestly, and in faith, for you both, Elder Waggoner and yourself, that God would give you grace and His Holy Spirit to attend you in all your councils and to sustain you in all your labors. I have had faith as I have prayed. The assurance has been given me that the Lord would especially help you both and make your efforts successful.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 1

I try not to be too anxious, and I feel more and greater confidence as I seek to quiet my spirit in the Lord and rest you, my dear son, and Elder Waggoner, my fellow-laborer, in the hands of God. Very much depends upon you—the impression you make, the influence you exert. Keep your hold firmly upon God. I expect Him to help you. Believe He does help you and then, if you do not see all accomplished that you desire, trust, firmly trust, in God and wait patiently for Him to work. He alone is able to make you sufficient in Him. He will not leave His people. He will manifest Himself unto them as a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 2

I have been here a little more than one week. We had a most solemn meeting in Healdsburg, one week ago last Sabbath. I felt a great burden for the people, but they did not feel the burden they should for themselves. They seemed too indifferent. Last Sabbath I spent in Oakland. I had great freedom in speaking to the people. We had a good social meeting. Sunday we had a snow storm.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 3

Monday morning I visited Elder Israel's family. Jessie was very sick with malaria fever similar to the sickness I had. The features of the case seemed the same in both of us. They feared quick consumption. We had a most solemn season of prayer. The Lord heard and answered prayer. She has been improving every day since. I am confident she will not die but live. Her father is kept at home because of this severe sickness. He thinks now he will take her to St. Helena in a few days; then he will be able to go again at his work.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 4

We have been wonderfully perplexed over the boarding house. It is conducted much after the style of worldly boarding houses. We know not what to do. We have thought and thought what could be done. The influence is not what a boarding house should have. I do not think that Brother Hagar is a health reformer. I think he loves rich food and therefore thinks that the girls are doing well when they are very wasteful.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 5

Sister Dyke has left. I have sent for Sister Ings to come to Oakland. We will both go in there. I will be at the prayers in the morning and night. I will sit at the table and sustain Sister Ings while she teaches the girls to cook hygienically. She consents to this but declares she will not stay one day after I leave. Now you see how matters stand. We have a meeting this evening to talk with the responsible ones in the office and boarding house to consider what shall be done. We feel that matters must change for the better, and they shall.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 6

I have commenced writing again on Volume Four. My eyes will not bear much strain. Talk with the doctor about them. The corner of the left eye near the nose has troubled me for one year. Inflammation starts here, and there is pain like needles pricking in the back of the eye ball. I wish to know what this means, and what shall I do to preserve my sight? I have had much pain in the temples and through the eyes. Since coming to Oakland I have slept excellently and my appetite is good. I am feeling quite well for me, with the exception of my eyes. They seem to grow no worse. I am very careful of them. I pray much for the dear Saviour to touch my eyes and make them whole, and I believe He will hear my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 7

Monday night we had an excellent meeting. The German Baptists had two Christmas trees nicely prepared for Christmas. They gave them to the Adventists, so without much expense the preparation was made for the offerings to the Lord to be placed upon the tree. The exercises were good and appropriate. I spoke about one-half hour. The children listened with interest. The fruit when gathered netted the neat sum of $172 for the Oakland church. All passed off very pleasantly; nothing objectionable in the whole matter.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 8

Next Sabbath I have an appointment in San Francisco. They have urged my attendance so much. I finally decided to go for I believe they need my testimony. Brother Ings goes to Santa Rosa, Brother Israel to San Francisco. Some way much against my choice, I feel like staying here a while. May the Lord give me wisdom and grace and clothe me with His salvation. How weak we are if left to our own wisdom and strength. I feel the need of constantly looking to Jesus, my strong Helper.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 9

Friday morning

Last night we had several come together for counsel—Brethren Israel, Jones, Waggoner, Glenn, Ings, and Hagar. We had some very plain, direct conversations in respect to running the boarding house. We all talked kindly, raising no feelings, but I said some very plain things.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 10

Brother Hagar stated in the morning, as I was riding to town with him, that he had managed seventy-five in a boarding house. He had the entire charge. He thought if there were less directors there would be less confusion, but there would be a running to Willie and to Brother Jones in regard to little things that ought not to be mentioned, that only one should direct. I said, “Yes, but we want the most thorough evidence that this director is right in all respects. We want to know that he does not need to be directed. No one can be invested with supreme dictation in the boarding house unless he has an experience in managing a house after the standard of our faith. This, Brother Hagar, you have never had. The moral tone of the house must be elevated.” He remarked [that] he had a standing order over in the city to take a house of forty rooms.4LtMs, Lt 8,

1883, par. 11

He is about to marry Sister Bush from Oregon. He spoke as though she would be able to be head. I told him No. She was no doubt a good woman but did not possess qualifications for such a position, and he would learn that this was the case.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 12

In the evening we told him that a house that received a little better than two dollars per week for board could not set a table very nearly like that for which outsiders paid four and five dollars per week. He stated that some of the boarders had petitioned for coffee. Said they would furnish the coffee if the cook would make it. He told them it was contrary to their principles and that they could not place coffee upon the table, or tea.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 13

We then consented after much talk to have Sister Ings and myself take the room Brother Bunch has left (to attend Healdsburg College). We would sleep and eat and attend worship in the house for a few weeks only. Sister Dyke has left. She called a meeting and then complained of the girls. The girls acknowledged their wrong and yet implied she had not done right. No blame was put on Sister Dyke, but next day she left without saying a word to any one. No one has gone after her. She will never be invited back. [Word illegible here] two young girls to have charge would soon lower the dignity of the house.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 14

Sister Ings came from Healdsburg yesterday. I attend meeting in San Francisco tomorrow. Next Sabbath, attend meeting at Healdsburg to return here again at our post. This morning I visited the girls. Had a good, motherly talk with them. They accepted what I said. I told them Sister Ings would be placed in charge Sunday, that as their cooking had been of that kind appropriate for worldly boarding houses, they should have an education in cooking in accordance with our faith upon health reform principles. They expressed themselves as anxious to learn. We will see. We know these girls are young and subject to temptations and are impulsive. Therefore we want to have patience with them. One is only seventeen, the other is twenty.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 15

Now, Willie, if you can, find a matron for this institution. Perhaps Brother and Sister Lockwood would come, but I only suggest this to you. Find, if you can, not only [a] matron, but two or three good girls. Sister Ings brought over some girls, I think, from England. Cannot you find reliable ones to come on and take positions we need filled here in the cooking department and to fill the place as matron? I think our help must be transported. When we shall leave the boarding house, there should be someone educated to remain and cook and work acceptably. We are praying the Lord to direct.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 16

Well, I must close this long epistle. I shall write more soon. I will say, however, that I will send you a list of things to bring from the East before you shall come. Marian [Davis] and I are writing in the office. I occupy your room.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 17

Love to all,4LtMs, Lt 8, 1883, par. 18

Mother.

Lt 9, 1883

Andrews, J. N.

Healdsburg, California

March 17, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in TSB 34; 3Bio 215.

Dear Brother Andrews:

I received your letter in due time and have commenced several times to write to you but have not felt justly free to send the letters written. Still I attempt to write you again, hoping to have better success. I have not been able to write many letters on account of the effort I am making to get off Volume Four. I am making good headway on this book, and four weeks, I think, will complete it.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 1

I have not been able to visit at all with Brother Gardner since his return from Europe because I left Oakland at once on account of my health and have continued in Healdsburg since he came upon the coast. I have been anxious to see someone from Europe who had recently visited you. Elder [S. N.] Haskell is coming in a few weeks; then in all probability he will visit Healdsburg and tell me particulars of your health. He has written me once since his return, but forgot to make any mention of you.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 2

I wish to state some things that I shall not feel free until I do write [them]. I advised you to marry before you returned the last time to Europe for these reasons. First, you needed a wife to care for you and [you] should not have taken your family to Europe without a good companion to be a mother to your children, that these children might not in all things bear the stamp of your mind and be moulded according to your ideas. Your mind is not equally balanced. You need another element brought into your labors that you do not possess and that you do not understand is really essential. Your children are deficient in some things where they should be strong. Your taking the entire charge of the education of your children in some respects has been a success, in others, a failure.4LtMs, Lt 9,

1883, par. 3

Charlie has come up with only half-developed powers because you have given him no opportunity to become a man in ability as well as in years. He could now have been able to have taken the work and been efficient in all its branches had he received his education fully and thoroughly; and even now if he were placed where he could have a different mold than you have given him, his education and his usefulness would have been far in advance of what it now is. 4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 4

You have tried to do your duty to be kind, patient, and to bring up your children with good morals, with right views of Christian character, but Charles is not a man of experience, only a child, because you have made him so. You have also carried the same plans of management into your labors in the cause and work of God. You have, in educating your children, been mind for them. You have not taught them to work independent of yourself. You have chosen to do things yourself that you should have educated them to do and given them, in so doing, individual responsibility. You should have taught Charles how to work, how to do business in the place of doing work and performing business yourself. For his good, this was essential. 4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 5

Charles is deficient in education in regard to practical life. He does what you tell him. He does not rely on his own judgment and assume responsibilities himself, but relies on his father's mind and follows his father's directions. You should have taught him to have lifted responsibilities with you, and when you were absent and feeble, he would know by experience just what to do and be growing all the time in talent by improving what talent he had. 4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 6

Charles has been educated to have no individuality of his own, separate from his father's. In this you have wronged your child. You have been a one-sided man in development yourself and were not fitted to place the proper mould of character upon your children. Books and study and minutious aiming to perfection have retarded your work and crippled your efforts from the beginning of your life. You have been fearful that Charles would not do things as well as you would do them [and this] has led you to do the work essential for him to do in order for him to accomplish that which is expected for one of his years. He is ignorant where he should be wise, especially is this the case in regard to duties of practical life. 4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 7

I have been shown our children should be tasked to bear responsibilities, to think and to act for themselves with parental direction. They should early learn to rely upon themselves, to lift responsibilities [while] young else their talents will not be brought into exercise and will become dwarfed rather than developed and strengthened. There has been opportunities that your son could have learned much in regard to helping his father, but you would not place the responsibility upon him. The result has been you have done the very things which your son ought to have been educated to do. You could have been relieved of responsibilities and been satisfied and proud in seeing your son fitted to bear these burdens in life. 4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 8

Your ideas have been erroneous to preserve your life as [a] widower, but on this point I will say no more. The influence of a noble Christian woman of proper capabilities would have served to counteract the tendencies of your mind. The ability of concentrativeness, the intense light in which you view everything of a religious character connected with the cause and work of God, has brought upon you depression of spirits, a weight of anxiety that has weakened you physically and mentally. If you had been connected with one who would have opposite feelings, who would have ability to turn your thoughts away from gloomy subjects, who would not have yielded her individuality, but have preserved her identity and had a moulding influence upon your mind, you would today have had physical strength and power to resist disease. 4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 9

You see that your brethren do not do as you think they should do. Well, after you have done your duty to them, then you should go on your way doing your work, leaving them in the hands of God, not allowing your spirit to grieve and be depressed because others do not meet the standard of perfection. You have dwelt upon these cases until you have had intense feelings and mistaken views of them and of yourself in relation to them. You have become as it were a martyr. You have not, as was your duty to do, thrown off the burden, risen above depression, and looked on the cheerful, happy side [so] that your health and life might be preserved for future labor and future effort for other souls. This object you concentrated your mind upon must be gained—your brethren in Switzerland must see their wrongs before you would have health.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 10

All those imaginings are not of God but proceed from a diseased imagination which should be studiously resisted by working in all your efforts in an opposite direction. God never designed [that] you should die a martyr to your brethren's errors and failure to meet the standard of perfection. You see all these things in an exaggerated light. Your imagination becomes acute; in dwelling upon these things you deem wrong in others, you sacrifice your own happiness.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 11

You talk of these things which you have suffered. You [go] over the ground again and again. You magnify the difficulties in dwelling upon them. Cease to speak of unpleasant subjects; cease to think upon them; turn away from them. "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Philippians 4:8.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 12

You have made yourself very miserable and wretched in dwelling upon your griefs and the trials others have cost you, when you should turn away from these and think of Jesus, His matchless love for sinners, His grace given freely, and the rich reward for the faithful. Think on pleasant subjects. Your health and life depend on your doing this.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 13

It has been no virtue on your part to endure privation and be content to be in uncomfortable situations. You should not have been in your mission alone for it is impossible, with your turn of mind, your strong traits of character, and your weak traits of character, to bring about results which that mission has stood greatly in need of. But this could only be accomplished by another or others connecting with you in your work that were strong on the points where you are deficient. Such laborers would not, with your views and ideas, harmonize with all your plans, and any difference, any plans you did not see and devise would be most painful to you.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 14

You have done work God did not lay upon you to perform. You have not been willing [that] any one should do the common business labor in connection with the work. You keep it all shut up to your own efforts. What you could do was done; what you could not do, you would trust no other one to do. Now God did [not] want it thus. It was a weakness of character in you which you have cultivated in the place [of] depressing and overcoming it. God never designed [that] the work in Switzerland should bear the stamp of one man's mind. God did not design [that] your labors should be so narrow and circumscribed. He would have had two or several engaged with you in the work, one supplying the deficiencies of the other, all consulting together, but none of them waiting for your mind to plan and devise and they in every particular following the path you would mark out, however perfect that path may have appeared to you.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 15

It has been the case that no one could connect with you in your labor, not because they were not qualified to do this, but because they did not do the work exactly as you would have it done. Had there been with you broader plans and more extended efforts, had other men engaged with you in the missionary labor, the work would now be self-sustaining. Your too great caution, your fears have led you to not bring up the people in Switzerland [who] believe the truth to act the part they ought to have acted in sustaining the cause and forwarding the work.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 16

You have by your manner of labor taught them to rely on their American brethren when you should have taught them to have relied upon their own self-denying, beneficent efforts to carry forward the work in their own country. You have been so afraid that someone would regret their gifts and offerings. You have not educated in this direction to bear their own weight, and for this very reason many have done so little [compared] to what they should have done, they feel no spirit of self-sacrifice and no burden of the work and no blessing in doing the very work that they ought to do.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 17

If anyone labored with you or there was an opportunity for you to have help, you have thought of the expense of an additional worker, and you have also feared greatly he would not have understood [how] to do the work just as you thought it should be done. You would much rather do it all yourself and leave undone that which you could not do. Much time has been lost through the peculiar traits of your character.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 18

Jesus sent out the disciples two and two; for this very reason that one would supply the deficiencies of the other. Christ did not design [that] either of these disciples should seek to mould the other to his exact plans of labor, but [that] each preserve his individuality and work according to his several abilities. Here is where Elder [J. N.] Loughborough makes a great mistake and Elder [J. G.] Matteson makes the same mistake, encircling the work in their own finite, limited arms and doing that which can only bear the stamp or mould they put upon it. Each one of these is wrong in his manner of working. God linked together a bold, impetuous Peter with the mild and loving John that the defect of one might be supplied by the efficiency of the other.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 19

You have made a mistake in giving means to this one and that one and the other—the very means you needed and the very means you ought to have had. Some of these have not used this means wisely—some have not needed it half as much as yourself. As a financier, you have not the qualities to make a success.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 20

Elder [D. T.] Bourdeau made grave errors in Europe and caused you trials. Elder Bourdeau should not in any way connect with you, but if he will learn the lessons God would have him to learn, he would be qualified to put his ability to a good use in Europe. He could labor in France and supply as a missionary a place there we have no one to fill.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1883, par. 21

Lt 10, 1883

Bangs, Lizzie

Oakland, California

April 8, 1883

Previously unpublished.

Dear Sister Lizzie:

I have recently received a letter containing the sad intelligence of brother John [Harmon's] death. I have just written a sympathizing letter to his wife. She said she would send me a paper containing particulars, but as yet none has come. As soon as I receive the paper, will have the notice published in our papers.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1883, par. 1

I felt that I could not have [it] so, that brother John was silent in death. I had so many fond hopes that he would come West. He gave me this encouragement in his last letter. I feel sad for the one left a mourner. I have an experience in this. Two of our brothers and two of our sisters are now sleeping in the silent grave. How long the remaining ones will be spared, we know not.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1883, par. 2

I have felt fearful I should never meet you and my remaining sisters in this world again, but it may be that the Lord will grant us another opportunity. I greatly desire this if it is for His glory. I have been fearful one or both of us might fall by death.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1883, par. 3

I have had special seasons of most earnest prayer that you would take a decided stand for Jesus. I know you love the Saviour, but I want you to acknowledge Him openly as your only hope. I have asked this of the Lord. Will you tell me, dear sister, how you feel in this matter? Do you trust to your morality, or do you rely upon the merits of the blood of Christ? This is my only hope. I dare not trust in any goodness of my own as a sinner. I must come to Jesus with repentance and claim His merits as all-sufficient.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1883,

par. 4

I do not want you to rely upon any human opinion. One says, "If I am only sincere, God will accept me." Another says, "It matters not what a man believes, if his conduct is only right," by which he means, if he is tolerably moral and does no criminal action, this will be enough. But all of these are making a fatal mistake. They all take the position that man is not utterly ruined and lost as to require a new nature, a new purpose which Christ alone ... [remainder missing].⁴*LtMs, Lt 10, 1883, par. 5*

Lt 11, 1883

Torr, Brother

Lemoore, California, Campground

May 12, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in TDG 141.

Dear Brother Torr:

My apology, for writing you at this time is love for your soul. You are the purchase of the blood of Christ, and I do want you to build here upon the sure foundation, that the storm and tempest may beat upon and about it without loss and destruction. Jesus loves you. Jesus pities you. Jesus will help you if you will only call upon Him and trust in Him as a child will trust in its earthly parents. Jesus will help all who feel their need of help.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 1

You began to run well. You were coming out of the uncertainty and error and leaving false theories. Your feet were finding the sure path, but the enemy was on your track. He knew that you were earnest and determined in any work you engaged in, and he was far more determined to put his blinder before your eyes and make darkness appear to you light and light appear to you darkness. You are in great peril. A cloud of doubt and unbelief is enclosing you. You are ranging yourself in the enemy's ranks and doing as many others have done—fighting against God.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 2

I have deep sorrow of soul for you because you are grieving my Saviour and causing Satan to exult and the friends of hell to triumph. You had light. God sent me to your home. You treated us kindly. Indeed, you had an opportunity to test the work God had given me. "By their fruits ye shall know them." [Matthew 7:20.] You were convicted. Your doubts and unbelief were disappearing. Faith was taking the place of doubts. The enemy, an ever-vigilant foe, was watching his agents who were also ready to do his bidding—were at work. They had left the path of truth and were in unbelief, yet, claiming to have great light, thinking they were doing God service, they were warring against God, persecuting Jesus Christ in the person of His faithful ambassador.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 3

I am sorry that these have deceived you, and you should lend yourself to do the work of the enemy. Your talking to others in regard to your erroneous ideas is sowing seed which will produce a harvest which you will not care to reap by and by. What excuse can you offer to God for indulging Bro. [?]'s will and doing not God's will? Do you wish to meet your work in the judgment? Are we as a people in error, and you have the truth? This is not possible. God has been leading out His people step by step upon the path of eternal truth. My words may have no weight with you although I repeat the words of the beloved disciple: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life; ... That which we have seen and have heard declare we unto you." 1 John 1:1, 3.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 4

We expect to meet the things we have presented before the people in the judgment. But the Word of Life! Oh, do not take a perverted view of it! You will take a wrong view of Bible doctrines, and then you are not a man that will not long rest until you have scattered the seeds of error. Some others view these things as you see them, and as many souls as receive your ideas you balance in the path of error. They will, if they accept your views, eventually become infidels; as you will be, so will [they]. You are walking into Satan's net and dragging other souls into darkness. Oh, if you could only see your work as God sees it, you would be filled with remorse and horror!4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 5

Stop right where you are. Go not a step farther. Great decisions under circumstances are made very suddenly either for good or for evil. Will you, my brother, retrace your steps and begin to pray, humble yourself under the mighty hand of God? Come to Him as a little child; fall upon the Rock and let self break—let self die. Oh, be warned, be warned and do not go farther into darkness and drag others with you! You must meet the record of your life by and by.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 6

You have declared yourself to be a man of integrity. [Even] if you could sustain this in the past, you will not be able to do this in the future, for when Satan takes control of the mind and men follow where he leads, they become corrupted imperceptibly and act out the mind of their leader and do his works while claiming to be doing the will of God. I entreat of you to think before you go farther and do meet works of repentance. I know my enemies are like vultures—all ready to devour if they can see, or think they can see, the least chance. I have not designed to answer or in any [way] make mention [of] these falsehoods—[these] miserable tirades against me—for I know that all that know me would see that my fruits were a refutation of his miserable slander.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 7

I also have taken no pains to refute [D. M.] Canright's statements for the same reason; neither have I as yet made any reference to the inconsistent charges or slanders. I knew that Jesus understood it all. Those who wanted to have these things true would believe them, notwithstanding any evidence, the most conclusive, to the contrary. I felt sad when I heard you were circulating these productions which originated from Satan himself. I was sorry that you should be so earnest and so ready to war against that which you know so little about. Are you not afraid to be found with those who are fighting against God? Be careful, my brother, what you do, for you must meet it all again. Unless you are a truly converted man, you will become more and more determined in a wrong course of action.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 8

You are making shipwreck of faith. You are surrounding yourself with an atmosphere of unbelief. You are feeding upon these things which encourage doubt and unbelief. Skepticism is folding you in its hellish grasp, and your only hope is to make a desperate effort to break the chains Satan has bound about your soul. I have scarcely ventured to write a line to these who were arraying themselves against the brethren and the truth because they would pervert my words, misconstrue my meaning and make my best efforts appear dark and dangerous; but I love your soul. I love your wife and dear children. I feel an intense interest for your dear children, and although I know not what use you may make of the lines, I shall send them to you.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 9

We are now preparing matter to quench this flood of venom coming from the mouth of the dragon. We only want the people to see this deceptive, lying spirit, that those who are unacquainted with me may not be deceived. I am in the hands of God. I have not a fear, not a shadow of a doubt in regard to the truth as we hold it as a people. To me it is knowledge—a solemn, earnest reality. All the powers of darkness with all the intrigues of the devil could not for a moment swerve me from this platform. I know whom I have believed and shall go forward doing my work amid opposition and envy and hatred, and if I fall at my post, as I may, God knoweth I will be found faithful and true, and this is my earnest, constant aim. Friend or foe cannot swerve me from my duty.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 10

I have a work to do and in the grace of Christ I shall do it. My only anxiety is for those who are so much more easily inclined to believe a lie than to believe the truth. What shall I do for them? What can I do to save them that they shall not make a lie, neither love the lie after it is made? All I can do is to present Jesus, the precious Saviour, before them as their Pattern. If they love Jesus they will be pure, harmless, undefiled. They will surround themselves with the atmosphere of faith rather than of doubt and skepticism and unbelief. They will talk of Jesus, of heaven, of the Christian's duties, the Christian's warfare, and how to successfully resist the powers of Satan. They will not be like vultures preying upon that which they suppose to be the defects of others.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 11

Oh, that Jesus might be revealed to them! Oh, that they might love to dwell upon His matchless charms! Oh, that their hearts might learn with His love! Then we should not be ignorant of Satan's devices. Our weapons would be turned against our most deadly foes. We should see by faith the pure light, [the] eyes of heavenly angels intently fixed upon us with love to mark our devotion. We should by faith see Satan watching for every misstep, everything that he could use against us, taking advantage of our lack of union and love, making the crooked ways, and with exulting triumph accusing these before the angels of God.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 12

Satan has agents engaged in accusing those who are devoted to the work of God. And oh, how careful should we be not to give Satan any occasion by our crooked ways! Oh, no, we cannot afford to place ourselves on the enemy's ground for one hour, thinking we may come off when we choose. We must ever keep our feet in the narrow path of holiness cast up by our Redeemer for the ransomed of the Lord to walk in. We must pray, my brother. Here is the rock you will shipwreck your faith on unless you feel your need of prayer. 4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 13

You need a physician: you [need] the grace of Christ which is the balm of Gilead, that you may walk worthy of the vocation wherewith you are called that you may be presented to God without spot or wrinkle or any such thing. Satan is ever seeking to corrupt us. He is seeking to corrupt you, to pollute you. This is Satan's aim. Are you letting him do his hellish work? While we are powerless to stay the workings of sin and Satan, help has been provided. Ask and ye shall receive. Two or three may claim the promise; if they ask anything in His name, He will do it. [John 14:14; Matthew 18:19, 20.] He will be inquired of to do these things for us. 4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 14

O my brother, do not feel so independent that you will not ask help of the only One who can render you the assistance you need to break the snare of Satan. You must be watchful, zealous, faithful and true; humble and trustful, full of tenderness and compassion. Oh, shall we ever see you stand as God would have you, a champion of faith, able to say, "The Lord is my helper" [Hebrews 13:6]; and as Paul said when in imminent danger when he was delivered, "For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve." Acts 27:23. God is not too high to consent to work for the feeble children of men. Great trials are before us and precious victories; but we must be men and women of prayer. 4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 15

If we talked unbelief far less and prayed far more, we should become spiritually strong to do battle for God. O, my brother, pray. Teach your children to make God their trust. Thus the cross, [though] heavy for you to lift, nevertheless in lifting it, it will lift you; in supporting it, it will support you. God and angels are watching the progress of His church below. The greatest missionary work, and that which will be as a sweet savor to Jesus Christ, is for you to erect the family altar and teach your children how to seek God.

Teach them how to come [to] God. Commence the work in your own heart, and then, with your heart baptized with the Spirit of Christ, lead your children to the Lamb of God. Unless you do this without loss of time, your reaping will be a harvest of bitterness, of anguish. I know whereof I write. Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die? You are responsible for the influence you exert in your family.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 16

God requires of you that you teach your children to love Him, to pray to Him, to conform their lives to the Pattern. This is a missionary field that has been sorely neglected—left to grow up to briars and thorns. Oh, will [you] cultivate the precious plot of ground just before your own door? This is your work. For this, you are accountable. You cannot neglect this, your work, and be guiltless.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 17

I think of the words of Christ, as He looked from the crest of Olivet on the doomed city of Jerusalem. In broken utterances, He said His heart [was] broken with unrequited love: "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes. ... Because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." Luke 19:42, 44. He left no means untried. His offered mercy had been spurned. There was no wearying of His patience. The waves of mercy beaten back by these stubborn, rocky hearts only returned afresh in a fuller tide of untiring, unresting love. But the moment has come when His love is exhausted, when retributive justice must take the place of love, and now He weeps over those who refuse to be saved.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 18

These tears of Jesus embraced all time. The earthly Jerusalem which lay spread out before them was a symbol of mankind at large. They are acting over the very same toward Jesus as did the Jews. He has spared no means. He has withheld no blessings which are essential to bring His people into close relationship to Himself. He has sent messages of rebuke, of entreaty and warning. But His counsels have been despised. The temple courts of the soul have been converted into desecrated shrines, places of unholy traffic, unrighteous barter, selfishness and mammon, malice and envy, pride and passion.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 19

Jesus looks down from the His throne and sees [it] is as in the day when He was upon earth—His ambassadors treated with contempt, their words as idle tales. It is the present unbelief which presents hardness of heart, presents impenitence, that makes us responsible [for] those tears Christ shed as He looked down the ages and saw how few would know Him, how [few would] obey Him.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 20

The most solemn responsibility for the Jews was when Jesus was in their midst. It was that generation who had rejected Him, who were guilty, condemned, rejected of Him. And it [is] now in this day of light and privileges that this nation is arraigned as before the bar of God for their rejection of Christ. “They would none of My counsel: they despised all My reproof.” Proverbs 1:30.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 21

If thou art destroyed, it is thyself who are alone responsible. “Ye will not come unto Me that ye might have life.” [John 5:40.] “If thou, even thou hadst known the things which belong to thy peace.” [Luke 19:42.] Oh, in the words of Christ, “Thou, even thou” is applicable to us individually. We may make a solemn application. We may view Him stooping over His throne yearning with tenderness and pity over those who have no pity for themselves. We hear Him say to us, “If thou hadst been faithful to search thy Bible with humble, prayerful hearts and with a desire to know, how light would have been thy future.” Today is ours. Each of us has a day of visitation. This, thy day, is the present time. It is not tomorrow, but today. If ye will hear His voice harden not your hearts. “If this day ye receive Me, your Saviour, peace is yours, heaven is yours, for I will pardon your transgressions.”4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 22

It is peace, your peace, the things which belong to your peace. Money cannot buy this peace. Intellect cannot reach it; wisdom cannot bribe [it]. It is the gift of Christ. If we will take it, it is ours.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 23

My brother, I know not what use you may take of this letter, but I feel that I have done my duty for this time. I wrote you several pages before this, but I have not been able to place my hand upon it. When I can find it, if I feel free, I will send it to you. I love your family, and I want to meet you in the city of God.⁴*LtMs, Lt 11, 1883, par. 24*

Lt 12, 1883

Agents of Satan

Extract from Ms 9, 1880.

Lt 13, 1883

Ings, Sister

Oakland, California

July 3, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 215.

Dear Sister Ings:

We arrived here all safe, and I feel thankful that the prospect is that I shall not run down as I did six weeks ago. I came very near it, but with care I think I shall escape this time. I have feelings of great exhaustion, but I am of good courage. I shall improve.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1883, par. 1

I wrote nothing to you yesterday because I hardly knew what to write, and now I think it will be best to return to Healdsburg as soon as we can rally our forces. I may go this week. May not go before next week, but I am in a hurry to get all settled down and rush this book. I want Sister Ings released entirely from housework and to do only that which is essential for exercise. I am sorry that you have done as you have at San Jose. This made me anxious to break up there as soon as possible, to place ourselves where you could be free to write. I hope Alice will come at once.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1883, par. 2

I rode out yesterday afternoon, called on Sister Hannon, Lillie Carruth, and Mrs. Vickery. It was a pleasant drive, and the horse seems well enough. We had no difficulty with him. I feel someway in a hurry to be at home at Healdsburg. I am glad I came yesterday because I suffered none with heat here. It is cooler than in San Jose or in Healdsburg.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1883, par. 3

I thought I should have finished my letter, but I was called away and have been in counsel with Elders Waggoner, [S. N.] Haskell, Willie and Mary White, and some very important matters are settled. We cannot consent to the selling of the Health Institute. Elder Haskell writes in reference to this matter. This forenoon another decision was made in regard to matters of publication. So, at the first moment I could leave, I am again writing.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1883, par. 4

I slept well last night and hope to gain strength today. I look back upon my stay at San Jose with pleasure. We canvassed the matter this morning, whether it would be for the best interest of the cause to delay the opening of the school a few weeks. We considered it would have some advantages and some disadvantages, but decided it would not be best to change the time of commencement now, although it was at first thought best to do so to give more time for canvassers and missionary workers. But the time will not be changed. We hope the Lord will impart His Spirit to the workers in the field of San Jose and that there may be souls saved there. We must sow beside all waters, not knowing which shall prosper, this or that.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1883, par. 5

I want matters so arranged that you, Sister Ings, will be relieved of all responsibility in house cares. We want your mind to be turned more fully to preparing matter for the press for you can do this and then my work will be accomplished with greater expediency. If Marian [Davis] has no care to prepare articles for the paper, all will be well. She can press the book Volume 4. If you choose to come this week, we will find good places to remain till after the Sabbath.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1883, par. 6

With respect to you all, I remain your sister in Christ.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1883, par. 7

Lt 14, 1883

Smith, Brother and Sister [Uriah]

Healdsburg, California

August 8, 1883

This letter is published in entirety in 14MR 1-7.

Dear Brother and Sister Smith:

I received Brother Smith's letter which related some particulars in regard to the death of Brother [C. W.] Stone, and the circumstances connected with his death were read by us in the papers.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 1

I felt sad indeed, for I had no evidence that Elder Stone was prepared for this change. I have been reading the testimony given for him and William Gage and have felt very, very sad. But I leave him in the hands of God. I have no evidence he acted upon the light given.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 2

I was shown in the vision given me of the Judgment that God would send warnings, counsels, and reproof. Some would take heed to their ways and seek the Lord, while some would follow their own judgment because it was more convenient and pleasing to their own natural hearts to do so. Some others would kick against the pricks, rise up against the testimonies of reproof, despise the warnings, choose their own wisdom, be ensnared and overcome by the enemy, and [be] so blinded by his infatuations [that] they would be utterly unable to discern the things of God and would work directly against the light, enshrouding themselves in darkness and error. Then these very ones would sustain and strengthen the hands of our bitterest enemies.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 3

Some who, like Elder Stone, had but little moral power, but little strength to resist temptation, would for a time feel the force of warnings and see their condition; but his traits of character were such that unless transformed, he would be no help to God's people—no benefit to the young. His influence would be to break down the barriers, to unite with pleasure-lovers and become tainted and polluted by lax morals.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 4

He might [have] become a man of excellent ability if he had [had] a vital connection with God. He had superior talents which had not been employed to the advancement of the work and cause of God because he loved ease and self-indulgence better than he loved self-denial and the cross of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 5

I was shown that the time was in the near future that these whom God had warned and reproved and given great light but who would not correct their ways and follow the light, He would remove from them that heavenly protection which had preserved them from Satan's cruel power. The Lord would surely leave them to themselves to follow the judgment and counsels of their own wisdom. They would be simply left to themselves, and the protection of God [would] be withdrawn from them, and they would not be shielded from the workings of Satan; that none of finite judgment and foresight can have any power to conceive of the care God has exercised through His angels over the children of men in their travels, in their own houses, in their eating and drinking. Wherever they are, His eye is upon them. They are preserved from a thousand dangers, all to them unseen. Satan has laid snares, but the Lord is constantly at work to save His people from them.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 6

But [from] those who have no sense of the goodness and mercy of God, who refuse His merciful warnings, who reject His counsels to reach the highest standard of Bible requirements, who do despite to the Spirit of grace, the Lord would remove His protecting power. I was shown that Satan would entangle and then destroy if he could, the souls he had tempted. God will bear long, but there is a bound to His mercy, a line which marks His mercy and His justice.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 7

I was shown that the judgments of God would not come directly out from the Lord upon them, but [rather] in this way: they place themselves beyond His protection. He warns, corrects, reproveth, and points out the only path of safety; then, if those who have been the objects of His special care will follow their own course independent of the Spirit of God after repeated warnings, if they choose their own way, then He does not commission His angels to prevent Satan's decided attacks upon them. It is Satan's power that is at work at sea and on land bringing calamity and distress, sweeping off multitudes to make sure of his prey. Storm and tempest both by sea and land will be, for Satan has come down in great wrath. He is at work. He knows his time is short, and if he is not restrained we shall see more terrible manifestations of his power than we have ever dreamed of.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 8

I hear the muttering of the dragon from Marion, but I expected worse than this because it is not the men who do this, but Satan behind them. They are merely men, but agents of Satan. It is his power we meet in them.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 9

Jesus I have made my fortress, my strong tower, and I am not at all afraid. I am not engaged in doing my work. If I were, I should expect it would come to nought. But it is the work of God, and I have not a fear nor a doubt as to the final triumph of this work, although assailed by Satan and his legions of angels.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 10

I do feel sorry for you, my brother, because God has bestowed upon you great light, great talents and ability, but the possession of these will not save you. They lay you under heavier responsibilities, and if these are not fully and entirely consecrated to Him who gave them to you, it would be far better for you if you did not possess them. I know you have been in the snare of the enemy, but I have kept your case on my soul. I have prayed in the night session. I have prayed in the daytime, and I have still the deepest interest for you that Satan shall not prevail over you but that you may break his bands and come boldly to the front in the very time when your earnest efforts are most needed.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 11

I do not want you should lose your crown or the eternal reward, but, as one who loves your soul, I tell you [you] will surely do so if you continue to follow the path you have started in upon. You have been deceived and will never come to the light until you have the moral courage and strength to separate from your adviser and your counselor. His suggestions, his insinuations, his active, ready wit exercised even upon sacred subjects, have had their influence upon you nearly to destroy. If you fail, the blood of your soul will be upon William Gage.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 12

This is a fascination that is wholly of the devil that binds you to influences that will ruin. Unless you show a determination to break these fetters, you will soon be unable to do so, and I know that adversity will come to you; and I love you, and I love yours. I want you to see. I want you [to] break the fetters of darkness. I want Satan to be disappointed. I write you this letter [that] you may be saved now from further deception if you will make one determined effort of resistance. I write you this letter although I know my enemies would turn and twist and misconstrue and play upon words and misinterpret anything I may say or write. Yet I do not think you will do this, and shall venture to send this letter.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 13

William Gage will do the very work I have described. He has never known the experience you have had. He has never had the sweet connection with God you have had. He has moved by impulse, not by principle, not from deep, earnest conviction. He has had no power to resist temptation, He knows nothing by experience of what it is to walk with God. The Lord reads this poor, deceived soul as an open book, and He wants you to withdraw from him, [to] separate your interest from him, for it is corrupting to your faith. I want you to come off victorious.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 14

I would do this man William Gage good, if I could, but his course, I have been shown, was most contemptible in the sight of God. I do not think he sees it all so, but thus God regards it. I hope he will repent. I hope he will not wait until Judgment before he sees that he has betrayed holy trusts and strengthened the hands of our worst enemies.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 15

You are doing this work—strengthening the hands of our enemies. But the Lord will work for His own cause and will bring to nought the smartest, the wisest-laid schemes of wicked men, and that you should even by your silence sanction the work of Satan through his own agents is too dreadful to contemplate.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 16

I will write no more now in regard to the book. You are welcome to it and more if you want.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 17

Yours with sincere love in Christ Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 18

You may think there is no necessity for such letters, but I do not see as you see in this matter. I think there is necessity. No one knows what I have written.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 19

I have not time to read this over. I leave Healdsburg today for Oakland; [I] leave Oakland Sunday for the East. I have written this by lamplight this morning while others are sleeping.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 20

Please preserve this for I have no time to copy. I shall want it again.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1883, par. 21

Lt 15, 1883

Davis, Marian

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 2, 1883

Previously unpublished.

Dear Sister Marian:

Willie [White] has been telling what is to be done this winter in the book preparation. [Spirit of Prophecy] Volume One is to be revised, Volumes Two and Three to be revised and additions made. Volume Four to be finished. There are other works to be prepared.⁴*LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 1*

Now, Marian, had I not better secure help from Battle Creek? I could get Sister Burnham; shall I? Can you work with her? Can she prepare copy for printer? Set her on one branch of the work, you on another. Is there anyone you would choose to help you prepare copy? Will you write freely and frankly what you think about the matter? There is much to be done—Mother's Influence, book on temperance, and one on the law. I want these works hastened out as soon as possible.⁴*LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 2*

I have no idea of working you to death. We must not pile burdens upon you, but let you take things moderately and not be hurried. Sister Ings could do much of this work if she only thought so, but she is not inclined to bear any responsibilities in this direction.⁴*LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 3*

Yesterday I bore my testimony to those assembled in the Tabernacle. The Lord set it home to many hearts. There was quite a hearty response in testimonies borne. Elder [J. N.] Loughborough spoke well as did many others. I think this testimony has made a change in the feelings of all present.⁴*LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 4*

As I returned to the office, Minnie Godfredsen followed me and said she must speak with me. She introduced to me her husband, Mr.

Hale, from Kansas. He was a nice gentlemanly-looking man. Said he had known me in Kansas several years before. How glad I was that she was not connected with Ben Zuten.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 5

There are the largest number of licentiates and ministers together I have ever met at any one time. I pleaded with them to make this their Jerusalem, to be determined not to leave Battle Creek until they be endowed with power from on high. There was a large number [who] caught the spirit of earnest effort, and I hope every one here will have a new conversion, fitting up for the work in their several fields of labor. Oh that all might have faith and grasp the promises of God! This is our great lack—faith to take God at His Word, faith to believe He will do just as He said He would.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 6

Marian, why not have Henry [White's] room fitted up? Take the furniture, move it in [the] woodshed, and protect it. Fit up that little room and you are all right.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 7

Letters came yesterday that I received from different ones in Battle Creek. The testimony from Ligoneer came. Send testimony given for [William] Gage and [C. W.] Stone.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 8

I will put the article of travel in Sister Burnham's hands after this. Will it do? You know it is to save you from perplexity and work.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 9

We are real glad to hear from you. If there were not so large a number here, I would write you their names. Half of them I do not know.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 10

I hope and pray that this may be a special occasion of seeking the Lord.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1883, par. 11

Lt 15a, 1883

Whalin, Brother

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 18, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 235, 239.

Dear Brother Whalin:

I received your letter about one hour since. I will say, do not let any work stand in the way of your interest. I would advise you to take this job of work if you did not touch my house at all; but I think if you get the matter underway so that in your judgment other hands could complete it, I will be perfectly satisfied. So go right along as you see best.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 1

Now I am sorry that your family must go back to Oakland. I do wish it were not so. I wish I were on the ground. I believe I could find a place for your family somewhere; but if you must take your family back, you must. Why not take them with you South? If you will have a long job, would not that be less expensive? You could be with them, and you could save something in this direction and it would be so much more pleasant for your wife and children.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 2

We are going to bring no families to set up for themselves. All will find positions in the Oakland office, in the boarding house in Healdsburg, or in the Health Institute in St. Helena. There will be a party of thirty—not all Sabbath-keepers. We shall not leave here before the fifteenth of December.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 3

The Lord has blessed me greatly since these meetings have been in progress. We have had meetings for the ministers every morning at five o'clock and I have been able to attend them and speak a short time to them. I have had special words given me as they needed. I was surprised to find so little faith to claim the promises of God. But as our meetings have progressed there has [come] great freedom into the meetings. One after another have come into the light, [have] risen above discouragement, and are rejoicing in the peace and rest in Jesus. The spirit of tenderness and love and contrition has characterized these meetings. The blessing of the Lord has come in and the rich promises of God have been verified. The work has gone deeper and deeper, and I think all will work in the future from a higher standpoint.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 4

We are more that ever convinced that unbelief is the great hindrance to spiritual growth. It keeps the soul in darkness in the religious life. Our brethren are learning the simple art of believing as well as of confessing their sins. We have had some refreshing seasons as one after another fell upon the Rock and were broken. Many say they have an experience they never had before. Testimonies borne are well wet down with tears. This is the best conference ever held among our people. There is a spirit of sweet amity and love among our ministering brethren. Business meetings move off harmoniously.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 5

“What a Friend we have in Jesus, All our woes and griefs to bear; What a privilege to carry everything to God in prayer.” Like a child who has full confidence in his parents and who will trust them with simplicity, so should we trust in our heavenly Father who has promised He will not withhold any good thing from those who love Him.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 6

I can say I walk by faith, not by sight. I have taken hold of work when it seemed presumptuous, but the Lord has been my helper. Yesterday I spoke an hour and a half to more than a thousand people in the Tabernacle in reference to the future events of the Judgment; attended meeting in the evening. This morning [I] labored in the five o'clock meeting, then attended meeting in the chapel and spoke to the workers there thirty minutes, then walked down to my breakfast. I could not have done this in California. The Lord gives me strength as I need it to be a help to others.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 7

I tried to set before the workers in the office that in the formation of character, it is of vital importance to cultivate a steady, uniform, unyielding energy. But the only way they can gain this desirable acquisition is in making God their trust. If they connect with the God of wisdom, the intellect and affections will be brought into the healthiest state of action. “My grace is sufficient for thee.” [2 Corinthians 12:9.] Thus divine power works with human effort, and the man in the might of his soul can stand forth as a son of God.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 8

It is not alone in religious things that fidelity and energy are required, but the Word of God demands the [faculties] of the mind and earnest energy to be put into all the duties of life. “Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.” [Ecclesiastes 9:10.] This “Whatsoever” means whether it is to set type, to tend the engine, to work in any department. Do your work with exactitude; there will be growth and greatness. The Word teaches that by the exercise of energy in little things we are to acquire power to be successful and triumph in greater things. What we find to be done we are to do—not to shirk it because it is difficult. Thus by degrees the soul is trained to put forth a force proportionate to the task required to be done.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 9

But I will not weary you with more of this matter. You say you have pleasant weather. We have not had that here. We have had a snowstorm, almost a blizzard—wind and snow and clouds. Nearly all the time it is clouds and snow and blow. We shall be glad to set our face Westward again, but we have nearly two weeks in South Lancaster and five days later in Pennsylvania before we will set our face toward the Pacific Coast.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 10

May the Lord bless you and your wife and your children with health and His grace is my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 15a, 1883, par. 11

Lt 16, 1883

Butler, G. I.; Members of the Board

South Lancaster, Massachusetts

November 29, 1883

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother Butler and also the members of the Board whose names are united with you in your decision:

I respect your judgment, but I do not view this matter as you do. There are other points to be considered that you have made no mention of, I think. You may be in danger of thinking that you are more merciful and liberal than in reality you are.⁴*LtMs, Lt 16, 1883, par. 1*

I am aware that my son has moved unwisely. I have stated this to him plainly. But when he is in a position where, unless help is granted to him, he cannot in any way meet his obligations to you or to others, to tie up his hands that he can do nothing whatever seems poor policy to me.⁴*LtMs, Lt 16, 1883, par. 2*

We have not thus worked in our experience. You may be in danger of not viewing things all right. I left special word with Henry Kellogg in regard to the matter of books which Edson [White] wished to obtain to work upon. Was not his word sufficient that I would be responsible? I do not think you work on the right policy when you see a man in a close place, where you can help or ruin him, to let it be ruin. If the office was impoverished it would be another matter; but it is not. This help could be granted without even very much inconvenience to yourselves. Be careful that there is not too much iron in your movements; that will only do harm in the place of good. Do not be so faithful that mercy and compassion may drop out of your hearts.⁴*LtMs, Lt 16, 1883, par. 3*

But I will say no more. I should certainly think it best for Edson to move carefully and to be made to feel where he has made mistakes. I think he does. I shall stand by him and help him to recover and get on his feet again, for his soul is as precious as any for whom Christ has died. You understand the situation perfectly. You are not ignorant of the fact that in withholding books from him you close up every avenue for him to recover himself. I do not think your decision is wise.⁴*LtMs, Lt 16, 1883, par. 4*

Lt 17, 1883

Brother Morton's Children

NP

1883

Portions of this letter are published in OHC 264.

Brother Morton's Children:

“Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.” [Exodus 20:12.] Here is a command to which is annexed a promise. Children, are you obeying this injunction?⁴*LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 1*

I have been shown the life and character of the two oldest children of Brother Morton, and I have waited anxiously to meet these children at this camp meeting that I might impress them, if possible, by relating to them how the great and holy God views their conduct. I have also wanted greatly to see the father and mother of this dear family of children that I might tell them some things which the Lord has shown me in reference to themselves; but I will have to write it out. I will send this letter to the children, for they do not know that their own course of action is shortening the lives of their father and mother.⁴*LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 2*

Children, will you take time to reflect on your course and consider how it will all end? Jesus has given to childhood and youth a perfect example. Study the Pattern, Christ Jesus, and copy it if you would be like Him—pure, holy, sinless, and undefiled. Study the childhood of Christ. He was the Son of God, yet the Bible record tells us He returned from Jerusalem and was subject unto His parents. The nature and necessity of obedience I urge upon you. Children are not always taught to obey. The sinfulness of disobedience is not urged home upon their consciences; their duty to obey from right motives is not plainly set before them.⁴*LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 3*

Jesus, the world's Redeemer, did as He was told even if the task was not agreeable to His feelings. Obedience is an element of true greatness. No one can be truly good and great who has not learned to obey with alacrity.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 4

I have had your cases as children presented before me. I have seen God's frown upon you. Your disobedience was an offense to God. When you will do your work for Christ's sake, cheerfully doing your duties in love, then angels will bear the record to heaven and it will be written in the great book of God. You can each build up a character day by day which you will never afterward wish to have torn down. You may lay the foundation on Jesus Christ and build after the pattern of His life a useful, noble, symmetrical character.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 5

If you will remember, "The eye of God is upon me; He sees my conduct; He is a discerner of the thoughts, the intents, and the purposes of the heart;" if you [will] try to live to please Jesus [and] do the duties which you should do daily to be a help and blessing to your parents (to whom you are under obligation for their care, for the food which they prepare, [and] the clothing you wear); [you will find that] your duties will seem lighter and your life a grander thing than you have hitherto regarded it. You compose a part of the family; you add to the expense of the family and to its accumulation of work, and therefore should not excuse yourselves from doing your part with readiness, without one word of complaint, but be bright and hopeful, obeying your parents from principle.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 6

When tempted to have your own way in regard to the wishes of your parents, say, "No; Jesus was subject to His parents." Ask help of Jesus, who knows the temptations of every child, of every youth, for He has been tempted and knows your every weakness and will help you to overcome it.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 7

There will be those who will solicit you to pursue a course that your blessed Bible will condemn, that your parents cannot approve; but such are the instruments of Satan to lead you away from right, away from thoughts of Jesus and pure and holy desires and purposes. Look to Jesus for strength to do right. Whatever you may experience in self-denial, in doing right, nothing can be so bad as failing when you should succeed in a given course of action. Those who obey are the only ones who will be qualified to command, and they who obey are pleasing even higher authority than their parents. No one can hope to receive the love and blessing of God who does not learn obedience to His command and [does not] stand up firmly against temptation.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 8

The Lord has given you good ability for you to use in common sense thoughts. Learn to develop the powers within you; have high and noble aims; and by your consecration make straight paths for your feet, always relying upon the grace which Christ loves to give to all those who really desire help.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 9

Be not moved about by every wind and tide; develop an energy, purpose, and will within you to meet the high standard of character which God has given us in His Word. You want to cultivate sober reflection; exercise plain common sense, which is rarely exercised by the fashion-seekers of today.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 10

You want will, but not self-will that will not hear the advice and counsel of experience. You have plenty of persistence in having your own desires gratified; now have the will and persistence exercised in an opposite direction—in the firm purpose that you will be good and right, obedient and true. The vain and frivolous of the world are not your patterns that you should copy. You want something more stable, something brighter, higher, nobler.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 11

You children, the eldest daughters, should study carefully to follow enlightened conscience, for your example will prove either a safe pattern for your younger brothers and sisters, or a detriment. Do not give to these younger children examples of disobedience to your parents. See what an example you can give to those younger than you. God calls upon you children to have higher hopes, higher aims, nobler aspirations than you have hitherto had.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 12

It is far better to form correct and right habits and to fill a humble station with honor, though you may be poor, than to be constantly trying to imitate the vain and the more wealthy in dress and extravagant display. Your life is set down in the books of God just as it is, just in accordance with your real value of character. He does not reckon your value by your flounced and expensive outward adorning. Your time and mental strength expended in frivolous adorning is set down in the books of heaven against you as robbery to God. Think of Jesus, the dear Saviour, who gave His life that you might not forever be wretched and undone and lost.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 13

Jesus died on Calvary's cross. The Son of the infinite God came to our world and was not aping the rich at all; He dressed in very humble apparel; He became poor for our sakes, that we through His poverty might be made rich. If Jesus was, in His life, clothed with gorgeous apparel, if this example is given us, then we may imitate Him. If His life was meek and lowly, pure and full of good works, then the very best thing we can do is to imitate Jesus. He says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father upon His throne." [Revelation 3:21.] God keeps a reckoning with every individual. Will you please, dear children, consider what that reckoning must be in your account?4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 14

Your father is a poor man, but this you do not consider; but you are full of plans to use up and exhaust the means he earns by brain labor. Will you consider how this course displeases Jesus? He who was the Majesty of heaven came to our world and made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and it is only because He submitted to such humiliation that we have the hope of glory and immortality; and yet poor, fallen sinners for whom He died would exalt themselves above their God.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 15

Will you, dear children, learn from the wonderful story of the Son of God to pour contempt on all human pride and vanity? The Son of man consents to be a servant, and shall weak mortals be constantly striving to be praised and petted and estimated far above their real value and what they know themselves to be? Shall finite beings complain that their condition is lowly, that they are not exalted and honored? Shall any humiliation seem too deep if, in our lowly estate, we may have the sympathy and companionship of One who was equal with God?4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 16

The story of Bethlehem shows us how deep, how full, is the divine sympathy with the humblest, the lowliest in all the walks of life. Jesus dwells with those who are meek and lowly and contrite. We may learn to cherish the holiest purposes in the humblest occupations. The hard-working, diligent, useful hands are the especial favorites of heaven. The Son of God, in His humiliation, passed through all the doubts and necessities of our lowly estate that He might sanctify all departments of human life and teach us to live for God in them all.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 17

I want now, children, to tell you just what you may do. You may be children of God. You have hitherto given your minds to the frivolous and vain things. You do not know the worth of money. You have a great many imaginary wants. Your thoughts are vain; you have pride and you love dress; and you clamor and urge for things that you could do without. You do not see the necessity of being care-taking, of saving your good clothing, of wearing dresses that are durable and not expensive.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 18

Now, children, your father is overworked, and if he continues to work as he has done, you will ere long be left fatherless. It is to prevent this that I now address you. He does too much labor and thinks he must, in order to support his children. All the time he is in debt, which worries him, and this, with his overwork, is weakening his hold on life.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 19

I write to you, the eldest daughters, in particular, for you can do much to change this state of things. You love your father, but you are selfish and love to do as you please, to make a show, to display gay and trimmed dresses. The more money you spend in this way, the harder your father has to work to support you. He hates to say to you that which God would have him [say]: "Children, this is God's money; I am His servant; He gives me strength; He gives me mental faculties to be employed to His glory. I cannot permit you to use this money to encourage your vanity, your envy, [and] your pride in purchasing things you can do without, and would be better off doing without. I must say to you, I cannot encourage you in sin and wear away my own strength in such a miserable cause, to support you in pride and dress and display. I am guilty before God in thus doing, and He cannot bless me in thus indulging you in sin longer. Will you stop, children, and consider? Will you use the reason God has given you and inquire, 'How shall I mete the record of this useless, frivolous life? How shall I stand in the judgment—wasting my time, wasting my father's money in foolishness, and he, working beyond his strength because of my ingratitude and unreasonable repining after things I can do without?'" 4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 20

The Lord has shown me you will ere long be one of the most wretched, miserable, unhappy families, unless you are truly converted, your habits changed, and you try to help take care of your parents. God will not work a miracle to prevent the sure results in misery and distress that threaten you as a family. Already the reckoning of the figures is presenting a terrible balance against you. You have not tried to please God. You have been wicked, vain, and frivolous, and sorrow is coming upon you. Will you now stop your course of disobedience and vanity? Will you think soberly and candidly and turn about? God will forgive you now; He will avert the evils which are sure to come, if you will repent. If you will cease your course of folly and transgression, the Lord will bless you. 4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 21

Dear children, I want you to make decided changes. Seek to be useful, to help your parents; to be care-taking and thoughtful. You can help them in a variety of ways. You cannot tell how much good you can do in carrying a cheerful, sunshiny face. Please put away the frowns and the frettings because there are duties to do. Carry the little burdens and relieve your parents of these extra cares. They may not appear grand—nothing but plain, homely duties—but someone must do them. Doing what you can do cheerfully, with a quick step, your face bright with gladness because you can do something for your parents to lighten their load, will make you a blessing in the house. You can watch and see how you can help, doing the duties nearest you, taking them just as they come in a patient, cheerful way. 4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 22

All these little duties, faithfully done, are entered upon the ledger of heaven, and when your life is added up in the end, there will be a noble total set to your account. God will make no mistakes; He will make an accurate entry of all your life duties done to His glory. So never frown but always carry a cheerful, happy face, a ready hand to help, an attentive ear to hear the requirements, a heart to obey, [and] a quick sympathy for those who need help. These little matters may seem small, barely worth attention, but it is faithfulness in these minor duties that is giving the experience for larger responsibilities.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 23

Go forward, children, step by step in painstaking, doing the work someone must do, and you [will be] walking in God's ways. In the great day of final accounts, you will see what this amounts to. Remember your characters are not finished; you are building up day by day a character. Weave all the kindness, obedience, thoughtfulness, painstaking, and love into it you can. Make it after the Divine Model. Educate yourselves that you may possess the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price. You can make the world better by living in it if you only do the very best you can.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 24

May the Lord help you to seek Him now; give your heart to Jesus without reserve. He loves you; He wants to bless you; He wants you should be His children and let His light be reflected from you to others.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1883, par. 25

Lt 18, 1883

White, W. C.

Extract from Lt 23, 1882.

Lt 19, 1883

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

February 6, 1883

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie:

I hoped to hear from you as often as once a week, but I do not hear once a month. Brother Whalin comes in and says, "Have you heard from Willie yet?" I answer, "No, I hope to hear something by and by." It is not right to be so reticent. I want to know what you are doing. I want to know what Edson is doing.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1883, par. 1*

Samuel Abbey owes me three hundred dollars, principle and interest. I have received five hundred. I would like the rest. Please collect it for me. Brother Whalin cannot keep many hands employed now until you come home and tell him what to do about [the] heating apparatus. His health has been very poor, but he is improving since I gave him Mrs. Temple's remedy.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1883, par. 2*

The school is doing well. [Sidney] Brownsberger says he wrote you a long letter but [has] received no answer. Brother Whalin came again today to see if any letters came from you. He closed the door but soon came back stating, "If it will be any consolation to you, I will tell you to rest assured his time is well employed." Sisters Ings and Abbey and myself had a laugh over that.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1883, par. 3*

I would have written oftener but my eyes would not let me write anything after my pages on Volume Four were written. So you see I am excused. But do write your mother a few lines, if only a postal. We pray for you every day that God would give you wisdom and guide you all right. I believe He will. Why does not Edson write a line? Has his business so absorbed his mind he forgets he has a mother?⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1883, par. 4*

I have not heard from Oakland for some time. I suppose they are all well. I would write to Mary [White] oftener if I were you, if I did not write to anyone else. Please to answer this question now before you forget it: Where is the agreement with Michael? Ask Edson if he knows where these papers are. I cannot find them. Are they at Battle Creek in the safe? It is thought I can collect my money when the grapes are gathered, but I must have my papers to tell something of how we stand. Brother Mead sent in his last month's report, a charge against me of twelve dollars for wood. What does this mean? Do I pay for wood he burns when he makes such charges? I wish he would enlighten my mind by specifying the particulars. I have waited patiently for something, some ray of knowledge in regard to my business, but none comes. I am as dark as midnight.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1883, par. 5*

Well, good by.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1883, par. 6*

Mother.

Lt 20, 1883

White, W. C.

San Jose, California

June 11, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in TDG 171.

Dear Son Willie:

I have heard nothing from you but thought I would write you a few lines. I have been unable to write even a simple letter since coming here, until last Sabbath [when] I was strengthened to write thirteen pages to Elder [J. N.] Andrews. Brother [B. L.] Whitney seems to be so long getting off. I feared he might not get the light for him; therefore, I wrote him again, and this did not seem to injure me.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 1

I think, Willie, had I not gone to Lemoore or Los Angeles I should have been obliged to stop all the same. My mind has been a blank. I could not think or act, but I seemed to arouse at one time, one week ago Friday. [I] felt urged to write and also telegraph to Oakland to retain the men from Healdsburg there who intended to go to Stockton, until a letter was received from me. I felt certain that it would prove fruitless, their going there, but would positively hedge up our way when the tent should be pitched there.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 2

This is an important, as well as a hard, field. Our forces were insufficient and are still not all that should be here. There was work enough for twenty men to go through this city at the very time the interest was awakened. The surrounding counties are to be visited. My team is used by Brother Ings all the time, and far more progress could be made were my other horse here. When such an effort is made as is being made here, the forces should not be scattered all over the field. Let them concentrate the workers where the harvesting is to be done.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 3

I wrote to Elder Waggoner to send the men calculated to go to

Stockton here, for these few weeks would be to them the best school they could ever have to obtain a knowledge of how to work. And if we had Wheeler and Hicks here it would be as it should be. All would have just as much to do and be educated how to work.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 4

Sending men into such a place as Stockton to canvass is only to arouse the powers of Satan to make efforts to counteract the influence, with no persons qualified to withstand him. Those here have a regular training school. They have a Bible class every day, and Brother Ings talks with them. Our meetings opened last Friday evening. Could not get ready before, but everything seemed to come so natural, without urging. A large lot with good barn on it was obtained free—just opposite, across the road, facing the tent. There was a good humble house of five good-sized rooms. I advised Elder Healey to hire this for his family. He did so, for ten dollars and [a] quarter per month, [with] water furnished. The street cars run directly by the tent.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 5

Friday night there was a good attendance. Sabbath we did not give an appointment for meeting, but ourselves all met under the tent. I talked to them about thirty minutes. All took part in the meeting and Brethren Scott and Iambs expressed their thankfulness that they had the privilege of laboring where they could have daily instruction how to labor. There was a good spirit in the meeting. I have not dared to speak to the public yet, but expect to be able about Tuesday.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 6

I am of good courage but shall not dare to write until these pains leave my head. Yesterday Brother Ings went to see Brother Bowers, who lives at the Miller's. He says he gave you a deed to have his property arranged so that the cause will get it, but he has heard nothing from it since. Brother Ings told him that the plan he proposed would not work, and probably you saw it so, and this was the reason that you had not reported or done anything about it. Please write in reference to this matter.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 7

Brother Ings is very active, teaching and working. Appointment was given out last night for me to speak Tuesday night. I shall talk with Elder Healey in regard to having meetings Sunday afternoon and evenings. He thought the people would not come out, but I think this is the all important day to secure hearers. Of course there is but little to report. Brother Ings is getting acquainted with some hopeful cases.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 8

We talk to the workers that they must do their missionary work with a spirit of prayer, and that they must come close to the people and not feel that after giving a paper or securing names their work is done. They have Satan and his angels close at their elbows to counteract every effort they may make. As they walk the streets, they must pray for grace and for the angels of God to be round about them. Unless they do, the craft of the devils will turn aside the efforts made, and the truth [will] not find access to hearts, and thus the whole city may be warned in vain. We must individually have grace that we may not be ignorant of Satan's devices, but that we may work effectually, [with] wisdom in [the] wrestling contest with the principalities and powers of darkness.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 9

This missionary work is a great work but must be conducted with great wisdom. The workers must be connected with God themselves, settled, rooted and grounded in the truth, and able to give to every man that shall ask them the reason of the hope that is within them with meekness and with fear. Watch and pray and pray and watch is the all-important thing for the workers. Without this their efforts will be of little account.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 10

Oh, how important that the workers be so closely walking in Christ's steps that no slur shall be cast upon the truth they advocate! Oh, we have a cunning devil to work against! Christ alone is mighty and fully able to match his power, therefore we must have Jesus with us every moment. We are sleepy, stupid, and do not sense the arts and gins and snares of Satan set for unwary feet. Therefore we must know how we step that every move is in God. Self must not come in here to make itself heard.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 11

The destruction of souls is the regular employment of Satan and his agents upon the earth. The salvation of souls is the work of every follower of Christ, however weak. When selfish interest is made first and the salvation of souls comes secondary, if at all, that man is working on Satan's side, for his very pretensions are a snare to lead others off the track that they shall not consider the kingdom of God and His righteousness first. Satan is getting the start of all such workers. The salvation of souls comes first, always, for Satan as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour. We must snatch souls away from his path.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 12

We must have clear foresight, discernment, and faith, and work as if to save a perishing life of which some carelessness on our part might be the cause of death.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 13

Missionary work! God help us to understand it—what it is and how we must engage in it. Every missionary should be wholly the Lord's, pressing forward to attain to the perfection of Christian character. The standard of piety must be lifted high. Every species of idolatry must be sacrificed. Souls, precious souls, must be saved. Souls for whom Christ has died must be urged to embrace the truth.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 14

One man, when the church in Scotland was making some resolutions to compromise the faith, to concede their staunch principles, was determined never to yield a jot or tittle. He went upon his knees before God and thus pleaded, "Give me Scotland or I die." His importunate prayer was heard. Oh, that the earnest prayer of faith may arise everywhere, "Give me souls buried now in the rubbish of error, or I die! Bring them to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus."4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 15

We must carry the burden of souls upon our hearts; every selfish consideration must give way to this. The cost of the blood of Christ shows the value of the soul. This must come first with us. Our own selfish purposes must be held subordinate.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 16

In love,4LtMs, Lt 20, 1883, par. 17

Mother.

Lt 21, 1883

White, W. C.

San Jose, California

June 13, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in TDG 173.

Dear Willie:

The work is moving forward slowly. The congregations are small. The first night was the largest and last night I spoke to a good congregation. I had the attention of the people, and I thank the Lord I had some strength and some clearness of mind and the assistance of the Spirit of the Lord. Several women came to me after the meeting and said they were strangers to me but thanked me for the words I had spoken. It had done them good. Mrs. Lion spoke with me. Referred me back to Dansville when she first became acquainted with me. She was my physician there. Her name was Payne, a Quakeress. She looks well; bears her age well. She was much pleased to meet me. I invited her to call at our home in Sister Scott's mansion.⁴*LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 1*

Brother Ings uses the team every day to go out in the country, and nearly everywhere he goes, he is invited in to visit and he meets with some quite interesting cases. All the workers have all that they can do in the city. Each is doing what he can. The two boys—Frank Thorpe and one about the same age—are doing as well as could be expected for boys. I think we will gather some souls here but not a large number.⁴*LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 2*

I am using my head some now. Yesterday for the first time wrote a few pages on my book. Life of Paul has just come to hand. Makes a neat book. Marian [Davis] expects me to read it through critically, but I can do no such thing. If those who read it cannot do this, it will go, for I would not trust my head or memory.⁴*LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 3*

I received your card yesterday. I feel deeply and desire to write much and think I can. Our family remains as it was—only Brother and Sister Ings, Henry Wallace, Addie [Walling], and myself. If we only make God our trust, we shall see of His salvation. God's power alone can be our help and strength.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 4

We rise at five o'clock, eat at half past six, and then the men take the team to the tent and devote one hour and half to Bible class and talking together, comparing their experience of the day previous. [They] are instructed in regard to the orderly habits they should cultivate and the necessity of overcoming every defect in character. This is a school for them which they all need very much.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 5

The Lambs are good-spirited boys, but have great deficiencies—no order, neglect the simplest duties in care-taking, leave things undone right before their faces. It is a time now for them to obtain a fitness for the work or give it up and take up that part of their education which has received no attention, until they develop a well-balanced character. Until this is done, they will never be fit to go alone and do anything. We all need more of the Spirit of God, more earnest faith, more constant, earnest prayer that we may discern the grievous imperfections of our best works and our entire inability of ourselves to meet the divine standard.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 6

Oh, the greatness of the work to save souls! How few feel it! How few are doing all they can to gather souls to Christ! Satan is working with his might—persevering, diligent, untiring—while many who profess the truth are asleep, doing nothing to save souls, not even living the truth they profess. It is no tame testimony that will meet the people. We must reach the people through God. We must be flexible in the hands of God, to be molded as clay in the hands of the potter. There is sufficiency in the grace of God for every hour of conflict, for every hour of trial. Let us take hold of God more firmly. His Spirit will help, His Spirit will strengthen and sustain. As we come nearer to God, we shall be conscious of our own nothingness and learn to depend more upon Jesus Christ and then we shall obtain clear evidence of the love of Jesus. We shall see the goodness and mercy of God displayed in the orderings of His providence.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 7

Brother Wheeler writes my cow died very suddenly, but this seems so small a matter when we see souls perishing around us. I scarcely give it a thought.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 8

Mother.

[P. S.] Love to Sister Scott, Elder [S. N.] Haskell, and all my dear friends.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1883, par. 9

Mother.

Lt 22, 1883

Children

Laramie, Wyoming

August 15, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 11MR 68-70.

Dear Children:

We have had another good night's rest. We are near Laramie. The journey thus far has been the most pleasant of any we have had in crossing the plains. In the last car the seat opposite us was occupied by only one man. We used it a good share of the time. Yesterday we changed at Ogden and there was no one in the opposite section. We had the entire command of our own section and the one opposite us, so we have not been crowded at all. We have an excellent sleeping-car conductor and on both trains good accommodating porters.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 1

The weather has been rather hot in midday, but it might be worse. We feel deeply grateful for the protection we are assured we have from God. I feel cheerful and happy. I have a good time to think and to pray. I am stronger than when I left Oakland. I feel the need of special help from God for I know we are indeed exposed to Satan's temptations and to his malice. We need the guardianship of angels day by day, hour by hour.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 2

We need your prayers daily that the Lord would prepare me to do His work and give me largely of His Spirit, for without this grace and His special assistance I cannot do anything. Oh, I long, I thirst for salvation, for special help from God, to know for myself that my life is hid with Christ in God. I do know that there is nothing on earth I desire beside Him. He is the crown of my rejoicing. Separated from Jesus, I should be indeed miserable.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 3

I am seated next to that large man, a Frenchman, who was in the depot when we entered it. He is a theater manager. He has a little woman with short-cut hair—an actress. We have become quite well acquainted. She is not, I should judge, like the general class. She has been on the stage three years. Louise Lester—you may have seen the name. I have thought, Here are two actors in life, but what a contrast! I have not the slightest desire for her life, but I do feel deeply anxious to act my part in my lifework with unswerving fidelity.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 4

This party are very kind and courteous, but the raid they make upon bottles of champagne and wines is to me a marvel. The lady takes her glass with us as much ease as the gentleman. I have been courteously invited to join them but frankly told them I never in my life tasted the article and had no need for anything of the kind. They opened their eyes with astonishment. I see every gentleman on the train has his liquor flask and the eyes of some testify that they drink brandy and considerable of it; but I find the lemon you kindly provided for us fully meets all my wants as far as drinking is concerned. I treat the different parties with my precious fruit, and they try hard to make some exchange, but fail. I have all of the kind of food that I would at all accept from them. They feel disturbed to think they are in my debt.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 5

There is a family from India on their way to England, soldiers. They complain of the heat here—worse, they say, than in India. They were in the healthful part of the country. They have a nurse for the little boy. She is a native, curiously dressed and curious in appearance. Her hands are tattooed completely. She wears a pink calico dress nearly straight as a bag, with a short sack of the same, then a pink figured calico mantle which crosses before, fastened behind. She is indeed a curious specimen, but is really a good nurse.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 6

Yesterday while the cars stopped at a small station a young man came into the cars. Said he had eaten nothing for twenty-four hours. Sara gave him provisions to supply present wants. He was about eighteen years old. Said he had no money to buy anything to eat.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 7

We have just finished breakfast. It is now five minutes past eight o'clock. We are about ten miles from Laramie. We shall not be able to make way with our provisions. Sara bought a bottle of milk and some warm water this morning. I put ginger in it and it went well.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1883, par. 8

Mother.

Lt 23, 1883

Children

Battle Creek, Michigan

August 18, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 227.

Dear Children:

I spoke to the people today in Battle Creek. The house was full. Many of the patients were present. I was feeling real sick, as I could not sleep and spent the night in prayer. Between two and three o'clock I slept. I had about three hours' sleep—better than nothing. Dr. [J. H.] Kellogg took me at once to the sanitarium. After speaking I took a bath.⁴*LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 1*

Tonight Mrs. Roberson, a worker from the city in the Women's Christian Temperance Union, came to my room and urged me strongly to speak tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock on the public square upon temperance. Another minister will lead out in a half-hour speech, and then she would consider it a great favor to have me speak and help them in their efforts. I told her I would speak. I feel that God will work in behalf of His cause.⁴*LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 2*

On arriving here I went directly to Edson's. Stayed there till I went to the [sanitarium?]. He leaves for Kansas tomorrow night. He has his fare free [there] and back; Emma [White] has fare free to Kansas.⁴*LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 3*

I have had a bad cold since I left Oakland, but I shall overcome it. The Lord gave me strength and His Spirit before the people today.⁴*LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 4*

Dr. [J. H.] Kellogg is looking well—better than I have ever seen him. He says he gained twenty pounds while he was gone. Has lost ten since his return. The house is full of patients. Two hundred are here now. Lucinda [Hall] and Sister Sawyer are the ones who have a molding influence here, and the atmosphere of the house, as far as religious interest is concerned, is in every way improved.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 5

Sunday morning

I called upon Brother and Sister Lunt and Sister Howland yesterday. They were glad to see me and I urged that Sister Lunt go with her husband to California when we should return. I think they will do so. Sister Lunt offered no strong objections.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 6

I have not much news to write for I have scarcely had an opportunity to see anyone. I am inclined to think the camp meeting should be here, unless the state of the church is such that it would prove a weight. I [will] attend the meeting of the office hands this morning in the chapel of the office.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 7

I will write more when the day opens up things of deeper interest.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 8

Mother.

August 20, 1883

One severe day's work is over. Sunday morning, August 12, I stood before the workers assembled for worship on the Pacific Coast and spoke with them in regard to our individual responsibility to God. August 19 I spoke to the workers in the Review office in regard to the first efforts made in Battle Creek in the publishing department. About eighty assembled. How small was the beginning of the work, and how limited the wages received! What self-denial and self-sacrifice had to be exercised to carry on the work! I had freedom in speaking and the effort will not be in vain. I spoke about one hour. This was to me a very precious meeting.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 9

At four o'clock I spoke on the public square upon temperance. I was quite hoarse in consequence of [a] cold. There were about four hundred assembled at night. Through much importunity I spoke to the patients at the sanitarium. The attendance was large—three hundred at least were crowded in the adjoining rooms. The parlor was full, the hall was full, [and] the piazza was crowded. I had a real free, blessed time, in speaking and it was a great satisfaction to see how well it was received. I am writing out a little sketch which I will send you for the paper. Now, was not that one day of rest at the sanitarium a rather peculiar kind of rest? I thought it was.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 10

I have not seen Elder [Uriah] Smith to converse with him. I have just spoken with Gage and that is all. They keep themselves from me. Whether to go after them or let them alone to take what course they will is a question with me. Elder Littlejohn and his new wife are in Allegan. Elder Littlejohn's mother died. They were sent for and have not yet returned. They may come back today. Seneca King has married Martha Byington—a good match. Sister Stone sits up a little. She has internal injuries, besides her broken arm, but she is slowly improving. The death of Brother Stone gave a terrible shock to them all here.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 11

Edson has gone to Kansas; Emma to Colorado. Edson some way did not make the matter plain in regard to a piece [field?] of corn he planted which Colwell [?] was determined he should not have, and he would have to place the matter in a lawyer's hands.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 12

I gave Edson one hundred dollars, all unexpected to him, but he feels all good now and is making earnest efforts to get out of his backslidden state. I am in so great hurry I cannot half write. I am now going to ride out in my own carriage. Write me.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1883, par. 13

Mother.

Lt 24, 1883

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Worcester, Massachusetts

August 23, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in ChL 43-44; 2MR 250-251; 10MR 339.

Dear Children, Willie and Mary:

Sister Sarah and I left Battle Creek Tuesday at half past two o'clock. We arrived here at half past eight o'clock Wednesday night. This part of the journey was more trying and wearisome to us than the long journey from California. It was dusty and the cars were much crowded and it was very warm. But I felt of good courage. I had no fret in me. I felt thankful for peace of mind and communion with my Saviour on the entire journey. Under His guardianship I knew I was safe and had no reason for complaint. Therefore I did not feel half as weary as I otherwise would have done.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 1

I spoke six times in Battle Creek. It will do good, I know it will, for the Lord helped me. I had a long talk with Brother [G. H.] Bell. I told him many things. I tried to place before him where everyone of our leading men had made a mistake and hindered the work they were so desirous to advance. Each one thought that he was the very one who must bear all the responsibilities. They spread over too much ground and failed to educate others to think, to act, to be caretakers, [and] to lift burdens, because they gave them no chance.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 2

I told him it was not God's plan to have it thus. He had done this way and gathered upon himself a mass of burdens [that] he had no strength to carry, and he could not do justice to anything. God had given to every man his work, according to each man's ability. When one man entertained the idea that he must gather all the responsibilities because he thought he could do it a little more perfectly than another, he sinned against himself, and he sinned against his brethren. He was educating the people to look to him, to expect everything must come through him, and they were not educated to look to God and to expect God to do great things for them. They depended upon others and trusted in others rather than in the living God, therefore many have not the experience they ought to have which would make them efficient workers.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 3

This, I have been shown many times, was the true solution of the sad problem as to why there are not more apt, skillful workers in this time of great need, when the burdens are crushing out the vital energies of our best generals. How can we make this matter understood—that God is the living fountain ready to supply every demand? Men must learn to go to Him, to trust in Him, to carry all their troubles to Him, to take hold of Him by living faith and work in the power of His might. Our leading brethren—every one of them—have made a mistake on this point. It seems to be so interwoven with their manner of labor, like the warp and woof, that it is next to impossible to change a course which has become like second nature, but which must be changed, for God says so.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 4

Men must not be taught to look to men or hang upon men, but must be educated to look to God, to trust in God, to expect great things of God, and to use their God-given abilities to the utmost of their capacity. When they do thus, they will enlarge, they will grow, they will feel their inefficiency to do so great a work, and [they] will seek help from the only Source where it can be obtained.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 5

Our camp meetings must be so arranged and conducted that the most lasting good may be the result; that the people will know how to live and work for the glory of God after they leave the meetings.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 6

I dwelt on these principles. I told Brother [G. H.] Bell he must do his work, which was to teach. He must not stand to pick up every little flaw and mark every misdemeanor, but he could do much by talking kindly to the school, laying down the principles of action. He must maintain his position as a dignified teacher—not that dignity that will not heed the counsels of others, but that kindness, that courtesy that will win his way into the hearts of his students.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 7

He might put on a dignity and claim a dignity which would fail of securing respect, but which would disgust. The true dignity would be to go about his work as teacher and leave the little items of business for others to attend to, and by a well-ordered deportment show a moral power that holds him above the changeable emotions of anger, impatience, [and] criticism.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 8

Brother Bell is receiving all I say to him, and he says he will act upon it, with the help of God. I was not let alone at all in Battle Creek. I talked six times and all the rest of the time with Dr. [J. H.] Kellogg, Henry Kellogg, Professor Bell, Elder Littlejohn. Only once, and not long, [with] S. Lane and several others.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 9

Now I am in a tent on the Worcester campground, considerably worn but well situated for comfort. I do not see how you can reach the Nebraska meeting unless Elder H and yourself shall leave a day or two before it closes, and I do not know as this can be or ought to be done. When you do come, take your sleeping berths every night. I will pay for them myself rather than you be deprived of your rest. You have work to do and should be getting all the rest possible that you may labor to the best advantage. Nebraska wants [a] two-week meeting but, Willie, it cannot be, as I can see, without robbing others.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 10

Now, Willie, you had better come to the meeting. All seem to feel that way. Elders Butler and Van Horn have just come on the ground. It is now about nine o'clock, Thursday morning. Slept but little last night, but I do look to the Lord for help. I have been talking with Elder Butler. He thinks the General Conference should be in Battle Creek, and I had about come to the same conclusion. The camp meeting should not be loaded down with business, either of the institutions or conference matters.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 11

Professor Bell will take hold again at South Lancaster with a different spirit. Brother Roberson says his letters are of an entirely different character—more humble and kind and conciliating. I believe he wants to do right. Camp meeting will be in Battle Creek, then the laborers in the different institutions will be benefitted with some of the meetings.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 12

Willie, the managers at the sanitarium are put to their wit's ends to know what to do for fruit. I sell them all of my canned fruit in Battle Creek. How would it do to ship with boxes or some things you send this way my dried plums at Healdsburg and Oakland? Would it pay? Please consider the matter and act accordingly (I do not want the dried peaches at Healdsburg sold). Fruit is almost a failure [in the] East. It is impossible to get it at any price, for it is not in the country.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 13

Now my children, I am glad I came east of the Rocky Mountains. I have been helped and blessed of the Lord. I shall go forward trusting in God at every step. I believe He is more than willing to help us.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 14

I do hope your camp meeting will prove a success. Oh, the great work before us! Let us individually pray that God will work. We trust too much in our own doings. We must do all we can in humble faith, and then calmly, expectantly trust in One who has said, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." [Matthew 28:20.] Jesus is our refuge, our present helper. Faith in Him daily, hourly, is needed. I have had sweet communion with God on all this journey. I do not trust in what I can do, but in what God can do for us and what He will do. His promises are unailing and we will not doubt for one moment. May the Lord bless you all is my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1883, par. 15

Mother.

Lt 25, 1883

White, W. C.; White, Mary

South Lancaster, Massachusetts

August 29, 1883

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie and Mary:

I am now pretending to rest in the home of Sister Harris, but the time is short and only tomorrow we travel all day to [the] next camp meeting. I spoke in the last meeting six times, besides two or three times about thirty minutes. The meeting should have commenced one week earlier and this would have given it two weeks.⁴*LtMs, Lt 25, 1883, par. 1*

I never have seen an interest so good among outsiders. They came out in crowds on the week days. Monday forenoon I spoke one hour. I did not think of having any outside congregation in the afternoon, but lo, in the afternoon the tent was filled with outsiders and they came to hear me. I consented to speak in the afternoon and then hurried to the cars. As I appeared at the tent door, there was a large circle of outsiders weeping like children. Some were decked out with flowers, rings and jewelry. My friends in the tent were protesting, and they were clamoring for a chance to speak with me and take me by the hand. I felt badly to leave a people who felt it an honor to speak with me, a people who seemed to devour every word spoken. I did want to labor more in their behalf. The reports were made by outsiders—reporters who make this their business.⁴*LtMs, Lt 25, 1883, par. 2*

The Lord has indeed strengthened me, a weak frail instrument. I have felt very free. Had great clearness and have felt that the barriers were broken down before me. Sunday the tent was packed, and a wall of six tiers densely packed with people standing outside the wall. But there was not a getting up and going out and moving on the outside walls. I spoke one hour and forty minutes, receiving the most earnest attention.⁴*LtMs, Lt 25, 1883, par. 3*

I have not had a thoroughly good night's sleep since I left Battle Creek. It seems so warm nights, although we have very cool mornings. Have had frost for two mornings past. We feel of good courage, but I have not yet decided to go to the Maine eastern camp meeting. Elder [G. I.] Butler thinks I should go, but I have fears that if I go to Vermont and New York and Nebraska without rest, it will be too much for me. If I go to Maine I will have to have an additional tax of visiting my friends. This will be tremendous tax to me. How I shall arrange the matter I cannot determine. If I feel very weary I cannot consent to travel back to Maine and then to New York.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1883, par. 4

When I think of all these meetings, it makes my head swim. Well, I am willing to do all I can, but want wisdom to plan and execute just right. I would love to spend the winter here and labor in New England. It may not be best, but I am looking to God for light and duty. Pray for me.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1883, par. 5

It is going to be a hard matter to get any fruit here [in the] East. I do not think any of our plums that are dried should be sold.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1883, par. 6

Mother.

Lt 26, 1883

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Montpelier, Vermont

September 3, 1883

Previously unpublished.

Dear Children, Willie and Mary:

We left the Worcester, [Massachusetts,] campground on Tuesday and spent two days in South Lancaster. I met with the board and talked with them two hours. I think it was an important season. I had Sister Cummings present for I thought there were matters I wished to say which concerned her. I had been sick that day. Slept but little through the night.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 1

Next day we took the cars at Clinton Junction. Took a drawing-room car and had the advantage of a good sofa and slept much of the time until half past eleven. Then changed cars at Plymouth and stopped one hour. We had a nice time to take our dinner, but I had no appetite. We changed again at Wells River. Lawyer Upton and his wife stepped into the car, and as soon as he saw me he came and greeted me heartily. We had a long chat. He has been journeying for his health. Was going to Montpelier. Had been to the White Mountains. We journeyed through a most beautiful part of the country.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 2

We stepped from the train at the campground. A tent was nicely prepared for us, but the camp meeting was in an open field. There was not one shade tree and the heat beat down upon the tent, affecting my head. There was a small house unfinished within, containing two rooms. They moved us there and we have a real nice place. Now, when the sun is hot, we are sheltered; when it is cold, we have a good stove and plenty of wood. Last night we had a high wind but we were protected from it. Several tents were laid flat.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 3

I have spoken five times on the ground. I have had freedom in speaking. It seemed pleasant, but solemn, to meet a few of the old standard-bearers whom we were associated with in our experience thirty years ago. They are growing old; and then to see this entire state with no laborers except feeble Brethren Hutchens and Owens! Should they have the labors of one stirring man who was devoted to the work here, who had tact and discernment, there would be developed here good talent for labor; but there is no one to help in this matter here now.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 4

Sabbath a large number came forward. Several confessed they had once kept the Sabbath but had given it up, but from this meeting they would take their position. They would not break another Sabbath. We have had some excellent meetings. Sunday I spoke to a large crowd, and while there were many of us the roughs—young men who did not come to hear—there were many who could find no seats, who stood and listened with deep interest. These meetings will help the cause generally but cannot do that work that is essential to be done in the different churches.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 5

My heart aches as I see the work needed to be done and no one to do it. We ought to fast and pray that the Lord will raise up laborers to go into the harvest field. What shall we do for workers? Elder Bourdeau says Toronto is an excellent field to labor. There are some choice souls cut upon the truth. Someone should be sent into this field.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 6

Elder Bourdeau and family left the ground Saturday at midnight on the way to New York to take the steamer for Europe. He is looking well for him—the best I have seen him for years. His daughter is as tall as her mother—a precious child. I have been in conversation with him for hours after talking to the people in the tent.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 7

There are fifty tents on the ground, and many families are accommodated in the long agricultural hall and buildings connected with the ground. I was surprised to meet so many Sabbathkeepers under the tent, for but very little labor has been given to Vermont for years. But these meetings, so short, cannot do the work essential to be done. They will do something, but much more is needed. Well, we can only do what we can.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 8

Augustin Bourdeau came on the ground Sabbath and urged me to go where he lived to see the little company there, of about forty. They have built a new meeting house and want it dedicated. He says Grant and Litch and the Marion papers have been sent in there, and if the people could hear me it would be a wonderful help. I would go there if Elder [G. I.] Butler would consent. He holds on to me to go to Maine and New York. I should have to drop out New York if I went. Sister Augustin Bourdeau is lying at the point of death. She is cheerful, calm, [and] trusting in Jesus, knowing her work on earth is done.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 9

Is it not possible for you and Elder [S. N.] Haskell to leave California a day or two before the meetings close to get to [the] Nebraska meeting? Will you bring the letters you copied in a book? We may want to refer to them.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 10

[Continues with matter headed, "To be read to those assembled in camp meeting, by Mary K. White." See Ms 9, 1883.]4LtMs, Lt 26, 1883, par. 11

Lt 27, 1883

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Montpelier, Vermont

September 4, 1883

Portions of this letter are published in 2MR 251.

Dear Children, Willie and Mary:

We are having the last meeting on the ground. I do not go under the tent. It is too cold. The wind arose Sunday night and blew down several tents. It rained some. They have had no rain here for a long time and their crops are about a failure. Monday was cold as winter weather—cold as the coldest days we have seen in California. I went to the tent and spoke above one hour. There was quite a large number of outsiders in. I called them forward and two hundred came forward and we listened to some heartfelt confessions. Mothers and fathers confessed to their children and children to their mothers and fathers. It was a good meeting, but there was not that thorough breaking away we wished to see.4LtMs, Lt 27, 1883, par. 1

When I came to my rooms I found three men—nice, intelligent-looking men. They exclaimed, “We have not touched anything, but we were about frozen and saw a fire here and came in to get warm.” We assured them they were entirely welcome and invited them to come again if they desired. Many have rushed in here nearly frozen to be blessed with our good fire. Brother and Sister Hutchins slept in our house last night. Sister William Saxby has just come in to get warm and speak with me once more. She has no upper teeth. I asked her why she had not any teeth. She said she could not make ends meet since her husband’s death. I just placed ten dollars in her hand to get her a set of teeth. This is practicing what I preach to others. This past night was as cold as winter, and some of the poor, bloodless ones had a hard night of it. This morning the ground is covered with frost and the water was frozen. This decides the matter of the corn crop. No corn for Vermont.4LtMs, Lt 27, 1883, par. 2

I am thankful for the health and strength the Lord has given me. I have not had one sinking turn. I have spoken sixteen times. This morning I leave for Maine. If you could only see and realize how thankful the people are to see and to hear me again, you would not doubt it being my duty to come on this journey. I have not had a doubt in this matter. Will you pray for me? I cling to the Lord all the time. May the Lord bless you in your meeting is my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 27, 1883, par. 3

Mother.

[P. S.] Mary, see that Willie brings my neck fur. Winter comes so quickly. I shall want it.4LtMs, Lt 27, 1883, par. 4

Lt 28, 1883

Bourdeau, Mrs. A. C

Montpelier, Vermont

September 3, 1883

Previously unpublished.

Dear Afflicted Sister:

I wish I could speak with you and pray with you, but as this doesn't seem possible, I will write you a few lines. I am rejoiced to hear that amid your sufferings, Jesus your Saviour is to you a present help in time of need, that when the flesh is failing, the Saviour's love is revealed in you to all around you. Your hope is in God. You can testify to small and great the power of His grace, that there is a Divine reality in the religion of Jesus Christ, that a substantial peace and joy is found in your Saviour.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1883, par. 1

Now is the time that you can realize the preciousness of the Christian's hope. "What a friend we have in Jesus, all our woes and griefs to bear; What a privilege to carry everything to God in prayer." Jesus loves you; He will not leave you nor forsake you. You have not now to wrestle, not now to fight the fight of faith, only to trust in Jesus' love, in whom you have hid your life. A few more [days] of sorrow, a few more pangs of anguish, and then your rest will come.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1883, par. 2

"Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." [Revelation 14:13.] Now you may peacefully rest in Him in whom your hopes of eternal life are centered.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1883, par. 3

You will [have] some anxious thoughts in regard to your loved ones, but the way will all be made plain before them. The Lord loves your husband. You have both labored to know and to do His will, and He will not forsake him nor your dear children. You may be assured I will pray for you all in your sorrows while you are passing through the deep waters.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1883, par. 4

I do not expect to live until Jesus comes. I expect to rest in [the] hope of the glorious resurrection morning, but I will work on until my Master bids me lay off the armor.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1883, par. 5

I can write but a few lines now, but shall not forget you. Repose in peace in Jesus. You have now only to trust and wait. You have fought the good fight, and Jesus will now be to you your refuge, your strong tower, your comfort. May the Lord be very nigh you every moment, is my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1883, par. 6

Farewell, dear sister, until we meet no more to part in the resurrection morning.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1883, par. 7

Manuscripts

Ms 1, 1883

Sermon/Doubting the Testimonies

[Battle Creek, Michigan]

November 1883

This manuscript is published in entirety in 1SM 45-48.

[Extract from a sermon at the General Conference of 1883.]4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 1

When you find men questioning the testimonies, finding fault with them and seeking to draw away the people from their influence, be assured that God is not at work through them. It is another spirit. Doubt and unbelief are cherished by those who do not walk circumspectly. They have a painful consciousness that their life will not abide the test of the Spirit of God, whether speaking through His Word or through the testimonies of His Spirit that would bring them to His Word. Instead of beginning with their own hearts and coming into harmony with the pure principles of the gospel, they find fault and condemn the very means that God has chosen to fit up a people to stand in the day of the Lord.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 2

Let some skeptical one come along who is not willing to square his life by the Bible rule, who is seeking to gain the favor of all, and how soon the class that are not in harmony with the work of God are called out. Those who are converted and grounded in the truth will find nothing pleasing or profitable in the influence or teaching of such a one. But those who are defective in character, whose hands are not pure, whose hearts are not holy, whose habits of life are loose, who are unkind at home or untrustworthy in deal—all these will be sure to enjoy the new sentiments presented. All may see, if they will, the true measure of the man, the nature of his teaching, from the character of his followers.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 3

Those who have most to say against the testimonies are generally those who have not read them, just as those who boast of their disbelief of the Bible are those who have little knowledge of its teachings. They know that it condemns them, and their rejection of it gives them a feeling of security in their sinful course.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 4

There is in error and unbelief that which bewilders and bewitches the mind. To question and doubt and cherish unbelief in order to excuse ourselves in stepping aside from the straight path is a far easier matter than to purify the soul through a belief of the truth and obedience thereto. But when better influences lead one to desire to return, he finds himself entangled in such a network of Satan, like a fly in a spider's web, that it seems a hopeless task to him, and he seldom recovers himself from the snare laid for him by the wily foe.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 5

When once men have admitted doubt and unbelief in the testimonies of the Spirit of God, they are strongly tempted to adhere to the opinions which they have avowed before others. Their theories and notions fix themselves like a gloomy cloud over the mind, shutting out every ray of evidence in favor of the truth. The doubts indulged through ignorance, pride, or love of sinful practices rivet upon the soul fetters that are seldom broken. Christ, and He alone, can give the needed power to break them.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 6

The testimonies of the Spirit of God are given to direct men to His Word, which has been neglected. Now if their messages are not heeded, the Holy Spirit is shut away from the soul. What further means has God in reserve to reach the erring ones and show them their true condition?4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 7

The churches that have cherished influences which lessen faith in the testimonies are weak and tottering. Some ministers are working to attract the people to themselves. When an effort is made to correct any wrong in these ministers, they stand back in independence and say, "My church accepts my labors."4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 8

Jesus said, "Every one that doeth evil, hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved." [John 3:20.] There are many today pursuing a similar course. In the testimonies are specified the very sins of which they are guilty; hence they have no desire to read them. There are those who from their youth up have received warning and reproofs through the testimonies; but have they walked in the light and reformed? Not at all. They still indulge the same sins; they have the same defects of character. These evils mar the work of God and make their impress upon the churches. The work the Lord would do to set the churches in order is not done, because the individual members, and especially the leaders of the flock, would not be corrected.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par.

9

Many a man professes to accept the testimonies while they have no influence upon his life or character. His faults become stronger by indulgence until, having been often reproofed and not heeding the reproof, he loses the power of self-control and becomes hardened in a course of wrong doing. If he is overworked, if weakness comes upon him, he has not moral power to rise above the infirmities of character which he did not overcome; they become his strongest points, and he is overborne by them. Then bring him to the test and ask, "Did not God reprove this phase in your character by the testimonies years ago?" He will answer, "Yes, I received a written testimony saying that I was wrong in these things." "Why, then, did you not correct these wrong habits?" "I thought the reprover must have made a mistake; that which I could see, I accepted; that which I could not see, I said was the mind of the one who gave the message. I did not accept the reproof."4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 10

In some cases the very faults of character which God would have His servants see and correct, but which they refused to see, have cost these men their lives. They might have lived to be channels of light. God wanted them to live and sent them instruction in righteousness, that they might preserve their physical and mental powers to do acceptable service for Him; and had they received the counsel of God and become altogether such as He would have them, they would have been able workmen for the advancement of the truth, men who would have stood high in the affections and confidence of our people. But they are sleeping in the grave because they did not see that God knew them better than they knew themselves. His thoughts were not their thoughts, nor His ways, their ways. These one-sided men have moulded the work wherever they have labored. The churches under their management have been greatly weakened.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 11

God reproveth men because He loves them. He wants them to be strong in His strength, to have well-balanced minds and symmetrical characters; then they will be examples to the flock of God, leading them by precept and example nearer to heaven. Then they will build up a holy temple for God.4LtMs, Ms 1, 1883, par. 12

Ms 2, 1883

Sermon/Words to Ministers

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 1883

Portions of this manuscript are published in 1MR 19; 5MR 156.

“And unto the angel of the church in Sardis write: These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars, I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead. Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to perish; for I have not found thy works perfect before God. Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come upon thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.” [Revelation 3:1-3.] 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 1

The ministers of the gospel of Christ are to watch for souls as they that must give an account. They are to search the Scriptures earnestly, to be often on their knees in prayer, asking for heavenly wisdom that they may strengthen “the things which remain, that are ready to perish.” [Verse 2.] They are to place themselves under the power of the Scriptures by living in accordance with the will of God. The Word of God is to be their guide. This Word searches the secret working of the human heart. In it there are promises, directions, counsel, and reproof, which are to be used as the case may require. With a humble heart and a willing mind, God’s messenger is to search this Word, that he may understand for himself and draw from the storehouse for the benefit of others, things new and old. Ever he is to seek to lead minds to gain a personal, experimental knowledge of the truth. Many are sorely tempted and ready to die because they have not a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 2

Many think that the work of the minister consists in sermonizing, but in this they are mistaken. There is a work to be done from house to house. In this way many will be brought to a knowledge of the truth. Through the instrumentality of the earnest worker, souls ready to die will be imbued with the Spirit of Christ. The work of coming close to individual souls is neglected. The churches are ready to die for want of the right kind of labor. Church members should receive an education in the things of God that will give them a deep and living experience, enabling them to bring their thoughts into subjection to the divine will. The minister should visit them in their homes, talking and praying with them in earnestness and humility.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 3

In every congregation which gathered about Jesus, there were souls who were hungering and thirsting for light and knowledge. As they listened to the truth which fell from the lips of the divine Teacher, so different from the traditions and dogmas taught by the rabbis, hope sprang up in their hearts. There was a life in Christ's teaching which sent the truth home in power to the heart and captivated His hearers. God's ministers are to learn Christ's method of teaching that they may, as He did, bring fresh flowers full of fragrance from the garden of God's Word. Only thus can the need of the soul be supplied.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 4

Seeking for wisdom from God in true faith is a matter of no uncertainty. "If any man lack wisdom," the apostle declares, "let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord." James 1:5-7. Our only safety is in heeding this inspired counsel. We have reached out altogether too much to human beings for help. Counsel has been asked from men who are not taught by God, in whose hearts Christ does not abide. These men depend largely on their own wisdom and experience. Into their counsel they weave their own spirit, their own likes and dislikes. Their advice bears the same features as their minds. They are guided by their feelings and impressions, and often they discourage plans which should be encouraged and encourage where they should discourage. They have not the mind of Christ; therefore, barriers are thrown in the way of the work that the Lord Himself impressed His co-laborers with the importance of doing. On the other hand, they sanction that which the Lord has not sanctioned.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 5

How many of the presidents of our conferences have armed themselves with the mind that is in Christ? How many, by unceasing watchfulness and prayer, have strengthened the things which remain? I have been shown that instead of going to God for wisdom, our ministers have gone to the president of the General Conference. But the Lord has not made him your mediator. He has not been invested with a supply of wisdom for the presidents of the state conferences. Jesus is the fountainhead of wisdom, and our supply must be received from Him. Those who look to the president of the General Conference are crippled and dwarfed; whereas, if they would look to God, they would find grace and strength to help in every time of need. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not." [Verse 5.]4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 6

I am pained, brethren, as the weak, sickly condition of our churches is opened before me. "Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there?" [Jeremiah 8:22.] Must we decide that the presidents of our conferences have done the best? I would be loath to do this. We know that the heavenly universe is disappointed in them, because they do not co-operate with God. There are many churches in our conferences which are ready to die, testifying to a lack of the grace of Christ in the hearts of the men appointed to act as ministers. God does not accept the work done in these churches. He cannot say to those ministers, "Well done, good and faithful servant." [Matthew 25:23.] Brethren, I have been shown that the presidents of our conferences are not as efficient as God would have them. He has made every provision that they might have His grace and power to do the work the churches are suffering for.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 7

Brethren, I appeal to you to change this order of things. To whom have you looked for strength? Have you not been trusting altogether too much in your own efficiency? Have you not been looking to man and making flesh your arm? Have you not been light and trifling in your assemblies? Wherein have you shown that you carried the solemn burden of the work of God? Oh, what a difference there would be in the character of your work if you kept before you the abiding presence of a just and holy God, who requires you not merely to go through the form of preaching, but to give full proof of your ministry by revealing clusters of precious fruit.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 8

What precious experiences would have been gained if those who for years have been educating themselves to trust in man had educated themselves to trust fully in God, relying upon Him to do those things which they cannot do for themselves! They would have found that His Word is Yea and Amen. They would have been encouraged to ask and ask again. They would have gained a knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, for they would have been brought into sweet companionship with Him. Love for Him would have been kindled on the altar of the heart as they proved Him and found Him to be a very present help in every time of need.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 9

“Come unto me,” Christ said, “all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light.” [Matthew 11:28-30.] Lean not on the best man who lives. He is not wise enough or strong enough to hold you up. Take all your perplexities to Jesus. You may lean with your whole weight upon Him, and He will uphold you, for He is strong. He will not sink under the burdens you place on Him.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 10

Every church needs to hear the plain, earnest testimony from the Word of God. The parable of the ten virgins presents a picture which should cause us to tremble. Five of these virgins were wise, and five were foolish. The wise had oil in their vessels with their lamps, but the foolish had no oil in their vessels, and their lamps went out. The record says, “While they went to buy, the bridegroom came, and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut. Afterward also came the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily, I say unto you, I know you not.” [Matthew 25:10-12.] This comes as a solemn warning to every church, showing the danger of those whose works do not correspond to their profession of faith.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 11

Working, waiting, praying, and watching—this constitutes genuine

Christianity. Our work is not to be all waiting in idle expectancy. Neither is it to be all bustle and excitement, to the neglect of personal piety. Waiting, working, praying, and watching are to be blended as a whole. The servant of God is exhorted to be “not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.” [Romans 12:11.] The oil of grace must supply the need of the soul. There must be no weakening of the spiritual force. To ministers God says, “Take heed to thyself and to the doctrine.” [1 Timothy 4:16.] Cultivate heart-piety, and then diffuse light. God will not accept the service of the smartest men, those most fluent in speech, unless by a pure and holy life they show their consecration to Him. Unless the root is holy, there can be no healthy branches to bear fruit to God’s glory.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 12

God has chosen men and women as instrumentalities through which to work. It is His purpose that divine power and human endeavor shall unite. God is willing to teach all who come to Him in simplicity and faith. Have your sins separated you from God? What saith the Scriptures? “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.” [1 John 1:9.] Do you believe that God will do as He says? Then act your faith.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 13

There are those who stand upon their dignity, looking upon it as a disgrace to confess. They make mistakes which they should confess to their brethren, but instead of doing this, they cherish bitterness against them. They pronounce judgment against them and grieve the Holy Spirit. They make light of their transgression, refusing to acknowledge that they have sinned. They declare that they enjoy freedom in the love of God. But though they may apparently be earnest in the performance of religious duties, He who reads the heart as an open book writes against them this sentence, Weighed in the balances and found wanting. God bears long with their stubborn perversity, seeking to bring them to repentance.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 14

Thus Christ did in the case of Judas. He gave lessons calculated to arouse the conscience of the erring disciple, to lead him to see his selfishness, his ambition and love of money, as a great sin. But notwithstanding the efforts made by the Saviour, Judas cherished the accursed thing. Stubbornly justifying his course, he went on step by step in the path of sin, hiding his wrong from human sight, ready to pronounce judgment on the defects of others, but making no confession. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 15

Christ constantly sought to soften the heart of Judas. Thus He hoped to bring him to repentance that He might pardon him. But Judas' pride and stubbornness held him back from making any surrender. He would not fall upon the Rock and be broken, and finally his hardness of heart led him to sell his Lord for thirty pieces of silver. Thus he ruined himself. He had united himself with Christ voluntarily, as had the other disciples. With them he had the privilege of learning in the school of the divine Teacher. None of the disciples were free from defects, but all were dear to Christ's great heart of love. He loved Judas, and had Judas been willing to learn, he would have been transformed in character. But a man cannot be forgiven unless he repents. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 16

During Christ's ministry the disciples were closely associated with Him. It was the Saviour's purpose that they should be imbued with His Spirit that they might form characters which would fit them to do work for the Master. They had every advantage for being trained for high and holy service. They may have been called ignorant and unlearned, but they had as an instructor the greatest Teacher the world has ever known, the Light of life. "In him was life, and the life was the light of men." [John 1:4.] 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 17

He who taught the disciples is willing also to teach His servants today. Christ is the true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. We must be laborers together with God if we would do more than beat the air. The grace of Christ must be an abiding principle in the life, forming the character after the divine model. God has made every provision for man to receive an increase of moral power and a deep religious experience. He delivered up His Son that He might be the propitiation for our sins, to make reconciliation possible between God and man. What more could God do for His vineyard that He has not done? 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 18

The soul temple must be cleansed from its defilement before the heavenly Guest can enter. The minister of the gospel who is a laborer together with God will learn daily in the school of Christ. He will give full proof of his ministry by the wisdom he manifests in dealing with human minds. He will become acquainted with the parents and children of his congregation and will speak kindly words to all. No light trifling words will fall from his lips, for is he not an ambassador bringing from the heavenly courts a message of mercy and salvation to perishing souls? All jesting and joking, lightness and trifling, will be painful to the cross-bearing disciple of Christ. He is weighed down by the burden he feels for souls. His heart is drawn out in silent prayer to God that he may receive the grace of Christ and thus be enabled to discern his work and do it as a faithful steward. He prays to be kept pure and holy and then refuses to rush heedlessly into temptation. When he sees in any member of the church a lessening of zeal, he makes it his business to find out why this is so. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 19

The cross-bearing disciple heeds the injunction, "As he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation. Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy." [1 Peter 1:15, 16.] He will grow daily in grace, ever gaining a deeper knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Every heaven-sent messenger will be transformed in character. He will overcome selfishness, laying aside self-conceit as a worthless thing. The mind, the heart, the affections are elevated and ennobled in accordance with God's purpose. Not only a Bible reader, but a Bible believer, he gives a portion of meat to every man in due season. By keeping close to the Master, he receives words from Him to give to the people. He lifts as Christ lifts, he loves as Christ loves, he works as Christ works. He is one with Christ as Christ is one with the Father. He gives himself constantly to self-improvement, that by precept and example he may lead others to a purer, higher, and more elevated life. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1883, par. 20

Ms 3, 1883

Sermon/Genuine Faith and Holiness

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 1883

Copied from GW92 226-229.

Ms 4, 1883

Suppression and the Shut Door

Healdsburg, California

1883

This manuscript is published in entirety in 1SM 59-73.

[Statement made in 1883 by Ellen G. White at Healdsburg, California.]4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 1

My attention has recently been called to a 16-page pamphlet published by A. C. Long of Marion, Iowa, entitled, Comparison of the Early Writings of Mrs. White with Later Publications The writer states that portions of my earlier visions, as first printed, have been suppressed in the work recently published under the title, Early Writings of Mrs. E. G. White, and he conjectures as a reason for such suppression that these passages teach doctrines now repudiated by us as a people.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 2

He also charges us with willful deception in representing Early Writings as a complete republication of my earliest views, with only verbal changes from the original work.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 3

Before I notice separately the passages which are said to have been omitted, it is proper that several facts be stated. When my earliest views were first published in pamphlet form, the edition was small and was soon sold. This was in a few years followed by a larger book, The Christian Experience and Views of Mrs. E. G. White, printed in 1851 and containing much additional matter.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 4

In our frequent change of location in the earlier history of the publishing work and then in almost incessant travel as I have labored from Maine to Texas, from Michigan to California—and I have crossed the plains no less than seventeen times—I lost all trace of the first published works.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 5

When it was decided to publish Early Writings at Oakland last fall,

we were obliged to send to Michigan to borrow a copy of Experience and Views. In doing this, we supposed that we had obtained an exact copy of the earliest visions as first published. This we reprinted, as stated in the preface to Early Writings, with only verbal changes from the original work. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 6

Here I will pause to state that any of our people having in their possession a copy of any or all of my first views, as published prior to 1851, will do me a great favor if they will send them to me without delay. I promise to return the same as soon as a copy can be produced. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 7

So far from desiring to withhold anything that I have ever published, I would feel great satisfaction in giving to the public every line of my writings that has ever been printed. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 8

Testimonies Garbled by Eli Curtis

There is another fact that should be stated here. I am not responsible for all that has been printed as coming from me. About the time that my earliest visions were first published, several articles did appear purporting to have been written by me and to relate what the Lord had shown me, but sanctioning doctrines which I did not believe. These were published in a paper edited by a Mr. Curtis. Of the name of the paper I am not certain. In the years of care and labor that have passed since then, some of these less important particulars have been forgotten, but the main points are still distinct in my mind. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 9

This man took articles that came from my pen and wholly transformed and distorted them, picking out a sentence here and there without giving the connection, and then after inserting his own ideas, he attached my name to them as if they came direct from me. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 10

On seeing these articles, we wrote to him expressing our surprise and disapprobation and forbidding him thus to misconstrue my testimonies. He answered that he should publish what he pleased, that he knew the visions ought to say what he had published, and that if I had written them as the Lord gave them to me, they would have said these things. He asserted that if the visions had been given for the benefit of the church, he had a right to use them as he pleased.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 11

Some of these sheets may still be in existence and may be brought forward as coming from me, but I am not responsible for them. The articles given in Early Writings did pass under my eye; and as the edition of Experience and Views published in 1851 was the earliest which we possessed and as we had no knowledge of anything additional in papers or pamphlets of earlier date, I am not responsible for the omissions which are said to exist.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 12

The First Omission

The first quotation mentioned by A. C Long is from a pamphlet of twenty-four pages published in 1847, entitled A Word to the Little Flock. Here are a few lines omitted in Experiences and Views:4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 13

It was just as impossible for them (those that gave up their faith in the '44 movement) to get on the path again and go to the City, as all the wicked world which God had rejected. They fell all the way along the path one after another.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 14

I will give the context, that the full force of the expressions may be clearly seen:4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 15

While praying at the family altar, the Holy Ghost fell upon me, and I seemed to be rising higher and higher, far above the dark world. I turned to look for the Advent people in the world, but could not find them—when a voice said to me, “Look again, and look a little higher.” At this I raised my eyes and saw a straight and narrow path, cast up high above the world. On this path the Advent people were traveling to the City, which was at the farther end of the path. They had a bright light set up behind them at the first end of the path, which an angel told me was the Midnight Cry. This light shone all along the path, and gave light for their feet so they might not stumble. And if they kept their eyes fixed on Jesus, who was just before them, leading them to the City, they were safe. But soon some grew weary, and said the City was a great way off, and they expected to have entered it before. Then Jesus would encourage them by raising His glorious right arm, and from His arm came a light which waved over the Advent band, and they shouted Hallelujah! Others rashly denied the light behind them, and said that it was not God that had led them out so far. The light behind them went out leaving their feet in perfect darkness, and they stumbled and got their eyes off the mark and lost sight of Jesus, and fell off the path down into the dark and wicked world below.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 16

Now follows the passage said to be in the original work, but not found in Experience and Views or in Early Writings:4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 17

It was just as impossible for them (those that gave up their faith in the '44 movement) to get on the path again and go to the City as all the wicked world which God had rejected. They fell all the way along the path one after another.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 18

The “Shut Door” Defined

It is claimed that these expressions prove the shut-door doctrine and that this is the reason of their omission in later editions. But in fact they teach only that which has been and is still held by us as a people, as I shall show.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 19

For a time after the disappointment in 1844, I did hold in common with the advent body that the door of mercy was then forever closed to the world. This position was taken before my first vision was given me. It was the light given me of God that corrected our error and enabled us to see the true position.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 20

I am still a believer in the shut-door theory, but not in the sense in which we at first employed the term or in which it is employed by my opponents.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 21

There was a shut door in Noah's day. There was at that time a withdrawal of the Spirit of God from the sinful race that perished in the waters of the flood. God Himself gave the shut door message to Noah: “My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years.” [Genesis 6:3.]4*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 22*

There was a shut door in the days of Abraham. Mercy ceased to plead with the inhabitants of Sodom, and all but Lot, with his wife and two daughters, were consumed by the fire sent down from heaven.4*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 23*

There was a shut door in Christ’s day. The Son of God declared to the unbelieving Jews of that generation, “Your house is left unto you desolate.” [Matthew 23:38.]4*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 24*

Looking down the stream of time to the last days, the same infinite power proclaimed through John: “These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth.” [Revelation 3:7.]4*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 25*

I was shown in vision, and I still believe, that there was a shut door in 1844. All who saw the light of the first and second angel’s messages and rejected that light were left in darkness. And those who accepted it and received the Holy Spirit which attended the proclamation of the message from heaven and who afterward renounced their faith and pronounced their experience a delusion, thereby rejected the Spirit of God, and it no longer pleaded with them.4*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 26*

Those who did not see the light, had not the guilt of its rejection. It was only the class who had despised the light from heaven that the Spirit of God could not reach. And this class included, as I have stated, both those who refused to accept the message when it was presented to them and also those who, having received it, afterward renounced their faith. These might have a form of godliness and profess to be followers of Christ, but having no living connection with God, they would be taken captive by the delusions of Satan. These two classes are brought to view in the vision—those who declared the light which they had followed a delusion and the wicked of the world who, having rejected the light, had been rejected of God. No reference is made to those who had not seen the light and therefore were not guilty of its rejection.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 27

In order to prove that I believed and taught the shut-door doctrine, Mr. Long gives a quotation from the Review of June 11, 1861, signed by nine of our prominent members. The quotation reads as follows:4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 28

Our views of the work before us were then mostly vague and indefinite, some still retaining the idea adopted by the body of Advent believers in 1844, with Wm. Miller at their head, that our work for “the world” was finished, and that the message was confined to those of the original Advent faith. So firmly was this believed that one of our number was nearly refused the message, the individual presenting it having doubts of the possibility of his salvation because he was not in “the ’44 move.”4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 29

To this I need only to add that in the same meeting in which it was urged that the message could not be given to this brother, a testimony was given me through vision to encourage him to hope in God and to give his heart fully to Jesus, which he did then and there.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 30

An Unreasonable Conjecture

In another passage from the book A Word to the Little Flock, I speak of scenes upon the new earth and state that I there saw holy men of old, “Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Noah, Daniel, and many like them.” Because I speak of having seen these men, our opponents conjecture that I then believed in the immortality of the soul and that having since changed my views upon this point, I found it necessary to suppress that passage. They are as near the truth here as in other conjectures.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 31

In the year 1844 I accepted the doctrine we now hold concerning the non-immortality of the soul, as may be seen by reference to Life Sketches pages 170, 171 [1880 edition. See also 1915 edition, page 49; Testimonies, volume 1, pages 39, 40], and I have never, by voice or pen, advocated any other. Had we suppressed this passage on account of its teaching the immortality of the soul, we would have found it necessary to suppress other passages.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 32

In relating my first vision, page 13 of Early Writings [1882 edition, present edition, page 17], I speak of having seen brethren who had but a short time previously fallen asleep in Jesus, and on page 14 [present edition, pages 18, 19] I state that I was shown a great company who had suffered martyrdom for their faith.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 33

The immortality of the soul is no more taught in the “suppressed” passage than in the two last cited.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 34

The fact in the case is that in these visions I was carried forward to the time when the resurrected saints shall be gathered into the kingdom of God. In the same manner the judgment, the second coming of Christ, the establishment of the saints upon the new earth have been presented before me. Does anyone suppose that these scenes have yet transpired? My adversaries show the spirit by which they are actuated in thus accusing me of deception on the strength of a mere “conjecture.”4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 35

A Misquotation

In this quotation are also found the words, “I saw two long golden rods on which hung silver wires, and on the wires were glorious grapes.”4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 36

My opponents ridicule “that weak and childish expression of glorious grapes growing on silver wires, and these wires attached to golden rods.”4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 37

What motive impelled the writer of the above to misstate my words? I do not state that grapes were growing on silver wires. That which I beheld is described as it appeared to me.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 38

It is not to be supposed that grapes were attached to silver wires or golden rods, but that such was the appearance presented. Similar expressions are daily employed by every person in ordinary conversation. When we speak of golden fruit, we are not understood as declaring that the fruit is composed of the precious metal, but simply that it has the appearance of gold. The same rule applied to my words removes all excuse for misapprehension.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 39

The Seal of God

Another “suppression” reads as follows: “Well, bless the Lord, brethren and sisters, it is an extra meeting for those that have the seal of the living God.”4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 40

There is nothing in this that we do not still hold. Reference to our published works will show our belief that the living righteous will receive the seal of God prior to the close of probation and also that these will enjoy special honors in the kingdom of God.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 41

Renouncing the Sabbath

The following passage is said to be omitted from the vision related on pages 25-28 [pages 32-35, present edition] of Early Writings:4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 42

And if one believed and kept the Sabbath, and received the blessing attending it, and then gave it up, and broke the holy commandment, they would shut the gates of the Holy City against themselves, as sure as there was a God that rules in heaven above.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 43

Those who have clearly seen and fully accepted the truth upon the fourth commandment and have received the blessing attending obedience, but have since renounced their faith and dared to violate the law of God, will find, if they persist in this path of disobedience, the gates of the city of God closed against them.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 44

“Time Nearly Finished”

A statement published in 1851 in Experience and Views, [page 46]

and found on page 49 [page 58, present edition] of Early Writings is quoted as proving my testimonies false: “I saw that the time for Jesus to be in the Most Holy Place was nearly finished, and that time cannot last but a very little longer.” 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 45

As the subject was presented before me, the period of Christ’s ministration seemed almost accomplished. Am I accused of falsehood because time has continued longer than my testimony seemed to indicate? How is it with the testimonies of Christ and His disciples? Were they deceived? 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 46

Paul writes to the Corinthians: “But this I say, brethren, the time is short: it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none; and they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not.” [1 Corinthians 7:29, 30.]4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 47

Again, in his epistle to the Romans, he says, “The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light.” [Romans 13:12.]4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 48

And from Patmos, Christ speaks to us by the beloved John: “Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.” [Revelation 1:3.] “The Lord God of the holy prophets sent His angel to show unto His servants the things which must shortly be done. Behold, I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.” [Revelation 22:6, 7.]4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 49

The angels of God in their messages to men represent time as very short. Thus it has always been presented to me. It is true that time has continued longer than we expected in the early days of this message. Our Saviour did not appear as soon as we hoped. But has the word of the Lord failed? Never! It should be remembered that the promises and the threatenings of God are alike conditional.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 50

God had committed to His people a work to be accomplished on earth. The third angel’s message was to be given; the minds of believers were to be directed to the heavenly sanctuary where Christ had entered to make atonement for His people. The Sabbath reform was to be carried forward. The breach in the law of God must be made up. The message must be proclaimed with a loud voice, that all the inhabitants of earth might receive the warnings. The people of God must purify their souls through obedience to the truth and be prepared to stand without fault before Him at His coming.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 51

Had Adventists, after the great disappointment in 1844, held fast their faith and followed on unitedly in the opening providence of God, receiving the message of the third angel and in the power of the Holy Spirit proclaiming it to the world, they would have seen the salvation of God, the Lord would have wrought mightily with their efforts, the work would have been completed, and Christ would have come ere this to receive His people to their reward.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 52

But in the period of doubt and uncertainty that followed the disappointment, many of the advent believers yielded their faith. Dissensions and divisions came in. The majority opposed with voice and pen the few who, following in the providence of God, received the Sabbath reform and began to proclaim the third angel's message. Many who should have devoted their time and talents to the one purpose of sounding warning to the world were absorbed in opposing the Sabbath truth, and in turn, the labor of its advocates was necessarily spent in answering these opponents and defending the truth. Thus the work was hindered, and the world was left in darkness. Had the whole Adventist body united upon the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus, how widely different would have been our history!4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 53

It was not the will of God that the coming of Christ should be thus delayed. God did not design that His people Israel should wander forty years in the wilderness. He promised to lead them directly to the land of Canaan and establish them there a holy, healthy, happy people. But those to whom it was first preached went not in "because of unbelief." Hebrews 3:19. Their hearts were filled with murmuring, rebellion, and hatred, and He could not fulfil His covenant with them.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 54

For forty years did unbelief, murmuring, and rebellion shut out ancient Israel from the land of Canaan. The same sins have delayed the entrance of modern Israel into the heavenly Canaan. In neither case were the promises of God at fault. It is the unbelief, the worldliness, unconsecration and strife among the Lord's professed people that have kept us in this world of sin and sorrow so many years.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 55

There are two other passages said to be found in my first book, but not given in my later writings. Concerning these I shall only say, when I can obtain a book containing them so that I can be assured of the correctness of the quotations and can see for myself their connection, I shall be prepared to speak understandingly in regard to them.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 56

Last-Day Scoffers

From the beginning of my work, I have been pursued by hatred, reproach, and falsehood. Base imputations and slanderous reports have been greedily gathered up and widely circulated by the rebellious, the formalist, and the fanatic. There are ministers of the so-called orthodox churches traveling from place to place to war against Seventh-day Adventists, and they make Mrs. White their textbook. The scoffers of the last days are led on by those ministers professing to be God's watchmen.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 57

The unbelieving world, the ministers of the fallen churches, and the first-day Adventists are all united in the work of assailing Mrs. White. This warfare has been kept up for nearly forty years, but I have not felt at liberty even to notice their vile speeches, reproaches, and insinuations. And I would not now depart from this custom, were it not that some honest souls may be misled by the enemies of the truth who are so exultantly declaring me a deceiver. In the hope of helping the minds of the honest, I make the statements that I do.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 58

I do not expect to reach those who, having seen the light of truth, refuse to heed it, those who have given themselves up to prejudice and entrenched their souls in unbelief.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 59

Jesus, the Majesty of Heaven, He who was equal with God, was in the world thirty-three years, and yet there were but few who acknowledged His divine character. And can I, who am so weak, so unworthy, a frail creature of humanity, expect greater success than was enjoyed by the Saviour of the world?⁴*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 60*

When I first gave myself to this work, to go when God should bid me, to speak the words which He should give me for the people, I knew that I should receive opposition, reproach, persecution. I have not been disappointed. Had I depended on human applause, I would long ago have become discouraged. But I looked to Jesus and saw that He who was without a fault was assailed by slanderous tongues. Those who made high pretensions to godliness followed as spies upon the Saviour's course and made every exertion in their power to hedge up His way. But although He was all-powerful, He did not visit His adversaries as their sins deserved. He might have launched forth against them the bolts of His vengeance, but He did not. He administered scathing rebukes for their hypocrisy and corruption, and when His message was rejected and His life threatened, He quietly passed to another place to speak the words of life. I have tried, in my weakness, to follow the example of my Saviour.⁴*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 61*

The Enmity Against Christ

How eagerly the Pharisees sought to prove Christ a deceiver! How they watched His every word, seeking to misrepresent and misinterpret all His sayings! Pride and prejudice and passion closed every avenue of the soul against the testimony of the Son of God. When He plainly rebuked their iniquity and declared that their works proved them to be the children of Satan, they angrily flung back the accusation, saying, "Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan and hast a devil?" [John 8:48.]⁴*LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 62*

All the arguments urged against Christ were founded in falsehood. So was it in the case of Stephen and of Paul. But the weakest and most unreliable statements made on the wrong side had an influence, because there were so many whose hearts were unsanctified, who desired those statements to be true. Such are ever eager to fasten upon any supposed error or mistake in those who speak to them the unpalatable truth.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 63

It should not surprise us when evil conjectures are greedily seized upon as undoubted facts by those who have an appetite for falsehood. The opposers of Christ were again and again confounded and put to silence by the wisdom of His words; yet they still eagerly listened to every rumor and found some pretext to ply Him again with opposing questions. They were determined not to abandon their purpose. They well knew that if Jesus should continue His work, many would believe on Him and the scribes and Pharisees would lose their power with the people. Hence they were ready to stoop to any base or contemptible measure to accomplish their malicious intentions against Him. They hated the Herodians, yet they joined these inveterate enemies in order to invent some plan to rid the earth of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 64

Such was the spirit with which the Son of God was met by those whom He came to save. Can any who are seeking to obey God and to bear to the world the message of His truth expect a more favorable reception than was granted Christ?4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 65

I have no ill will toward those who are seeking to make of none effect the message which God has given me to reprove, warn, and encourage His people. But as the ambassador of Christ, I must stand in defense of the truth. Who are those that so zealously array themselves against me? Are they the pure and holy children of faith? Have they been born again? Are they partakers of the divine nature? Do they love Jesus and manifest His spirit of meekness and humility? "By their fruits ye shall know them." Matthew 7:20. Do they resemble the early disciples or those cunning scribes and Pharisees who were constantly watching to entrap Christ in His words? Notice the sharp practice of those ancient opposers of the faith—how lawyers, priests, scribes, and rulers combined to find something against Him who was the light of the world.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 66

And why were they so intent upon condemning Christ? They did not love His doctrines and precepts, and they were displeased as they saw the attention of the people turned to Him and away from their former leaders.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 67

Human nature is human nature still. Let not those who seek to hedge up my way and destroy the influence of my words deceive themselves with the belief that they are doing God [a] service. They are serving another master, and they will be rewarded according to their work.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 68

Rebellion will exist as long as Satan exists. Those who are actuated by his spirit will not discern the Spirit of God or listen to Its voice until the mandate shall go forth, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still." Revelation 22:11. I expect to encounter the malice of those who despise the light which God has been pleased to give me.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 69

It is God's plan to give sufficient evidence of the divine character of His work to convince all who honestly desire to know the truth. But He never removes all opportunity for doubt. All who desire to question and cavil will find occasion.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 70

I pity those who have set their feet in the path of doubt and unbelief. I would gladly help them if I could, but the experience of the past gives me little hope that they will ever come to the light. No amount of evidence will convince men of the truth so long as they are unwilling to yield their pride, subdue their carnal nature, and become learners in the school of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 71

Self-will and pride of opinion lead many to reject the light from heaven. They cling to pet ideas, fanciful interpretations of Scripture, and dangerous heresies; and if a testimony is borne to correct these errors, they will, like many in Christ's day, go away displeased.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 72

It matters not how blameless the character and life of those who speak to the people the words of God; this procures for them no credit. And why? Because they tell the people the truth. This, brethren, is my offense. But if a false report is circulated, if by some inference or conjecture an imputation is cast upon the character of Christ's ambassador, with what absurd credulity is it received! How many are ready to magnify and spread the slander! Such are revealing their real character. "He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not because ye are not of God." John 8:47.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 73

Calumny and reproach will be the recompense of those who stand for the truth as it is in Jesus. "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Timothy 3:12. Those who bear a plain testimony against sin will as surely be hated as was the Master who gave them this work to do in His name.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 74

Like Christ, they will be called the enemies of the church and of religion, and the more earnest and true their efforts to honor God, the more bitter will be the enmity of the ungodly and hypocritical. But we should not be discouraged when thus treated.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 75

We may be called "weak and foolish," enthusiastic, even insane. It may be said of us as it was of Christ, "He hath a devil." [John 10:20.] But the work which the Master has given us to do is our work still. We must direct minds to Jesus, not seeking praise or honor of men, but committing ourselves to Him who judgeth righteously. He knows how to help those who, while following in His steps, suffer in a limited degree the reproach He bore. He was tempted in all points like as we are, that He might know how to succor those who should be tempted.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 76

Whatever wrong construction may be placed upon my testimony by those who profess righteousness yet know not God, I shall in humility go forward with my work. I will speak the words which God gives me to speak in encouragement, reproof, and warning. There remains but a little remnant of my life on earth. The work that my Father hath given me, I will by His grace, perform with fidelity, knowing that all my deeds must pass the scrutiny of Jehovah.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1883, par. 77

Ms 5, 1883

Sermon/Sermon at the 1883 General Conference

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 20, 1883

This manuscript is published in entirety in 2SAT 10-19.

Sermon by Mrs. White

[Delivered at the last meeting of the 1883 General Conference.]4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 1

I want to say, brethren and sisters, that this conference—the Bible studies and other meetings and all indeed connected with the conference—has been one of deep interest to me; and I feel very grateful to God that I have enjoyed these meetings as I never have any meetings of the kind before. I know that we have had the presence and the blessing of God in our midst. And as we are about to separate, and our ministers will go to their different positions of labor, the question arises, Shall we meet again? Shall all of us ever meet again in conference? Probably not. We may never all assemble in meeting again as we are here today.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 2

In this morning's meeting, as we were listening to the testimonies borne here, and as the last hymn was sung—"When shall we meet again, meet ne'er to sever?"—I almost forgot myself. My mind reached over to the other shore, to the time when there will be a grand meeting in the city of God around the great white throne, and the redeemed will be singing there of triumph and of victory and of praise to God and to the Lamb. Well now, it brought such a solemn, sweet feeling upon me; it softened my heart, and I could not prevent the tears from flowing. Oh, what happiness we shall enjoy, gathered round about the throne, clothed in the white robes of the righteousness of Christ! No more sorrow, no more separation, but to dwell in peace, to dwell in happiness, to dwell in glory throughout the ceaseless ages of eternity. What a happy, happy company we may be!⁴*LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 3*

Now let us consider the same privileges here. When we consider the infinite sacrifice of our Saviour that we might become children of God and members of the royal family, when we consider this exaltation, when we consider that all these privileges will be ours and may be ours every day, that we may have the privileges which belong to the sons and daughters of God, how can any one of us have any word of complaint? How can anyone utter one word of murmuring? How can it dwell in our hearts?⁴*LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par.*

4

We ought to be the most grateful people on the face of the earth. Our happiness is dependent on our faith in God—our confidence in Him. And then when we think of what a hope we have, of what a faith we have, that it reaches right into the other world; when we know that it will continue unto the ceaseless ages of eternity, I want to know how you feel in regard to these pleas that have been presented to you tonight? They call for one here and one there among these ministers to go to another field, and it is almost impossible to take one minister to go to another field without robbing the field from which he comes. When we consider that there are large cities where there has been no special labor bestowed, how do you feel, my brethren? Well, I feel as if a sword were piercing through my heart. I feel as though the time has come for God to raise up men to go into this labor.⁴*LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par.*

5

If there is anything I can put into this work, that shall go. But there are many who are willing to give of their means, but they withhold themselves. Why is it we do not find more who give themselves to this work? It is because selfishness lies at the root of the matter. There are those who come to this college, and they come to it with the object of laboring in the field, but there has been so little effort, there has been so little appreciation of their object and purposes, so little zeal to help them, that they have become discouraged. And the attraction has been so very small, the help given them so little, that many have been very slow to devote themselves to the ministry. There have been young men who could have given themselves to the ministry.⁴*LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 6*

It is not the want of ability, it is not because the prospect of their being fitted for the ministry was hopeless, but selfishness lies at the root of the matter. They thought they could make a little more money in worldly business, and so selfishness has drawn them away from the work. There might have been twenty laborers where there is one that has come out of the college prepared to labor. There is this disinclination to labor for God.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 7

What is the matter? The truth we advocate is not popular; it is unpopular and ever will be, because the Sabbath truth ever involves a cross. There are enough men who are willing to preach, but they are unwilling to be laborers: they shun the working part. They are not willing to visit by the fireside, to take the Bible and try to teach its sacred doctrines in the family, to carry the burden of souls upon them, to weep between the porch and the altar, crying, "Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thine heritage to reproach." Joel 2:17. They are not willing to feel an interest for those who listen to their discourses, to become acquainted with the individual member of families, to put forth personal efforts for them, to pray for them and with them, to show the youth that they have a deep love for their souls, to lead them kindly, tenderly, lovingly, to the fold of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 8

This kind of work will drive the minister to his knees in prayer, and to his Bible, and will compel him to make God his trust, to walk by faith, sowing the seed of truth beside all waters, praying that God may water it.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 9

This is labor; this is the kind of work that devolves upon every minister of Christ. And the reason why some of our ministers are almost faithless, why they are desponding and walking under a cloud, is because they do not work as faithful shepherds should, watching for souls as they that must give an account. True watchmen are faithful shepherds. The qualification of a minister is not his brilliant talents, for this knowledge might prove his ruin. It is the entire surrender of the heart to God, to be molded and impressed as God chooses.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 10

When Christ called His ministers He did not go to the "school of the prophets,” but to fishermen. He took those men that He could bring into connection with Himself, so that He could place His mold upon them. And this is the kind of workers the Lord wants—men who are willing to sit at His feet, men who can work anywhere and do anything for the Lord, and who will not be constantly striving for the supremacy.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 11

If you feel that the responsibility in the harvest field is too great, there are other branches of labor before you. You can do a smaller work. And if you do that smaller work with fidelity, you are fitting for greater responsibilities, and God will entrust to you larger work. Here are men who can take hold of the larger part of the work in bearing the burdens, in teaching the truth, while others are fitted for canvassing. I have thought how great a work might be done through canvassing in reaching hearts and dropping the seed of truth. Almost anyone with an intelligent mind can make his labors acceptable, and if self is hid in Jesus Christ, he can spread the knowledge of the truth of God among his neighbors and into those large cities that have never yet been entered, for Christ will work with his efforts. It is because the lay members do not do the work they ought to do that they feel so weak.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 12

When I listened to the testimony of Brother [L. R.] Conradi, I could see how he was so successful. He was thoroughly in earnest in the work. He takes hold of it as though he meant to do something. It is not ability alone that gives success, although sanctified talent and ability are as polished instruments in the hands of God; it is to be thoroughly in earnest in the work. If the worker has access to the hearts of the people, the people will say, “Well, that man is in earnest; he is good at heart.”4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 13

When one was speaking in a simple, earnest manner in Market Street, there was a man present who was on his way to South America. He attended the meeting and said, “That speaker is thoroughly in earnest, and the things uttered seem to be a reality. There must be something in what is presented.” He stated to our brethren that he was about to sail for South America, and he said, “I will carry all the papers and pamphlets that you give me.” Brother [J. N.] Loughborough furnished him with the publications. He took all we gave him.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 14

Now brethren, we do not want to act as some have done. I have heard of a man who was about to cross a bridge, and he asked, "Is this bridge safe?" One said, "I have crossed several times, but it was not very safe; however, after all, I passed over without harm." He went quite near to the bridge when another man approached, gesticulating earnestly and crying out, "Don't go over that bridge; if you go on it there is danger there! It is unsafe!" We are compelled to think the man understood the condition of the bridge, felt it was not safe to venture on it. Why did the second man stop him, and not the first? Because the second was thoroughly in earnest. He had the other's welfare at heart.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 15

What the Lord wants in His service is thoroughly earnest men. If there has been any indolence about any of us, and if there has been any indifference and careless inattention among those who handle such solemn, testing truths, the Lord wants you to put it away. He wants you, when you talk the truth to the people, to act as though you believed it yourself and had zeal and earnestness to bear some comparison with the truth you profess.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 16

Do not give the same discourse over and over again. Leave some chance for the Spirit of God to impress you, to give you fresh ideas and increased light. We all need hearts susceptible to the impress of the Spirit of God, hearts thoroughly imbued with His Spirit. That which we learn in the school of Christ will be meekness and lowliness of heart. We are ever to be learners, Bible students. We cannot study the Scriptures with a heart to learn and understand without obtaining fresh ideas, increased light. Do not have your set discourses, going over the same ground, having the same ending, and leave no chance for the Spirit of God to bring to your mind things new and old from the treasury of truth.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 17

We must make it a matter of thought and of diligent study to present the truth in that sincerity and earnestness that will inspire confidence and faith that we have learned of Jesus. A flash of light will come upon the pages and bright gems of truth will be revealed to you, and it will be the voice of God to you as a fire shut up in your bones. You will want to speak of the Bible truths, for you will feel that they are the most precious riches, treasure the earth cannot give, and while you are talking to the people, light will be given from heaven. We want to search the Scriptures for ourselves and to be thoroughly in earnest.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 18

And, dear brethren, in your different positions in your fields of labor there is not that feeling of love and tenderness cultivated that there ought to be. Love is a tender, heavenly plant that needs constant cultivation. We meet here in this conference as a family of God's chosen ones, and as we are God's children we will have nothing in us that will love strife or love to quarrel one with another. We should be guarded, not to tear down that which our brethren or ourselves have been building up. When you are disposed to dissension, think that it will not do, it will not do.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 19

Christ has said: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 13:35. This, then, is the credential we bear to the world that we are indeed children of God. Satan knows that if we cease to cultivate love, we bear his stamp rather than the impress of heaven. We should inquire, Are we to dwell together in heaven? Then it must be in peace and harmony, and we must learn to harmonize in this world. Our work, our feelings, our actions must be Christlike. There are laborers that can work together in harmony.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 20

There are men, wholehearted men, whom God wants to engage in His work, and He wants every one of them to be abiding in Christ. Many claim that they are abiding in Christ, and preach the truth of heavenly origin. Yet if their words and works reveal that they are suspicious and envious of their brother ministers, they are not trying to build up the work, but are trying to work one against one another. One wants to be a little ahead of the other—not in meekness, in lowliness of heart, but in the estimation of others. Some of you are contending one against another, yet all claim to be abiding in Jesus. Is there anything in Christ that wars against Christ? This, my brethren, you see cannot be. And if there is any contention at all, it is because there is some enemy in the camp. It is Satan working in your hearts and putting his enmity there, and not Christ's persuasive love.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 21

Some, if there has not been contention, if they cannot have the credit of superior work which they think will elevate them, will become downhearted and will not do anything. There has not, thank the Lord, been a great deal of this in our ranks; but there should not be the first seed of it sown among us.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 22

While Christ was with His disciples, as they were going to a certain place, they were disputing which should be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. Jesus asked them of what they were disputing by the way. He then took a little child and set him in their midst and said, "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 18:3.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 23

This self-sufficiency and this combativeness and this selfishness and wilfulness that are indulged separate the soul from Jesus. We want this will, this strong purpose [to] be turned into the right channel. Brethren, we want to have a will that will be God's will. It is right for us to have a will and way, but it must be God's way and God's will. When the mind and will are turned into the right channel, we shall have success.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 24

The angels of God will be much better pleased and will be attracted to us when the servants in the field can come together and bow down together and pray with tears and contrition of heart; when they can talk about the work, no matter whose that work will be—whether it be the work of Brother [O. A.] Olsen, of Brother Cudney, or whoever it might be. Christ is working in that work. The workers will love [one] another. They will fall upon the necks of one another, and in time of sorrow and sadness they will comfort one another, pray for one another, bless one another.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 25

Oh, that we might be children of God! Oh, that we might every one be humble sons and daughters of God! Oh, that we might have another touch of the Holy Spirit, and every heart be moved before we leave this house! Oh, that we might have a baptism of the Holy Ghost before we separate! Oh, that the love of Jesus might gladden our hearts with sweet music like a song of heaven, because the wickedness of our hearts is broken down and it may be truly said, "See how these brethren love one another!"4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par.

God wants every one of us to support these German brethren who will work in the same neighborhood with English brethren. If every one of us should strive for that love which ought to dwell in the hearts of every one of us, we would be a power on earth such as not one of us conceives. No one knows this better than Satan. He tries to sow the seeds of envy and hatred rather than love in the hearts of the brethren. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 27

Two brethren are working in the same field. They each have their work; but Satan has tempted them and they are at variance. Shall these brethren labor separately in the field because they do not harmonize? Shall we separate them if they do not harmonize here? No, no. Let them work together until they do labor unitedly. In heaven they must harmonize in songs of triumph to the glory of God and of the Lamb. Well, when is this unity to take place? Are we to wait until we get home to heaven? No, it should take place right here before we leave this house. The melting power of God may be felt right here and the rough edges of our hearts are to be melted right down. From our hearts are to flow forth love, peace, and harmony. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 28

If you open the door, Jesus will come in. Remove the rubbish Satan has piled up before the door of the heart, that Jesus may enter in. He says, "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Revelation 3:20. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 29

Will you open the door? Jesus will give this communion and you may have His light and rest. Can there be any difference? Can there be any dissension? Well, when I think of this I do not know what to say. My heart is full of tenderness and love to all. If we have any right to heaven it is because that human arm of Jesus encircles every one of us. "Hid with Christ in God." Colossians 3:3. There is the union, "Hid with Christ in God." 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 30

Then how dare you allow one thought of opposition against one child of God? How dare you to do it? We want melting mercy to fall upon us. And Jesus says it is not possible for the Father to love us if we do not love one another. It is possible to love one another.

Therefore you must not make up your minds you cannot do it. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 31

But he says, "Love one another, as I have loved you." John 15:12. Oh, my soul, we profess to love the Bible, do we not? Do we plant ourselves upon the Word of God as it is? I was going to tell you a little of what I thought. We want to feel here that we are one family, redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. He is pleading for us. He says, "Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands." Isaiah 49:16. It is the religion of Christ we want. We want to drink deeper when we are converted men and women. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 32

I can tell you we can feed not only the sheep, but also the lambs. Three times Christ asked the impetuous Peter, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" John 21:15-17. He said, "Yea, Lord." Peter was to feed not only the sheep, but also the lambs, those who need to have tenderness shown them. Brethren, can we do it? "If you love me, feed my lambs." We want a deeper understanding of the love of God. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 33

You may be doing something. You are not to choose that which pleases you, but to choose that which pleases the Master. I have found light and happiness in bowing with perfect submission to the Master. I love Him because He has been revealed to me in such condescension. He came down to reach me, and He brought me up. Will you imitate His spirit of condescension? Will you leave off your selfishness and dignity to reach the souls that Christ has died for? What sacrifice will you make? There are some here clothed in the glorious robes of humility. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 34

You might have gained one hundred workers that might have come from the college. But here are men in responsible positions who have been blending to worldly lines, who have had a worldly motive and a worldly stamp, and then the worldly spirit and the worldly feeling come in. Let us answer the purpose of God. Let all be working for God. Is it only the ministers that bear this work? No, it is the men and women of the church. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 35

Let me tell you, you do not know Christ. You have not become acquainted with Him. If you would begin to study and labor to know what means you could use to bring souls to a knowledge of the truth, as diligently as you would devise means to work for your own selfish interests, you would be saving souls. Oh, the blood of souls will be upon many here in Battle Creek who have neglected their responsibility. May the God of heaven have mercy upon them.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 36

And here are the ministers of Jesus Christ watching upon the walls of Zion to give the note of warning to the people, the laymen. Are you not to watch with your brethren, that jealousy may not arise in you because your brethren may have the name of doing a little more work than you do? But you are to watch for souls. There is too much work for one word of contention to arise in your heart. But your deportment will express your interest, and your gifts will express it.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 37

Well, I am happy to say this is the very best conference I ever attended in my life. It has been a feast to my soul from beginning to end. And when there is a prospect that my brethren will go into the fields that they may work in every branch in every way, why I have felt a spring of joy that was greater than I could express.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 38

Brethren and sisters, Jesus has loved us with a love that cannot be expressed. Then, brethren and sisters, let us love one another with that love wherewith Christ has loved us. And when an evil thought comes in against a brother, just bow down in prayer asking that God will bless him, that heart may beat in unison with heart.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 39

Feed the sheep; feed the lambs. Here is the work in which you need to be very tender, to be very courteous, and to be very kind. You should show Christian politeness everywhere, showing that you are a son of God, or a daughter of God.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 40

You profess to be leading others to heaven and to have a commission from the kingdom of heaven to go forth and proclaim the gospel. What a responsibility, to go forth and proclaim the gospel everywhere! When you go forth, what a responsibility! How can you bear it? O God, who is sufficient for these things? I have felt it. Who is sufficient for these things?4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 41

God will let His blessing rest upon us if we will open our hearts to Him. Every step is by faith. We will have to know by experience what it is to fight the good fight of faith. But do not, for your soul's sake, for Christ's sake, express one word of mistrust or want of faith. When you get that word of thankfulness in your heart, there will not be one word of murmuring, but instead of that, praise. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth God. It is not only our privilege but our duty to sing and make melody in our hearts to God.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 42

Well now, I am taking up altogether too much time, but I want to say, brethren and sisters, I want to thank God for the light and unity that has rested upon the work. A great responsibility rests upon the ministers. While they are engaged in the service of God they are placing themselves in the position where God can bless them.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 43

“They that turn many to righteousness” shall shine “as the stars for ever and ever.” Daniel 12:3. That is how we shall shine. The glory of God will rest upon you.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 44

You cannot become interested in a soul but that an angel of God will be close at your side and will move that soul. If you want the companionship of angels, go to work, and then you will have no time to gossip or to get into the prevailing fashion of gossiping. God help you to work for time and eternity.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 45

I may never have the privilege of standing in this house again, but I want to say, brethren and sisters, I love Jesus. We may never meet here again, but shall we meet around the great white throne? May we work so we may bring a harvest of souls to the Master.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 46

The influence of the Holy Spirit has gone from ministers because there has been a spirit of contention. Let it forever cease. Come unto the Master and let Him breathe His sweet Spirit into your hearts. The tender plant of love must be cherished. If we should not have the privilege of meeting here again in conference, what a meeting will it be when we shall greet each other when Christ comes in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory! What a scene of glory that will be! If we can hear the “Well done, good and faithful servant” [Matthew 25:23], the light and glory of God will beam upon us from the face of Jesus Christ. I will pray for you. How I have prayed for you in the night seasons, that you may save other souls!4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 47

When we get home to heaven and look around us, we will say, Here is one, and here is another one. How earnestly I labored for his or her salvation. And here they are, with crowns of glory upon their heads. Oh, we shall see those who were brought to God through our instrumentality. Satan will not step in to divide and cause separation.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 48

Work in love. Walk in unity. Esteem others better than yourselves. Only a little moment longer, only a little moment to spare, and then it is the coming of the millennial year I see. May I behold the King in His beauty, with all His matchless charms. May we follow on in the light until we shall have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1883, par. 49

Ms 6, 1883

Walk in the Light

Extract from Ms 9, 1883.

Ms 7, 1883

Testimony to a Minister Concerning Sensational Methods

Duplicate of Lt 29, 1872.

Ms 8, 1883

Testimony Regarding G. A. Carlstedt

Refiled as Ms 9, 1879.

Ms 9, 1883

Walk in the Light

Montpelier, Vermont

September 3, 1883

Portions of this manuscript are published in HP 36. See also ST 09/27/1883.

[The matter which follows was included in Letter 26, 1883, written from Montpelier, Vt., September 3, 1883, to Willie and Mary White, with the heading, "To be read to those assembled in camp meeting, by Mary K. White." The 1883 California camp meeting was held in San Jose, in September. See Signs of the Times, September 27, 1883.]4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 1

Our meeting at Worcester, Mass., was very encouraging, and I wish able men could go there at once and proclaim the truth. I have but little hope for those who have had light and have worked against the truth, but I do feel courage for those who have never heard the message. If, instead of caviling and doubting, as some of our people are doing, they would humble their hearts before God, close their souls to temptation and open them to faith, they would be laboring for souls. They would be letting their light shine. They would not then be acting the part of Judas or of Peter who denied his Lord, but would be engaged in building up, strengthening the things that remain.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 2

It is because self is not dead that we see so much caviling, dissension, disunion, and continual doubting. If those who show this disposition had the truth in the heart, they would not notice matters of so little consequence. They would forget self and selfish interest; they would work disinterestedly for the salvation of souls. When I think how strong we might be if we would take hold of the strength of the Mighty One, and then see how weak we are because we do not claim the promises of God, my soul cries out in anguish, "Give not thine heritage to reproach, and let not the heathen say, Where is thy God?" [Joel 2:17.]4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 3

This is a time of general dense darkness to the world, but the true light is shining, and we are favored above every other people upon the earth. Our spiritual blessings are more and greater than were given to those who have lived in any other age of the world. But that which makes me tremble for our people is the fact that they do not respond to the light and render corresponding obedience. Our privileges have not made us, as a people, wise, humble, and holy, and the great light which has shone upon us, as the pillar of fire shone upon the Israel of God, will be darkness to all who do not walk in its rays.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 4

We are living in the mediation of Christ, a day when all should think seriously and closely examine their hearts to see whether they be in the faith. We have nought to complain of. Not one word of murmuring should escape our lips; not one word of doubt should be uttered. There are many among us who profess the truth but who refuse to be crucified with Christ. The Author of our salvation labored and suffered for us. He denied Himself for us; His whole life was one continual scene of toil and privation. He could have done as many of His professed followers choose to do—pass His days on earth in ease and plenty and appropriated to Himself all the pleasures and enjoyments of this life. But He did not. He considered not His own convenience; He lived not to enjoy, but to do good and save others from shame, suffering, and ruin. “He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.” [Isaiah 53:5.]4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 5

Can those who are partakers of this great salvation, who are objects of this great condescension and infinite love have one breath of complaint, one thought of murmuring because they are not free from trials, toil, and conflicts, because they cannot have a better portion in this life than was given to their Lord? Cannot our enlightened minds comprehend the great privileges which we have through the grace of Christ?4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 6

If Jesus had not died our sacrifice and risen again, we should never have known peace, never have felt joy, but only experienced the horrors of darkness and the miseries of despair. Then let only praise and gratitude be the language of the hearts. All our lives we have been partakers of His heavenly benefits, recipients of the blessings of His priceless atonement. Therefore it is impossible for us to conceive the low and helpless state of ignorance and misery to which we had fallen and from which Christ has raised us. When we feel the pains, the sorrows and bereavements to which we are subject, let not one murmuring thought dishonor our Redeemer. In the hour of trial and affliction consider that we cannot tell how much greater our suffering would be had we not a mediating Saviour; we cannot determine how much less we suffer than our sins deserve.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 7

Oh, that we might, from the eldest to the youngest, seek the Lord as we have never done before! Oh, that we might renounce our sins, break down our pride, and with contrition of soul cast ourselves unreservedly upon Christ, believing that He accepts us just now, not because we are worthy, but because Christ has died! God grant that all who have named the name of Christ might depart from iniquity. All that a God could do has been done for you. He stands now looking upon the people for whom He suffered and died, and says, "What more can I do for My vineyard than I have already done?" [Isaiah 5:4.]4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 8

Can we wish to be free from trials and reproach for the truth's sake? Can we look upon Him whom our sins have pierced and not be willing also to drink with Him of the cup of humiliation? Our sins mingled the bitter cup which He removed from our lips and drank Himself, that in its place He might put to our lips the cup of blessing. He endured the cross, despising the shame, that He might lift us up and reconcile man to God, that whosoever would come unto Him might take of the water of life freely.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 9

Can you, my brethren and sisters, in view of the cross, looking upon Christ crucified, wish or expect to enter His kingdom in any other way than through much tribulation? We have a work to do which we have neglected. We do not love to follow where Jesus leads the way. Our heavenly Father requires of His church and people according to the grace and truth given them, and His requirements are just and right. All His righteous requirements must be fully met, or they remain in force against them. God requires us, as rational, accountable beings, to walk in the light that shines upon us;

otherwise our light becomes darkness, and that darkness is in proportion to the amount of light received.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 10

All who profess Christ are accountable for the talents committed to their trust. In order to meet their responsibility Christians must stand on that elevated ground which the truth has for ages been preparing for them. We entirely fail of meeting the mind of the Spirit of God unless we exhibit to the world in character and works that union and oneness with Christ which is in accordance with the light of sacred truth that now shines upon our pathway.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 11

It is not the lack of knowledge and understanding that will condemn Seventh-day Adventists, banish them from the presence of the Lord, and witness against them at the last day. It is the truth of God's Word that has reached the understanding, the light that has illuminated the soul, which will judge and condemn us if we turn away and refuse to be led by it. The light we never had will never be our darkness. If we were blind, we would have no sin, but the Lord has given us great light. Sacred truth has been unfolded to our understanding, but we have not been wise unto salvation. We have not advanced in knowledge and true holiness according to the light and truth which have been bestowed upon us.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 12

I have been shown that God has been very merciful to you in California. Great light has been shining upon you, but there is a great work to be done for yourselves before He can let His rich blessing rest upon you. The character of many is defective, but this is not the greatest evil. Those who are indulging in sin do not put it away, but smooth over their wrongs. Such must be thoroughly transformed in character and in works. When they meet the high standard of the Bible, then will the Lord be to them a present help in every time of need. But we, as a people who have had solemn truth committed to us, are in every way far from meeting the claims of God. How few will bear the test! How few bear the exposure when examined by the light which God has given them! The true inward heart-work must be experienced by many, or they will drift into the deceptions of Satan because they do not come to the knowledge of the truth. Their works are not wrought in God.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883,

par. 13

Oh, that my dear brethren and sisters would make sure for eternity! There is no hope, no remedy, only in confessing and forsaking sins and with full purpose of heart turning to the Stronghold.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 14

There are advance steps for us to take. There are selfish hearts, covetous hearts, that shut out the blessings of God. The time has come when the Lord requires more of us than merely the payment of the tenth. The message is to go forth, "Sell that ye have, and give alms." [Luke 12:33.] Those who have large farms should begin to cut down and lessen the principal. There is earnest work to do for God, and we are far behind His opening providence. Recall all the mercies and blessings that the Lord has bestowed upon you and consider that He has made you stewards of His goods. Then let each one closely criticize himself and see if he is honoring the Lord with his substance. There are gratitude offerings, thank offerings, and sin offerings. Our obligation to God is endless.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 15

The work of God must not languish for the want of means. God's claims must have attention, and these claims must be discharged first, at whatever cost or sacrifice. God calls upon those who have farms and houses to cut down the principal and make advance moves to extend the work in foreign countries. There are also fields scattered throughout our own land that have not yet been entered.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 16

John Wesley once gave a powerful sermon on the use of money; he laid down three rules: "Make all you can; save all you can; give all you can." To handle much means without saving is improvidence; it is squandering. To hoard up money, adding land to land and house to house, is covetousness and idolatry. To make and to save is wisdom and economy. To give of this means acquired is obeying Christ. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." [Matthew 6:19, 20.]4LtMs,

Ms 9, 1883, par. 17

Those who have not hitherto felt the claims God has upon them should now begin to act. God calls for all to act a part. Let every needless ornament, every extravagance, every selfish indulgence, be given up, and let these little outgoes, these little streams, flow into the Lord's treasury. Let us remember continually what Jesus has done for us. He for our sakes became poor that we through His poverty might be made rich. Let us put all confidence in God, trusting ourselves and all we have in His hands. Let us do duty faithfully and then trust in God. He wants not only ours but ourselves.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 18

None can do effectual service unless they do the work He has left for them to do and then leave the result wholly with the Lord. Oh, that those to whom have been entrusted so great and solemn truths would have corresponding faith! They should trust their work in the Lord's hands, pleading upon their knees for wisdom and guidance, and then instead of taking the burden all back and seeking to plan and execute all themselves and groaning because they are overburdened, let them leave it with the Lord. Avoid a life of constant activity. You will thus find rest to your soul. That which you trust with Him you are not to worry or fret about.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 19

Those who really trust to Him will find the rest He has promised, will find that His yoke is easy and His burden light. If the Lord had a company of workers who would rely wholly upon Him, He would accomplish a great work through them. One could chase a thousand and two would put ten thousand to flight. The Lord is a mighty helper. If we trust in Him we shall have peace and rest.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 20

The language of the soul should be that of joy and gratitude. If any have dark chapters in their experience let them bury them. Let this history not be kept bright by repetition. Forgetting the things that are behind, press forward to the things that are before. Cultivate only those thoughts and those feelings which shall produce gratitude and praise. If you have been wronged, forget it, and think only of the great mercies, the loving-kindness, and inexpressible love of Jesus. Learn to praise rather than to censure.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 21

If you meet with abuse and insult, do not be discouraged, for Jesus met the same. Go forward doing your work. Store the mind with the precious promises of God's Word and hold communion with God by frequently repeating them. Cease fretting, cease murmuring, cease faultfinding, and make melody to God in your hearts. Think of everything you have to be thankful for and then learn to praise God. "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth God." [Psalm 50:23.] Oh, if all our moanings and frettings and groanings and complainings and hard speeches were presented before us as written in the book of records, what a sight would be revealed to us! How astonished would we be to see and understand our real thoughts and feelings—nought but unhappy complainings.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 22

Now I entreat of you never to utter one word of complaint, but to cherish feelings of gratitude and thankfulness. By so doing you will be learning to make melody to God in your hearts. Weave into your experience the warp and woof, the golden threads, of gratitude. Contemplate the better land, where tears are never shed, where temptations and trials are never experienced, where losses and reproaches are never known, where all is peace and joy and happiness. Here your imagination may have full scope. These thoughts will make you more heavenly-minded, will endue you with heavenly vigor, will satisfy your thirsty soul with rivers of living waters, and will set upon your heart the seal of the divine image. They will fill you with joy and hope in believing and will abide with you as a comforter forever. May the peace of God abide with you is my prayer.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1883, par. 23

Ms 10, 1883

Peril of Doubt and Unbelief

Refiled as Ms 40, 1887.

Ms 11, 1883

Christ our Counselor

NP

1883

Formerly Undated Ms 1a. Portions of this manuscript are published in ChL 63.

[Perhaps a talk given at the 1883 General Conference. See Gospel Workers, 234-239, (1892 ed.).] 4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 1

Christ, the “Counselor,” has said, “Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.” [Isaiah 9:6; Matthew 11:28.] And again, by the apostle James, “If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him.” [James 1:5.] But instead of carrying their perplexities to Jesus, as He has told them to do, many lay their burdens upon human souls; they seek counsel from men, place them where God should be; and as the result, they receive only human help. No other can do our work. By diligent use of our own powers we are to gain knowledge and intelligence. God never designed that another man’s mind should do your thinking. 4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 2

Brethren, do not depend on the president of your conference or the president of the General Conference to think for you. God has given “to every man his work.” [Mark 13:34.] When men look to the president of the conference as their helper in all their difficulties, the bearer of their burdens, the counselor in their perplexities, they are doing the very opposite of that which Christ told them to do. 4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 3

If, while your pens have been employed in writing letters to one already perplexed and over-burdened, you had taken the perplexing things to Jesus and had asked Him to teach you, would it not have been honoring God? Would you not have been showing that you make Him your trust and counselor? 4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 4

The men appointed to positions of trust are only human. They must receive wisdom and grace from the same source that is open to you. It may be argued that the Lord gives special wisdom to those intrusted with important responsibilities. True, if they walk humbly before Him, He will give them help for their work; and He will give you help for yours, if you seek it in the same spirit.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 5

He who is walking in the counsel of God will seek to lead his brethren to turn to the only Source that is untainted with the errors of humanity instead of looking to him to define their duty. He should see the peril of encouraging any to look to man for wisdom and should refuse to be brains and conscience for his brethren. If all, laymen and workers, are thus taught to look to God in humility for wisdom, many dangers will be averted.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 6

If the leader errs, if he permits human influence to sway his judgment or yields to temptation, he can be corrected and helped by his brethren. Those who learn to rely upon God in their difficulties will be growing in faith, in experience; they will be gaining spiritual strength. It is the neglect to do as Christ has told them to do that makes men so destitute of the fruits of the Spirit of God, so dwarfed in religious experience.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 7

There has been on the part of our people a trifling with personal responsibilities. They have not wrestled with difficulties with earnest prayer and diligent effort, and they have looked for the approval of mortal man with far greater anxiety than for the approval of God.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 8

Satan exults as he sees men looking to and trusting in man, for often a two-fold evil is thus wrought. The one who is the object of this undue confidence is exposed to strong temptation. In consequence Satan will, if possible, lead him to self-confidence in order that human defects may mar their work. He will be in danger of encouraging his brethren in their dependence upon him and feeling that all things which pertain to the movements of the cause must be brought to his notice. Thus the work will bear the impress of man instead of the impress of God.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 9

In order to perform his work in the very best manner to meet the approval of God, each laborer must think and plan for himself, while at the same time he should be ready to receive counsel from his brethren. While brethren should counsel together in laying their plans for the work, there should be on the part of all far more earnest effort in seeking God for higher counsel. Thus each will have an experience that does not have its foundation in any human being, but in the living God.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1883, par. 10

Ms 12, 1883

Diary Fragments — Early 1883

NP

1883

Previously unpublished.

[Early 1883]

We went to Forestville Thursday with Br. Ross's two children. Stayed overnight. Next morning, Friday, went to Br. Lyttaker. Sister L. was at Healdsburg. Called on her daughter. Sister Ross found her sick in bed. Prayed with her and tried to comfort her. She was alone in faith among unbelievers and seemed much discouraged. About two p.m. we went on our way to Santa Rosa. [We were] welcomed at Dr. Coles. I felt drawn out to talk in regard to our having courage under all circumstances. The church is reduced in numbers (many moved to Healdsburg to be benefited with the college) which has a discouraging influence on the remaining few.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 1

I spoke on Sabbath in regard to faithfulness under discouraging appearances. We had a good social meeting. Nearly everyone spoke. Sunday early we left for Healdsburg. Sister Cole accompanied us.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 2

Elder Brownsberger asked me to speak Sunday evening. I was weary, but the Lord was my Helper. I was carried away from and out of myself. I forgot my weakness in the precious subject, "Let not your hearts be troubled. Ye believe in God, & c." [John 14:1.] The power of God rested upon me. The audience was deeply attentive.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 3

February 17-26, 1883

Spoke in Healdsburg College, Feb. 17. Wrote ten pages.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 4

Spoke to the people Sunday evening, Feb. 18—to a large congregation. Had great freedom in speaking.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 5

Spoke Sabbath, Feb. 24, in regard to keeping the Sabbath according to the commandment. Many confessions were made in the social meeting in regard to their being remiss in keeping the Sabbath according to the commandment, many saying that they had not seen it in this light before. They would from that time regard the Sabbath with greater sacredness. They had blacked their boots on Sabbath, done unnecessary cooking on Sabbath. They would take a different course.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 6

I wrote 20 pages on Vol. 4. Sunday evening spoke in College chapel to a crowded house. They listened as if spellbound. My text was, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, & c." [Deuteronomy 6:5; Matthew 22:37.] I had great liberty in addressing the people. Wrote 12 pages for Vol. 4.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 7

Monday, 26th, I feel my labors of Sabbath and Sunday, but my trust is in the Lord. He has been my Helper and He will be my Tower of strength.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 8

March 2-7, 1883

Friday, March [2], Br. and Sr. Ings and I rode to Santa Rosa. Spoke in Santa Rosa Sabbath. Sunday, 4th, spoke in Forestville. Rode home to Healdsburg that night. Monday [1] was too weary to write. Tuesday, 6th, wrote 15 pages. Wednesday wrote 15 pages.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 9

March 25, 1883

Mr. Wallace, his wife, and wife's sister, visited us.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1883, par. 10

1884

Letters

Lt 1, 1884

Andrews, R. F.

Refiled as Lt 6, 1883.

Lt 2, 1884

Brother and Sister

Healdsburg, California

February 17, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in KC 68-70.

Dear Brother and Sister:

I have been thinking much of the Health Institute at St. Helena. Many thoughts crowd into my mind, and I wish to express some of them to you. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 1

I am sure that _____ has a work to do for herself which she does not realize. All that she has thought and done, and all that her husband has thought and done, she has looked upon as beyond criticism, as just right. I know that this is a deception of the enemy. If anything is said to question her course, or his, it appears to both of you that you are treated unjustly. This deception of Satan will have to be broken before you will be right. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 2

I have been calling to mind the light God has given me, and through me to you, on health reform. Have you carefully and prayerfully sought to understand the will of God in these matters? The excuse has been that the outsiders would have a meat diet; but even if they had some meat, I know that, with care and skill, dishes could be prepared to take the place of meat to a large degree <and in a short time they be educated to let the flesh of dead animals alone.> But if one performs the cooking whose main dependence is meat, she can <and will> encourage meat-eating, and the depraved appetite will frame every excuse for this kind of diet. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 3

When I saw how matters were going—that if _____ had not meat to cook, she knew not what to provide as a substitute, and that meat was the principle article of diet—I felt that there must be a change at once. There may be consumptives who demand meat, but let them have it in their own rooms, and do not tempt the already-perversed appetite of those who should not eat it. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884,

par. 4

I became satisfied that no reform could be made while _____ was cooking at the Institute. All that we might try to do would be undone in one week, because the appetite of a few had control in this matter. Large expenses have resulted, for meat is the most expensive diet that can be had. I could not see how the Lord could bless either of you in the course you have pursued, for it was directly contrary to the light He has given for years.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 5

Now as to my own experience: Meat seldom appears on my table, for weeks at a time I would not taste it, and after my appetite had been trained, I grew stronger and could do better work. When I came to the Retreat, I determined not to taste meat, but I could get scarcely anything else to eat, and therefore ate a little meat. It caused unnatural action of the heart. I knew it was not the right kind of food. I wanted to keep house by myself, but this was overruled. If I could have done as I wished, I should have remained at the institution several weeks longer. The use of meat, while at the Retreat awakened the old appetite, and after I returned home, it clamored for indulgence. Then I resolved to change entirely, and not under any circumstances eat meat and thus encourage this appetite. Not a morsel of meat or butter has been on my table since I returned. We have milk, fruit, grains, and vegetables. For a time I lost all desire for food. Like the children of Israel, I hankered after flesh meats. But I firmly refused to have meat bought or cooked. I was weak and trembling, as every one who subsists on meat will be when deprived of the stimulus. But now my appetite has returned, I enjoy bread and fruit, my head is generally clear, and my strength firmer. I have none of the goneness so common with meat eaters. I have had my lesson, and, I hope, learned it well.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 6

We ought to have seen the evil of allowing certain ones to control the preparation of food for the Retreat. Hot biscuits and flesh meats are entirely out of harmony with health reform principles. If we would allow reason to take the place of impulse and love of selfish indulgence, we should not taste of the flesh of dead animals. What is more repulsive to the sense of smell than a shop where flesh meats are kept for sale! The smell of raw flesh is offensive to all whose senses have not been depraved by the culture of unnatural appetites. What more unpleasant sight to a reflective mind than the beasts slain to be devoured. Persons who live largely on a meat diet are in danger of putrefaction should they contract disease. If the light God has given in regard to health reform is disregarded, He will not work a miracle to keep in health those who are pursuing a course to make themselves sick.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 7

Now, had another stood just where you have stood and prepared the meals as you have done, and you two had been lookers on, I wonder what position you would have taken in regard to the matter. You would not have let things continue as they have been going, not one week. You would have had a reform, or discharged the cook. But I have learned that it is not an easy matter to change the ideas and plans of some persons. They are very set and are not easily turned about. As I think of these things, I feel sad and sick at heart. I know that all that is said to change the order of things is taken as faultfinding.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 8

I have thought it a hopeless undertaking to right matters at the Retreat. Then I have thought that, notwithstanding your ideas and feelings and impressions, it must be done. You must change your manner of living. Your influence, your appetite, has moulded the Institute, but it can do so no longer. You may think you cannot work without meat, I thought so once, but I know that in His original plan, God did not provide for the flesh of dead animals to compose the diet for man. It is a gross, perverted taste that will accept such food. To think of dead flesh rotting in the stomach is revolting. Then, the fact that meat is largely diseased should lead us to make strenuous efforts to discontinue its use entirely. My position now is to let meat altogether alone. It will be hard for some to do this, as hard as for the rum drinker to forsake his dram; but they will be better for the change.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1884, par. 9

Lt 3, 1884

Friends at the Health Retreat

Healdsburg, California

February 5, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in CD 173, 405-409; 2SM 283; 4MR 383.

Dear Friends at the [Rural] Health Retreat:

I have arisen this morning at four-o'clock to write you a few lines. I have been thinking much of late how the institution over which you preside could be made all God would have it, and I have a few thoughts to suggest.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 1

We are health reformers, seeking to come back, as far as possible, to the Lord's original plan of temperance. Temperance does not consist merely in abstaining from intoxicating liquors and tobacco; it extends further than this. It must regulate what we eat.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 2

You are all acquainted with the light upon the subject of health reform. But when I visit the Retreat, I see that there is a very marked departure from health reform on the matter of meat eating, and I am convinced that there must be a change, and at once. Your diet is largely composed of meat. God is not leading in this direction. The enemy is seeking to establish the diet question upon a wrong basis by leading those in charge of the institution to accommodate the diet to the appetite of the patients. When the Lord led the children of Israel from Egypt, He purposed to establish them in Canaan a pure, happy, healthy people. Let us study the plan of God and see how this was accomplished. He restricted their diet. To a large degree, He took flesh food from them. But they hankered after the flesh-pots of Egypt, and God gave them flesh, and with it <the sure result.>4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 3

The Health Retreat was established at a great cost to treat the sick without drugs. It should be conducted on hygienic principles. Drug medication should be <worked away from as fast as possible until> entirely discarded. Education should be given on proper diet, dress, and exercise. Not only should our own people be educated, but those who have not received the light upon health reform should be taught how to live healthfully, according to God's order. But if we have no standard in this respect ourselves, what is the need of going to such large expense to establish a health institute? Where does the reform come in?4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 4

I cannot <admit> that we are moving in God's order. We must have a different order of things, or give up the name Health Retreat; for it is wholly inappropriate. The Lord has shown me that the health institute must not be moulded to meet <the> appetite or any person's ideas. I am aware that the excuse for the meat-eating allowed in the institution has been that the pleasure-seekers who come are not pleased with any other diet. Then let them go where they can obtain the diet they wish. When the institution cannot be conducted, even for guests, according to right principles, then let it drop the name it has assumed. But the excuse that has been urged does not now exist, for outside patronage is very small.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 5

A positive injury is done to the system by continuous meat-eating. There is no excuse for it but a depraved, perverted appetite. You may ask, "Would you do away entirely with meat-eating?" I answer, "It will eventually come to this, but we are not prepared for <this step> just now." Meat-eating will eventually be done away. The flesh of animals will not longer compose a part of our diet, and we shall look upon a butcher's shop with disgust. Again and again I have been shown that God is bringing His people back to His original design, that is, not to subsist upon the flesh of dead animals. He would have us teach people a better way.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 6

We are built up from that which we eat. Shall we strengthen the animal passions by eating animal food? In the place of educating the taste to love this gross diet, it is high time that we were educating ourselves to subsist upon fruits, grains, and vegetables. This is the work of all who are connected with our institutions. Use less and less meat, until it is not used at all. If meat is discarded, if the taste is not educated in that direction, [and] if a liking for fruits and grains is encouraged, it will soon be as God in the beginning designed it should be. No meat will be used by His people.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 7

When meat is not used as it has been, you will learn a more correct way of cooking and will be able to supply the place of meat with something else. Many healthful dishes can be prepared which are free from grease and from the flesh of dead animals. A variety of simple dishes, perfectly healthful and nourishing, may be provided aside from the meat. Hearty men must have plenty of vegetables, fruits, and grains. Occasionally some meat may have to be given to outsiders who have so educated their tastes that they think that unless they have meat, they cannot keep up their strength. But they will have greater powers of endurance if they abstain from meat than if they subsist largely upon it.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 8

The principal objection with physicians and helpers at the Health Retreat to discarding a meat diet is that they want meat and <they plead> they must have meat. Therefore they encourage its use. But God does not want those who come to the Health Retreat educated to live on a flesh diet. By parlor talks and example, educate in the other direction. This will call for great skill in the preparation of wholesome food. More labor will be required, but nevertheless, it must gradually be done. Use less meat. Let those who do the cooking and those who bear the responsibility, educate their own tastes and habits of eating in accordance with the laws of health.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 9

We have been going back to Egypt rather than on to Canaan. Shall we not reverse the order of things? Shall we not have plain wholesome food on our tables? Shall we not dispense with hot biscuits, which only cause dyspepsia? Those who elevate the standard as nearly as they can to the order of God, according to the light God has given them through His Word and the testimonies of His Spirit, will not change their course of action to meet the wishes of the friends or relatives, be they one or two or a host, who are living contrary to God's wise arrangement. If we move from principle in these things, if we observe strict rules of diet, if as Christians, we educate our tastes after God's plan, we shall exert an influence which will meet the mind of God. The question is, Are we willing to be true health reformers?4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 10

It is essential that continuous sameness in diet be avoided. The appetite will be much better if changes in the food are made. Be uniform. Do not have several kinds of food on the table at one meal and no variety the next. Study economy in this line. Let people complain if they will. Let them find fault if there is not enough to suit them.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 11

The Israelites always complained of Moses and of God. It is your duty to maintain the standard of health reform. More can be accomplished for sick people by regulating their diet than by all the baths that can be given them.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 12

Let the same amount of money expended for meat be used to purchase fruit. Show the people a right way of living. Had this been done from the first at the institution at Crystal Springs, the Lord would have been pleased and would have approved the effort.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 13

Be uniform in your hours for eating. Two meals are far better than three. We have tried both, and the result is that two meals are better. But some maintained that they cannot get along on two meals a day; they must have something at night. If anything be taken in the evening, let it be very light, and let it be eaten some hours before retiring.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 14

It is the custom and order of society to take a slight breakfast. But this is not the best way to treat the stomach. At breakfast time the stomach is in a better condition to take care of more food than at the second or third meal of the day. The habit of eating sparing breakfast and a large dinner is wrong. Make your breakfasts correspond more nearly to the heartiest meal of the day.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 15

Care and skill should be used in the preparation of food. I hope that Dr. Chamberlain will fill the position assigned her, that she will counsel with the cook, so that the food placed on the tables at the Health Retreat may be in accordance with health reform. Because one is inclined to indulge his appetite, he must not argue that this is the best way to live; he must not by his course of action seek to mould the institution to suit his tastes and practices. Those who bear the responsibility of the institution should frequently counsel together. They should move in perfect harmony.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 16

Do not, I beg of you, argue that meat-eating must be right, because this one or that one, who is a slave to appetite, has said that he could not live at the Health Retreat without meat. Subsisting on the flesh of dead animals is a gross way of living, and as a people, we should be working a change, a reform, teaching the people that there are healthful preparations of food that will give them more strength and better preserve their health than meat.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 17

The sin of this age is gluttony in eating and drinking. Indulgence of appetite is the god which many worship. Those who are connected with the Health Institute should set a right example in these things. They should move conscientiously in the fear of God and not be controlled by a perverted taste. They should be thoroughly enlightened in regard to the principles of health reform, and under all circumstances <should> stand under its banner.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 18

I hope, Dr. Burk, that you will learn more and more how to cook healthfully. Provide an abundance of good, wholesome food. Do not practice economy in this direction. Restrict your meat bills, but have plenty of good fruit and vegetables, and then you will enjoy seeing the hearty appetites with which all will partake of your preparations. Never feel that the good, hygienic food that is eaten is lost. It will make blood and muscle and give strength for daily duties.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 19

Dr. Chamberlain, do not administer drugs. True, drugs may not be as dangerous wisely administered as they usually are, but in the hands of many they will be hurtful to the Lord's property. Teach tea drinkers to let tea alone. Do not give it to them at the table. If, in some circumstances, it is deemed necessary, let it be taken in a private room, that all cause of stumbling may be removed.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 20

I feel impelled to write this to you this morning. Do not set it aside as unworthy of your attention. I plead for a change in the programme. Educate away from the world's standard and worldly customs. The work of restoration must go forward. The Lord claims obedience from each one. We are His by creation and by redemption, and we are to render perfect obedience to His wise arrangements.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 21

“I beseech you, therefore, my brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.” [Romans 12:1, 2.] It is the solemn duty of every intelligent being to be doers of His Word. “What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God’s.” [1 Corinthians 6:19, 20.]4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 22

The apostle urges obedience to God in appetite and in all our practice. Man is bought with a price, and he is to bring his habits and practices into conformity to the will and mind of Christ, that soul, body, and spirit may be renewed and the moral image of God be restored. But meat-eating means animalism just to that degree in which we indulge in it. Our sensual passions need to be starved to death, not stimulated, that Christ may occupy the soul-temple. This is God’s claim of love.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 23

I have written this in great haste. I hope the peace and grace of Christ may rule in your hearts and throughout your house and beautiful borders.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1884, par. 24

Lt 4, 1884

Maxson, Brother and Sister

Healdsburg, California

February 6, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 7MR 43, 349. [†]Note One or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Dear Brother and Sister Maxson:

I have arisen early this morning to write to you. Yesterday morning I wrote to you in regard to matters concerning the Health Retreat. This morning I wish to write to you again. I respect all the efforts you have put forth for my comfort; you have done all in your power for me. I want you to know that I never forget these things. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 1

Were it merely for my own sake, I would not take up my pen this morning, but I do it for the good of the Health Retreat and for the good of all who shall patronize it. We want that everything connected with this institution shall be reformatory, working in an opposite direction to the fashions and customs of this age. But in place of this, it has been patterning after them. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 2

In the cooking department, there is to a large degree a serious lack so far as the principles of hygiene are concerned. How Bro. -----, with all the light on health reform that God has given us, could sanction the style of cooking that has been carried on there, is more than I can understand. It is indeed a mystery to me. The preparation of the meals is not what it should be in such an institution. Men who patronize the Retreat pay for what they eat and drink, and painstaking effort is required in order to have palatable, healthful dishes. They should have a liberal supply of good, wholesome food. But this has not been given them. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 3

The order of things that existed when I was there must exist no longer. I am free to speak as others would not dare to do, for this is my work and duty, assigned me by God. Should I remain silent, I would be condemned as unfaithful.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 4

Your breakfasts have been defective. You have <not> prepared hearty food for those who work hard from early morning until late at night. You have given them hot biscuits—an article of food which should never find its way upon a health-reform table. As I looked upon your table, I thought, What kind of a breakfast is this for those who take only two meals a day?4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 5

If J---- were not so sensitive, she might receive some suggestions in regard to these things. But she has occupied the position as a perfect cook; she has unlimited confidence in her own powers and thinks she understands all about such matters. It is not an easy matter to change her ideas on any point. She moves on, therefore, without seeking counsel or advice from anyone. This is not a correct position for her to hold. But I know where the evil lies. J---- has cultivated an appetite for a flesh-meat diet and thinks it is impossible for her to live without this kind of food. And she reasons the same way in regard to others also. J---- loves meat, and her habits are educating all who connect with the Retreat.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 6

We have made efforts to secure the Health Retreat in order that we might use it to promulgate the principles of health reform; but by her cooking, J---- shows that she is not a health reformer. While she congratulates herself on being interested in the work and desiring to build it up, unconsciously she is working decidedly against it and is establishing a condition of things to meet her own standard. She is not meeting God's standard, following the light He has given over and over again.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 7

Often while there I was compelled to eat meat, because there was nothing else that I could eat. At times I would be so faint and dizzy for the want of good, wholesome food, that I fairly reeled through weakness. All flesh meat is of a stimulating character; it is not nourishing. When the immediate effects of the stimulus are gone, there comes a debility corresponding to the degree of the stimulating influence.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 8

J---- has not made it her study to prepare wholesome dishes in order that flesh meat as a food may become less and less necessary. I hope that she will not feel that Sr. B---- must be educated in her methods of preparing the meals. I do not know what Sr. B---- is as a cook, but we can afford to try her and let her carry out her own methods without being obliged to follow the ideas of others. This department is left solely in her care.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 9

If J---- must have meat at every meal, then let Bro. ----- get it for her, but do not make all partake of it because one must have it. But if J---- would reform in this respect and place herself in the right relation to the laws of health, as she will be obliged to do in the near future, she would receive benefit therefrom. She needs health reform as much as anyone with whom I am acquainted. You would do well, S----, to keep a strict account of all the money you expend in meat and compare it with your other expenses.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 10

I do not write these things, my brother and sister, because I do not love you. I write because <I do love you, but I> can see that, in order to avert suffering and disease to yourselves <and others>, there must be a radical change in the moulding of the institution. I believe that S---- does well in his treatment of the sick, that he is careful and judicious. We are much pleased with this. J---- also does well, but her work is somewhat affected by her feelings. If she feels so inclined, she will do all that she can for anyone. On the other hand, if one does not please her, she will manifest her feelings too plainly to be misunderstood. Her likes and dislikes are strong.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 11

You are both sensitive to any criticism. You think you do your best, and perhaps you do with your perverted ideas and organization. But I should be sorry to come to that conclusion, for I think there should be decided changes in you both. If there are not, this institution will never accomplish the purpose for which it was established.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 12

S---- knows just what ought to be done, but he does not take the burden of seeing that these things are done. I know that his crippled condition places him where he is unable of himself to do this. But if he will only tell others what to do, if he will only plan and see that his plans are executed, he could do much to build up and improve the Retreat. A thorough going, <all-sided> man would have placed things two years ahead of their present condition, and that without a great outlay of means.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 13

I speak that I know. I have heard complaints made of Bro. A----, that he has not done this and that, and that the accident which nearly ruined S---- was caused by him. But I inquired into the matter and found that no one was to blame but S---- himself. He knew the condition of the wagon; he had been made aware of its danger; he knew that it had upset before. But he did not attend to the matter. This trait of character, of letting things go without immediate attention, was the whole cause of the injury. Why does he talk of Bro. A----'s neglect, when the wagon was in his own hands, when it was his duty to make it perfectly safe? It was carelessness on his part, a neglect of his own duty, that resulted in the accident. He has not manifested a right spirit in thus seeing what others might have done, but did not, when he himself had all the opportunities of doing.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 14

My brother and sister, I want you to feel that there are changes needed in you. If anyone has spoken to show that there should be more interested execution on the part of S----, J---- feels that the poor man is misjudged. But I know his peculiar ways and serious defects in his management as well as, and even better than, he does himself. It is not so much, Bro. -----, what you may do yourself, as what you instruct others to do. Your physical labor is not what is wanted. You can plan and tell what others before you might and should have done. Why not now show what S---- himself can do to build up and improve the work. Do not understand me to mean merely what your own hands may do. You can show others what to do and how to do it. You can superintend the work.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 15

You claim that the institution has been greatly weighed down by Dr. C----. I admit that it has. But no Dr. C---- is there now, and you have an opportunity to show what you can do. I tell you candidly, my brother and sister, that I <know> you have no word of complaint to offer. Taking all things into consideration, you have done well as regards the receipt of wages.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 16

There is danger of your feeling dissatisfied when there is no need of it all. We want Bro. ----- to feel free and happy, but not in any wrong way. We do not want him to feel that his course is above criticism, to become childish and appeal to his own sympathies.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 17

I do not think it is right to arouse J----'s sympathy. She is always much inclined in this direction. But view these matters in a Christian light, from a Bible standpoint. When anything is done by others to improve the condition of things, do not settle back and feel that it is a personal injury to yourselves. Seek God, not as though you were perfect, but as erring beings who are liable to make mistakes. God help you to feel as you should in this matter.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 18

There must be something more done to build up the Retreat. You need not expect that others will do this work <while you are officiating.> You must do it yourselves. You are there for this purpose. Let no selfish feeling come in. Let not the enemy obtain any advantage. Those who stand in responsible positions must be willing to venture something and run some risks, determined to persevere in the cause they have undertaken.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 19

<In the outlay of means be guarded. This was brought before those to whom the message was given, and quite a number assembled. Correct principles have not been maintained.>4LtMs, Lt 4, 1884, par. 20

Lt 5, 1884

Sister

NP

February 1884

This letter is published in entirety in CG 213 with 8MR 388-392.

My dear sister:

You should not follow your own inclinations. You should be very careful to set a right example in all things. Do not be inactive. Arouse your dormant energies. Make yourself a necessity to your husband by being attentive and helpful. Be a blessing to him in everything. Take up the duties essential to be done. Study how to perform with alacrity the plain, uninteresting, homely, but most needful duties which relate to domestic life. Your inactivity has been indulged and cultivated when it should be guarded against strictly and with a determined effort. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 1

My sister, your mind will bear taxing. If you take up the burdens that you should, you can be a blessing to the Health Retreat. But the indulgence of your sluggish temperament is a detriment to you, physically, mentally, and spiritually. You need the quickening, converting power of God. You need to stand firmly and truly for God and the right. You need to be vitalized by the grace of Christ. Will you wake up and put to the task your almost paralyzed energies, seeking to do all the good in your power? You must exercise the living machinery, or else you will not be able to throw off the waste matter, and you will fall short of gaining health. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 2

Try to make a success of your domestic life. It means more to fill the position of wife and mother than you have thought. Should you, as you desired, engage in sewing, it would not give you the employment necessary for your health; it would not remedy the deficiencies you now possess. You need the culture and experience of domestic life. You need the variety, the stir, the earnest effort, the cultivation of the will power, that this life brings. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884,

par. 3

Right where you are now, if you took hold of the management of your child, you could make it a success, but this requires more time, more thought, more steadiness of purpose, a more unyielding demand for obedience than you have thought of putting forth. Your child has none too much spirit, but he needs the hand of wisdom to guide him aright. He has been allowed to cry for what he wanted until he has formed the habit of doing this. He has been allowed to cry for his father. Again and again, in his hearing, others have been told how he cries for his father, until he makes it a point of doing this. Had I your child, in three weeks he would be transformed. I would let him understand that my word was law, and kindly, but firmly, I would carry out my purposes. I would not submit my will to the child's will. You have a work to do here, and you have lost much by not taking hold of it before.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 4

Time is precious. Time is golden. It should not be devoted to little, unimportant things, which serve only to gratify the taste. You can be more useful, my sister, when you cease to allow unimportant things to take your golden moments, when useful and necessary things engage your attention and your time. There are many things to be done in this world of ours, and I hope you will not neglect the thoughtful, caretaking part of your work.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 5

You might have saved the institution with which you are connected hundreds of dollars had you put your soul into the work. Had you spoken a word here and done some planning there, you could have been a real blessing. Had you awakened your dormant energies by exercise in the open air and done what it was in your power to do with cheerfulness and alacrity, you could have accomplished much more than you have, and been a real blessing.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 6

I hope that you will devote your mind and your wisdom to the work. See that everything is run on an economical plan. This must be done or debts will accumulate. Women of sharp, quick intellect are needed to discern where there is waste in little things, and to rectify it. You have stood at the head of the Health Retreat as Matron, and it was your duty to do this.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 7

Much could be saved that is now wasted for the want of a head to see and plan and tell what should be done, [one] who will take right hold, and by precept and example do this work. Girls will not be conscientious, diligent, and economical unless a right example is given them by the one standing at the head. If the girls are not willing to be taught, if they will not do as you wish them, let them be discharged. I know that much can be saved at our boarding house and much at the Sanitarium, if thoughtfulness and painstaking effort are brought into the work. Not one crumb of bread should be wasted unless it has been spoiled by being handled. Take the bits of bread that are left and use them for puddings. Lessen your meat bills by buying as little meat as possible. More than is necessary is expended for meat. Light must shine forth on this subject. The potatoes that are left can be used for stuffing, put into a pan, and baked with the meat. Then the meat will not be served in the most concentrated form.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 8

There are hundreds and hundreds of ways in which a little is lost, and these make a large loss in the end. If the little wastes are all thoroughly looked after, there will be some margin in the institution to work on. But many of the girls of California know not what economy means. They are not educated to save the little things. Girls go out to work, and they cook well if they can have the privilege of going to a large supply and using freely and extravagantly the things provided. In the place of saving, of gathering up the fragments that remain that nothing be lost, much is lost that must be purchased again.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 9

We need to have thoroughly competent cooks connected with our schools, that the youth may be taught how to make much out of little. I have been pained as I have seen good, sweet biscuits and ears of corn left from the noon meal thrown into the waste barrel. The corn could have been cut from the cobs and, with a little milk, prepared into a palatable dish. I need not enumerate all the jots and tittles that might be saved. By exerting a proper influence in these lines, you may educate girls for domestic service. This will be a great blessing to them.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 10

All our talents should be used; they should not be allowed to rust through inaction. All our influence should be used to the very best account. After Christ fed the multitude, He said, "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost." [John 6:12.] This lesson may apply to spiritual things <as well as temporal.> Those who do not appreciate and make the best use of their spiritual blessings, gathering up every precious ray of light, will soon become indifferent and inappreciative! Blessings are not given to those who do not value them. All our physical energies as one of God's talents, should be used to the glory of God. Our influence is to be recognized and employed as belonging to God. God calls upon all to do their best.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 11

I would be glad to spend much time at the [Rural] Health Retreat, but with your present expense to furnish the tables, every additional one increases the outlay of means, and I prudently stay away. I hope that if you set so liberal a table, you will charge accordingly, that there may be a surplus of means. If nothing is gained to help forward the improvements that must be made, what is the use of going to all this trouble and perplexity? If the boarders are lessened by a plain, wholesome diet, let them be lessened. Watch all waste. Do not allow it. I know that there is great loss here. I must tell you, Bro. and Sr. ----, that you are too much afraid of the boarders; you try too hard to meet their every desire. I should not do this. I would set a good liberal table, not getting the most expensive food, but making the fare palatable by skill and care. I feel anxious that the Health Retreat shall be all that prudence, sharp foresight, and economy can make it.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 12

<This was written and sent before the one dated February 5, 1884. The first page was not to be found.>4LtMs, Lt 5, 1884, par. 13

Lt 6, 1884

Butler, G. I.; Haskell, S. N.

St. Helena, California

January 20, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 21MR 325-328.

Dear Brother Butler and Brother Haskell:

I expect that this is the last letter that will reach you before you go on your journey to Europe. I have written but few letters because I have been laboring very hard in Healdsburg. The members who composed the Healdsburg church before so many moved in were weak. One and another wanted the supremacy. There was quarreling in the church; one would advance one thing, another would get up and oppose it. There have been old grudges, old difficulties, which no one dared to meddle with. But I felt urged by the Spirit of God to put forth earnest efforts to dig out these old roots of bitterness. We worked early and late. I attended every early morning meeting and then the following meeting at nine o'clock for these members of the Healdsburg church, and the Lord helped. Matters were settled, the difficulties removed, and confessions made. We had most precious meetings; many were much blessed. I knew I must have rest and came to this place, but my mind is constantly exercised. I feel deeply in regard to our present position. I try to throw off the burden but I cannot lay it down. It will come back.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 1

Friday night several heard my voice exclaiming, "Look, Look!" Whether I was dreaming or in vision I cannot tell. I slept alone. The time of trouble was upon us. I saw our people in great distress, weeping and praying, pleading the sure promises of God, while the wicked were all around us, mocking us and threatening to destroy. They ridiculed our feebleness, they mocked at the smallness of our numbers, and taunted us with words calculated to cut deep. They charged us with taking an independent position from all the rest of the world. They had cut off our resources so that we could not buy or sell, and referred to our abject poverty and stricken condition.

They could not see how we could live without the world. We were dependent upon the world, and we must concede to the customs, practices, and laws of the world, or go out of it. If we were the only people in the world whom the Lord favored, the appearances were awfully against us.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 2

They declared that they had the truth, that miracles were among them, that angels from heaven talked with them and walked with them, that great power and signs and wonders were performed among them, and that this was the temporal millennium they had been expecting so long. The whole world was converted and in harmony with the Sunday law, and this little feeble people stood out in defiance of the laws of the land and the law of God, and claimed to be the only ones right on the earth.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 3

[They declared,] “The angels of heaven have spoken to us”—referring to those whom Satan personated that had died, and they claimed had gone to heaven. “You will bear the testimony of the heavenly messengers!” They sneered, they mocked, they derided and abused the sorrowing ones. There was much more, but I have not time to write it.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 4

But while anguish was upon the loyal and true, who would not worship the beast or his image and accept and revere an idol sabbath, One said, “Look up! Look up!” Every eye was lifted, and the heavens seemed to part as a scroll when it is rolled together, and, as Stephen looked into the heaven, we looked. The mockers were taunting and reviling us and boasting of what they intended to do to us if we continued obstinate in holding fast our faith. But now we were as those who heard them not; we were gazing upon a scene that shut out everything else.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 5

There stood revealed the throne of God. Around it were ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands upon thousands, and close about the throne were the martyrs. Among this number I saw the very ones who were so recently in such abject misery, whom the world knew not, whom the world hated and despised.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 6

A voice said, “Jesus, who is seated upon the throne, has so loved man [that] He gave His life a sacrifice to redeem him from the power of Satan, and to exalt him to His throne. He who is above all powers, He who has the greatest influence in heaven and in earth, He to whom every soul is indebted for every favor he has received, was meek and lowly in disposition, holy, harmless, and undefiled in life.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 7

“He was obedient to all His Father’s commandments. Wickedness has filled the earth. It is defiled under the inhabitants thereof. The high places of the powers of earth have been polluted with corruption and base idolaters, but the time has come when righteousness shall receive the palm of victory and triumph. Those who were accounted by the world [as] weak [and] unworthy, those who were defenseless against the cruelty of men, shall be conquerors and more than conquerors.”4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 8

“After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb. And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshiped God, saying, Amen, blessing and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God forever, and ever, Amen. And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, Who are these which are arrayed in white robes, and whence came they? And I answered and said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to us, these are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve Him day and night in His temple, and He that sitteth in the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither shall they thirst any more, neither shall the sun light upon them nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them and shall lead them upon living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.” Revelation 7:9-17.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 9

They are before the throne enjoying the sunless splendors of eternal day, not as a scattered, feeble company to suffer by the

Satanic passions of a rebellious world, expressing the sentiments, the doctrines, and [the] councils of demons. Strong and terrible have become the masters of iniquity in the world under the control of Satan, but strong is the Lord God who judgeth Babylon. The just have no longer any thing to fear from force or fraud as long as they are loyal and true. A mightier than the strong man armed is set for their defense. All power and greatness and excellence of character will be given to those who have believed and stood in defense of the truth, standing up and firmly defending the laws of God.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 10

Another heavenly being exclaimed with firm and musical voice, "They have come out of great tribulation. They have walked in the fiery furnace in the world, heated intensely by the passions and caprices of men who would enforce upon them the worship of the beast and his image, who would compel them to be disloyal to the God of heaven."4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 11

"They have come from the mountains, from the rocks, from the dens and caves of the earth, from dungeons, from prisons, from secret councils, from the torture chamber, [from] hovels, from garrets. They have passed through sore affliction, deep self-denial, and deep disappointment. They are no longer to be the sport and ridicule of wicked men. They are no longer mean and sorrowful in the eyes of those who despise them. Remove the filthy garments from them, with which men have delighted to clothe them. Give them a change of raiment, even the white robes of righteousness, and set a fair mitre upon their heads."4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 12

They were clothed in richer robes than earthy beings had ever worn. They were crowned with diadems of glory such as human beings had never seen. The days of suffering, of reproach, of want, of hunger, are no more; weeping is past. Then they break forth in songs loud, clear, and musical. They wave the palm branches of victory and exclaim, "Salvation to our God, that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." [Verse 10.]4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 13

But I have not time nor eyesight now to write all this wonderful manifestation of God. I cannot get it from my mind day or night. I am just now afflicted with pain in my heart and in my eyes, but I am strong in faith, of good courage, quite weak in body, but I am praying [that] I shall be strong, for God has promised me strength. I am writing now by the light of my lamp, unable to sleep.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 14

Oh, may God endue us with His Spirit and make us strong in His strength! In that great day of supreme and final triumph it will be seen that the righteous were strong and that wickedness in all its forms and with all its pride was a weak and miserable failure and defeat. We will cling close to Jesus, we will trust Him, we will seek His grace and His great salvation. We must hide in Jesus, for He is a covert from the storm, a present help in time of trouble.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1884, par. 15

Lt 7, 1884

Smith, Brother and Sister [Uriah]

Portland, Oregon

June 17, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 3Bio 252; 7MR 54; LS 273.

Dear Brother and Sister Smith:

I have received an urgent letter from Brother [S. N.] Haskell to come to the important meetings [in the] East. I would be glad to go, but as I look over the work that must be done, I cannot see any consistency in my going east this summer. I have been very much exhausted, but this would not deter me from going if I could see it to be duty. I have not been able to recover from my work [in the] East up to this time.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1884, par. 1

Marian [Davis] and Eliza [Burnham] are the best help I could have and [are] appreciated highly by me. There are many works I wish to complete. If I went east, I would have to return in the winter to do the very work that I should leave undone. In the spring Willie [White] and I will go east in May to remain one year, and perhaps two years.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1884, par. 2

The meeting closed up well in Walla Walla. It was a success, and a great change has taken place in the feelings of the Upper Columbia Conference. Sunday I spoke upon the subject of temperance. If ever the Lord helped me, He did at this time. I was free indeed. The Lord let the power of His Spirit rest upon me.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1884, par.

3

Lt 8, 1884

Van Horn, Isaac D.

Healdsburg, California

February 26, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother Van Horn:

I have today sent you a copy of the testimony given for you some time ago, read to you and Adelia in Oregon. I would not now have taken the pains to look through stored-away copy to find this and copy it if I did not feel that it would be for your good to have it. I tried many times to find it but could not. I found it last Friday, after a long and diligent search. Please read it carefully.⁴*LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 1*

I have heard you, my much respected brother and sister, express regret that you left Oregon, and I have heard you say that you were forced, as it were, away, that the course Brother Waggoner took was not altogether as it should be. Now, my brother, I was relieved of a great burden when you left Oregon. You should have left one year before you did; that one year there was nothing special accomplished. Adelia was an invalid. Had you both left one year earlier, we should have been one year ahead; had you left two years earlier, we should have been two years ahead. Not that you did not do anything, but there should have been done a much larger work.⁴*LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 2*

I remember the words of my husband when you were sent into this new field. They were these: Isaac and Adelia, God would have you enter this new field together unitedly in the work. I would not trust you, Isaac, alone where you might lack in the financial working of the cause. Adelia will help you out with her business tact, where you would be more inclined to be easy and not thorough in the work. Adelia will be your good _____ to spur you up to energy. Both of you will make a perfect whole. God would have Adelia in the field. He would have you work side by side together, for this, the Lord has shown, was His will. We can afford to pay you better wages with Adelia to help you, than for your labors alone. The Lord will bless you together.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 3

Now, my dear brother and sister, you know how these plans were not carried out. I well know that there was dissatisfaction everywhere, especially in Washington Territory. They said that they helped you financially and then you left them and never came near them; you know why. But I had not to receive this from their lips, for it had been shown me from a higher Source. Your business was to raise a family of children. God's work was neglected. I need not repeat that which the testimony has already presented before you. The field was not worked up as it should have been. All were disappointed. Elder Van Horn has a good preaching gift; if he had not left other parts of the work undone, it would be far advanced.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 4

God did not ordain that you should take Adelia out of the field. God did not ordain that you should accumulate family cares to take yourself out of the field. An enemy hath done this. Satan worked, and he has done just what he meant to do—to burden you with cares, that you could not do justice to God's work. As you look upon your little flock, dear, precious little ones, to your finite human comprehension you may say, "It pays."4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 5

As God has presented it to me as it will appear on the books of heaven, it is not as you regard it. Selfishness is at the root of this whole matter. God called for missionaries—self-denying, self-sacrificing missionaries—to do a special work in His vineyard. You both worked in that manner to close the missionary field God had opened. You opened a private missionary field, and the burdens, difficulties, hindrances, unbelief and sadness of spirit have come of having your own way in the place of accepting God's way. I felt so thankful that your removal was made in such a way that it made it as easy as possible for you. You were not sent into a new field, but you were welcomed, loved, and all your efforts were appreciated here in California.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 6

Brother Boyd was sent in your place. They commenced as no missionary should in this age, expecting the events we are in the near future, with increasing their family; but the case was different. The one, God had qualified and fitted for a special work; the other He had not so qualified. The one could not devote time to maternity and the cares of a family without devoting all or nearly all there was of her to the work, and require that her husband be kept largely from the field for this new private missionary field.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 7

The mold that was given to the cause of God was not as God would have it. Isaac, with his qualifications, should have educated workers and not have done all the work himself, but from his hand should have come forth laborers to do a good work in the missionary field. He should have been a teacher of men and less preacher. All thought there was no such preacher as Brother Van Horn, while they could but see there was a lack to get up the work in order and thoroughness. It was left to ravel out, for much labor is needed beside preaching, which the people did not have.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 8

Now, my dear children, you have never seen this matter as it is. I have seen it to my great grief. My great fears are you will repeat in some degree the experience of the past and will take things easy, love to preach, but fail where, with a different kind of labor, you may make a success.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 9

You told me, Elder Van Horn, that you were sure Elder Boyd was a failure in Oregon, [that] leading brethren did not like him at all. A pain went through my heart when you said this. Elder Boyd's talent is far inferior to yours as far as preaching is concerned; but preaching, if it were as eloquent as Apollos or the apostle Paul, will not build up and widen without another kind of labor, pastoral effort with this preaching talent. Personal effort must be made; an aggressive warfare is essential, for the battle [is] to be carried into the very gates and houses. This was not done; but here is a poorer speaker entered after you where your manner of labor had left the field about as bad as it could be, as far as widening, advancing, venturing something is concerned; but with this man there is a financial tact, a determination to do something. All your ideas were painfully circumscribed; now it will be hard for Brother Boyd in this field, if he works differently from what you have done. A people accustom themselves to have little done and if anyone does differently from the former laborer, they feel that everything is going to pieces.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 10

Brother Raymond may be a good man, but has not tact. You might have given him a different stamp in the beginning, but I fear he will never receive it now. The golden moment has passed; he is very narrow.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 11

Brother Starbuck is very narrow in his ideas and in his comprehension. If means are required to do something, they think it rashness because of your manner of labor. God forbid that you should not see this and change decidedly, change your manner of labor. I have had no words with Brother Boyd. He writes that censure has been laid upon him but gives no particulars. He is not the best of speakers, which is against him, but he has enterprise and a heart to work, and God will help him.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 12

Now, my dear brother, you are to be guarded when you leave a field. Those who were your ardent friends [will] sorely feel their loss when a minister comes who has less ministerial ability, although he may far exceed you as a worker. Those who loved you will not see the good he is trying to do to advance the work, but will keep before them, "Oh those good discourses we heard from Elder Van Horn! If we could only have Elder Van Horn back!" Letters have come to you, because you told me so, with bitter complaints. How did you treat these letters? Did you open the door for the temptations of the enemy to come in? Did you sympathize with your faultfinding brethren, those who really hate Brother Boyd because he does not possess the same easy turn of mind as that of Brother Van Horn? If you communicate with these brethren, do you appeal to your own sympathies and allow them to feel that you have not been treated right? I was shown some time ago that very little could be done by Brother Raymond or Starbuck with their ideas and state of feeling. Now, please closely investigate the true cause.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 13

Had you done your duty as a faithful minister of Christ, the necessity for your removal and another gift coming in would have been avoided; but your neglect left this field in a bad condition. No man could enter that field without having a hard, unenviable lot. Do you, my brother, see the matter as it is? I beg of you to cease your communicating with your brethren in Oregon unless you can help them. I beg of you to put away envy out of your heart and every feeling that will rather be gratified to see a brother in some respects less capable than yourself. He deserves your sincere pity and heartfelt prayers in following in your tract to try to bind off your raveling-out work. I wish it clearly understood that nothing has been related to me by Brother Boyd, but I know how the field was. I know [that] the men who have not been educated and drilled up to the several branches of the work at the right time to do something, to expect something, and to move ahead by faith, will not be prepared for advancement.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 14

A vote of censure has been passed upon Brother Boyd. What it is for, time will tell; I cannot, nor anyone else on this side of Oregon. What right have they to do this? The General Conference sent Brother Boyd to Oregon, and the General Conference are the ones to be consulted and asked to remove him if they could not tolerate him.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 15

Now, Brother Van Horn, please do not do anything to alienate hearts from Elder Boyd by your sympathies exercised for yourself or your brethren in Oregon. You should feel that the censure of the Lord is decidedly upon your course in Oregon. Now, if there can be aroused a dissatisfaction fanned by you ever so gently, how much evil you may do in this respect, the Lord only knows. Be careful, be guarded, and do not feel disposed to censure others, but get right yourself in regard to Oregon. I want you to see and feel where your mistakes have been, else you will preach your good discourses but fail decidedly to work in other directions to keep up the financial interest of the cause. We are too near the judgment now to venture to let feelings come in, too near the great white throne to neglect one word from the Lord, be it palatable or unpalatable. Let us search our hearts, our motives, our spirit, our feelings, and be in harmony with heaven. Jesus, precious Saviour, will help you; but do not feel that your past work needs no mending.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 16

I love you both as dear children. I love you too well to pass over a course that is wrong in you, that I know is wrong, when you have made a providence for yourself as a better way than the providence of God. We have no time to lose. You have a work to do to educate men. You can do it if you will set yourself to the work to educate young men to fit them for workers in the cause. You shirk from doing those things that will tax your mind and your physical strength; but you can do it and should do it, for the Master wants you to do it.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 17

Do not, I entreat of you, sympathize with the complainers in Oregon. God will leave them, I fear, to themselves if they have a spirit of murmuring.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 18

Brother Jones is being shut away from the work, nearly all his powers bent upon acquiring property. Frankie is a selfish, worldly-minded woman, and she stands directly in the way of the work. The world, the world, property, is the ambition. Oh that God may pity us poor, weak, failing mortals, before it shall be said in heaven, "It is done." Let us work for time and for eternity. Let us do all we can on our part, do it unselfishly, do it with an eye single to God's glory, work in that manner that when the Master comes He may say, "Well done, good and faithful servant." [Matthew 25:23.] Let us humble our hearts before God; let us be earnest, zealous, and work from an unselfish standpoint, work as Jesus works.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 19

I go to St. Helena today. I have been doing work from three o'clock in the morning and have had an ill turn, but am better now. It was a slight shock of paralysis, for I have not had one days' rest since I left here the twelfth of August for the East. Shall get no rest until Volume 4 is published. Have some more to do yet. I have written you this since four thirty this morning, before breakfast.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 20

Love to Adelia and all the dear ones.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1884, par. 21

Lt 9, 1884

Haskell, S. N.

On the Steamboat "Columbia," Pacific Ocean en route for San Fransico, California

1884

Portions of this letter are published in 9MR 9-10.

Dear Brother Haskell:

In the providence of God, we are having a very pleasant passage. There has none of our party been sick. Yesterday we had a council in regard to matters of the cause. There were Elds. Waggoner, Corliss, Jones, W. C. White, and myself. We were talking in regard to European plans presented for our attention in letters and plans of building from Brother Butler. Letters were read and several hours of close application given to these matters.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 1

I wrote you a letter before I left the camp in answer to yours; but not expecting to be able to sit up, I did not expect to do anything with the letters and put them in the trunk. The trunk may be delayed one day after we arrive at San Francisco. The transfer is often tardy in delivering our baggage to Oakland.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 2

In my letter I wrote that it was not best to make calls for so large sums in one year as you are making. No one should be permitted to pledge unless his circumstances are closely investigated. If a man has only a little home from which he can make a living and do something for the cause of God, even if it is no great sum, he should not be allowed to make large donations to the cause and be obliged to sell his home. It is not best, for it does not have a healthful influence upon the cause and work at large to uproot men who have families to support with the idea which they entertain that they can labor in the cause, giving their time to the work. This will surely result in harm to the man and worse harm to the cause, unless he is qualified for the work and will do justice to that branch in which he engages.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 3

Many men are better off to take care of their little families [and] do what they can by home influence than to extend their efforts and influences in a broader capacity. They are far better adapted to move in a narrow sphere. To uproot them and send them adrift because they flatter themselves they can do something is a wonderful mistake. We must have sharp discriminating powers, and there must be much prayer offered before decisions are made. Things are accepted as in God's order that are not in His order. There must be much prayer in every move made, in every man chosen for a particular work. There are mistakes made. Finite judgment, without the counsel of God, makes sad blunders.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 4

We should bring God into all our counsels and not make moves unless we have the enlightenment of God. Plead with God. Importune Him for light, for wisdom, and for counsel, that every move may be made in God. If this is so, less haphazard work will be done. There will be less to tear down, less to go to pieces, more steady, firm, thorough work done, and more power in what is done. We do not pray in humble dependence one half as much as we should. We cannot afford to make a mistake in this matter where eternal interests are involved.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 5

I feel to question the matter of your making so large a draw for means. I greatly question the plans of your many reading rooms established and maintained with so great an outlay of means. Has there been all the prayer and consideration over the matter that there should be? That some such places should be, I have no doubt, but that this should be general, I have no idea. The very same men calculated or qualified to take charge of a reading room and manage it, might be city missionaries and make personal efforts for a much more promising class that will never enter a reading room. If there can be access obtained to families and Bible readings given, if home work can be done, it would be at far less outlay of means, with far more successful results. There may be carrying the matter of reading rooms to extravagant outlay of means, and when figures are investigated, it will be shown to amount to very little.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 6

Will you consider all these matters? There are few enough workers in the field, and none should be taken out of the field and anchored in a reading room with so few promising results. Will you then consider, you and Elder Butler, and not be so enthusiastic over untried plans and enterprises in which large means shall be invested with but little afterwards to show for it? We have a great work to do, and we have failed decidedly to educate workers to do that which needs to be done. Then the large means called for in the several conferences—if some have moved hastily and pledged without due consideration, temptations come when everything looks in a different light, and great reaction comes. These efforts, just a little overdone, are too expensive in their after-influence to be repeated.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 7

I do not attach blame or censure any one, but we must move with due caution and consideration, firmly, decidedly, cautiously guarding every move that it may bear criticism.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 8

But [there is] one thing I am sure upon, and that is: my testimony should not be made the principal thing to pry over because our brethren have confidence in my testimonies. Then, if unguarded moves are made and there is a reaction, doubts are entertained in regard to my testimonies, because they argue, the results are not good. Now, it is essential that the brethren should not lose confidence in these testimonies, and our brethren, moving unwisely, have cast doubt and questionings that would not otherwise exist. Brethren, while we move promptly in matters over which we have no questionings, but that are as God would have them, be cautious in regard to untried plans. When larger moves are made, be cautious not to move extravagantly, but cautiously, and with constant prayer, and with holy, humble, earnest trust in God.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 9

Every case must be investigated of those who have pledged their means, for if some cases have to be afterward considered and their pledges reduced to smaller sums, the sacredness of vows and pledges is not preserved. There is a going back on the pledge, and a demoralized state of things exists. When the matter of pledges is made, every case should be reviewed, and if some in their ardor do too much to embarrass their families, then, at the very time, let the protest be made and the figures increased or reduced as the circumstances shall admit. We must move understandingly, intelligently, with due consideration, and then the confidence of the people will be established in the leaders. They will be not only ambassadors of Christ, but fathers in Israel.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 10

We must not repeat the failures and mistakes of the past in any department of the work. We can not do anything as we should do it unless Jesus is suggesting and planning for us and working with His mighty power in our behalf. "Without Me," said Christ, "ye can do nothing." [John 15:5.]4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 11

I do not want to retard the work at all, but to have it move surely amid every discouragement. There is no more means raised than that is needed in the work. I do not wish to discourage you, but I want you should feel that more depends upon the Spirit of God working with our efforts than any amount of means without the special blessing of God. We need men of brains, men of determination and will power for the work. Let us unite our prayers to God for this blessing, workers in the cause. Do not let anything I have written discourage or dishearten you, for it is not for that purpose I write, but that with all our planning and more extended operations, we shall move intelligently, have connection with heaven, and plead with God to raise up workmen.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 12

Secure all the ability and talent profitable. See it, and with discriminating powers, with wisdom, learn to use it. The work is certainly languishing for want of workers. We must do more than we have done to prepare men for working, bearing responsibilities in this work.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 13

Dear brother in Christ, I long to be at your meetings, but can not see how this can be. But we will pray for you. Last year the meetings might have been in Portland, but that can not be cured now. I shall not be able to attend. I feel the tenderest regard for you and Elder Butler and believe the Lord will guide you, bless you abundantly in doing your work.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 14

In love.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1884, par. 15

Lt 10, 1884

Matteson, J. G.

San Jose, California

May 3, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in TDG 132, ChL 48-49; 7MR 314-315.

Dear Brother Matteson,

I intended to write to you while I was attending the meetings held in Battle Creek, but because of the constant labor of speaking and writing, I did not have time. Now that the Conference in Europe is soon to be held, I must write to you. I fear that my letter may be sent too late to reach you before the Conference.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 1

My brother, I have been shown that Elders [J. N.] Andrews, [J. N.] Loughborough, and yourself have displayed a great lack of wise generalship. You yourself have not developed talent and trained helpers to take hold with you and assist in the work, as you might have done. You have the idea that no one can labor so well as you can. While you have too much to do, others have too little. You do not give others an opportunity to improve in efficiency by practical experience.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 2

You are willing to be helped and assisted if your helpers will leave the main responsibility resting on you. Especially among your own countrymen you desire to be placed above everyone else.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 3

You do not seem to have the ability to educate young men and give them a chance to do that which they have talents for doing if they were given an opportunity to learn. This is the work which should have been done, but which you have left undone. If you were unselfish, if you had Christlike meekness and lowliness, you would learn how to train the youth for useful service.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 4

Instead of helping the youth, you discourage them. Instead of taking them into your confidence and giving them fatherly instruction, you tyrannize over them as would a lord. You watch for their mistakes and are critical. If you chose to do so, you could instruct them in all patience, encouraging them to go forward and do an important work. But you keep them engaged in doing things of minor importance, giving them no opportunity to obtain an experience by which they might develop into trustworthy workmen. How much is lost to the cause of God, you may never know.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 5

You do not patiently seek to make others familiar with all parts of the work. This is because you desire to be first and do not want others to become acquainted with the details of the work or to become as efficient as you are. You have too much self-confidence, too high an estimate of your own ability. Today you should have standing by your side a large number of intelligent workers whom you have trained, but you have shaped matters according to your narrow conceptions and still stand almost alone.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 6

When you are like Jesus, meek and lowly, pure and undefiled in thought and action, you will work in a different manner and on another plan. You will then educate a company to advance the work. There are some men of ability who, if trained, would become excellent workers, equal with yourself. But it is most difficult for you to recognize talent in others and to teach them to make a right use of their powers.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 7

You criticize without mercy those who make mistakes, as if you were infallible, although you are an erring man, having grave faults that none can know so well as yourself and your God. Knowing your own weakness, how compassionate, how kind, how considerate, how courteous, how tender, you should be to others! To the purchase of the blood of Christ you should show tender respect, manifesting toward them not merely a brotherly love, but a fatherly love.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 8

The Lord desires to make of you just the man that you should be, but you have not yet permitted Him to do this. Then how improper it is for you to discourage those who might be workers for God because in every particular and in every minutae they do not meet your mind and come up to your standard! Even if they make mistakes, should you not try in a brotherly, fatherly manner to show them how to avoid making the same mistakes again, in the place of bearing down upon them as you have done, exaggerating their mistakes and taking from them all the courage that they might and should have to strive to improve?4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 9

You may be an altogether more noble man than you are. You should be considerate, true, and tender to your wife and to your children. Nearly all the time your wife's heart is heavy and discouraged. In her religious experience she is not in harmony with my work, but the Lord loves her. He desires to do great things for her. He desires that she shall find comfort and peace and joy in Himself and that she shall rest in His love. He is acquainted with the secret sorrows and discouragements that by your course of action you are bringing upon her, which are uprooting her faith in everything. If you try, you can help her. Make her lot as pleasant as possible. She has powers and qualities that, if directed in the right channel, are of value.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 10

My dear brother, the idea that you are the only one who can do everything in the best manner, is not right. You have had advantages that others have not had. If others were given the same opportunity of gaining an experience that you have had, they might be strong in moral power and in Christian courtesy, points in which you are weak. If they could have the right kind of a teacher, they would receive a mould of character that you, because of your weak points, are unable to give them.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 11

It is your duty to change your course of action. Learn to see and to recognize ability and talent in others besides yourself. For Christ's sake, do not lord it over His heritage, but be an ensample to the flock. Give to others the benefit of all the knowledge that the Lord has given to you. He has given you this knowledge that you may impart it. Teach to others everything that you know, not in an arbitrary manner, making light of their mistakes and ridiculing their ignorance; but in a kindly spirit, you yourself sitting at the feet of Jesus as a learner. Take young men into your mission home and be their instructor, teaching them as you would teach students in a school. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 12

With the same liberality and freedom that the Master teaches you, teach others, binding them to your heart by love and tenderness. Is there anything that you know which you have not received from the Source of your strength? You have had educational advantages. If you had improved your privileges and walked in the light that the Lord has given you, if you had been a diligent worker in the school of Christ, as well as a learner, you would today be a much more efficient laborer than you now are. How glad you should be for the privilege of training men, some of whom would reveal that they have much better balanced minds, much firmer self-control, far greater moral power, than you ever possessed. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 13

Let no one exalt himself, talking of himself, extolling his abilities, displaying his knowledge, and cultivating self-conceit. Let no one seek to tear down the work of others who do not labor according to his standard. The heavenly Teacher gives us the invitation, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light." Christ was never self-confident, bigoted, or self-conceited. He declared, "The Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do: for what things soever He doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." [John 5:19.] 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 14

Brother Matteson, will you now become a learner, as well as an instructor, in the school of Christ? Will you daily learn the lessons of meekness and lowliness of heart, the lessons that you must learn if you ever enter the kingdom of heaven? Will you wear Christ's yoke? Will you bear His burdens? I am deeply anxious that you shall be an able workman, a wise general, able to discover and develop talent in others, as a wise teacher should ever do. Will you now regard this as your work? 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 15

Your Lord is willing to do great things for you if you will allow Him to work in and through you. But unless you cooperate with Him, He cannot use you to do His work. All your powers, physical, mental, and spiritual, are His. If you weaken or debase any of the faculties or organs that He has given you, you please Satan and sever your connection with God, the Source of your strength. Said Jesus, "Without Me ye can do nothing." [John 15:5.] With all your powers strive most earnestly to co-operate with Him. If He is formed within, the hope of glory, you will through His strength become a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, giving by voice and pen to every man his portion of meat in due season.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 16

Constantly Christ is sending messages to those who listen to His voice, but too often His voice is drowned by our voices. O how my heart yearns to see those in the ministry become men after God's own heart! The gospel minister is God's messenger, bearing a message to men. If God has given to one man superior talents and greater advantages, He has a right to expect that that man will use his gifts, not boastingly, but wisely.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 17

No man has a right to call himself his own. And no man possesses any good thing that he can call his own. Every man, every thing, is the property of the Lord. All that man receives from the bounty of heaven is still the Lord's. Whatever we have that is of value, we should use for the benefit of our fellow-men, in order that they shall become valuable workers. Every energy, every endowment, is a talent that should contribute to God's glory by being used in His service. Our God-given capabilities should not be made to serve selfish ends. We should always be willing to impart, letting others know all that we know; and we should rejoice if they in their work develop an energy and an intelligence superior to that which we possess.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 18

God's gifts are not to be used for the exaltation of self, but are to be put out to the exchangers, so that He shall receive His own with usury. Let not one attempt to secure greatness, happiness, or self-gratification by diverting from their proper use the powers with which he is endowed; for by so doing he dishonors the Giver and fails of fulfilling the purpose for which he was created. All our powers come from God and should be used to His glory. Energy, quick discernment, a good understanding, a fitness for God's work

—all these are talents given not only to fit a man for service, but also to enable him to teach others in those lines in which they may be deficient.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 19

Men need not flatter themselves that they possess brilliant talents and strength of intellect independently of God and that therefore devotion to Him does not necessarily oblige them to employ in His service every iota of their knowledge, every faculty of their being. Men can do this only when they can distinctly show that there are two gods, two creators, and when with fine discrimination they can distinguish between the two givers and the claims of each one.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 20

In all the departments of the Lord's work, every laborer is to help his fellow laborers. The workers are to take no credit to themselves because they have many advantages, nor are they to think that they deserve praise for using in the service of Jesus Christ the talents that He has entrusted to them. They should realize that the nonemployment of their capabilities would lay them under a burden of guilt, making them deserving of the just displeasure and severest judgment of God.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 21

Every true minister of Jesus Christ, every true worker in His cause, will banish from the mind, as impious, every thought of inherent merit. Even the heavenly angels take to themselves no praise. Through the heavenly courts, in one grand chorus, resounds their praise of the Creator, "All things come of Thee, and of Thine own have we given Thee." [1 Chronicles 29:14.] Those who live on this earth should join the heavenly host in ascribing praise and glory to the Creator.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 22

No one has the least cause of boasting. No one has any reason to glorify or exalt self, even when one does his very best. Men often fail of doing their duty. They leave undone a vast amount that a close connection with God would have enabled them to do. Constantly God is laboring to make up man's deficiencies. Even repentance is brought about through the application of grace. The natural heart can feel no need of repentance. The tears that fall from the eyes of man because of sorrow for his sinfulness and because of his sympathy with other sinners, start unbidden. They are as dew from eyes that belong to God. Man's sighs are but indications of the deep feelings in a heart that is God's. The good resolutions made are but the outworking of faculties that are God's. The reformed life is but the better employment of a life that is God's. We should take no credit to ourselves for anything that we may do under the sun. "All things come from Thee," we shall eventually be led to acknowledge to our Creator, "and of Thine own have we given Thee." [Verse 14.]4*LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 23*

Faith, too, is the gift of God. Faith is the assent of man's understanding to God's words that binds the heart to God's service. Whose is the understanding, if it be not God's? Whose is the heart, if it be not God's? To have faith is to render to God the intellect, the energy, that we have received from Him; therefore, those who exercise faith do not themselves deserve any credit.4*LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 24*

Those who believe so firmly in God that they can trust Him with unlimited confidence, those who by faith can reach beyond the grave and grasp eternity, must pour forth to God the confession, "All things come of Thee, and of Thine own have we given Thee." [Verse 14.]4*LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 25*

A great work is to be done in England. As yet this field has hardly been touched. It should not be in the condition in which the Lord has represented it before my mind. The most important work before those who have been sent abroad as missionaries is to combine the forces and strength of all whom then can possibly enlist as helpers. Thus they can make mighty strokes for God. He will do a great work in every part of Europe, if the workers put self out of sight and labor only for His glory.4*LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 26*

Some workers are not capable of filling positions that others can fill. Many who might have been able to fill positions of trust have not disciplined themselves, nor have they done what they could from day to day to meet the increasing demands of the present time. Others are able to bear responsibilities and would do so, if they were encouraged and if there were some one who, with patience, kindness, and forbearance, would teach them how to work.4*LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 27*

Ministers should show a real earnestness in helping such persons to succeed and should put forth persevering effort to develop talent. The inexperienced are in need of a wise general who by prayer and personal effort will encourage and help them to become perfect in Christ Jesus, wanting in nothing. This is the work which every gospel minister should endeavor to do, but which so many have signally failed of doing. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 28

Many ministers seem to think that talent and ability have been given only to them and that they must do all the work in order to make sure that it is done right. They find fault with everything that they do not originate. They seem to think that knowledge will die with them. A great amount of talent is lost to the cause of God because many ministers, desiring to be first, are willing to lead, but never to follow. They never seem to question but that which goes forth from their hands is perfect; yet they think that they must closely scrutinize and criticize all that any one else does. Men who have varied talents and superior ability will join us in the work of giving the message. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 29

My dear brother, the Lord desires you to obtain decided victories. How does He who has borne so long, so patiently, and so mercifully with your perversities, regard your sharp, criticizing spirit, your lack of patience with those who do not meet your ideas? All of these things God sees. He is a discernor of the thoughts and the intents of the heart. Because the light of truth has shone so clearly upon you, you should have understood more fully than you have the relation that you sustain to your God and to your fellowmen. You should have learned to feel more deeply your helpless, dependent condition and your deep obligation to God, who has done and is still doing everything for you. You should now strive to train and discipline yourself to regard His work as sacred, a work given you as a faithful steward to do in righteousness. Your mind is to be purified, refined, and jealously guarded. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 30

The chief of the apostles has written, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." [1 Corinthians 9:27.] The lines of self-control must be held with a firm hand, lest the natural, carnal mind obtain the ascendancy. If the body is not kept under control, it makes claims that are unreasonable. Yet many who profess to obey the truth are yielding themselves as servants to its imperative, unreasonable requisitions.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 31

All that you know which helps you in any way to be an intelligent workman, you should teach to your fellow workers. If God has entrusted you with unusual gifts, He has done so to enable you to pour back into His storehouse that which He has given you, by imparting your knowledge to others. If you strive to use for the benefit of others that which He has given you, glory and honor will redound to His name.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 32

Now, Brother Matteson, this is a fair representation of your case. You are not right in these matters. You should try to help those who make mistakes, but never should you do this in the self-sufficient, boastful spirit in which you have done it heretofore. You need to learn many more lessons at the foot of the cross of Calvary. The Lord is ever ready and willing to give His children ability to understand and power to obey His requirements. His truth is able to make us wise unto salvation. By believing it and obeying it, we receive grace sufficient to meet the duties and the trials that come to us from day to day.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 33

May the Lord help you, my brother, strengthening and blessing you. May you learn to do His work with unswerving fidelity.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1884, par. 34

Lt 11, 1884

Smith, Uriah

Healdsburg, California

February 19, 1884

Formerly Undated Ms 140. Portions of this letter are published in 3SM 96-98.

Dear Brother Smith:

I have today mailed you a letter, but information has been received from Battle Creek that the work upon Testimonies is not accepted. 4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 1

I wish to state some matters, which you can do what you please with. These statements you have heard me make before—that I was shown years ago that we should not delay publishing the important light given me because I could not prepare the matter perfectly. My husband was at times very sick, unable to give me the help that I should have had and that he could have given me had he been in health. On this account, I delayed putting before the people that which has been given me in vision. 4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 2

But I was shown that I should present before the people in the best manner possible the light received; then as I received greater light, and as I used the talent God had given me, I should have increased ability to use in writing and in speaking. I was to improve everything, as far as possible bringing it to perfection, that it might be accepted by intelligent minds. As far as possible, every defect should be removed from all our publications. As the truth should unfold and become widespread, every care should be exercised to perfect the works published. 4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 3

I saw in regard to Brother [J. N.] Andrews' History of the Sabbath, that he delayed the work too long. Other erroneous works were taking the field and blocking the way so that minds would be prejudiced by the opposing elements. I saw that thus much would be lost. After the first edition was exhausted, then he could make improvements; but he was seeking too hard to arrive at perfection. This delay was not as God would have it.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 4

Now, Brother Smith, I have been making a careful, critical examination of the work that has been done on the Testimonies, and I see a few things that I think should be corrected in the matter brought before you and others at the General Conference. But as I examine the matter more carefully, I see less and less that is objectionable. Where the language used is not the best, I want it made correct and grammatical, as I believe it should be in every case where it can be without destroying the sense. This work is delayed, which does not please me.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 5

Some things have been brought before me in a dream or vision, I know not which, that lead me to write as I do now, that there was a spirit and influence that controlled the decisions and judgment of the board meetings that was not wholly pure and in harmony with the Spirit of Christ. There were decisions made that would not work out the best results. Unless there was more of Christ and less of the lawyer, less of criticism, grave blunders would be made.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 6

We cannot do our work and make our decisions after the common manner of doing business. All who are connected with the Board should be men of deep religious experience. United with business talent must be the spirit of Jesus Christ, and the tender, pitying, compassionate love of Jesus. All hardness of heart, all firm, set rules and measurements cannot be practiced in these meetings. There is more of self connected with these meetings than there is of the love and compassion and tenderness of Christ. This, God will not, cannot, approve. Unless your ideas are more broad, unless there is a greater foresight, you will work to the disadvantage of the cause in the place of working for its advantage. You will incur loss in the place of gain.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 7

There needs to be an element in these meetings that you have not had. Your decisions were not always as the mind of Christ. Better, far better, err on the side of mercy than on the side of hardness of heart. You need Jesus, more of Jesus in your councils, and less of your own peculiar traits of character. Unless there is a change, you will make some grievous blunders. Feelings too often come in to balance decisions, and there must be a change in this respect. Caution is good, but this may be carried to extremes, and greatly retard the work you would advance. Mercy and the love of God should preside at these meetings in a far greater degree than now. All is not as God would have it. There is too much of self and too little of Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 8

This matter was presented to me in this way: We were in council in Battle Creek, and we were discussing the matter of the Testimonies and their revision. Prior to this, several cases had come up for decision. There had been sharp criticism, and very abrupt decisions had been made which I could not agree with and told them so.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 9

A stately person I had not noticed at all rose in the room and said, as near as I can remember, the words I have written. He first said as he arose, "Will you please examine critically your motives and your feelings? Will you measure them in the light of God's Word, and see if the base metal of selfishness is not mingled with your decisions and your desire to advance the interest of the cause of God? Feelings have been brought into this room and have balanced your decisions more than sound judgment has. Your judgment is faulty. You must have a closer connection with Christ. Then your councils will be ennobled and bear more clearly the stamp of heaven. Look well to your own spirit."4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 10

My mind has been exercised upon the question of the Testimonies that have been revised. We have looked them over more critically. I cannot see the matter as my brethren see it. I think the changes made will improve the book. If our enemies handle it, let them do so. In some little points changes can be made, but I do not coincide with the criticism and sentiments expressed in regard to the work done on the book. I think that your position in some things in reference to the matter may be overwrought. I think that anything that shall go forth will be criticized, twisted, turned, and boggled, but we are to go forward with a clear conscience, doing what we can and leaving the result with God. We must not be long in delaying the work.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 11

Now, my brethren, what do you propose to do? I do not want this work dragging along any longer. I want something done, and done now.⁴*LtMs, Lt 11, 1884, par. 12*

Lt 11a, 1884

Smith, Brother and Sister [Uriah]

Healdsburg, California

February 19, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 19MR 77-80.

Dear Brother and Sister Smith:

I thought I would commence this letter at all events, then I shall obtain a better opportunity to finish it. I have been wanting to write you for some time. And I have so much wished [during] this cold winter weather that you were all in California. We have had most lovely weather in January. Dr. Chamberlain and I would take our canes and climb the mountains in St. Helena. As she was sitting upon a rock on the twenty-third of January, with the warm sun shining upon her, with no outward wrappings on, bareheaded, I remarked I would be glad if her friends in Battle Creek could see her in the warm sunshine on the hillside. It was like a June day in the East.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 1

I received much benefit in my three weeks' visit in St. Helena. I would write until weary and then go out and walk and climb the mountains. The scenery is most lovely, exceeding any picture of loveliness I have ever seen. Brother Smith's artist's eye would take in the scenery and enjoy its beauty, if possible, more than myself.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 2

I feel like expressing my feelings right here. I do wish someone would come in to take charge of the Review and Herald and let you go free. I believe you could do great good in the field—now, at this very time—in giving your clear and powerful discourses on [the] United States in Prophecy. I wish your entire family were located here in California. Can you not work to that point, that not another severe winter like the present shall be spent in the East?4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 3

I am happy to report I am in excellent health. I have proscribed all meat, all butter. None appears on my table. My head is clearer, my strength firmer and my conscience more free, for I know I am following the light which God has given us. I write from fifteen to twenty pages each day. It is now eleven o'clock and I have written fourteen pages of manuscript for Volume Four and seven pages of letters to different ones besides this. I feel continually grateful to God for His merciful kindness. I will not allow one feeling of ingratitude to be harbored. When I think how weak and feeble I was when I started on my eastern journey, and how the Lord sustained me and blessed me, and returned me back in safety, my heart is filled to overflowing with His great love. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 4

We have, Sister Harriet, everything to be thankful for, that Jesus is our Advocate and that He pleads in our behalf. As I write upon my book I feel intensely moved. I want to get it out as soon as possible, for our people need it so much. I shall complete it next month if the Lord gives me health as He has done. I have been unable to sleep nights, thinking of the important things to take place. Three hours' sleep, and sometimes five is the most I get. My mind is stirred so deeply I cannot rest. Write, write, I feel that I must, and not delay 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 5

Great things are before us, and we want to call the people from their indifference, to get ready for that day. Things that are eternal crowd upon my vision day and night. The things that are temporal fade from my sight. We are not now to cast away our confidence, but to have firm assurance, firmer than ever before. Hitherto hath the Lord helped us, and He will help us to the end. We will look to the monumental pillars, reminders of what the Lord hath done for us, to comfort and to save us from the hand of the destroyer. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 6

We want to have fresh in our memory every tear the Lord has wiped from our eyes, every pain He has soothed, every anxiety removed, every fear dispelled, every want supplied, every mercy bestowed, and strengthen ourselves for all that is before us through the remainder of our pilgrimage. We can but look onward to new perplexities in the coming conflict, but we may well look on what is past as well as what is to come, and say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." [1 Samuel 7:12.] "As thy days, so shall thy strength be."

[Deuteronomy 33:25.] The trial will not exceed the strength which shall be given us to bear it. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 7

Then let us take up our work just where we find it, without one word of repining, imagining nothing can come, but that strength will come proportionate to the trial. Our children are in the hands of God. Our faith must awaken to grasp the promises and we not repine, we not be mournful, for then we dishonor God. We must encourage a cheerful, hopeful frame of mind. Our present peace must not be disturbed by anticipated trials, for God will never leave nor forsake one soul who trusts in Him. God is better unto us than our fears. If we would encourage a diligent remembrance and recital of our mercies, counting up instances in which God has wrought for us, has been better to us than our fears, in which He has interposed His power and His grace when sorely perplexed, sustained us when falling, comforted us when sorrowing, we would see that it is unbelief to distrust God or be filled with anxiety. Let mercies be remembered and enjoyed daily. We must live by faith daily. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 8

I do not know what called out these remarks, only the thought that many will look away from present duties, present comfort and blessings, and be borrowing trouble in regard to the future crisis. This will be making a time of trouble beforehand, and we will receive no grace for any such anticipated troubles. Rejoice in God always. Today praise God for His grace, and continue to praise Him every day. When the scene of sore conflict comes, we have learned the lesson of holy confidence, of blessed trust, and we place our hands in the hands of Christ, our feet on the Rock of Ages, and we are secure from storm, from tempest. We are to wait on our Lord; Jesus will be an ever-present help in every time of need. We may be glad in the Lord. We may show forth the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light. My meditation of Him shall be sweet—of Him to whom I have committed the keeping of my soul. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 9

I was much pleased to read just at this time the piece in [the] Review upon diet. It came in just the right time for me, for I am laboring on this point and needed just what is there published. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 10

Well, this must go to the mail. When you can find time, write me, both of you. I will be very glad to hear from you. Love to Anna. May the Lord give her a precious experience in His service, and may the younger children learn in the school of Christ to be children of Jesus Christ, is my sincere desire and prayer.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 11

In much love.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 12

Were Sister Ings' red stockings sent with the things she sent for? If not, will you send them by mail? She wants them.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1884, par. 13

Lt 12, 1884

Brownsberger, Brother and Sister [Sidney]

Healdsburg, California

1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3SM 293-294; 7MR 3-6.

Dear Brother and Sister Brownsberger:

You invite me to visit you at Brother Fred Harmon's. I do not say I will not come, but I should do injustice to myself and to you should I come and converse with you both as [I] have done several times. A plain statement it is my duty to make to you.⁴*LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 1*

You ask me serious questions which must not be answered by me in any careless way, for much is involved in these questions and, in order to answer you with due thought and intelligence, I must not be constantly interrupted by your playing with your children. Have you not thought, my sister, you are not doing justice to yourself and [not] showing due respect and courtesy to me, your guest?⁴*LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 2*

Your daughter Daisy is a very promising child. She attracts notice and praise and flattery from others, and all praise her for her smartness; but be very careful that you do not administer to her vanity. When you have guests, you can say to your children, "Now I wish to visit with my friends and you must amuse yourselves." Daisy is [4 (?)] years old, a very nice little girl, and her perceptions are large. She will form habits rapidly. You can, when you have special visiting to do with your friends, say that she must not disturb you by putting in her little sharp voice to distract your mind, and you lose all the benefit it is your privilege to have. It will be just as you shall manage the matter. You held the lines and a little whip and [were] carrying on an imaginary driving [of] a horse. Your voice [was] heard in directing and et cetera, then her voice was constantly interspersed in the conversation and a laugh. It was a mixing of the common and sacred in such a way that it was a most painful interview to me, for you could not possibly have been able to get clear ideas of what I was trying to say to you and could not be a reliable one to communicate that which was said.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 3

You will not educate your children to respect those who are older and those who are laborers together with God. [You] yourselves have been exacting teachers. You have needed caution in regard to being so severe if all respect and due attention were not given to your words of instruction. You have a little school in your own family, and you need to move as parents wisely. If you consider that every expressed wish of your little ones must be gratified, you will make them selfish, and their wishes will multiply and be predominating. In visiting our people in other places, the education you give your children will make them an annoyance. I advise you now to leave them at home, for it is evident they are placed on exhibition as prodigies of smartness, and the good you might accomplish as laborers together with God in families you visit is not done.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 4

It is not pleasant to you [to] be separated from your children and let others have a care for them. But I learned in our labors [that] the formation of the right character [in] my children required this. The continual changing brought the children to notice and to the hearing of remarks calculating to indulgence, and praising and petting brought into their education a love of self and the idea that they were to be administered to as the all-important part of the program.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 5

I would advise you, as missionaries doing a work for God, have your little ones under as good care and discipline as possible. It is not in any way perfect. It would be far more so than the advantages you can give them under all circumstances.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 6

We would not sever youth and old age, and I love to have children in the room where I am, if they do not fill the whole room and are the all-pervading element in the room. It is proper to teach the little ones that there are times when they must not command your whole time and resources to amuse them. You need not make a long recitation of the matter to the children, but act as opportunities present themselves. Tell them you must not be interrupted, for you wish to hear and to talk now.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 7

The character of the child must be formed so as not to consider your children in this world to carry through without restrain their own desires. They are to be educated as [to] what is proper and right. Hannah gave to the Lord her son and separated him from her as soon as he was weaned, and [she] brought a little coat to the lad every year. How many tears and prayers mingled in the stitches put in that little coat. Was it not a sacrifice for her to be deprived of the care of her loved one? With what pride she would have cherished the child given her of God, but she gave this child to the Lord to serve Him, and how grateful and joyous her heart that the Lord accepted the offering and evidenced that He regarded the mother's gift as a fragrant savor offered to God.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 8

Brother and Sister Brownsberger, will you please consider these things? I am willing to give you any counsel that is in my power through the grace given me of God, but I am not willing to accede to your oft-repeated requests for a good long talk when your time is largely occupied in playing with and amusing your child.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 9

Our work now is a very solemn, earnest work. We cannot evade it. There is the greatest necessity of education in more lines than one. The one great need with you both is to feel that you must be under [the] supervision [of] God. You are His property. Your children are His property to be trained as younger members of the Lord's family, not to consider themselves to be especially indulged in any whim and denied nothing. Were you an observer of the same plan of discipline you see others pursuing in managing their children, you would criticize them severely.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 10

And again, [do] not indulge yourselves in sitting at the table spread with a large variety of food and because you enjoy these things, eat them before your children, and say, "No, you cannot have this. You cannot have that, it will hurt you," while you eat largely of the very things you forbid them to touch. Your discipline in this line needs the reformation and the principle of practice.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par.

It is cruelty to sit down yourself to the third meal, and take satisfaction in talking and enjoying yourselves while you have your children sit by and eat nothing, representing the excellent discipline your children are under—to let them watch your eating and not rebel against your authority. They do rebel. They are young now, but you continue this kind of discipline and you will spoil your authority.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 12

Then again, you seem to fear when your children are at the table, that they will not eat enough, and urge them to eat and to drink. You need not have the slightest concern and show the anxiety you have manifested lest they should not eat sufficiently. Their little stomachs are small and cannot hold a large amount. Better far let them have three meals than two for this reason. You let them have a large amount of food at one meal. The foundation is being laid for distention of the stomach, which results in dyspepsia.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 13

To eat and to drink that which is not agreeable to them is not wisdom. Again, be sure and set before them the very food you desire they shall eat. That which is of a healthful quality of food for them is healthful for you, but the quantity of even healthful food should be carefully studied, [so as] not to introduce into the stomach too large a quantity at one meal. We must ourselves be temperate in all things if we would give the proper lessons to our children. When they are older, any inconsideration on your part is marked.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 14

But I am sure, from the light given me of God, the less excitement there is brought into childhood's life and experience, the better for the children. The custom of having little children attend morning religious services is not wisdom. The breath of the company assembled is [not] free of disease. The kissing of children should be strictly forbidden, for disease is communicated in this way. I have had these cautions given to me again and again. Their attending meetings very young, the confinement, breathing impure air exhaled from the lungs and bodies, is a tax to them and produces a hatred of the meetings in time. I decided to leave my children at home, under a wise instructor, for their present and future good. [I did] not compel them to travel to see many people and be brought to the notice of people, for all feel that they must give attention to little children, and they learn to love to be noticed, praised, and petted.⁴*LtMs, Lt 12, 1884, par. 15*

Lt 13, 1884

Butler, George I.

Healdsburg, California

January 2, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother Butler:

I received a letter yesterday from Sister Addie Bowen stating that Sister Whitney's health was failing, and they desired her or Sister Philips to come with you to Switzerland.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 1

Now, as my advise has been asked, I do not feel free to remain silent. I do not feel that the move would be in God's order. Sister Bowen and Sister Philips have important branches of the work. It has taken quite a lengthy experience to fit them to do the work they are now engaged in. Brother Buel Whitney's absence is keenly felt, and to remove Sister Bowen does not to me seem to be in the order of God. The same in regard to Sister Philips. I think both these Sisters should not be removed from their station or position of trust.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 2

I know from what the Lord has shown me that there is quite a number of excellent girls, working girls in Europe, who cannot keep the Sabbath and work with unbelievers. Why not bring in and set to work some one or more of these girls? Why take away one or two who are doing acceptable work in the cause? If some girl must go let it be someone not filling important positions of trust. I cannot, with my present light, advise either of these to go. It is not as if there were no one from America there. There are Sister Martha Andrews, Mother Andrews, Edith Andrews; these, with the help that can be secured in England or Switzerland will supply them.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 3

Even if Sister Whitney is sick, with needed help, this is how the matter looks to me. I do not feel that the cause of God should suffer for the gratification of peculiar preferences or notions. I would not tear away one from the work of God to supply any lack of mine or through any selfish feelings of my own. The enemy is watching every opportunity to hinder the work in any department, and we must be prepared to not let the work suffer for any reason. I can see no need of Sister Whitney's calling for help from America. I know those who are sick should be tenderly cared for, but we must not carry our sympathies too far and lead us to extremes in these things. Will you carefully and prayerfully consider this matter and work to the point with an eye single to the glory of God? I see no special duty for these, either of them, to go, unless Brother [B. L.] Whitney needs some one to help him in the work. If this is the case, would not one in Europe who could translate, help him more than one from [America]?4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 4

All these things require prayerful consideration. We must not be too slow in our deliberations; while at the same time, we must not move impulsively, and in so doing, throw the work out of gear and perhaps introduce new, raw hands to do a work that they have not experience in. Let us consider all of these things with a single eye to the glory of God. We want to move just as God would have us. And we want His counsel and His presence in all our movements. I feel deeply our great need of workers, whichever way I may turn.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 5

I know that a constant, wiley foe is on our track, and he will improve every advantage we may give him to do his work of hindering, blocking the wheels, and tearing down.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 6

If you see good reasons that Addie Bowen should go, I will not say anything to hinder it. You may see reasons that I do not.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 7

I will write no more on this point now. I am very much engaged in completing an article in regard to South Lancaster and Nehemiah.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 8

I took cold on my journey and have been suffering with congestion of the lungs. It comes on about midnight. My lungs are very sore. They hurt me at every breath, but I am not discouraged.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 9

Brother and Sister Butler, I wish you a happy New Year. I wish Willie and Hiland a happy New Year. May you, my dear boys, at the commencement of this year, feel indeed that you are sons of God, adopted into the royal family, children of the heavenly King. Jesus loves you and will bless you if you will be obedient. It is well for you at the commencement of the year to examine closely the history of the year past. What advancement have you made? What portion of your character is defective? Wherein are you weakest? To what extent are you able to bear burdens, to deny self, to take up your God-given responsibilities and go forward with manly courage and help these upon whom you lean and who may lean upon you? Take time to review the life calmly, critically. Self-cultivation by direct effort will be of the highest value to you. You may master difficulties. You may become strong in purpose and in principle like Joseph and like Daniel. May your character be like theirs, you cultivating a lofty, noble purpose. Let not the ruling power of your heart be vanity, pride, and love of approbation, but let it be to be good and do good.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 10

The love of Jesus in the soul will be seen in the life in properly discharging your duty in this life, which will give you a fitness for the future life. Your power for usefulness, you can scarcely grasp. If you are seeking earnestly to establish a character which Jesus shall approve, you will be doing good to others. All your plans will probably fail unless you are sustained by motives higher than any which can be drawn from earth. To do and to suffer for Christ's sake softens every trial, sanctifies every pursuit, and gives peace and rest in Jesus Christ. Cultivate simplicity in Jesus and that piety which springs from faith in Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 11

And again I wish you a happy New Year.4LtMs, Lt 13, 1884, par. 12

Lt 14, 1884

Newton, Brother and Sister

Crystal Springs, St. Helena, California

January 18, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in UL 32.

Dear Brother and Sister Newton:

I wish to present before you the case of your sister, Sister Golden. She is poor and has an invalid daughter dependent upon her. She has worked altogether too hard for her own and her sick one's support. She can no longer work to earn means. She is supported partly by the church and partly by the town. I now ask you to be at least as kind to your own sister as are those to whom she can claim no relationship.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 1

Brother Newton, it is a duty resting upon you as a man, and doubly so as a Christian, to support your sister in her poverty. Let not the books of heaven show a neglect on your part to do your duty. I know that departure from God has a tendency to make the heart very unimpressible. I am sorry, very sorry, that Sister Newton, whom I have loved, has let the love of the world, love of self, selfishness, make her heart as hard as a stone; but, my brother, this does not make it necessary for you to be the same—to neglect your own flesh and blood and transgress the law of God. “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all the mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.” Luke 10:27. Here is one nearer than your neighbor, one who has claims upon you. Are you doing your duty to your sister? Remember that the books of heaven will show your neglect.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 2

I am now taking care of my husband's sister. She lives in a house which I bought for her in Battle Creek at a cost of one thousand dollars. She occupies a part of the house; the other part is rented for one dollar per week, which she receives toward her support. I pay the taxes. I have my own sister who is sick and helpless. I send her about ten dollars every month to help her in her affliction.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 3

My brother, you and your wife have everything comfortable; do not forget the poor and needy. Do not awaken the wrath of God against you to deprive you of health and of property because you shut up your bowels of compassion against your own relatives. You can do, and ought to do, something every month for your sister. If you will, you can send her means and never miss it. If Sister Newton feels no burden in this direction, she ought not hinder you from doing your duty.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 4

Sister Golden owes me one hundred and fifty dollars on her place besides the interest for several years. I now need this money. If you will settle the bill, I will give her the interest.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 5

I have supported one or two families besides my own for several years and think it my duty. We are commanded to be compassionate unto all, but especially to them that are of the household of faith. I have written an article for our papers concerning this subject. Read it carefully and thoroughly, and then see if, in the light of the law of God you can plead guiltless. See Deuteronomy 15:7-11.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 6

Will you take your Bible, Sister Newton, and search out carefully the texts bearing upon this subject? The Lord has shown me that you were far separated from Him. Love of the world has eaten out the love of Christ and the love of the truth. You might now have been a woman of great usefulness, a co-laborer with Christ, a blessing to His cause, but the plague spot of ambition, self-indulgence, and pride has brought hardness of heart and blindness of mind. I greatly fear that your eyes will never be enlightened.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 7

Oh, I am sorry. I am sorry that Satan has used you as his agent to take a course which has proven the ruin of your children and which will prove the ruin of your husband, unless he shall break loose from the world and make a determined effort to be true to the claims of God.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 8

Brother Newton, love God above wife or children or property, and serve Him with your undivided affection. The question is, Will you obey God? Will you be earnest and sincere in your profession of faith, or will you be like the fruitless branch, dry and sapless, to be cut off as worthless?4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 9

Oh, how much the young need help from those older in experience, older in years! But they are led astray by the thousand arts of Satan which he has employed to make the way to destruction easy and inviting. It has been, and still, is the study of thousands from generation to generation to increase the attractions of the broad road and to allure multitudes to walk therein. Satan laid the road and ever since it was cast up, he has been employing his own powers, and all who would lend him their services, to win others from the path of holiness and truth. He employs every talent that he can control to make the way to hell more attractive.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 10

Luther's abilities, used for God, would have brought many souls from darkness to light. He would today have been one of God's workman to minister to others; but the enemy of righteousness cast his snares about the mother, divorced her from God, and linked her to his side to work for him. In this work Satan has exulted. Oh, how much one strong, firm, unconsecrated woman can do on the wrong side! Pride, unsanctified reason, riches, power, genius, and pleasing address are enlisted in the work of making the broad road seem the way to life.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 11

God help you, Brother Newton, not to make shipwreck of faith. If you continue to pursue the course you have taken, you will go farther and farther into darkness, as your wife has done, and will set darkness for light and light for darkness. You will have the same carnal security, the same iron determination to follow your own judgment at the risk of losing eternal riches.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 12

God meant that your family should be blended into one symmetrical crown of beauty, to be His chosen, His beloved. But the temptation came in the form of worldly ambition. A choice made in the wrong direction has set them in different paths. From slight beginnings they have gone to great extremes, until the gulf which separates them from God and the truth seems almost impassable. The first step taken in the wrong direction might have been prevented by the mother. But the world was her idol, the god she has worshiped with a determined zeal that shows the fascinating power of Satan. How many hundreds of souls might now have been wholly on the Lord's side had not mothers blocked the way with their unconsecrated lives, their worldly ambition!4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 13

It seemed to Eve a small matter to pluck of the forbidden tree; the fruit was pleasant to the eye and to the taste and seemed desirable to make one wise. But what terrible results! It was not a small matter to thus forfeit her allegiance to God. It opened the flood gates of woe to our world. Oh, the amount of evil which will come from one false step! Not to the earth must our eyes be fixed, but upward to heaven. We must pass through dangers and difficulties, making advances at every step, gaining victories in every conflict, rising still higher and higher; the air becomes purer as the soul is brought nearer to heaven. The earth holds no attractions now. The heavenly landscape opens with clearness and beauty. The Christian sees the crown, the white robe, the harp, the palm branch of victory; immortality is within his reach. Now the earth sinks out of sight.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 14

Let no one trifle with conscience as Sister Newton has done. God's Spirit still strives with her; but I fear that conscience is too much blunted to feel the influence of the Spirit. If we lose everything else, we should keep conscience pure and sensitive. When asked to go where there is the least danger of offending God, doing that which you cannot do with a pure conscience, do not fear or hesitate. Look the tempter firmly in the face and say, No; I will not imperil my soul for any worldly attraction. I love and fear God. I will not venture to dishonor or disobey Him for the riches of the world or the love and favor of a host of worldly relatives. I love Jesus who died for me. He has bought me.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 15

I am the purchase of His blood. I will be true to His claims, and my example shall never be an excuse for any to turn from the straight path of duty. I will not be the servant of Satan and of sin. My life shall be such as to leave a bright track heavenward.4LtMs, Lt 14,

1884, par. 16

A single word for God, a firm, silent resistance even, would save not only your souls, but hundreds of others.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 17

Brother Newton, you are asleep when you should be watching. The bewitching power of Satan has held you and led you into temptation. How many are misled by the demons of darkness when they are not watching unto prayer. The spirit of worldliness and love of gain have perverted your senses. You have none too much time to make earnest efforts for eternal life.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 18

I would plead with your wife, but this is useless. No words from my lips or from my pen will break through the crust of worldliness and unsanctified worldly policy. God's power may reach her and tear off from her the garments of self-righteousness and bring her to the feet of Jesus. But God alone can do this.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 19

The time has come when every soul must stand or fall according to his own merits. A few righteous acts, a few good impulses, may be presented to the mind as evidences of righteousness, but God requires the whole heart. He will accept no divided affections. The whole being must be given to Him, or He will not receive the offering.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 20

We must now be learning the lessons of faith if we would stand in that time of trouble which is coming upon all the world to try them who dwell upon the face of the earth. We must have the courage of heroes and the faith of martyrs.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 21

Do not turn away from the instructions and admonitions of God's servants who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. Do not look for guidance to men or women whose wisdom is of the world, whose skill and adaptability is for worldly advantage, for these will soon feel the horrors of despair which will find no relief, no comfort, no hope. They forsook the plain path of duty, of trust in God, of prayer, faith, and humble obedience.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 22

Brother Newton, come out wholly on the Lord's side and do your work for time and for eternity. Move now, before it is too late. Sell off part of your farm. Sell that ye have and give alms. Provide yourselves bags that wax not old, a treasure in the heavens. I will make this appeal to you for Christ's sake.⁴*LtMs, Lt 14, 1884, par. 23*

Lt 15, 1884

Rue, Brother and Sister

Healdsburg, California

January 20, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother and Sister Rue:

I am much troubled in regard to you both because there is serious danger of misconceived opinions that will lead to great unhappiness. You are both at fault. You need to cultivate love for each other. Brother Rue, you are too closely bound up in yourself. Those little attentions that a woman prizes, it is not natural for you to give.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 1

Your mother sees nought but perfection in you and will be much inclined to be sharp and critical of your wife, and be strict to mark any want of devotion and attention from her to you. But she will not, in her selfish love, be as ready to see those things that need to be corrected in your own course of action.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 2

Your wife's taste and inclinations, her education and training, are different from Brother Rue's. She has inclinations and preferences of her own. Although she should be ready to yield them to the husband, he should, in turn, yield his preferences to her. There should be a constant effort to be of one mind and of one soul.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 3

Brother Rue, give your wife words of tenderness and love. Do not be exacting. You speak and act at times in an unreasonable manner calculated to wean the affections of your wife from you. You cannot, either of you, put down the will of the other by firmness or unkindness. All this had better be avoided. The wife appreciates sympathy and love expressed, love demonstrated. Self-will will not bring to you the firm affections of your wife.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par.

4

You each have a tendency to love yourselves. Hulda has a wealth of affection but it is difficult for this affection to live in an uncongenial atmosphere. It is in your power, Brother Rue, to change the atmosphere. Hereditary traits of selfishness may overbear other excellent qualities and therefore should be watched and corrected.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 5

This is not the work of a moment but that of a whole lifetime. The selfishness of one or both will show itself. It may be in small matters which are a grief to the other—but this close relationship with each other should make them mutually forbearing toward each other. Love will die a natural death unless it is cultivated. It is not a small matter for two minds to be brought into such close relationship with each other by the most sacred vows. You both claim to be Christians. You are then to be governed by religious principles in all your conduct toward each other.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 6

Brother Rue, you are too cold and reserved in your affections. If you want to keep the love of your wife alive for you, you must keep your love, both by expression and deeds, alive for her, else you will drift apart in your sympathies and in your tastes and habits. You need to think less of yourself and appreciate your wife, who has superior qualities but is not free from vanity and self-love. You are bound to each other, and your two dear children strengthen and treble the bands that unite you together.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 7

How few realize these responsibilities of so weighty a character. Put religion into your life. Live it daily. Breathe in the atmosphere of unselfish love for the sake of your little ones.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 8

Be earnestly mild, kindly courteous to each other; diligently perform your everyday duties as in the sight of God. You will then love each other and you will be forgetful of self in seeking to make each other happy.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 9

Let not your mother exalt your virtues. Let not yourself think that there is nothing for you in the way of reform. You have habits to correct you have changes to make to bring pleasantness, praise of your wife, into your daily life and exalt her virtues, and not in any way cultivate a cold, harsh, unloveable spirit. Shun the evil of self-love. There is no way of retaining the love of God and the love of your wife except by ceasing to make yourself a center. Deny yourself. Cultivate pleasantness. Act from high and holy motives. You two will certainly drift apart unless you change your course of action towards each other and have deference and respect for one another.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 10

Seek to be heavenly minded, to be pure, circumspect. Brother Rue, you need more warmth of love. May the Lord bind your hearts together in the sacred bonds of His holy love. If you love God supremely, you will love each other. You will in thoughts, words, and actions show respect and love for each other and express it. And let no one have the least influence over you to dim or to chill this love of heavenly origin. You must be at agreement. "If two of you agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done of my heavenly Father." [Matthew 18:19.] Precious promise!4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 11

Your children, you are to guide in the path of righteousness. You are to correct them if they are wrong and help them with unselfish interest to overcome, yourselves appreciating the words of Jesus, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." [Matthew 5:8.] Sin hath no dominion over the pure in heart. They have laid aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset them. They love God with all the heart. I will not write further to you now, but I entreat of you to make yourselves a necessity to each other. If you would be happy, bind your hearts together by the silken cords of love, and the Lord will bless you.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 12

Brother Rue, you need encouragement to love your wife, to cherish her. Unless you shall be less selfish and more tender and affectionate, your wife, who is naturally affectionate, will be constantly in danger of seeking that love and appreciation that you do not give her. If you want to quench out of her heart the last spark of love, then be cold and silent. Give her no words of praise. Just let your heart be open to tenderness, to love; this will be no sign of weakness. If your mother should be less critical, if you should be less critical and praise more, it will be for the happiness of you all.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 13

You have been made aware of your wife's danger. Help her to overcome all that has bewildered her senses and perverted her ideas. I know that you need more tender love in order to save your wife from imperiling her soul. The wife should cultivate devotion to her husband, and the husband should cultivate devotion to his wife, both acting your part nobly. Will you be faithful to the holy trust you have taken upon yourselves, and will you bring in all that fine grain of gentleness and protecting love that a woman's heart requires?4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 14

Will you cherish her happiness as a sacred jewel? "Believeth all things, hopeth all things, beareth all things." [1 Corinthians 13:7.] Help her study how you can help her to build up herself in her God-given womanhood. Encourage her confiding love. Be all and all to each other. Give endearing attentions to each other. Speak no sharp, cold, unsympathizing words that sting like an arrow.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 15

God wants you both to make improvements. You are both under the most solemn obligations to take a sacred interest in each other and make personal sacrifices for each other. You must love as Christ loved His church when He gave Himself for it. This love implies the utmost gentleness in all your associations. One may be faithful and true to the marriage vows, and yet each love—and he may have love—and fail to express affection in words and deeds. Such cannot satisfy the heart of a loving woman. Let there be no display of fretfulness or impatience under any circumstances. Let the sweetness of Christ into the life and practice love.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 16

I leave these words with you, for I love and respect you both. Make your life fragrant with good works. Let there be calm deliberation in the control and government of your children. Decide that no one shall in the least manner interfere in this solemn, sacred responsibility. Never repulse your wife's affections. Never allow yourself to seem cold and unimpressible when she would be affectionate. And may the dear Jesus make your path very plain is my most earnest desire.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1884, par. 17

Lt 16, 1884

St. John, Brother

Healdsburg, California

March 26, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother St. John:

I received your letter in reference to the doctor and his wife. I will take with you the responsibility of encouraging their coming to this coast. Their wages are very moderate, and this is an object with the institution now. Your plans to have them go to the sanitarium awhile are good. But again, I think the sooner they come, the better it will be for our institution here. I have no time to write more now.⁴*LtMs, Lt 16, 1884, par. 1*

Lt 17, 1884

Hemstreet, Brother and Sister

Oakland, California

April 29, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother and Sister Hemstreet:

I wanted to see you both together before I left Healdsburg, but I was too weak to have the conversation with you [that] I knew it was my duty to have when I was able.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 1

I have not felt that you have dealt as you should with me. The condition of my place when you left it was very bad, and my heart was sick at the sight of things. You were your own servant. You had no one to say to you to do this or do that. You did just as you pleased. Those who, from time to time, were at my place stated to me that you were not the man for the place, for you left everything in a very slack, loose way. You frequently lay in bed until seven and frequently eight in the morning and your time was not well put in. But I determined to have no words or feelings over the matter. You cut down some trees and you used the wood yourself, but that time was charged to me.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 2

Now when I look to see how much you accomplished for the rent ($15.00 per month) after I ceased to pay your wages, I see but very little you have done. I should not have said you must move from the place, for I felt sympathy and pity for you. [But] when you proposed to move yourself, I was relieved of a great load. I had no hope of selling the place while you were on it. I shall never feel that you have done faithful work and put in your time as faithfully as you would if hired to do a day's work now for strangers.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 3

I should not mention this but for your own good. You recommended yourself highly as one who would know how to take care and keep up a place, but you did not do it. I feel that I have paid you more money for your work than your labor was worth. Why I write to you now is that I feel sad over these things, because I know that unless you shall be more thorough, more faithful to others than you have been to me you will injure your own soul. There is nothing in the religion of Jesus Christ that will warrant or excuse the least unfaithfulness in a workman and that will excuse slackness and carelessness and untidiness. You have not done by me that which you promised to do. I have had just about as much care and worriment over that place—yes, more than if you had not been on it. When I think of the money I laid out on that place for labor put on it, for the same amount of money that I paid you, much more should have been accomplished. I cannot see anything that I have failed in my duty to you, unless it was to talk to you faithfully in regard to slack habits. It is not right. It is not as God would have it. You will have to correct these slack, untidy, uncleanly habits, or you will not have the favor of God.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 4

Time is money. If you do not make a good use of your time, if you are not in the habit of getting up early and being at your business in the morning you lose hours that might be spent in a profitable manner. You may reckon up how much time is lost in bed or in some easy, careless way through the day—perhaps nothing less than two to four hours a day. If you were working for yourself these hours reckoned up by the weeks and months and years [would be] a great loss.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 5

You can ill afford it. If working for me, or any one, it is no less so. If you have done no better for others than you have for me you have made them suffer loss. Such things I cannot feel are right.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 6

I am convinced that had you been diligent, not slothful in business, you would not today be without a home. You have managed badly for yourself. You may have managed as well for me as you have done for yourself but the loss you have sustained in your easy, careless neglect in the little things, as well as the larger matters, has left you at your age without a home, with a large family of children.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 7

Now, I feel deep pity for you, and I do not feel clear before God

unless I tell you frankly you are not right. Your management is not right. You need to correct your habits and use wisely your time if you expect the approval of God and [to] hear at last the “well done, good and faithful servant.” [Matthew 25:23.] Will you please look carefully and prayerfully over this matter? Your habits have so long been slack and careless and negligent, you do not see and sense it yourselves, but God is not pleased with you in these things. I cannot longer hold my peace. If you are as unfaithful in the service of God as you have been in temporal things, I fear you will be weighed in the balance and found wanting. You are kind-hearted and have had some burdens to bear that you should not have taken on because you were unable but this will not excuse the defects that must be corrected. One hundred dollars I have had to expand on my house, inside and out to put it in a presentable condition, as good as when you went into the house. We left the house clean. Things inside and out were in a far better condition when you went on the place than when you left it. This is not as it should be. I do not feel satisfied.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 8

You made a plain statement in regard to your horse that it was worth $90.00. This was considered, by those who saw it, a larger price by ten or twenty dollars than you could sell the horse for when the horse was, for no fault of mine, injured on my hands. I told you you should not lose anything by the horse. I asked you the value of the horse. If you had said eighty dollars I should have felt that it was right. When you said $100.00, I felt that that was not right, that there was in you a spirit to take advantage of the circumstances because you could do this. This I did not think was fair dealing, but I have become used to just such things among my brethren. They seem to think that Sister White has means and it is right to make all out of her they can. I have borne it, but I think you have not any reason to feel that you have had a hard chance. If you have you have, only yourselves to blame. I was not to blame for your sickness in your family, which made it hard for you. God has not bound upon you these heavy burdens. You have taken this burden upon yourselves.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 9

When at Healdsburg camp meeting, I remembered some things but could not gather them [as] clearly as I wished to before the engagement was entered into in regard to my place. I was told that you had managed such places, knew just what should be done, but I felt not clear. Willie thought that it must be [that] you would be just the man for the place for you were highly recommended. Still I did not want to leave my house, [which] I had just cleaned and at considerable cost placed in a wholesome condition again, misused as it had been. But while the meetings in the winter were held at Healdsburg, then the matter was all clear before me—your past, your present state. I could not see that anything could be done to better things and I let them go—but feeling that when a favorable opportunity presented I would lay these things before you.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 10

You have a work to do for yourselves or you will be made to suffer more keenly than you have done the consequences of your own course of action. When these things came vividly to my mind last winter, I felt glad that it was not an unbeliever whose place you had rented for I could bear it better than others.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 11

I was shown that you have not felt that it was a part of your religion to be economical of time, to plan your work wisely and to make your time tell to the best account. When you had things, you did not manifest zeal and diligence to take care of these things you did have. Self-indulgence and an easy, careless neglect have lost for you property which today might be yours if you had worked and used the intelligence God has given you.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 12

There is a careless abandonment of temporal things that is against you. Temporal concerns are a cross to some who are religiously inclined, but Christianity was never designed to encourage idleness or any neglect. While we are still in the world, although not of it, we are to be “not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.” [Romans 12:11.] The great question for you to settle is how you may [serve the Lord].4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 13

I told you when you went on the place you must not let your cattle into where my trees were planted but this you did, with the assurance to me that it would do no harm, [that] the cattle would not hurt anything.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 14

You stated the children would watch them. I knew that this was doing me a wrong. You ought not to have done thus to your own property. It is a careless, easy, thoughtless neglect of my property. There are many trees injured in my orchard. Every tree is money to me. But it is just such things that have taken money out of your pocket. It is just such things that were done by my tenant before that worked me out of an orchard that might have been bearing now and in good order. I consider, and I think every one who is acquainted with the matter will consider the same, that you have not done justice by me in the care of my place.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 15

I would have just as freely offered you $30.00 a month or more as [J. A.] Burgess if I had any courage you would keep things up, but your time that I had paid you for, you had not well put in, and I do not feel that you have done me justice. These things God sees, and they are registered in the books of heaven.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 16

Another matter: your calf was offered for $20.00. Your neighbors said $15.00 was all that it was worth. I saw the calf about the premises. The neighbors said you ought to take it away. I offered you just $5.00 more than I considered that calf was worth because it was wanted to the place and you were a poor man. But I hear that you now have come up $5. All right! If you can get the $25.00, I shall be glad to have you, but this manner of dealing does not carry a right appearance. It has seemed to me that you thought I could command money readily and in our deal you would get all that you could possibly get. I do not enjoy this appearance very much but I will not have unkind feelings and I open these matters before you that you may see and understand the matter. I do not want the calf. I do not want the cow. I do not want the horse, only must take it and shall pay you all you ask if it is $100.00. And then the responsibility will rest upon you. I thought, from some remarks made by Bro. Waggoner that you thought I did not pay you enough for your cow. I paid you all I thought the cow was worth and, I think, just $10.00 more than it was worth. And I have had only one mind about the matter from the first. If you have thought I have taken advantage of you in any particular, I will restore to you four-fold.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 17

When you made the remarks you did in regard to removing the dressing from the farm, with the remarks that it was all you had taken off from the farm, I was convinced you regarded the whole thing in the light as though you were doing me a favor, when I have felt for a whole year burdened and distressed that you were doing me a positive injury every week you remained on the place.⁴*LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 18*

Everything about the place looked as if things were going to loose ends and had a run-down condition. I do not want to take one penny's worth of advantage of you, [and] I want you to deal only fairly and squarely with me. As it is, I have thought it wisdom that we should have no deal with one another. I decided not to do this. This will close a door of temptation to you.⁴*LtMs, Lt 17, 1884, par. 19*

Lt 18, 1884

Hemstreet, Brother and Sister

Oakland, California

April 30, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother and Sister Hemstreet:

When I saw you at the Healdsburg camp meeting I remembered your countenances and that your case had been presented before me with the cases of many others who were unfortunate because of their lack of management. At the very time when you should be diligently attending to your business, you neglected it. And losses occurred that need not to have been if there had been thoughtful care to save, to plan, and to manage to place your family where they would not suffer for the comforts or necessaries of life. It was unwise stewardship that has left your family without a home. God did not want it thus, but He did not work a miracle to counteract your own mismanagement. God has not been pleased with you increasing your family as you have done, with no better prospect to support them, to educate them, and to give them the advantages they ought to have.4LtMs, Lt 18, 1884, par. 1

The wife and mother has not had the advantages she should have had. She has had a hard time, and she has weaknesses and infirmities brought upon her by this that might have had been avoided with due consideration.4LtMs, Lt 18, 1884, par. 2

You should regulate your business so as to not let it come in between your soul and your duty to God, that you may maintain the purity of your faith and Christian character, while all temporal interests are held in subjection to the higher claims of the gospel. This matter should be examined in the light of the teachings of God's word.4LtMs, Lt 18, 1884, par. 3

Religion requires diligence in business. No precious moments are to be idled away. You are not a lazy man, but you are no manager.

You do not gather up the fragments of time. You need to time your labor with thoughtful care to make it productive. Your hands must be guided by thoughtful brains. Thoughtful care, correct application of diligence and care at the right time would have saved you losses on every hand. Many of your losses have been wholly through your own neglect. 4LtMs, Lt 18, 1884, par. 4

You have not been thorough and diligent to preserve what you already had. Diligence at the proper time will secure the best of results. “Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.” Proverbs 22:29. Let not your mind drop into the mistake many make that in order to be a Christian you must neglect the duties that devolve on you to be done. Your religion requires that you should make the most of your opportunities for the comfort of your family as well as for the glory of God. Your slack habits God is not pleased with. If you carefully husband the moments, you will accomplish far more than you will by indulging yourself in a careless, indolent, spendthrift way at sometimes, and then hurried at other times—never getting ahead. It is right that we should have interest in religious things but this will not unfit us for diligent labor. Will you consider these things? You need to overcome slack and untidy habits. God is not pleased with these things. You are giving a stamp of character to your children in these things not pleasing to God. The Lord would have you orderly, neat and cleanly and teach these lessons to your children as a part of their education. A neglect of the commonest duties of life has made you many losses. 4LtMs, Lt 18, 1884, par. 5

May the Lord help you to see these things and correct them in order for you to be fit for those mansions Jesus has gone to prepare for those who love Him. These defects in our character must be overcome. 4LtMs, Lt 18, 1884, par. 6

Lt 19, 1884

Smith, Brother and Sister [Uriah]

Walla Walla, Washington Territory

June 15, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 21MR 202-205.

Dear Brother and Sister Smith:

Our meeting is nearly closed in this place. We are encamped in a cottonwood grove in a very pleasant, retired spot, although it is only a few minutes' walk to the business part of the city. There is a swift running stream of clear water that half encircles the camp. We are on the bank of the stream very pleasantly located. We have a large tent fifteen by twenty-two. Professor [Sidney] Brownsberger and Willie [White] occupy one end of the tent; Sister Ings and I, the other end. We have the best arrangement for meals and for order we have had on any encampment. And we needed good food.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 1

We have had an amount of the hardest kind of labor. Brother Van Horn did not bring the people up to do their duty, and as he was president of both conferences, the work devolving upon him left undone, left both conferences in a bad condition. For anyone to work after him (because he is one of the ablest preachers we have) —when a man with less preaching talent but with financial ability should come in there—bringing up the work to a healthful condition was not so easy.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 2

Bro. and Sr. Colcord came as workers and for the first year they did quite well, but after that the Milton Church ran things and did not magnify his office. They would criticize his preaching and dictate to him until he was manipulated like a ball of putty. He was president only in name, and he lost his courage and his manhood and had no moral backbone, and under this management everything in the conference ran down. And when [J. O.] Corliss was sent here to help them, they put him through the picking machine until his courage was about gone.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 3

Bro. [W. L.] Raymond has never been in harmony with his brethren. He has been independent, self-conceited, but carries such an appearance of humility that nearly all believed him to be the humblest of men. He was talking against the General Conference and finding fault with the men in responsible positions. He had some new light on Revelation. Was saying your views on two or three points were incorrect. He was discouraging some from canvassing for Daniel and Revelation. 4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 4

How [we] dreaded to touch this case, for the moment we should take hold of this matter, there would be trouble in the camp. We prayed over the matter. We had all the ministers and the leading men in the conference come into our tent each morning and had special seasons of prayer. The Lord blest us abundantly, but these men from Milton who had run things, the president and all, thought they would run us, and they set at the work most decidedly, telling us we ought to do this and that and preach this and that. But we heard them respectfully and preached the Word of the Lord without any reference to their suggestions. I entered upon my labors Friday in the early morning meeting. I spoke as the Lord bid me, which [made] them somewhat uneasy. 4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 5

I took some of our brethren aside in our tent and read the matter I had written three years ago in regard to their course. They had pledged to the General Conference and taken it all back again. I read to them straight, clear, and pointed testimonies but here was the trouble: they had felt no obligation to believe the Testimonies. Bro. Nichols had been one of the Marion party when he lived in LaPorte, Iowa, and what to do with these folks was a mystery. There was no minister or his message [that] they respected above their own judgment. How to bring anything to bear upon them was the question. 4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 6

We could only pray and I work for them as though they did believe every word of testimony, and yet so cautious as though they were unbelievers. It was in my mind day and night—a portion of the Lord's prayer—"Thine is the power and the glory." [Matthew 6:13.] God's power could come to us and we could work only in faith, believing that the Lord would help us. Just as soon as we preached the plain principles of truth, there was a buzzing in the camp like a swarm of bees. They said Elder Waggoner and I were clubbing them. They did not want that kind of preaching.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 7

Sabbath morning early I went into meeting, and the Lord gave me a testimony directly to them, all unexpected to me. I poured it out upon them, showing them that the Lord sent His ministers with a message, and the message they brought was the very means God had ordained to reach them, but they felt at liberty to pick it in pieces and make of none effect the Word of God. They had run over Bro. Colcord and Van Horn, but they must hear the words from God we brought them. We did not propose to ask them what we should present before them. We came to bring the message of God to them, and we should not abate one word of the testimony given to please any of them. This had already been done until they felt at liberty to sit in judgment upon every sermon preached. We did not come to have them preach to us, but we came with a message to them, and we should give them the word of the Lord.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 8

I can tell you there was great astonishment and marveling that I dared to speak to them thus. Bro. Nichols would order the ministers as though he knew all about the work. Sabbath forenoon the Lord helped Bro. Waggoner to preach with power. In the afternoon, He helped me to speak. We dealt on general principles.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 9

Bro. [W. L.] Raymond was going to go right away from the camp. He said we were clubbing him. I sent for him. I read to him. I talked with him. I told him that when my brethren, as did Bro. Owen, came up with new light, he almost made me have an ague chill, for I knew it was a device of Satan which no one could understand although a man declare it unto them. It is a sure case that Satan throws a bewitching power into their new views they take with minds, although the arguments are as clear as mud, disjointed [and] out of harmony with the message. Well, this talk helped the man. He is one of these studying men like Bro. Edson but with a firm, determined purpose with such a precious talent with it as a helper, ready to do anything with ready tact and apparent martyr-like humility.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 10

But the snare was broken. Bro. [W. L.] Raymond was balanced in the right direction once more where he could be helped. It will take time to work him out all clear.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 11

Well now, the work must be carried on for others, and we have been diligent, preaching and praying and talking upon general principles. They would confess a little and scold a good deal and find fault and pick flaws, but we worked for them all the stronger. We told them we had come here to help them, and we were determined to work till we did help them.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 12

We have had excellent meetings all through. All seemed to enjoy the meetings but these criticizers, and we were so close upon them for the work they had done they did not like it at all. One Brother says, "I felt good when I came to the meeting but I do not feel so good now. I begin to see, brethren, we have been wrong and done wrong."4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 13

We kept at work. One part [of] the morning meeting we would declare the true condition of these leading men; then we would change the exercises and have a meeting, calling the wrong forward, laboring for them, praying with them; and there were their own children we labored for, and we would have a most remarkable meeting. The Spirit of the Lord was manifested. Then these men would half confess and bear good testimonies, but the grumbling and criticism were in them and they could not keep it from breaking out. The next meeting would be discourses on general principles, bringing the truth to bear upon these men.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 14

Sabbath, June 14. We had meetings long to be remembered. Sabbath forenoon Bro. [J. N.] Loughborough talked. I talked in the afternoon. The Lord helped me. I then called them forward. Thirty-five responded. They were mostly young men and women, and old men and women. We had a most precious meeting. Some who had left the truth came back with repentance and confession. Many were starting for the first time. The Lord was here Himself. This seemed to break down the prejudice, and melting testimonies were borne. We had a recess and then began again, and the good work went on.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 15

I forgot to say, Friday afternoon I read important matter written three years ago. This was acknowledged to be of God. The testimonies were accepted heartily and confessions made of great value to the wrong doer.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 16

We can say the Lord is giving us precious victory but it has been a hard battle from the very first. God has been giving me strength every day. I was very feeble when I left Oakland, so weak I could scarcely stand alone, but I have been receiving strength from the first day I bore my testimony. I believe it was right I came here.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1884, par. 17

Lt 19a, 1884

Haskell, S. N.

[Walla Walla, Washington Territory]

June 10, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 21MR 198-201.

[To Elder Haskell:]

[First page missing] ... But as we desire to let our light shine forth to the world, we concluded to put it on a candlestick that it may give light to all that are in the house. We decided to try to get a place in West Portland, if we failed in this, to try East Portland. We learned that we could not get the place in West Portland, so have secured a good, prominent ground in East Portland. We sent Elder [J. N.] Loughborough up to Salem to visit all the church [members] and get the people out to Portland convocation meeting. Bro. Ings was to remain with Bro. Boyd to fit up the grounds and canvass, preparatory to the meetings. 4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 1

Elder Loughborough came in this morning at half past five o'clock. The cars were delayed five hours. A long rail road bridge took fire in the center and burned out two sections, but forty hands made quick work in preparing a passage for the cars. 4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 2

The enemy is at work through different ones to block the wheels of progress. Elder [W. L.] Raymond has been doing a bad work in complaining of all the leaders and finding fault with the General Conference, the building of churches and schoolhouses. He is a man that can do much harm because he has good traits of character and is of ready tact as a helper. But the Lord understands it all, and He will work for His people that they shall not be confused or confounded. 4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 3

Elder Loughborough says these whom Barnes has had an influence over are getting their eyes open. He wrote to the Marion paper that if a man could be sent here, they would sweep in the whole of Milton church. That man will be with Barnes at the camp meeting, it is stated. We shall go straight ahead doing our work and make no reference to these rebels. We hope to see the Lord at work at these meetings and great good done.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 4

We have the camp located just in the suburbs of Walla Walla. It is a good location, half encircled with a swift-running stream of pure, soft water in a grove of cottonwood trees. There is, Willie [White] states, a much larger turnout than they had last year.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 5

We may expect Satan will work with might and power to hold the people in darkness, to confuse them with the ideas of men like [W. L.] Raymond, but we hope he will be thoroughly converted before this meeting shall close. Our trust is not in the number of ministers but in the presence of Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 6

How my heart has yearned to meet our brethren in their yearly gatherings East. Sometimes I think I must meet with them, then again I am sure it cannot be my duty. The visit East was a financial loss to me. This is nothing, but the book has been hindered, for I have been greatly reduced in strength and could not write as I would. I attended ten days' meetings in Healdsburg, ten days' meetings in Oakland, ten days' meeting in camp in Los Angeles. All these, with my writing, were a great tax. I shall have to remain this side of the Rocky Mountains, and after my book is done, if possible, have a little change in traveling.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 7

My heart has been bad. A sense of suffocation, of general debility, keeps me where I am obliged to hold on to the promises with all my strength, and hang my helpless soul on Jesus Christ. Were it not for this, I should not venture out to labor at all. At Los Angeles I spoke six times at length, and in the morning meetings. I had the burden of testimony, the Spirit of the Lord rested upon me and sustained me every time I opened my lips.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 8

Brother Haskell, we must pray more in simple, humble contrition of soul. We must exercise faith, teach the people how to have faith. I long to speak to the people in the yearly meetings East. I long to tell them, "Behold Him, behold Him, the Man of Calvary, the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world." I long to tell the people that all the exalted privileges granted them, all the love and tender mercy of our God, all the warnings of God's messengers, all the labor and enlightenment of His grace through holy men, will not save one of them. They must save their own souls by their own righteousness.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 9

All the light of present truth will not prevent them from falling away from their exalted privilege and losing all they have once held sacred and valuable. It is necessary for them to be instant in prayer and to live a life of humiliation and constant, living faith. I want to say to them, "Your iniquities have separated you from your God, and your sins have hid His face from you." [Isaiah 59:2.] Your Maker has not forsaken you; Jesus has linked you by His own body to the Infinite One, and His faithfulness will never fail. His promises are more sure than the everlasting hills. But you have departed from God, you have forsaken the Fountain of living waters, [and] you have distrusted His love. You have had every spiritual advantage. The precious, clear light of truth has shone upon your pathway, but you have not rendered corresponding obedience and kept yourselves in the love of God. This very love which should have been a blessing has become a curse.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 10

We are to see fearfully trying times, but need not despond. Trust in the living God. They that fear the Lord and work righteousness, He will be to them as a pillar of fire by night and a pillar of cloud by day. I would tell them the most precious blessings and the most exalted privileges are prepared for and promised to them that love the truth and obey it in the love of it.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 11

But how many are transgressing His holy law which they profess to keep! How many do not according to the light given them! The blessings are changed into curses, and they do not know why they do not have spiritual sinew and muscle. They are always without spiritual moisture, dry and sapless. Their testimonies are backslidden reports, mournful recitals. Oh, God would have it otherwise. He has made every provision for them that they should have help and blessings and courage and faith, but they remain away from His presence. They will not come unto Him that He may give them life.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 12

Oh, how Jesus is grieved with the unbelief, the distrust, the want of gratitude, and the sinfulness of those who profess to be the advocates of the law of God! Will not this people understand [that through] their own course of worldliness, of selfishness, [they] have forfeited the mercies promised to the obedient? In view of the great benefits of the salvation brought to us through Jesus Christ, the whole heavenly host in the plains of Bethlehem broke forth into songs of praise saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men." Luke 2:14. Why is there not more praise and less complaining? Should not our hearts be filled with gratitude to God? If angels saw cause for anthems of praise, why should not the objects Christ came to save be filled with thankfulness? There "are given to us exceeding great and precious promises that by these we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." [2 Peter 1:4.] 4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 13

These precious promises are given us that we might receive and enjoy them. They are not given to us that we may reject them and refuse to accept their fulfilment. The grace of truth revealed to us is that we may be renewed in knowledge and true holiness and glorify God in our bodies and our spirits, which are His. The praise of God is to flow forth from His children and continually extend and increase in the earth. We are, every one [of us,] to know for ourselves that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth me, even me, from all unrighteousness. I, even I, may be holy in heart and in life and in all manner of conversation. These privileges were purchased for me by the blood of Christ and presented to me that Christ may not have died for me in vain. 4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 14

We cannot, [even] one of us, glorify God, only through the acceptance of the grace given us. We cannot keep His commandments, only as we improve the grace and truth given us for this purpose. Brother Haskell, we must come up upon higher, holier ground. We must lead the people step by step. We must teach the people to improve the talents God has given them. We do not sufficiently impress upon the ministers the importance of ministering as well as preaching. They do not half of them know what duties, what sacred responsibilities rest upon ministers to become acquainted with souls, to labor earnestly by personal effort for their salvation from house to house, coming close to hearts.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 15

Love for souls that Christ had will lead the minister to pray most earnestly for divine grace, will lead to importunate prayer. There is altogether too much sermonizing and too little ministering. We must work in wisdom, work with hearts imbued with the love of Jesus. Men without one particle of grace may preach a discourse, but men without grace will not be inclined to weep and to pray and seek to lead souls to the Lamb of God. It is this kind of labor the people need.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 16

We need now men who are acquainted with Jesus, men of faith, men of experience, men who will work for souls as they that must give an account. We have speakers but very few laborers. Teach the members of the church to be workers. Oh, that God would let His convicting, converting power come upon Sabbathkeepers, for many of them by experience know not if there be any Holy Ghost. Self has filled so large a place in their experience they know but little else than its gratification. May the Lord help us to do work—close, faithful, efficient work—for the Master, for all our work will bear the inspection of the Chief Shepherd. He will understand just how we have done our work. He will say, “Well done,” only to those who have done well. [Matthew 25:21.]4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 17

May the Lord bless you in all your labors, is my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 19a, 1884, par. 18

Lt 20, 1884

Smith, Uriah

East Portland, Oregon

June 27, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 20MR 356-360.

Dear Brother:

There is a matter that must have attention. There is a man by the name of J. N. Bunch laboring in the Missouri Conference. He is preaching. This man has no right to be engaged in this work at all. I fear he will leave a terrible stain upon the cause of God. I have been shown some things in regard to him which are of that character that makes him unworthy of confidence as a Christian. I do not know whom to write to, but I thought you might know who are the proper ones to be entrusted with this matter. But something ought to be done.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 1

I wrote to him while he was attending school at Healdsburg, stating to him that he had no duty in the line of teaching others the truth. His character was not of that stamp that he would honor the cause of God. He left soon for Oregon, then I saw his name in the report of labor as a worker in the cause. I will write this much to you, hoping that you will see that something is done in the matter. His course is very questionable. I shall write to him, but cannot for a little time.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 2

Our labor in both these conferences have been very, very hard. The mould that Elder Van Horn left upon these two conferences was of that character to make it exceedingly hard for any minister who should follow after him.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 3

It has been three years since I visited these conferences. The upper conference was a success. We found the spirit of faultfinding against the General Conference decisions and against them as a conference. We were able through God [to] break this up.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 4

Brother [W. L.] Raymond has done a work that was tearing down—new views after the order of the views Brother Owen presented to the council for examination. The same was done with Brother Raymond's views. A council heard his arguments and then wrote out their answer. He has consented to abide by the decision of his brethren.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 5

From that which the Lord has been pleased to show me, there will arise just such ones all along and many more of them claiming to have new light which is a side issue, an entering wedge. The widening will increase until there is a breach made between those who accept these views and those who believe the third's angel's message. Just as soon as these new ideas are accepted, then there will be [a] drawing away from those whom God has used in this work, for the mind begins to doubt and withdraw from the leaders because God has laid them aside and chosen more humble men to do His work. This is the only interpretation they can give to this matter, as the leaders do not see this important light.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 6

God is raising up a class to give the loud cry of the third angel's message. "Of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." [Acts 20:30.] It is Satan's object now to get up new theories to divert the mind from the true work and genuine message for this time. He stirs up minds to give false interpretations of Scripture, a spurious loud cry, that the real message will not have its effect when it does come. This is one of the greatest evidences that the loud cry will soon be heard and the earth will be lightened with the glory of God.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 7

The Lord gave me great power before the people on the Sabbath. About fifty came forward for prayers. Many of that number were seeking the Lord for the first time. Backsliders came back with confessions, well wet down with tears.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 8

Sunday I had great freedom in speaking upon temperance. The power of the subject was never seen and felt by me as upon this occasion. The people from the city listened attentively. Several unbelievers who have used tobacco since their youth have left it off and say they will not touch it [any] more. We left the ground, ten o'clock p.m., stepped on board the train, and were on our way for East Portland. Tuesday morning the cars stopped at Multnomah Falls for twenty minutes, that all the passengers who chose might ascend to have a clear view. I undertook to go and I would not go back. It was very steep. There would be steps made, then quite a distance zigzag, then more steps. This was repeated many times until we stood upon a [rustic] bridge made to bridge a chasm above the first fall. This is the Bridal Veil.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 9

The water pours from the top of a mountain about 900 feet high, and as the water descends, it breaks upon the jutting rocks, scattering off in beautiful spray. Here was the most beautiful sight to look upon. I would have enjoyed it could I have spent an entire day viewing this scene, but we were grateful for the few moments (although it cost laborious climbing) standing on the bridge made for this purpose to view this enchanting scene of nature—above us eight hundred feet the water rolling from the mountain tops, dashing upon the cliffs and rocks, throwing the water like a veil on every side, and below us this water accumulating from the flow above dashing in a larger fall over the rocks.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 10

This was the work of the great Master Artist, and we could but exclaim, “How wonderful are all Thy works, Lord God Almighty.” We feel subdued and awed in the presence of such manifestations of the great God. I thought of the psalmist who calls upon everything, animate and inanimate to join in one chorus of thanksgiving to God. He, thus calling upon the senseless and irrational, is the most powerful rebuke to those blessed with intelligence if their souls do not glow and their lips proclaim the majesty and glory of God. “Praise ye him, sun and moon; praise him, all ye stars of light. Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons, and all deeps: fire, and hail; snow, and vapours; stormy winds fulfilling His word.” [Psalm 48:3-8.]4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 11

All these agencies of God in nature are summoned to bring their tribute of praise, and who among God's creatures will be silent! Every star as it walks its course, and every breeze as it sweeps the earth, and every cloud as it darkens the firmament, every shower of rain and every ray of sunshine, all are uttering the praises of God and publishing the glories of the Lord God who reigneth in the heavens.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 12

We arrived on the campground Tuesday noon. Wednesday I was stricken with sickness. A burning fever came upon me, and for three days and almost four I was not dressed. The prospect of my laboring looked very dark. But Sabbath at five o'clock I was helped to the stand and talked about thirty minutes. Sunday I spoke about one hour and [a] half to a tent full, with great clearness and freedom, and have been gathering up my strength day by day ever since. But the work in this conference was of the same character as the work above, only more so. We have had one of the hardest battles we ever had to engage in.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 13

The leading men in this conference seem to have no respect for the General Conference. The people have no respect for ministers or president. Brother Boyd was despised by them. Elder Van Horn was a pleasing speaker, and they despised the man because he could not speak as fluently as Elder Van Horn. They contrasted the gifts to his face in the assembly. Brother Boyd has felt [hurt] to the very depths of his soul, yet his love for the cause has made him cling to the work of God under discouragements that but few would have borne as nobly as he has done.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 14

We cannot give you all particulars. We had men hard to deal with, difficult to be impressed. The labors of our ministers were accounted of no more value than their own wisdom and judgment. The only thing they did not dare to reject was the Testimonies. To these they did bow after long delay.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 15

Last night I ventured in my feebleness to speak, and the Lord gave me great freedom. The tent was full of outsiders and our people. All listened as for their lives. I presented Peter's ladder of progress before them and the final abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom. The Lord gave me His Spirit and His power as I described the overcomer's reward.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 16

Friday morning there had been a little rift in the cloud now and then during the meeting, but to be covered again in blackness and darkness. I arose unrefreshed with a broken night's sleep. Four nights I had but little sleep. While I was speaking to the people, one minister was left to open the meeting; the rest resorted to a grove to plead with God in prayer. They were blest and had faith that we should see of the salvation of God.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 17

Friday morning at five o'clock we commenced our meeting, and I arose and talked a short time telling them we had waited for these leading men to take a position which God could approve and let His Spirit into the meeting. We had no more appeals to make to them and no more time to lose in waiting for them. They had stood directly in the way of our work from the first, and now our work was for these who had come to this meeting to be benefited. I had two front seats cleared and asked those who were backslidden from God and those who had never started to serve the Lord, to come forward. They began to come. Other seats were cleared, and finally there was the whole body [of] seats of the tent filled; about one dozen were in the side seats.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 18

Then the Spirit of God like a tidal wave swept over the congregation. Such solemnity! Deep, earnest, heartfelt confessions were made. These men who had stood like icebergs melted under the beams of the Son of righteousness. They came right to the point. They made thorough work. Confessions were made with weeping and deep feeling. We had a most solemn, blessed season of intercession, and then closed the meeting and took our breakfast and assembled again at eight o'clock to finish the work. Parents confessed to children and children to parents, husbands to wives and wives to husbands, brothers to sisters, and sisters to brothers. It seemed like the movement of 1844. I have not been in a meeting of this kind for many years. After the hard fought battle the victory was most precious. We all wept like children.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 19

Brother Boyd spoke of his gratitude while the tears rained from his face. Oh, I praise the Lord. I praise Him for He is to be praised. In the Lord's mercy, He laid me by from hard labor, for rest and repairs, and I will trust Him with my whole heart. I will trust Him.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 20

There seems to be an entirely new atmosphere in the camp. Elder Boyd yesterday was elected as president of this conference, but the very ones who had treated him shamefully did not come out fully and freely, and he declined. He told them he could not serve them; he longed for peace and rest. Yet he would proclaim the third angel's message while he had breath. But now, today, he has accepted and will serve them as president. The work now goes off like clockwork in the conference business. Oh, what a work the Lord can do in a short time!4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 21

I have given you but little particulars. It is so childish and inconsistent and miserable a mess that I do not think [it] possible for me to write. These murmurings, faultfindings, these exalting little motes to mention this. Making a man an offender for a word is a grievous sin in the sight of God. But this battle has turned; victory through Jesus Christ is ours. And we know the battle must be fought some time, and it must be done without yielding one inch to gratify and please this faultfinding, disorderly element.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 22

We never saw so much dust and storm raised against a man that when investigated there was not the least thing for it all, as in this case. O, what work Satan can make with human hearts that are not daily partakers of the divine nature. I did not expect to write this when I commenced, but I felt so thankful I wanted to tell you.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 23

Much love to Sister Harriet and your dear children. Annie in particular. May the Lord bless this child and may she win a crown of glory.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1884, par. 24

Lt 21, 1884

Haskell, S. N.; Butler, G. I.

Healdsburg, California

July 10, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 248; 9MR 136.

Dear Brethren Haskell and Butler:

There are many urgent calls coming from all the conferences for me to come East and attend the camp meetings. They gravely state they have arranged them so that I could go from one to the other without loss of time. One meeting laps over onto the other, and I do not admire your judgment in this arrangement. Better have a set of camp meetings one year full and thorough, in selected places, and then next year take up the places left and have those well manned, full and thorough. I have marked [that at] meetings such as this, started with expectation of help to come, the work is not carried on sharply and thoroughly, but lags until the expected someone comes. Then, if the meeting is left before its close by that someone, the interest of the meeting is very much injured. Have less meetings and [have] those you do have thoroughly attended and the work thoroughly done.⁴*LtMs, Lt 21, 1884, par. 1*

But should I attend your meetings, I remember I am fifty-six years old, instead of twenty-five or thirty-five and no provision is made for me to rest, but to rush from one to the other as fast as the cars will take me. I do not think your plans very flattering for me. I am not immortal yet, and have cause to remember this every day of my life. If you wish to finish me up this year, I think you have planned excellently for it. I think my best course is to remain in California and not trust myself to your mercies. I have a strong desire to attend your meetings, and at the same time I cannot approve your arrangement of the meetings and dare not in my exhausted condition of health consent to undertake such work as you, my good brethren, have laid out for me. I am deeply moved when these urgent appeals come to me from the East, for I know I have a testimony for God's people. It burns in my soul day and night, seems as if it would consume me. But I have large work here. Three camp meetings are planned in California—one at Humboldt, one at Reno, one at Oakland. I have several books that I ought to complete this winter, much writing I ought to do. My copyists are here on the ground. It is at great loss to me every way that I leave this coast. Duty does not call in two directions at the same time. Now which is the most urgent? I am trying to determine whether I shall leave duties right at home and go over the Rocky Mountains to take up duties far off. These things puzzle me. As yet I get no clear light, only a positive drawing East; because you are praying for me, I expect to come.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1884, par. 2

I leave Healdsburg this morning for Oakland to complete Volume 4. I have only been four days in my home in Healdsburg for three months. Have attended Oakland, April meeting, two weeks, and three camp meetings. If I go East I shall not be able to return for four or five months, my writing hanging on unfinished, everything put back as far as my work in California is concerned. At the camp meeting, they think in California I ought to be here. I went East last year and worked hard. The Conference has done nobly for me as far as liberality in pay is concerned, but the money I then pledged has cramped me in all my work, for I could not sell anything and am, as far as means to handle is concerned, constantly pressed until something shall sell.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1884, par. 3

Now, my good brethren, I state things as they are. It is too late for you to change any appointments, and if I want to live another year, I had better stay where I am, for I can serve the cause here with the help of Jesus. Excuse this letter, but I have not slept since two o'clock, thinking of these things, and I have written you.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1884, par. 4

Elder Haskell or Butler will not be at our California camp meeting, and do you think it is just to try to draw me away from here East when they have so few workers here? I write in haste.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1884, par. 5

Lt 22, 1884

Ings, Jennie

Oakland, California

July 30, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Sister Ings:

I was glad to receive a few lines from you last Friday, but I have wanted and hoped to hear something of those things that had interested me most in regard to the institute, how matters were moving there. Perhaps you do not mean to write me anything more because I wanted you should go there. But this is one of the very reasons I wished you to go, that I might know more definitely how things are moving there since the efforts we last made there.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 1

I have been working too hard, writing and planning in regard to my Healdsburg place, to leave it all right. Then I have spoken Sabbath in our church to a houseful. We had an excellent meeting. Sunday afternoon I spoke to a crowded tent full of attentive listeners upon the entry of Christ into Jerusalem. But both of these days were a great tax to me on account of bowel difficulty which made me weak, and I felt so dissatisfied with my efforts; but others say they never heard me speak with greater freedom.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 2

But I know I must have more power from on high to deal with these sacred, all-important themes. I abhor myself because I cannot do better than I do. I have been overtaxed and am still. I have grave difficulties, but I am pleading with God, the precious Physician, to heal me. My heart and my head, the base of the brain, are quite troublesome; but then, I will not talk about myself. I am of good courage. I am clinging to the Rock that is higher than I. If I fall [while] in the harness, praise God in my behalf and rejoice that rest has come to the weary.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 3

Yesterday was the first day I have ventured to throw off the strain of labor. Sister Kelsey and I rode over to Sister Haman's and called on Lilly Corruth. All are unusually well. Lilly has had an afflicted time but is now about. She was very glad to see us. We took dinner at Ella Sanders Haman's. Sister Sanders was there and we had a pleasant visit.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 4

I am up early writing by lamplight. My book is progressing finely. I have heard all read but the two last chapters. I shall feel greatly relieved when it is done.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 5

The interest in the meetings keeps good. They have large congregations. One intelligent looking woman took her position on the Sabbath question last Sabbath. We think this effort will not be in vain. We hope and pray the seed sown will be watered by the Lord of the vineyard and that precious fruit will be the result.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 6

Now Sister Ings, if it is distasteful for you to stay at St. Helena, just don't stay, but go to your open doors at Healdsburg. I have missed you very much and would in no case have consented for you to leave me now when about to go on a long journey if it were not for the pity and interest I have for the Health Retreat. But I want you to be happy. I feel lost when you are away from me, but I will soon be speeding on my way east. I wanted to go next Sunday afternoon, but it is decided I speak on temperance next Sunday afternoon and also speak Friday evening and perhaps Sabbath; so I shall not leave here before Monday or Tuesday next. Sister McOmbler will probably be down the last of this week, so she writes.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 7

I wish you would inquire if anything has been done in regard to the notices in regard to price of rooms. If they want anything published, send it along. Brother St. John was to attend to this matter. How is his health? How is Addie [Walling] getting along? How many patients have they? How many guests? Now do not withhold from me the things I wish to know. Let me have the particulars of matters. Are the Chinese there yet? Sister Sanders says Sister Western, whom Sister Chamberlain saw in Woodland, would like to come to work for her board for the privilege of being in the institution.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 8

Much love and respect to Sister Chamberlain and all good friends. Write at once if you want me to get it. Write what you design to do before I leave, for I'm anxious to know.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 9

Mother.

The worse thing with me is that I have no appetite, and what I will find to sustain and nourish me on the road is a mystery. I find no traces of that pin. What kind of a pin was it? Please describe it. I have looked thoroughly. No one knows anything about it. I have asked them all. I hope those who camp on my place will not use my wood, for I want it this winter.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 10

Where is my rubber bag? I cannot see it anywhere.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1884, par. 11

Lt 22a, 1884

Ings, Jennie

Oakland, California

July 30, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 244.

Dear Sister Ings:

I am very glad to hear from you. This morning Willie [White] brought me your letter. I greedily devoured its contents.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 1

Oh, how much one head can do to set things in order! I felt so sorry for Dr. Chamberlain, who had no one to speak to or counsel with. Now you can counsel together and be a good, strong team. But, Sister Ings, do not stand over the stove. Be careful in this not to get your blood heated. If ought should happen to you I should feel that I was responsible. Be careful, I beseech of you; be careful! While you can be of a great help in arranging and planning, you are not to do the heavy work yourself. Head is of more value than hands in such an institution. Preserve your strength to do head service. The right arrangement of work is one-half the battle. I am glad you are there. I am greatly relieved.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 2

I am preparing my writing to go East. Sister McOmber has not yet come. She will come perhaps today or tomorrow. I am beginning to need her now. I wish I could run up and see you, but this is out of the question. We go East next Monday. I hope the Lord will strengthen and bless you. I believe He will. Only have good courage.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 3

In regard to the house, you did not say one word about how you liked it. Tell me in your next letter. Is it not a little gem of a house? I will write no more now as I am full of writing. You have our tenderest regard and best wishes and prayers. Be prudent. Do not let the help go so that you will have the burden of cooking upon you. This I positively forbid. If you can direct and others be over the stove and not you, all right; but do not heat your blood.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 4

In regard to your board, we will talk about that and something else when the board meets. You will have your wages for your work.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 5

Well, I must say goodbye. The Lord bless you.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 6

Addie [Walling], I hope you will in every way show solidity of character. Show that you are a follower of Jesus. It is expected as you have lived in my family that you will be a girl of improved manners. You can be a recommendation to me or you can demerit me by a wrong course of action.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 7

Be kind, courteous, affable, polite to all. Keep from all frivolity, all vanity, pride, immodesty, and forwardness. Do not seek to ape others around you in dress, in manners, or in anything unless they are seeking to follow Christ. Be meek, be lowly of heart. Oh, my dear child, live for the future immortal life. Copy the Pattern, Jesus your Saviour. You have battles to fight with self. You have a work to do for yourself daily if you build up a character which God can approve. Try to overcome daily. Look to Jesus. Pray often, and Jesus will help you, for He loves you.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 8

Much love to Dr. Chamberlain and all dear friends.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 9

Write me once more before I go. Addie, I want you to write me, if only a few lines. Tell me just how you get along, whether you like the place, how you like our little house.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 10

Will you cook for me, Sister Ings, some rolls and a chicken nicely boiled and then fried, and send by St. John when he comes, if he comes before Monday at three o'clock? There is so much going on here, I fear I shall go poorly prepared.4LtMs, Lt 22a, 1884, par. 11

Lt 23, 1884

Ings, Jennie

Oakland, California

August 4, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Sister Ings:

Brother Rogers came to our house last night bringing a basket of provisions, which will save making the preparations here we would otherwise have had to make. We have been very busy but will get off without breaking down. I spoke yesterday to a large audience and it wearied me considerably.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1884, par. 1

I am so thankful you are at the Health Retreat. I am sure it is in the order of God. You will be placed as matron officially; then no one will question your authority. Suggest, devise, and plan as you see fit. I have felt the Lord would certainly bless you if you would come into the position that I was confident you could fill with acceptance. I am glad if Addie [Walling] can work in and take her place orderly and regularly. It is a discipline she needs very, very much. You must see that what she does is not slighted but done thoroughly. I go feeling a great weight off my mind in regard to the Health Retreat. I know they needed a head so much. It distressed me beyond measure to see the great want of a head, someone to see and tell what must be done.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1884, par. 2

At the next camp meeting we will make a decided effort in behalf of the institution. I think it will prove every way so much better for you than to travel in the heat and in the dust across the plains. I feel you are just where you should be, and the Lord will bless you in doing this work, which I know you can do. I start East with better health than when I commenced my journey last year.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1884, par. 3

I am glad the prices on the guests and patients are raised. You will not have as many, but those you do have will be more profitable and better keep up the institution. To let the prices down to the lowest figure and then have a great raft come in who demand first-class hotel fare at these prices will never bring one cent of profit to the institution. Better have less in number and those who will pay and require less provision, make less expense, and be better in every respect. I hope the things there will move off much better. They now have a head and that is what they wanted. I shall be only too glad when my journey is ended and I return back to occupy my little home in St. Helena, for this I intend to do.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1884, par. 4

I shall hope to hear from you and Dr. Chamberlain in regard to the prosperity of the institution. You will know by the camp meeting appointments where to direct your letters to the different points where I may travel. I shall want to learn from Addie all the particulars in regard to herself, just as a daughter would write to a mother. I again thank you for everything in the basket but the cake, which you know I am never able to keep out of the dinner basket, with all my efforts.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1884, par. 5

Mother.

Lt 24, 1884

Jones, Brother and Sister

Kansas City, Missouri

August 10, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother and Sister Jones:

When you leave the place, do not leave the hose attached to the pump (thus I found it, when you went to Petaluma), for this can be removed and stolen very easily. Remove it, if you please, from the pump and put it under lock and key when you leave the premises alone or at night. I wish you would water the flowers in the other yard, if you can do so without too great trouble.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1884, par. 1

Yours with respect.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1884, par. 2

Lt 25, 1884

Whitney, Brother

Kansas City, Missouri

August 11, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother Whitney:

I intended to pass on directly from here to Syracuse, but there [have] been urgent calls for me to spend a short time Sabbath and Sunday at Iowa camp meeting. I hope that this will not detract from the interest of the meeting in Syracuse.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 1

Dear brethren and sisters who attend this meeting, do not, I beseech of you, neglect the work that ought to be done for you at the very commencement of the meeting. Remember that the ministers cannot make for you a profitable meeting. With what spirit have you come to this meeting—to be lifted out of your low estate by a wave of excitement? Have you come with hearts drawn out in love for the salvation of others? Have you come to selfishly be made happy yourselves, or have you come to let your light shine forth to others?4LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 2

The watchman upon the walls of Zion have a sacred and important work: to watch for souls as they that must give an account. You must be arising constantly to greater heights in Christian experience, in heavenly attainments, [and] in holy purposes. Your vigilance must increase constantly as we near the close of time. If souls are in danger and you are stupified and see not their peril and give no warning, their souls will be lost and you will be chargeable with their blood. It is not enough to do pulpit labor. Your work and your efforts must be to see and discover the dangers and give warning.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 3

While this work rests upon the ministers, there are heavy responsibilities that rest upon every soul who professes the name of Christ, not one is excused in occupying a position of indifference and indolence. Our case is not to be consulted. [Our] pleasure is not to be thought of. There is earnest work to be done for Jesus in the salvation of souls. This is the all-important theme. Everything of a temporal character can bear no comparison with this. Every man, woman, and youth, God has claims upon you. He will hold you accountable for the good you might have done and did not do. 4LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 4

It is not enough that you are merely interested, and would interest others, to save your soul. You must remember you have personal work to do for other souls, to reach them where they are. Live out your profession of faith; humble your souls before God. But at this holy convocation work unselfishly. "Without Me," says Christ, "ye can do nothing." [John 15:5.] Examine your own selves, see whether you be in the faith. Except Jesus Christ be in you, then ye are reprobates. 4LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 5

Have you this knowledge? If not, do not let day after day of the meeting pass and you be unfitted to be benefited. You want Jesus at the very commencement of the meeting; you want help which Christ alone can give you. Lay hold by faith the mighty Arm of your strength. Let your very first work be deep, heart-searching confession of sins. If a brother has aught against his brother, take it out of the way for Christ's sake. In the very commencement of the meeting bring not the displeasure of God upon the whole encampment by your hidden sins. God requires of you to make wrongs right. If you have, any of you, been hard, censorious, unpitiful, let the confession be made and the heart broken before God. Clear the way that your personal sins shall not shut away from the encampment the sunbeams of Christ's righteousness. Let the hard, sinful heart break and you have a heart of flesh. [Neglecting] this work of humiliation, of confession before God, has done such harm [at] every camp meeting. I now appeal to you who profess the truth to make crooked ways straight through the grace of Jesus Christ. 4LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 6

I call upon you who have long professed the truth to get out of the way that souls shall not stumble over you to ruin. Let those who profess the faith put away sin and be reconciled to God, and you will then see the salvation of God. 4LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 7

P. S. I will leave Iowa Sunday night if I can. Emma White will accompany me. I must sleep alone. Two beds will be necessary.⁴*LtMs, Lt 25, 1884, par. 8*

Lt 26, 1884

Bell, G. H.

Portland, Maine

September 11, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother Bell:

I have felt many weeks that I must see or write to you. I expected to meet you at the Worcester meeting, but was disappointed. We met some things there that troubled me not a little—it was the youth paying their addresses to young ladies. This spirit, we felt, must be rooted out entirely. Last February, I think it was, while at Crystal Springs, in the night season, a very solemn view was given me of the closing scenes of this earth's history and the dangers and duties of our people. The colleges, the teachers, the professors, were shown me and the grave responsibilities resting upon them.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 1

I was shown the past and present of your life and was made very sad, as some things were shown me, in that you have not followed the light which God has given you. Your own imprudence, your own impetuous, passionate temperament, lies at the foundation of the great troubles that existed in Battle Creek. You had not done right. You were not correct in your ways, and this weakness and sin on your part was the beginning of letting out of strong waters.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 2

Your friends vindicate your course because you were about to be crushed. This caused them great trials and great perplexities. We had fond hope that you had learned a lesson so that you would distrust yourself, be willing to be counseled and advised, and that you would be circumspect in all your course of action, and by your close connection with God show to those who are prejudiced against you (because you have given them occasion to pass judgment upon your course of action) that you were pressing on to the right, obtaining victories daily.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 3

But I was shown that you have not overcome your weakness and that your own unsanctified feelings were gaining the mastery. You are pursuing a course that will give triumph to your enemies and burden and distress those who have loved you, respected you, and spoken in your behalf. I was shown you inviting the company of young ladies, paying them attention and receiving attention from them, binding them to you, fascinating them by words and acts which you know well how to exercise. 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 4

I saw the frown of God upon your course. It was not purity [or] elevated, sanctified, holy impulses that prompted you to desire young ladies or young women or married women to be attached to yourself and to desire of them attentions which have at least the appearance of evil. You have done much of this kind of work. It has had that influence upon the minds of girls that you could exercise your spirit and power over them, if you were disposed, to their ruin. You have had this matter reproved in your past course of action. You have seen your name bandied about through the papers, and reproach brought on the precious cause of God. And yet another trial was given you, but you did not show that you were reformed. You have kept on this same course of action and taught the youth to deceive by secretly being in your society. You have taken liberties with them in your attentions that have left a mold or impress upon their minds and upon their deportment that will never be fully effaced. 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 5

I was at [a] meeting when young girls made confessions. I knew what these confessions meant, while many did not. I do not feel that you are a safe man to take charge of youth. God has set before you your dangers, but you did not see them or sense them. We dare not encourage you to have charge of youth, not because you have not ability, but because you have so little power of self-control. 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 6

I think if you could take your family out of Battle Creek into some less prominent place and remain with them where there are not so many to watch and see your defects and the strange defects of your family, you could serve the cause of God better than in any other way. You will certainly prove a great burden to the cause of God unless you are a transformed man, or you leave the work and connect as little as possible with the institutions of responsibility. I cannot now say one word in your vindication. You have allowed your mind to take a low level, and it is this that has left you shorn of your strength, that is wrecking you physically and mentally. Why do you not connect yourself with young men, love their society, choose them as companions? This would be proper, but your association with young ladies and your preferment for their society is a blot upon your character, and is ruin to the youth you thus prefer and pet and favor.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 7

I have more [to say] but cannot write more—am not well.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1884, par. 8

Lt 27, 1884

Ings, Jennie

South Lancaster, Massachusetts

September 17, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 261.

Dear Sister Ings:

I have been hard pressed with labor and have had but little opportunity to write; but I have written several articles for the paper, which would become stale unless I could get them out at once.⁴*LtMs, Lt 27, 1884, par. 1*

I felt bad that Edson [White] and Willie [White], or one of them, could not be with me on this journey. It is too bad. I expected Edson would certainly be with me, and Emma [White] too. They were with me at the Iowa meeting. There Emma was taken sick with great distress in her stomach. It was very stubborn. Edson worked with her nearly all night. Next day she did not sit up but a little. Sister McOmber was willing to go with me to New York. Then I hoped Emma would improve, but she had another attack. Sister McOmber mastered it after a while. Edson could not go to this meeting on account of his business; then Sister [Lucinda] Hall and her mother urged Emma to go home with them, thinking the working with hops might improve her health. She went. Sister McOmber has been with me since. We meet Emma at Syracuse today. She goes with us to Ohio and to [the] Michigan meeting. Then Sister McOmber leaves me in Emma's and Edson's hands, for she is anxious to get to her mother—if she can leave me in good hands, but [otherwise] would not leave me, even if I said to her, Go.⁴*LtMs, Lt 27, 1884, par. 2*

I left Portland, Maine, Monday. Am staying here at Brother [S. N.] Haskell's for a breathing spell. We had good meetings in Vermont and in Portland. The outside attendance at Portland was good. Through the day there was good attendance. One and another came up claiming my acquaintance; [they] knew me when we were school children together. Cousins and acquaintances came to the meeting. Mellessa Tapely, my niece was present. Her husband attended one meeting; her children came Sunday and attended Sunday. Emma Morrison and her husband came to the meeting but left Sunday. It was ... [Remainder missing.]⁴*LtMs, Lt 27, 1884, par. 3*

Lt 28, 1884

Brisbin, W. L.

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 18, 1884

Previously unpublished.

W. L. Brisbin:

Your letter I read last eve and am glad that there is some evidence that you are becoming a sane man. You have been all that you express in your letter—cruel in the treatment of your wife. She kept her own counsel. She was discreet and not like many women who would find relief in telling their troubles to others. She bore silently your abuse and your suspicions She carried her load upon her heart until it broke. Should I say you were not the cause of her death, I should tell that which is not true. Your course toward her was satanic. Satan was working in you to will and to do of his own good pleasure. You have carried out your own unhappy, uncontrollable, wicked temperament until its results was seen in the dead clay before you.⁴*LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 1*

Jesus loved her. Jesus pitied her. Every pang of anguish endured from the blasting hail of your tongue was as if you had done this to Jesus Christ. Poor heart-sore, discouraged woman! None knew of her burdens and her griefs but her Redeemer, and in mercy He has given her rest.⁴*LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 2*

But now the past with its burden of record is passed into eternity. You cannot undo the past. You cannot make restitution to the dead. It remains to be seen whether your course will be changed toward the living, whether you will so humble your proud, jealous, overbearing spirit that God can give you a new heart, even a heart of flesh, that the hard, un pitying, loveless nature may be so transformed that your life will be fragrant with good works. Self must die. Self must be crucified.⁴*LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 3*

The Lord loved your wife. She was precious in His sight. But your course has been an offense to Him, and your separation will be final unless you repent and become converted. The blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin, even the scarlet sin.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 4

As you did not respect and love your wife, there was not thoughtfulness and caretaking and dutiful behavior on the part of your daughter to her mother, who lifted too heavy burdens for her physical strength, who carried too heavy cares of heart troubles. If this child misses the care and attention and burden-carrying mother, I am not sorry. If she feels her own neglect of the dutiful help she should have been to her mother, this is as it should be. If it makes her a more thoughtful dutiful child, this is as God would have it. If your wife's death works a transformation in the lives of those she left behind she will not have died in vain.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 5

Now I know that Jesus will pardon to the full the blackest crimes if repented of and forever forsaken. I entreat of you to make thorough work. Do not let the impressions you now have wear away. The Spirit of God is appealing to you. Will you hear the voice of invitation and of mercy? Will you make a decided, determined effort for your soul's salvation? Let nothing divert your mind. Let nothing hinder you from seizing the present moment to seek God by penitence and confession. Your work is before you—to reform, if you would inherit eternal life. With your present traits of character, you will never enter the pearly gates. Then make earnest work to cleanse yourself of all filthiness of the flesh and of the spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 6

I leave these lines with you, hoping and praying that they may do you good. In much love.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 7

P. S. Please return this to me, as I have no time to copy it.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1884, par. 8

Lt 29, 1884

Salisbury, Brother

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 20, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 2SM 329; OHC 317.

Dear Brother Salisbury:

My mind has been troubled on your account, and I do not feel clear unless I write to you some things that have been shown me in regard to your spiritual condition. Last spring many things were shown me in regard to different families that were not what God would want them at home.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 1

I saw you were greatly deficient in this respect. You allow your imagination to control your reason and your attitude in your family. Sickness has afflicted your wife, bringing upon you additional burdens and cares and expense. You have fretted over this. Every one must accept this providence of God and meekly bow to His dispensations. Every soul has anxieties and worries in their daily life. There are continual irritations and annoyances coming to every family. You are tired and nervous, but had you a right hold from above as a Christian should have, you would be not only a hearer of the Word but a doer as well. The practical Christian will live for God, doing His duty in the face of all hindrances.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 2

There are tangled briars through which every follower of Christ must travel. The feet, the hands, may be torn by them, but still the way is onward. The feelings you have had toward your family are not that of a reasonable man. You have felt that they were to you a burden too heavy to carry, and this has not been in thoughts only but expressed in words, in your actions and deportment.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 3

When your wife was very sick you tried to do your duty to her but when she began to improve, then Satan came with his temptations, and you listened to his suggestions. You have thought, How can I live peacefully amid vexing and irritating things and the multitude of little worries and fretting which come in my home life which I cannot evade? This is a diseased imagination. You must, you should gird up the loins of your mind, not let it dwell upon these matters where Satan is trying to lead your mind. Call it back to duty to your married vows and [do] not get the impression that your lot is so hard and unbearable. Let not your mind be occupied with other women outside your family. Give your affections, your love, to her [whom] you have vowed to love and cherish. You cannot prosper until you are a changed man. Your ideas must change. You must have more clear and rational ideas of your duty to God and [to] your family. It is not enough to get along day by day in a sort of maze, not knowing where you will drift next—fluctuating, speaking and acting unworthy [of] a Christian, then feeling remorse and then acting upon the same plan again.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 4

Life to you should be no burden. You should live victoriously, even mastering your experience, weaving into it brightness, joy, and hopefulness. As a follower of Christ live a truly Christian life whatever the circumstances surrounding you may be. Do not, for Christ's sake, pursue a course to wean the affections of your wife from you. For you to make straight paths for your feet is to live as Jesus would live and behave as Jesus would have you. You will please remember you are making a record in the books of heaven such as you would not be pleased to meet in the judgment.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 5

You should live a life that will please God and [give] evidence to all connected with you of the genuineness of your Christianity. Your life must be lived in the very circumstances God in His providence placed you. Your fretful, harsh words to your wife are to her like the cruel hail beating upon the precious plants. You cannot divest yourself of the responsibilities of your family, and would not if you could; therefore, you must make the best of your circumstances and surroundings as you are placed. Whatever you are to make of your life must be made amid your every day experience. It is just where you are [that] you must fight the battles of life over and over again. Here you must either win your victories or be defeated and driven from the field of battle.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 6

You often think your lot hard and wish it otherwise, that you had a life free from perplexities, a life of greater freedom from care with no briars or thorns, worries or provocations. Is this the life you desire? Then do your utmost to make it so. Your efforts, through Christ, will do much toward removing the briars, the thorns.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 7

Be always gentle. Never let your words wound your wife and bruise her soul that she shall carry a sad, grieved heart day after day, for this is a slow death like slow poison. Show your wife you appreciate her. Be gentle, kind, patient, forbearing with your children. Never, never speak words to your wife or children that will irritate. Forbear the expressions you have allowed yourself to make again and again. Long after they have passed from your memory, they live to wound, to bruise the soul of your wife and children. You will be the means of the ruin of the souls of your wife and children unless you are a thoroughly changed man in spirit, unless you view these matters in altogether a different light.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 8

Remove from your wife every vexing thing, not alone for her sake but for your sake also. Your aspirations are not what they should be, whatever your life is to be made, whether it is beautiful or marred. Others may have more desirable positions than ours but here is your lot and my lot, and we must make the very best we can out of it. Many men with eight or ten in the family praise God that they have ten dollars per week and you have double this. Here is something to be thankful for.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 9

Every week you should lay by in some secure place five or ten dollars not to be used up unless in case of sickness. With economy, you may place something at interest. With wise management you can save something after paying your debts.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 10

Accept the battles of life on your field and stop not to long for the chances some others have, for, while you are doing this, you are overlooking the present privileges [and] opportunities which God places in your path, which will pass never more to return.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 11

You must overcome this restless discontent. The place where we find ourselves we must do our best in, for it may be the Master's design we shall live our life right here, fight our battles on this ground, [and] become strong men and women in God through surmounting difficulties that appear on our ground of conflict. 4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 12

God [knows] what is for our best good. The peculiar discipline to which we are subjected is discipline to bring out, not the worst and most unlovely traits of character, but the meekness and loveliness of Christ, developing the precious graces of Christ. 4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 13

You need to learn in Christ's school to become Christlike. God adapts His grace to the peculiarities of each one's necessities. My grace is sufficient for you. As your burden grows heavier, look up and by faith cling more firmly to the hand of Jesus, your mighty helper. As difficulties thicken about His people amid the perils of the last days, He sends His angels to walk all the way by our side, drawing us closer and still closer to the bleeding side of Jesus. And as the greater trials come, lesser trials are forgotten; the heart feels the need of more firm trust and becomes calm. You must remain pure and true and firm, remembering your character is being imprinted upon books of heaven—just as the features are imprinted upon the polished plate of the artist. There is no circumstance or place or difficulty or hardship where we cannot live beautiful lives of Christian fidelity and approved conduct. 4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 14

You should not be satisfied with the life you are now living. It is a faulty life. You should discipline yourself to live a faultless, gentle, unspotted life in every place and under every circumstance. The true victory is not found in shunning trials—getting rid of them—but in meeting them heroically, enduring them patiently. Then you will avoid the many harassing trials that you think are almost unendurable. Give your wife sunshine in the place of frowns, pleasant words in the place of irritating, stinging words. What confidence can she have in your missionary work when its influence upon you is what it is—unkind at home, hasty, denunciatory, fault-finding—anything but a Christian at home. 4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 15

I was astonished at your course as it has been presented before me. You must love your wife. You must cease your complaining and treat her tenderly, lovingly. What has she done that you should thus treat her? What have you done? Please review the past and then break this spell that is upon you, which will certainly prove your ruin and the sure ruin of your family. Your wife needs love and affection. Never leave the impression upon her that she is a burden. There is no reason at all why your life should not be happy; but you are, in the course of action, making yourself think you have a hard time, when it is a delusion of the enemy. Be cheerful, kind and affectionate at home. Be a real home missionary.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 16

There are duties for you in the family from which you cannot excuse yourself. No other mortal must take the time, the care, the love, the devotion belonging to your wife. Jesus is your pattern. Copy the pattern. You have made many crooked lines and many blotted pages which you regret, but not half deeply enough. Yet you must not become discouraged. You must keep a brave heart, an unfaltering purpose, a calm and joyful confidence in God. When you see your weakness, then you will feel your need of leaning more fully upon Jesus. You must grow into Christ's likeness at home. Do missionary work for the dear ones at home. Their souls are as precious in the sight of God as the souls of others, and these demand kindly care, loving words, tender affection. Flee to Jesus now. Change your course and encourage your wife. You imagine many things that are all wrong. God help you to be firm and true to principle.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1884, par. 17

Lt 30, 1884

Savage, Adeline

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 21, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in DG 198-200.

Dear Niece, Adeline Savage:

I think you should know how your mother [Mary Chase] is at the present time. She is quite feeble. She has needed care constantly. I cannot possibly have any care of her whatever.4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 1

We leave Battle Creek for Otsego today. Next week we shall be, I expect, at Chicago. The eighth we start on our long journey for California. I feel very sad to leave your mother in her present state of feebleness. I provide for her the very best I can. I purchased a house which has cost me a thousand dollars and furnished it simply, with necessary articles for her use. We have let a family into the house—a mother, son, and daughter. They have the use of the house for your mother's board. I pay the taxes. Last year your mother paid the taxes, but she met with an accident in building a fire in the stove. The floor took fire and there was seventy-five dollars expense to me for repairs. The son of the widow lady who has my house has been sick for five weeks. During this time your mother has been sick, attended by a physician and sometimes a nurse, for she could not receive attention from anyone in the house.4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 2

It was in the bargain that your mother's fire should be made in the morning so that she could have a warm room to get up in, but further than this, they could not do.4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 3

If she needed a nurse she must provide it. She has only three hundred dollars, which will melt away very soon. She must have clothing. She must have wood. I have done all I can do, and more than I should do. I look to you, her children and her grandchildren, to act your part. I feel badly indeed at the present appearance of things, that stranger's hands have to do for your mother the duties which justly belong to you to perform. When the neighbors and friends inquire, "Has she no children to have a care for her?" how embarrassing to say, "She has two sons and a daughter and grandchildren and brothers." The question is asked, "Why do not her children take care of their aged mother in her feebleness?" I am not able to answer that question, but perhaps you can answer it. 4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 4

I have my work, which is speaking and writing. I am in constant labor and ought not to have one thought or one care upon my soul for your mother. I have invested twenty-five dollars for clothing because your mother needed it. I have ordered wood for the winter because last winter I learned she lay abed hours in the daytime to save burning wood. The little money she has on hand, she is reluctant to use, thinking she might be sick for sometime like her mother, and she dreads becoming a pauper. I cannot blame her for this, for judging from the past, she may feel she cannot depend at all on her children. 4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 5

Your mother has been very economical. I shall not leave her to suffer if you do nothing; but if you feel conscience clear in this matter, if you wish your record to stand in the judgment in the future as it has in the past in regard to your poor old mother, I cannot help it. But God marks this unfeeling neglect. 4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 6

God holds her children accountable for this neglected duty. I am sorry, so sorry, that the matter stands thus. 4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 7

Christ will judge every man according to his works. He identifies His interest with His suffering, neglected children. He says to one class, "I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: Naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. ... Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." The terrible word, "Depart," is spoken. [Matthew 25:41-45.] 4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 8

To those on His right hand He says, "I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." The question is asked, "Lord, when saw we thee an hungered and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?" He said "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." [Verses 35-40.] Thus that which is done to His needy brethren Christ accounts as done unto Himself. 4LtMs, Lt 30, 1884, par. 9

Lt 31, 1884

Smith, Uriah

Refiled as Lt 20, 1884.

Lt 32, 1884

White, W. C.

Refiled as Lt 48, 1884.

Lt 33, 1884

Haskell, S. N.; Butler, G. I.

Refiled as Lt 21, 1884.

Lt 33a, 1884

Ings, Sr.

Refiled as Lt 22, 1884.

Lt 33b, 1884

Ings, Sr.

Refiled as Lt 23, 1884.

Lt 34, 1884

Jones, Br-Sr.

Refiled as Lt 24, 1884.

Lt 35, 1884

Children

Refiled as Lt 49, 1884.

Lt 36, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

St. Helena, California

January 15, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Children:

We had a very pleasant journey up here from Healdsburg. Dr. Chamberlain was delighted. Now I feel sure that I am going to be better—my lungs and throat.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 1

I want you, Mary and baby, to come up, for we must talk about my books. I want Willie should meet me here and talk over matters. You can never come in a pleasanter time. It is just beautiful. I have been going over the hills with Dr. Chamberlain. Now come if you can. Do come now before it will rain again. It is very mild here, so different from the mornings in Oakland or Healdsburg.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 2

Tell Marian [Davis] I have matter in regard to Nehemiah on usury. Will send [it] I think tomorrow. Wish she were here. I am delighted with [the] prospect.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 3

Sister Rogers seems so glad to see us all. Brother Rogers' brother leaves today. Come now if you can. The children are here to take care of baby. Bring me the history of John. Borrow it. I have yours, Willie, coming in [a] box. Jennie [Ings] is very urgent for you to come. When patients get here, it will not be as good a time. No one [is] here but Bro. Robbins from Japan and Bro. St. John and our party.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 4

Willie, bring the fountain pen. Tell Sister Sarah I would like a settlement of our account. I shall be so glad to meet you here. Do not delay, because it is so beautiful now, sunshine so warm. Ella can be out of doors all the time after early morning.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 5

In haste,4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 6

Mother.

Shall I set Brother Burr to work on my lot? Let me know if you do not come at once.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 7

I think you had better, if you come, bring some of those green peas. They are nice.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 8

Mother.

I want tinted scratch books to write on.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 9

Mother.

I send this article to follow the others in regard to South Lancaster. If you think it not best to put in the paper, now, hold it or put [it] in [the] Signs.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1884, par. 10

Lt 37, 1884

McEnterfer, Sarah

Healdsburg, California

February 14, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 241.

Dear Sister Sarah:

I would be pleased to have you send me the account of our expenses that have been incurred since we left Battle Creek to our return to Oakland. I wish to put it in my book. Do not delay this, please.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1884, par. 1

I have a nice tooth brush somewhere. Do you know where it is? There is one box, I am satisfied, we have not received. Those large cloth shoes, buttoned on the side, have not come. Those goods that I bought did not come. There are several things that I expected to find that are not here. What about that large piece of white oil cloth such as we have for tablecloths? I had one in Battle Creek, sewed together, but it is not here. Was it packed at all? It was new, had never been used. Was made to cover our wagon. Will you please see if any box is in Oakland? I suppose there is, as the doll is not here that we fixed for Ella [White].4LtMs, Lt 37, 1884, par. 2

Please give me this statement of account. I want the address of Byron Belden, Stephen Belden, and Charlie Belden. You had these. Please send them to me.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1884, par. 3

I am writing every day. Mean to get my book finished next month, and can scarcely write a letter, I am so intent on this matter.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1884, par. 4

Love to yourself and your friends whose acquaintance we made on the journey.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1884, par. 5

Lt 38, 1884

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

February 14, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Son Willie:

I received a telegram from Kellogg saying that $42,000 deposited in the office would meet his claims, without profit. Now if we can get the money, we will meet this.⁴*LtMs, Lt 38, 1884, par. 1*

I wrote to you before you left Oakland. You had, I think, ample time to receive it. I asked several questions, but no answer came to my inquiries. Did you get the letter? Why not answer the letter, if you did?⁴*LtMs, Lt 38, 1884, par. 2*

Is there another box to come to me? Several things are not here that should be here. They were not in the boxes that came. There was large piece of white oilcloth, two breadths sewed together, to be used as a cover to our new large buggy, but it has not come. Do you know anything about it?⁴*LtMs, Lt 38, 1884, par. 3*

I am making good progress. I am feeling quite well, for me. I had enough of meat at the Health Retreat. I eat no meat, no butter. [I] have a good appetite and think I had better remain here with my family until my book, Volume 4, is completed. I sent to Eliza yesterday—with things Marian had to send—six of the talks given in the ministers' meeting.⁴*LtMs, Lt 38, 1884, par. 4*

I am pleased to be with my little family. It is cold, very cold, but clear. Ice is quite thick mornings. Brother Pratt came down last Monday with his girl. Left for home yesterday morning. Elder Brownsberger is in great anxiety to know when you are coming here. Please say in your answer to this. They say you sent for your Bible and hymnbooks. Where did you leave them? Professor says he cannot find them. Your rubbers I found in a satchel of mine with scratch books. Addie is doing housework cheerfully. All are doing well.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1884, par. 5

Come and see us when you can. We had an extra good meeting Sabbath. The church seems to be of good courage; bore excellent testimonies. Write about your meetings. Do write something.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1884, par. 6

Mother.

Read Sister Chamberlain's letter and hand [it] to her.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1884, par. 7

Lt 39, 1884

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

February 21, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear son Willie:

Professor [Sidney] Brownsberger has been waiting anxiously for you for some time to decide some matters. Come Friday if you can.⁴*LtMs, Lt 39, 1884, par. 1*

Brother Pritchard wants to know what to do, whether he is wanted at St. Helena. He may have to move out of the house he occupies any day, and he doesn't want to get another if he goes to St. Helena. Brother Pratt said he could have his old house for his family to move into, and he would go Sunday if he knew what to do. He would get settled with his family ready to begin work.⁴*LtMs, Lt 39, 1884, par. 2*

P. S. Bottle of ink for fountain pen.⁴*LtMs, Lt 39, 1884, par. 3*

Mother.

Lt 40, 1884

White, W. C.

St. Helena, California

February 29, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie:

I found the cellar partly dug, lots of stone piled up in heaps everywhere. They could go no further because they knew not what to do. [The] trees [are] all set. Now a wire fence must be put around the whole at once, or the cows will prune them. Sanford [Rogers] has taken his oak trees and pine trees for fence posts. I can do the same. Can get Italians to work for two dollars per day on this kind of work. They ask two and a half for laying stone foundation. Sanford has his foundation, or rock wall, for the back of his basement. Cost fifty dollars. All seem to think it a good thing and advise me to have it. I have all the stone I will want for the purpose.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1884, par. 1

If Whalin comes up Tuesday, he will want the foundation prepared if it is to be stoned up. What had I better do? Let me know. You ought to have come up with me. I do not mean to stay long, for I fear perplexities will come upon me to hinder my book work. The lumber has come and must be unloaded today. If you were only here, you could see Sanford's house—it is all enclosed—and could judge for yourself better what is wanted. I will pay you for your time if you will come. You can take the phaeton and get a horse. Set Henry on the track of a horse.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1884, par. 2

It will take three coils of wire to enclose my land. This must be done at all events at once.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1884, par. 3

Now, is Bro. Whalin coming or not? These things confuse me. If the work does move forward, I want you here at once just as soon as you can come. Then I will come right back with you when you return. If the whole thing is to be put off two weeks, telegraph, and I will start home Sunday.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1884, par. 4

Mother.

P.S. Do write something. Come yourself or tell us something definite to do.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1884, par. 5

Sanford Rogers has excellent workers, outsiders that Whalin can use. They are real nice-looking, enterprising, sturdy workmen. Two men get three dollars each day and pay their own board, and some he pays two and a half and boards them. He says these are the best kind of workmen. Now tell me what is best.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1884, par. 6

Lt 41, 1884

White, W. C.

St. Helena, California

February 29, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie:

I want you to come up at once if you can. There are many things that need to be settled, talked over, if the house is to go up at once. One week more finishes the house of Brother Rogers, then the workmen can go on to mine. It will take one week's work to prepare the basement, and no one seems to know what you want. Everything is at a standstill. Will you please come up and tell what must be done? Come as soon as Sunday, and you can go back in a day or two. There are some things to be considered.4LtMs, Lt 41, 1884, par. 1

Sister Scott is not here yet. I know not when she will come. May Sawyer goes home tomorrow. Hannah goes with her to Oakland.4LtMs, Lt 41, 1884, par. 2

I stood the journey well, but I am rather weak today and nervous, else I should have turned round and gone straight back to Healdsburg, for I cannot be troubled with these things of building that I know nothing about.4LtMs, Lt 41, 1884, par. 3

These workmen here will, I think, do well, even if Pritchard does not move up here with his family. They will work for three dollars, boarding themselves, or two and a half, boarded. They are excellent workmen. Brother Atwood's brother that came from Kansas was sick. He works well. [The] two outsiders do good work. Now I believe you have the whole story.4LtMs, Lt 41, 1884, par. 4

Mother.

Lt 42, 1884

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

March 16, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear son Willie:

I received your letter in reference to Battle Creek. I have been in the carriage all day today. I have been trying to secure money; have the loan of $1,500.00 (fifteen hundred) from Bro. Condivent at 6 1/2% interest. Will send you a draft with this. Tell me how much more I shall raise. All this brother required was my simple note. I tried Bro. Mills. All borrowed by boarding house. Tried Bro. Cook. Bro. Harmon borrowed all he could spare to stock a ranch, and I began to think I should utterly fail, but I was glad to get this sum.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 1

The farm is in great need of several pairs of hands just now. We left Crystal Springs Friday morning. We came through without stopping for dinner. Arrived at home at one o'clock, [at] Dr. [E. J.] Waggoner's at half past one.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 2

It rained hard in the morning, but nevertheless we started. We were all afraid of a long storm.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 3

My head troubles me much; last night [I] did not sleep until morning. I received a letter from Dr. Young, which I send with this. If you and I promised to see her through, I do not know when it was. The only thing I told her was that if I could secure her a little room in my house, I would do so, and it should cost her nothing. Out of pity to her, I gave her freely two dresses and told you to make her comfortable at my expense for the value of two hundred dollars. This I thought was considerable for me, pressed for means as I have been. But when she lays her whole weight on me, I will not carry it. I never promised to pay her bills in her medical course. If she has told others that I did, she has at least misstated me. I told her before going east just how I stood, that I could not obtain means for her. I wrote her to that effect, and now as she comes into a straight place, she writes this letter, making no acknowledgment that I had helped her. I do not accept her letter at all. It robbed me of a night's rest and cut off one day of my writing. I cannot bear these things as I once could. They disturb my thoughts and I ponder over them and become almost distracted. I rode over to Sister Butchers'. She said she would write to her husband to hire three hundred dollars for her. She had not the means, but he could hire it if he felt it was right to do this.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 4

Benton is now in the little house on the farm; moved today. I went all over [the farm] on the side where the house is. The trees seem to be doing well. But I think Benton is another Hemstreet—slack and shiftless. If he earns two dollars even a day, he will have to put on more energy than I give him credit for now. I am sorry that we have anything to do with them, for such ones never know themselves. They are thinking [that] that which they do [is] of much greater value than it is. I have had my share of such ones' labors.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 5

Willie, I think of all the dirty houses I ever looked upon, this house of mine is the worst. It is really the paint plastered with dirt. I understand he is somewhat dissatisfied now, because I did not pay him what I am paying [J. A.] Burgess to do my work. He says he shall take the manure from the farm—that is all the farm has yielded. I shall have Wallace ask him what he asks for the dressing and pay him, but I fear I have another just such in Benton. Brother Ings wrote to Bro. Leininger yesterday to learn what his purpose is in regard to the farm.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 6

I received a letter from Dr. Lay yesterday. What shall I say to him? If he cannot come soon, will it be any use for him to come at all? I send you the letter and Dr. Young's letter.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 7

I will not say what I think of her statements. She is certainly arrogant and gives evidence of her manner of working. I cannot know what to make of such a production, after writing her as I did in my last [letter]. I do not know what to write her. I shall take no more responsibility in her case than I have done. The least I am mixed up with her, the better. I never shouldered her and never shall, and fear I have done more than I ought to have done. I never could see that it would pay for her to take this medical course, and I see less in it now than I ever have before. Her throwing herself on me is unreasonable and ridiculous. I shall take no further burden in her case; shall not answer her letter.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 8

I have just been talking with Wallace. He says he went down last night and talked with Hemstreet. He has a different spirit. Says that there is something my due. He has not, as far as the rent is concerned, put in full time, and will make it right. I told Henry that I would make no claims upon him if he would only feel that he had had things his own way and [that] I had done all that I ought to have done by him. He says he will not remove the dressing, but I tell Henry to pay him, that there shall be no cause to feel that I would take the least advantage of a poor man. I may have to pay for the horse yet. He does not come right, yet he may. We are keeping it, seeing how the matter turns with him—if bad, I must pay for the horse, for he shall not lose a dollar. The horse was in my hands and that makes me responsible for it.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 9

Send me Michael's papers at once, and I will see him myself. If I can get anything, I will do so. Now please do not forget this.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 10

Mother.

P.S. You spoke of getting sugar peas, rice, and some staple articles. What will you do about it? In regard to that carpet, I hope you will not neglect to look it up, for I do not want it lost.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 11

Please look after these things for me.4LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 12

Mother.

Willie, I think I shall sell both places. If I can, I will. I must break up housekeeping. I cannot any longer bear the care and burdens. I will sell everything in Oakland and in Healdsburg, keep the place in St. Helena, board at the institute. I ought not to keep house. Let the girls go—Addie to learn some trade—May to do something, I cannot tell what. Sister [Jennie] Ings has too much care and burden and ought not to be situated as she is. She thinks she does too much work. I think so too. Sister McOmer can go to Crystal Springs. I shall put both my places in the market, [but] not to furnish means for Sister Young.⁴*LtMs, Lt 42, 1884, par. 13*

Mother.

Lt 43, 1884

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

March 18, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie:

I received a letter from Sister Coolidge for the money lent me one year ago. I am perplexed. I can find no writing, except the one calling for $1,000.00. Is there any more due her? Let me know at once. Brother Bolton will let me have a couple thousand. He has bought him a place, but he is desirous to get all the interest he can get. He will not let it go short of seven percent. What think you? Shall I give him eight if he will not let me have the money for seven? Answer by telegram at once.4LtMs, Lt 43, 1884, par. 1

How much do I owe Sister Coolidge, and interest? I must send [it] as soon as possible. I am trying to write with my tired head. I think I am some better in my head; sleep a little more. These rainy days, do not go out much.4LtMs, Lt 43, 1884, par. 2

I hear Sawyer is coming the first of next month, but what his purpose is, about the place I cannot tell. Henry has been up there at work with [J. A.] Burgess the last two days. Today they plow. I think it is the dirtiest place I have ever been in, everything neglected, but we will slick it up before Brother Leininger sees it again. Nobody would want to purchase such a looking place. I am sure it is the best for me to have no home here and free myself from care. I wish you would try to sell the places on 38th Street if you can.4LtMs, Lt 43, 1884, par. 3

I would sell for three thousand. Cannot this be done?4LtMs, Lt 43, 1884, par. 4

Mother.

Lt 44, 1884

Children

Healdsburg, California

March 27, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 242.

Dear Children:

After we had arrived at Brother Chapman's, we saw prospects of rain and decided to come home. Started at one o'clock and arrived here at seven p.m. We found everything moving on as usual. Nothing new except letters—one, from St. John, I will send you. I think these people better be secured at once. I fear if they go to Battle Creek, Dr. [J. H.] Kellogg will secure them there. I think we must have them.4LtMs, Lt 44, 1884, par. 1

I do not think Bro. Driver wants my place. He does not say much. I was out with him nearly all day yesterday—although it rained some. There were no cheap places—everything is high, very high.4LtMs, Lt 44, 1884, par. 2

I think much of Brother Driver. He is a substantial man, a man of worth. I have told him not to be in a hurry, but to be perfectly at home until he shall look around the country. He seems to be pleased with Healdsburg.4LtMs, Lt 44, 1884, par. 3

I spoke to the college students yesterday in the parlor and shall speak to them occasionally while school lasts.4LtMs, Lt 44, 1884, par. 4

I see by appointments there are only three weeks left for me to close up my book. Dr. [E. J.] Waggoner is fearful I will not get through but I mean to by that time, if possible. I told Brother B. to send the five hundred to you.4LtMs, Lt 44, 1884, par. 5

Mother.

P.S. I send this little note for you to add what you will and send to Brother St. John. I do not think it will amount to much, the doctor spending much time at the sanitarium; but it seems to me that there is needed now the very men to take hold and do something with Chamberlain's help. I think they can do good service.4LtMs, Lt 44, 1884, par. 6

Mother.

Bring me another good fountain pen.4LtMs, Lt 44, 1884, par. 7

Lt 45, 1884

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

March 27, 1884

Previously unpublished.

[Willie:]

Willie, I spoke with Bro. Fay in regard to [a] sewing machine. He said he would let me have or rather let the Health Retreat have a Howe machine for $20.00. I think you had better purchase the machine and send it up to the Retreat, for they need it. It has been stormy all night and much of the time this afternoon. The mountains are all white with snow. Brother Driver may not come back till you come.⁴*LtMs, Lt 45, 1884, par. 1*

Mother.

Lt 46, 1884

White, W. C.

NP

April 26, 1884

Previously unpublished.

[Willie:]

Sister Davis and myself left Healdsburg with our horse and phaeton [and] rode thirty miles to Sister Chapman's. We intended to take the boat that night, but the Donahue boat was still eight miles farther and we feared we could not reach it in time. We had a very pleasant visit with Sister Chapman and her family. Thursday we left the pleasant home of our sister's for [the] Donahue boat. We had no trouble in getting our horse on the boat. Then the officials there took charge of him, so we had no more worry until we reached San Francisco.⁴*LtMs, Lt 46, 1884, par. 1*

Lt 47, 1884

Children

Los Angeles, California

May 15, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 246.

Dear Children:

I am feeling some better than I did. I had an appointment last evening, but it had been rather a disagreeable day and my lungs were congested, and in my feebleness I dared not venture to talk. It was lowery and rainy, and my brethren favored me. Brother Waggoner preached and they had a good meeting.4LtMs, Lt 47, 1884, par. 1

Came down to the early morning meeting. I spoke about fifteen minutes, and it was the best social meeting we have had. Brother Cody came only last Monday intending to go back today, but we are urging him to stay. Brother Yoakman came Monday from Lemore but had the ague and went back Tuesday. No one has come from San Diego. The attendance of brethren is small; outside attendance [is] the very best.4LtMs, Lt 47, 1884, par. 2

Sister McOمبر bathes me in bed and rubs me every morning and night. I am still weak indeed, but am able to attend one meeting daily and some days two. Sister McOمبر is faithful as the day is long, tender, attentive, and at times, as she sees my feebleness, appears in agony because she cannot do more.4LtMs, Lt 47, 1884, par. 3

This meeting is doing the church great good. They are learning more than they ever knew before.4LtMs, Lt 47, 1884, par. 4

Will you write to Dr. Smith and talk with Sister Sawyer? I believe he will be the one to come to the Health Institute, if you can get him. All are doing, I believe, their level best to make this meeting a success.4LtMs, Lt 47, 1884, par. 5

Mother.

Lt 47a, 1884

Ings, Sr.

Refiled as Lt 27, 1884.

Lt 47b, 1884

Brisbin, W. L.

Duplicate of Lt 28, 1884.

Lt 48, 1884

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

July 7, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear son Willie:

I am in my mountain home; everything here is quietness and peace. I long for this, but some way my mind is exercised in regard to those eastern meetings. I shall not be obliged to leave this coast before the first of August. In that time I can do all essential upon my book and see that it is completed. That is all that I can do on it. I do not know certainly that I shall go, but my mind is drawn that way by night and by day. I cannot close my mind to it, for it will force itself upon me every few moments. It may not be my duty. It is not my choice, by any means. Sister McOmber will go East this fall. She thinks she must be with her mother. If Edson and Emma [White] do not go with me, she will accompany me whithersoever I go, if I desire it. If Edson and Emma will go, then Sister McOmber need not go; so it will be a saving of expense. Sister McOmber will go anyhow, she says, so you see how the matter stands. 4LtMs, Lt 48, 1884, par. 1

I think of these large meetings, so many of them; and I was so weak when I went East before, I could not accomplish that which I desired; but if I am even as well as I am now, I could do much better work with the help of God than last year. I do think that just this year in these appointed meetings I could do much work for the Master. 4LtMs, Lt 48, 1884, par. 2

In that case, I cannot be at the camp meeting in California this year, but one camp meeting should not stand in the way of five or six. Should I decide to go East, [I] will come to Oakland this week. Will you lay this matter before Elder Waggoner and pray over it as I am doing? 4LtMs, Lt 48, 1884, par. 3

I find myself rather exhausted, but of good courage. Wrote yesterday seventeen pages, part for Volume Four. I think my writing on it is about done. Just as long as I exercise my mind on it, there will be something more to write. I shall never feel that I am through. The matter must be left in this way—that it is not possible for me to crowd into this volume all I have to write, so that what I shall write more fully, if I ever do, my enemies will not have a chance to make a handling of it.4LtMs, Lt 48, 1884, par. 4

Willie, the long lost carpet has come. It has been in Santa Rosa all this time. It was not injured for it was done up nicely.4LtMs, Lt 48, 1884, par. 5

I hear nothing more in regard to Leininger; shall send him a letter today. I should return and spend the winter here.4LtMs, Lt 48, 1884, par. 6

Mother.

Lt 49, 1884

Children

Kansas City, Missouri

August 10, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 11MR 145-146.

Dear Children:

It is Sunday morning. I ought to have written you as soon as we came, but the cars were delayed. We had only time to get here and get our baggage all settled, and the Sabbath was come. So I did not write, but will say we had a pleasant time at Denver.⁴*LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 1*

Brother Jones rushed into the cars [and] took us across the tracks to [the] depot. [It was] raining smartly, and Brother Someone (his name I cannot remember) was waiting with [a] hack and took us about two miles to the tent. We found them very conveniently and comfortably fixed. There were two small tents carpeted, furnished with beds, besides a double tent, or two tents together, with [a] kitchen stove and everything for living. Then there was the large tent. I unpacked my fruit at once—every bit of it, with the exception of three tomatoes—and gave it to Brother Jones. He packed it in a little box and sent it to his wife and children.⁴*LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 2*

I was requested to speak a short time to the canvassers [and] I told them I would. Notice was soon given by sending different ones in different directions informing our brethren that I would speak. One man was so zealous [that] he walked four miles to notify one family. We had quite a little company assembled. I spoke to them one hour, and all seemed to be pleased. A man and woman came in and seated themselves after a while. I began to have impressions that the countenance of the woman was familiar, and soon I discovered Fred Walling. The woman was his mother, sitting by the side of her husband Dunn. Before her was a lad of about ten years, the same [one] that had crossed the snowy range with us. Now, how they ever knew I was to speak, I cannot tell. It may be they were passing and heard me speaking. I expected they would come and speak to me, but they all passed out, and I was relieved. An interview might not have been agreeable to either party. 4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 3

We had a very pleasant season with our brethren, then were taken in the hack back to [the] depot. From this point we had a dusty time. Could not sleep well. The smoke from [the] engine was blown back, and it was very strong. Throat and lungs were severely affected with this coal smoke. But all this is over. We are at Edson's. He is pleasantly situated in a location separate from other houses and standing high and dry. The location is every way better than the one they had before. I cannot write all I would be pleased to write, for I am not feeling much life and energy. Had severe pain in my heart yesterday. Today my hip troubles [me] considerably. 4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 4

I find that Iowa camp meeting can be made on my way to [the] New York meeting. I can spend four days there and then have six days for Syracuse. What think you of that arrangement? I seem to feel it may be a little hard on me, but it may do [a] little more good, and the blessed Saviour has plenty of strength to give for just such needy ones as I. But do you think it will be robbing New York of that which is their due? But some way it seems right to go with Edson to Marshalltown, Iowa, and spend Thursday, Friday, Sabbath, and Sunday there, and Sunday night start for Chicago. 4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 5

Edson says [that] in that case I must send my tickets back to you to be used at some [other] time. He says they would gladly pay my extra expenses to Marshalltown and on from there to Chicago. I think the arrangements will be made for me to attend the camp meetings in Nebraska and in Independence, Missouri, after the Michigan meeting. Then if they still insist, I will attend the General Conference. If not, will go toward home in California. Edson cannot attend the camp meetings with me, for his business requires his presence. He can attend meetings within range of his business, but if he goes a distance, his business will suffer. He has no responsible man here and cannot get one until too late to accompany me. He wants to go wonderfully, but I am glad he feels inclined to stick to his business; but, Willie, it would give character to my work if one of my sons could attend me as I journey. It must be so in the future.4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 6

Now, Willie, I want you no longer to be keeping a boarding house. I want you to be making arrangements to connect your interest with me and do my business and have a share equal, equal share with myself.4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 7

[Apparently from a later letter written from Worcester, Mass.]4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 8

I have received one little letter from you since I came from Oakland, one from Marian [Davis]. You are many; I am one, with work enough before me to almost frighten me, but I am calling upon God. He will help me. He has promised it. I shall not be discouraged one bit.4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 9

Elder [S. N.] Haskell goes to Portland [directly] from here. Brother Roberson goes with him to help him to arrange for the meeting. We dare not trust Brother Goodrich, for he is so slow to act. I shall not feel any security in leaving matters in the hands of Elder Goodrich and those who live in Portland. I expect tomorrow morning we shall go to Vermont, [and] get there the same night.4LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 10

September 2, 1884

Dear Children:

Yesterday I had rather a hard day's labor. I was in the morning meeting and occupied about one-half hour. The galleys of proof I read. Wrote some then. Then there was [a] baptism. Twenty were baptized. We had a large crowd of outsiders. I spoke to them from the words, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow." [Matthew 6:28.] I had the most perfect freedom and clearness in presenting the subject. Then I visited a sick woman and prayed with her in agricultural hall, sister of the man who takes charge of the grounds. She has just had a tumor removed from the abdomen, weighing forty pounds. She is doing well. She had one of my volumes. One and another had contributed eighty cents, and I went to the stand and purchased the other two volumes and Early Writings. They were very thankful.⁴*LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 11*

I can write no more now. Just came in from [the] morning meeting. Had a good parting meeting. We have decided to go to South Lancaster for a little change and get on the Vermont ground Wednesday night.⁴*LtMs, Lt 49, 1884, par. 12*

Mother.

Lt 50, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Kansas City, Missouri

August 13, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear children, Willie and Mary:

I thought you would want to hear in regard to our plans. Edson [White] and Emma [White] go with us to Marshalltown, Iowa. We take the six o'clock train this evening. We shall spend four days at this camp meeting and then go on to Syracuse to be at the last week of their meeting. This looked right to me. Edson obtained half-fare tickets to Chicago and [a] permit to tarry at Marshalltown. We have to leave the direct route and go a short distance on another road. Emma goes with me the rounds at the camp meeting. Edson will join us when he can, but his business is such he cannot leave it. Trunks came all right. They are checked for Marshalltown.⁴*LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 1*

The time we have spent here has been very busily occupied. There have been efforts made in Lawrence about sixty miles from here. Brothers Barton and Enoch have been at work there. There has been a church raised up of about forty in all. They have drawn into the net of truth one woman, a remarkable case, Mrs. McCullouch, a great money speculator, speculator in lands, grain, and everything where there is any show of money. She does an immense business. Well, this woman has powers adapted to just such a work. She is a woman of commanding appearance, of wonderful influence. She is worth one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and this woman has embraced the Sabbath. She has purchased a library of our publications, the four she had paid for.⁴*LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 2*

I had an opportunity to talk much to this lady, being in trade, and I hope she will come heart and soul into the whole truth as it is in Jesus. She asked many, many questions. I told her frankly the truth.

I told her that money, the handling of money, was a part of existence, but there was a greater work for her to do than this— [working for] the souls of men and women for whom Christ has died. “I will make a man more precious than fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir.” Isaiah 13:12.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 3

There was work for her to do; there were faculties she was to exercise and develop [in] her work and enlarged powers she would take with her into the future, immortal life. But all the work she was now doing would not, could not, be carried on in the future life; therefore, her life work would tell nothing there. 4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 4

I said many plain things to her, which I hope will be thought of hereafter. Money or the handling of large business is her element or her God. She is awakening upon some points. She has large moneys of an infidel invested with her money. He is a foul blasphemer, and she has decided she cannot have his means mixed up with hers. She is a woman of keen sensibilities and acute discernment. She has peculiar powers of intuition, and all these powers are valuable. I tell her, they belong to God, to be used not in the world, but for the glory of God. 4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 5

Well, we must wait and see what will come of this singular acquisition to the truth. She has supported the work being done in Lawrence. She has an immense skating rink, which she opened and used for meetings. She expected many would come into the truth, and to have only twenty-five or thirty adults seems to her small business. She opens her princely establishment for Brother Barton and Bro. Enoch and their wives, and she seems to be willing and thankful for the opportunity. But we will leave her now and write of something else. 4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 6

Bro. Cudney heard I was to be here. He came down yesterday and he solicited my attendance at the Omaha meeting, to commence [the] 24th [and continue] to the 30th. Brother [G. I.] Butler writes that it is a week too early, earlier than he told them to have the meeting. Brother Cudney thus understood him, and he has made arrangements for the meeting with the railroad officials. I told him they could extend the meeting one week, to the 6th of October, and the first week have someone, at least, who could be there to speak and attend to much of their business that could be done, and then the last week we would come in to take hold in earnest. He has written to Brother Butler about it. In this case, I could not attend the Indiana meeting, but I was there last year and I think I ought to attend the meeting at Omaha.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 7

To say the very least, you must consider I am getting older every year. I need you. If you do accept this offer, I will pay you weekly a sum that will be as much as you receive now. This looks right to me. We will work either at Healdsburg or St. Helena this winter, probably at Healdsburg. You may occupy the house with us, have Anna and Mother Kelsey with us and your family, and let us be united in our efforts. Sell your place, if you can. Think of these things candidly and prayerfully. There is now a good boarding house so that the necessity is not now so great for you to remain where you are to make a home for the young. Edson works very hard. He feels much cramped and worked up about things at Battle Creek. They crowd him and hurt him unnecessarily. I think it will be essential for you to be at Battle Creek at General Conference, if not before, to accompany me, but I will see and test matters still further.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 8

Emma is very thin and poor in health. I do not think she will accompany me. [She] is willing to do so if I say that I want her, but if Edson does not go, I think she had better not go. Now I have written quite fully.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 9

A woman has just embraced the truth in Lawrence. She wished to see me. Edson telegraphed that I was here, and a dispatch has just come that she will be here at six o'clock today. She is a woman in possession of property and wants some advice about the matter.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 10

Bro. and Sister Shireman are living in this city. They want to do missionary work on their own responsibility and try to work with persons and introduce the truth to individuals.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 11

Edson seems to be anxious to do all he can, in any way he can work. He wants no pay for his time, only his expenses for traveling paid. He has been unable to do much for months on account of [buying?]. Now he says nothing is in the way, but to go ahead. He feels very hopeful. He has another book, Breakfast, Dinner, and Supper, for public sale. It is a good thing; it has been much of it [done] by himself. Mary Clough has done some; William Gage, some. He found his large book was wanted, but many could not take it because they could not go so high. This will go with the other, both canvassed for; this will be much cheaper, so it will go. He hired seven hundred dollars to get this out. The work had been paid for, before [completion of] the material or matter composing the book. I know so little about business. I cannot tell much about it. Edson wants so much to see you and talk with you.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 12

Well, I found out I could not get this in before night, and I concluded to write [as] fully as I could. When I get to Marshalltown, will write you again. Edson has a Sabbath school in his house every Sabbath. There are three families that attend. He says he will try to have meetings every Sunday evening when he is here. He will speak to them on Bible subjects. When he is absent, Bro. Shireman will hold Bible readings. Thus they are trying with a little leaven to do what they can. I think this is a good plan. They are going to advertise for meetings here every Sunday, and may the Lord bless their efforts is my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 13

I shall make the most of my little time to rest, but I cannot spend my strength in private conversation to entertain those who have no real claim upon me. It really tires me more than giving an address in public.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 14

May the Lord bless you, all those working for me, and those working for the interest of the meetings in the tent.4LtMs, Lt 50, 1884, par. 15

Mother.

Lt 51, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Marshalltown, Iowa

August 16, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear children, Willie and Mary:

It is evening after the Sabbath. Thursday at about half past six, we left Kansas City. Edson and Emma [White] accompanied us. We all had half rates and privilege of the chair car, but I could not rest or sleep. Edson and Emma obtained a berth for me in the sleeper, but I slept but little that night. We left the train at three o'clock in the morning. We hired a room at the Eldon house and we occupied it and all slept considerable, one on the floor, three of us on the one bed in the room. The cars were thundering all the time, coming and going and making up trains, but wonder of wonders, I slept.⁴*LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 1*

We took the cars again at 8:00 a.m., rode a short distance to Givin, and had to lay over again until four o'clock in the afternoon. We found a grove near and took our writing and dinner out in the grove and had a very pleasant picnic. Some slept. I wrote out some matter to be used in Testimony No. 32. It cost us, including all expenses, fifteen dollars to reach the encampment.⁴*LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 2*

I spoke Friday morning [at the] 5 o'clock meeting and [in the] evening at the commencement of the Sabbath to one thousand people. I had great freedom and the people listened earnestly. Many outsiders were present. Several carriages were in the road, listening during the services.⁴*LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 3*

In the night Emma was sick. I tried to find some things for Edson, who occupied the next tent. Had a serious time with my left arm, that dulled so I had but little sleep.⁴*LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 4*

In the early morning meeting I spoke a short time; directly after breakfast, spoke for about thirty minutes to the ministers alone. I talked very plainly and pointedly in regard to the state of the cause in the conference. Many wept. Then I was present at the Sabbath school. Spoke about twenty minutes to the Sabbath school. We had a very interesting school. Edson managed the school efficiently and acceptably to all. In the afternoon I spoke upon Joshua and the angel. Deep feeling was in the congregation. The tent was full. Seven carriages were drawn up to listen and remained during the entire services. Many outsiders were in. There was deep feeling in the meeting. Many wept. Their heads were bowed down and they seemed to feel deeply. Oh, that God would impress hearts!4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 5

We made a call for those who wanted prayers to come forward. About one hundred responded. There was a deep feeling throughout the congregation. After some time spent in hearing the testimonies of those who came forward, we had a season of prayer and then divided up in companies to carry on the work in different tents, and the Lord wrought by His Spirit in these tents. Some brought in excellent reports of these meetings, but the work must go deeper and more general. I am weary tonight.4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 6

August 17, 1884

We all slept well last night. I sweat profusely in that left arm, was as if bathed in water. I took sponge bath, went in early morning meeting, spoke about twenty minutes. We are making progress. The work is deepening. Many heartfelt testimonies were borne. Four were on their feet at the same time, and we had to close when the interest was steadily increasing.4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 7

As soon as we had taken breakfast and had attended prayers, we, Edson and I, went into the minister's meeting. I talked with them most earnestly and pointedly for about thirty minutes. There were several who wept freely. At half past two p.m., spoke to a full tent with great freedom [on] the subject [of] the lawyer who asked Jesus what he should do to have eternal life. [Luke 10:25.] Many outsiders were present. There would have been a large crowd today, but it has rained all night and much of the time today. They are now having a Bible reading. Edson is having a meeting with the children and youth. I never saw Edson in the place he is now; evidently the Spirit of the Lord is working with him. He is doing all he can as he is now situated and means to do all he can. He has excellent ideas of work and his labors are appreciated. He worked earnestly in the Sabbath school. He has a canvassing class for which he is working. He has a love for the work. I hope he will ere long be able to give himself wholly to the work. He seems to have precious ideas and he labors well upon temperance. 4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 8

Tomorrow I talk to parents in regard to their duty to their children and attend the early morning meeting, ministers' meeting. At half past six we go to the train, ride about thirty miles, stay over night at hotel, take the cars then direct for Chicago. From Chicago, take cars for Battle Creek and make no change until we get to Syracuse by the way of Buffalo. I am desirous Emma shall accompany me, for I think it will do her good, but she has acute attacks of most stubborn pains in the pit of her stomach. I think I shall venture to have her go. There are those who will take care of me where we shall go. It is not as if we were traveling west and among those who do not know me well. I will now let this rest until tomorrow. 4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 9

Sister McOmer is reluctant to leave me, while Emma is so poorly. She fears I will not have proper care, but I will risk it. 4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 10

I shall expect to hear from you at Syracuse. 4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 11

Monday morning [I] attended the early morning meeting. Spoke earnestly for thirty minutes. Edson had been holding meeting with the teachers in Sabbath school in another tent. He came for me to talk to them. I spoke thirty minutes to them in a very pointed manner, showing them their responsibility as teachers, then took breakfast. Then I went directly to ministers' meeting, put in one hour of hard labor. Then there was a breaking down and many confessions were made with the deepest feeling. Many tears were shed and there was a good work wrought. One young minister confessed he had felt hard as a stone all through these meetings. He had really despised the testimonies borne of reproof, showing them they must have the Spirit of God with them in their labor. Other confessions were made and the work we felt was begun which would let the light into the meetings.4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 12

I did not intend to go in meeting again, but at two o'clock I went under the tent and spoke for one hour. Many outsiders were present. We called them forward for prayers, about two hundred [came]. Many were youth and children. It was a time of deep feeling. We had an earnest season of prayer, and then the meeting was divided into three parties. The ones who came forward were taken into a tent by themselves to be labored with.4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 13

Edson is now holding meeting in the Sabbath school interest. He has worked heartily, interestedly and efficiently in many branches of Sabbath school, of temperance, and in instructing canvassers. But he had a meeting for the children, and he conducted this ably. He was intensely interested and blest, himself. He is doing all he can, fettered with debt as he is. And he has the fear of God before him, and his heart is very tender.4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 14

In about one hour we take the cars for Chicago. I do not know as we can get a berth, for we have need of it very much. I have worked tremendously. God has given me strength, or I could never have done it. There were but two who could lift here, and the heaviest weight came on me. I have tried to stir things and I think things will move differently in Iowa than they have done. Brother [G. I.] Butler comes the last of this week. When the reenforcement comes, we hope that they will continue to progress, for the work is well started. I am real tired for I have spoken in all about five hours today, beside praying three times.4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 15

Mother.

Please send this to Sister [Jennie] Ings after you read it, and it will save my writing to her.4LtMs, Lt 51, 1884, par. 16

Lt 52, 1884

White, W. C.

Syracuse, New York

August 20, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie:

I have had some talk with Brother [S. N.] Haskell, and from that which I have been myself able to see, I cannot see how it is possible to spare one laborer. It was a real pitiful thing to see the large number out at Iowa and no one calculated to understand the situation but Brethren Farnsworth and Olsen. They were very hoarse, and the rest were young men who knew not how to lift. The Lord helped me to work, and I think there is a right mold on the meetings. Here you see are so many camp meetings running that all are not thoroughly manned, and this is sad to think of. The meetings are in large places and need the wisest generalship to do what they ought to do. 4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 1

Elder Haskell should be at the General Conference and Michigan camp meetings. Could not Elder Waggoner leave California in season to attend on his way the Omaha and Independence camp meetings? I think it would be well for him to do this. Elder Haskell would have me be at the dedication of the school and boarding house, which will be arranged after the camp meetings. 4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 2

Brother Oviatt wants a meeting again in Pennsylvania, but they are laying out too great an amount of work for me. I cannot see how I can do it all. Elder Haskell says if he can be of service this winter in California in going from church to church, he can do more than in a camp meeting. What think you of this? Will it not be better? You have now Elder Waggoner, Corliss, Jones, Loughborough, beside other help as Ballou and St. John, if he is able, [and] Bro. Briggs, who should certainly attend your camp meeting. I think you will do very well for help. Consider the proposition in reference to Elder

Haskell's coming in the winter to California.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 3

I think I shall speak this evening. It is oppressively warm. Elder [Uriah] Smith is here, also his wife, Brother Wilber Whitney, Brother Cottrell and Brown. Haskell leaves tomorrow or tonight, so you see this meeting is feebly manned. I mean to [start] in early and get away next Monday, if possible. I am enduring the heat well, but it is terrible.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 4

Mother.

Thursday Morning, August 21

Brother Smith has just informed me that George Lay has made an assignment. The facts are these: He [was] engaged in business with his son-in-law, Lane, who is not a safe businessman. This Lane was connected with a party in partnership. These men did not like the way of Lay and Lane doing business and refused to be connected with them for the principles upon which they had done business were objectionable. The result was, Lay pompously bought them out and established his manufacturing works directly opposite theirs, using the same signs, doing business in the name of these men who had been their partners. These men complained of this and threatened the law against them. Lay asked what they would settle the matter for. The parties said eight thousand dollars.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 5

They had been damaged that amount. Lay pompously told them he would pay no eight thousand dollars. They might law it as much as they pleased. He had money and would law it as long as they would. Well, the result was, judgment was obtained against George Lay for fifty-eight thousand dollars. He lost five thousand by fire. This has broken him down financially. There are men in Monterey, Elder Smith says, that heard me make the statement to George Lay in the last conversation I had with him, that he would be lifted up because of his prosperity in making money and for a time God would bear with him, test him, to see what he would do. But he might gather, and if he abused his God-given powers to place his affection on his property and exalt himself, God would show him how quickly He could scatter his possessions because he did not honor God with his substance and lifted himself up against the God of heaven.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 6

Elder Haskell remains today. Tomorrow he goes to the Worcester camp meeting. This leaves them really short handed. May the Lord give me strength, is my prayer, to say and do all that I ought to do. He will do it.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 7

I attended the morning meeting and spoke to them quite pointedly. We long to see the Lord work here. I am so glad to receive your letter from home. Write me as often as you can if you expect me to write to you real often. I shall expect letters often. Don't disappoint me. There is a meeting now in this tent, the auditing committee.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 8

Bro. Oviatt says that from that meeting held in Pennsylvania, there went out an influence that has done a work all through their section as was never known to be done in any winter before. The result is one hundred accessions to the truth.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 9

Courage and hope has inspired them since that meeting. This is good news.4LtMs, Lt 52, 1884, par. 10

Mother.

Lt 53, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Syracuse, New York

August 20, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in TSB 202; 12MR 269.

Dear Willie and Mary:

We arrived here all right at half past one o'clock. No one was at the depot to meet us, but we engaged a hack and it took us to the ground. This is a large encampment, but I think it is no larger than the one in Iowa. I was astonished at its size and at the large number that attended the meeting. Brother [S. N.] Haskell is speaking.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 1

Emma [White] came along with us. I thought it might benefit her healthwise. She is having another painful season with her stomach.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 2

We left Marshalltown about half past six o'clock, took [a] sleeper, and came northwestern route to Chicago. Brother [G. B.] Starr, his wife, and Brother Sawyer met us. We took omnibus to the other depot, Michigan Central. We left Chicago about eight o'clock. We had more dust from this point than any of the past journey. We tarried over one train to Battle Creek. Then I heard that little Mabel Kelsey was dying of consumption. As she was then in the death struggle, I did not go to see her. They say the grandfather and mother have been keeping the Sabbath since the death of their daughter. Little Mabel has a very precious record as a child of God. Sweet child, let her rest in Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 3

I called upon Aunt Mary just a few moments. I found a large family, Schroder family. The children were noisy and he was a hard, miserable being. She had received no rent for five weeks. She looks very thin and feeble. I shall make some decided arrangements for her before we leave for California.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 4

Brother Palmer says he has written to you in regard to the insurance. If the house is not insured, it should be at once. He says you have all the papers, and you have not answered his letter at all. If you have the insurance, they can get pay for the damage done to the house. Please attend to this immediately. Write something at once so that we may know what to do.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 5

We took [a] good bath at [the] sanitarium, then we again took [the] sleeper. We had forgotten to buy a section in Chicago so we could get no berth, but I tried the upper berth and I did well. This morning when the lower berth occupants crept out of their berth, so black, so fearful looking, I was glad I was where the cinders and coal dust did not reach me. But it was bad enough for us, all hot and dusty.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 6

Received a letter from Brother B.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 7

We have some hard labor to do here. There was a spirit on the ground of lightness. The young men were mating up the young girls and when reprov'd, were, some of them, defiant, hard-hearted, reckless. We had to get this cleared away before we could get the spirit of freedom into our meeting. But Sabbath everything seemed to break away. Elder Fifield, who has been preaching, had been running after the girls, married women, and widows, and this seemed to be his inclination out of the desk, from state to state. Sunday morning I called him out by name and told him and all present we had no use for any such men, for they would only make the work of the burden-bearing laborers double what it was now.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 8

If they would only take themselves out of the way and act out just what was in their heart, without doing this evil work under a pretense of godliness, the cause would be relieved. He has made no confession yet. Do not know as he will do so. But light came into our meetings, and the young who had been following his example came out decidedly and confessed their wrong course of action. When will those who profess Christ be wise?4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 9

Yesterday I spoke to the crowd on temperance. There are many convicted on the truth. Some have decided to obey the commandments of God.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 10

This meeting has been very trying. We have had dog days weather—rain and a depressing atmosphere, oppression in breathing. Today I am able to breathe more freely, thank the Lord.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 11

I think of you all. I pray for you and I believe we shall see God working with our efforts. Do not be faithless. Ask and believe and receive, that your joy may be full. According to our faith so it shall be unto us.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 12

The people of temperance in the city sent a request for me to speak at five o'clock, but we would not divert the interest from this point. Brother Haskell and [Uriah] Smith have labored hard. Brother Smith takes especial pains to vindicate the testimony and show the necessity of our having this gift in the church. When reproof is given, he is right on hand to stand by them and impress them upon the people as the greatest blessing God has ever vouchsafed to them as a people, which constitutes them as God's chosen ones, preparing to stand in the day of the Lord. We seem to draw in even cords now, and I hope the enemy will have no power to separate us again.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 13

[Apparently from a different letter written about the same time:]4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 14

Then immediately following this, will be a camp meeting in Independence, ten miles from Kansas City. I could attend this meeting in Kansas also. Then, if I must needs do so, [I] will go back to General Conference. Perhaps Elder Waggoner could attend both these meetings held in October and yourself, if you come, Willie. I mean to trust in the Lord and do all I can on this visit to the camp meetings. I hope and pray that your meetings will prove a success in Oakland, and especially that you may see of the salvation of God in your camp meeting.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 15

My heart is fixed, trusting in God. I think Edson is altogether in the best place religiously he has been in for years. I cannot see why his business should not be finally successful. I am glad we have helped him. Emma seems well, but is not strong now. Will improve. She decided to go with me, was really anxious to go. Edson will be with me at these Western meetings. I dare not say one word to urge him to go to the more distant meetings, for I know he greatly desires to go and he lifts a cross in remaining away from them. But I wish he could go. It would do him good and he could help me.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 16

If you can get out the books so that they can be had at the camp meetings, I would engage to sell all I could myself, and these large sums paid to canvassers, I could have myself.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 17

Well, Willie, write me. Tell Marian [Davis] to write Eliza, and Mary [to] write. I want to hear from you all very, very much. I am thankful I am as well as I am.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 18

We awoke this morning with heavy thunder and vivid lightening. It is now nine o'clock and the storm continues. The dust will be laid and we shall, I think, have a pleasant journey. I think of you all, every one—Mother Kelsey, Anna, and little Ella May [White] comes in for a large share of tender love and thoughts. I see Marian at work, so busy. God bless the dear child. To me she is as precious as gold. I appreciate Eliza's work above gold, and Mary, my faithful daughter. Mary her price is above rubies. May the Lord deal very tenderly with my precious Mary is my heart's wish and earnest prayer. Willie, I think of you so much, steady, earnest, constantly at work. God sees it all and will by and by say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Matthew 25:21.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 19

Pray for me. I believe you do this.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 20

Willie, I send back this ticket. See if you can get the time extended, and see if [in] the place of "McOmber," you can get "attendant" inserted. I can use it from Omaha back to Chicago.4LtMs, Lt 53, 1884, par. 21

Mother.

Lt 54, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Syracuse, New York

August 22, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie and Mary:

I have just come from the stand from speaking to a large congregation of most interested listeners. I had freedom in speaking. Last night Elder [S. N.] Haskell left us. This morning at half past five I went into the morning meeting. Before there was a prayer offered, I invited those who had not a living connection with God to come forward, those who had backslidden from God and those who wished to become Christians, to separate themselves from the congregation and thus testify they were seeking the Lord. Nearly the entire congregation came forward, and what a change a few minutes made from stiffness and formality, coldness and hard-heartedness to deep feelings of penitence, confession, and contrition. There seemed to be heart work. We had another meeting of the same kind at nine o'clock. I labored considerably in these meetings, then went into a meeting or the meeting was held in our tent in the outer court. Two small tents are pitched side by side [near] the larger tent. This leaves a court or hall with [a] table for dining [and] for writing for the ministers. 4LtMs, Lt 54, 1884, par. 1

They are trying to raise means to cancel the debts in the conference. It is slow work. I talked several times in this meeting, but everything comes by the hardest. My work is now done for today. I am tired. Yesterday [I] was in morning meeting and a meeting of certain ones assembled to raise means. I talked some but had a hard day; inflammation of the eye affected my whole nervous system. I just worked with it all day. It is better today, and I am so grateful that I could speak to the people this day as I have done. I seem to draw the people. It is the Lord. I will praise Him who is the light of my countenance and my God. I will, as soon as I can get time, give a little sketch of my journey and labors. I have been so full of labor and care and traveling [that] I cannot write much, but I mean to write you often, just a little if no more. I think they are indeed poorly provided for [in respect to] the real working element in this meeting. May the Lord work, is my prayer. There is certainly a break here now, and this afternoon God helped me. I know it, I know it! They need the testimony God has given me here as much as in any place I am acquainted with.4LtMs, Lt 54, 1884, par. 2

Monday night I shall go to Worcester, ride all night, reach there in the morning. I am harassed continually about that Volume Four. Do make haste with it and get it off. The people are so anxious for it. I feel deeply in regard to you all in Oakland.4LtMs, Lt 54, 1884, par. 3

Pray with all your might. Pray that God shall work. Just had chance to send this to office. Pray for us.4LtMs, Lt 54, 1884, par. 4

Mother.

Lt 54a, 1884

Children (?)

Benecia, California

Circa May, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 19MR 283-286.

The sleeping car conductor spoke to the gentlemen in the seat with us [asking them] to go in another car, so we have the whole seat to ourselves. We are pleasantly situated. We are delayed—a box is heated, a fire smelling badly—but we are now started again. I shall endure the journey well, I think.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 1

May 9

Since writing the above we have had some experience. I realized difficulty in breathing and was greatly annoyed by the effluvia of tobacco, but as I had crossed the continent from the Pacific to the Atlantic nineteen times, I had found [that] on the Northern route there could be secured in the sleeper every convenience without the annoyance of being obliged to inhale tobacco-poisoned air.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 2

Once only was I grievously troubled. My husband and I were situated in the car opposite a gentleman, his wife, and daughter. This gentleman was a steamboat inspector. He smoked in the cars. Others took lenity from him and they smoked. We changed our seat for the smoke room which could be closed. I thought we were safe, but I realized no relief. I used lemon freely but felt the same strange emotion, and the tobacco-poisoned air was the same as in any [other] part of the car. I was determined to endure it and I laid down, but my head felt that a tight band was drawn around it. I was unable to think and soon went into a spasm. It was one hour before this was overcome and I was relieved, but with a strange sensation of giddiness and weakness which lasted me three months.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 3

The smoking steamboat inspector was told it was the tobacco

smoke which had acted like poison upon me. He threw away his cigar and we had no more smoking on the train. A physician on board stated that he feared it was to me a fatal poison and that I would never become conscious again. He told me never to consent to be in the room or in the car, carriage, or steamboats where I would be obliged to breathe the air poisoned by tobacco, for he had in his practice treated many cases of mothers and children with affection of the heart caused by living in and inhaling constantly tobacco-poisoned air. Notwithstanding he warned the husband and father of the sure result, he thought there could have been no change, for the afflicted ones only lived a short time and were [as] verily poisoned to death as if a dose of arsenic or strychnine had been administered. The blood was poisoned.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 4

He further stated that a very large share of these wives and children who die with heart disease are purely the sure result of living in an atmosphere that is charged with tobacco. "Yours is," said he, "a miraculous escape. The twitching of the muscles of the face, the rigidity of the muscles followed with great prostration and relaxed muscles, are the sure tokens of poison. The violent action of the heart followed by a feeble, intermittent pulse, I have met it very many times. It is the effect of tobacco poison. Hundreds are falling victims to this plague of men's own creating, and then have to suffer the consequence of their own perverted habits. They sacrifice wife and children and themselves for [an] indulgence which is a curse to themselves and to all around them."4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 5

On this short trip I have suffered great pain in my heart and dullness of the head. I questioned whether it would be safe to lie down and attempt to sleep. I was very weary, but the drawing room opening directly into the car with the door open was devoted to smoking. A party of Germans were on the car, and their habits are to smoke almost constantly.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 6

I spoke to the ticket conductor. He said he had no control whatever of the passengers of the sleeping cars. He could do nothing. If the passengers wanted to smoke, they would, and no one could control the matter. I spoke to the porter, asking him if there was no place in the so-called palace car that I could be free from tobacco-poisoned air. He said he could not do anything; he was only a servant. I decided to try [to solve] the matter and went into my berth, drew the curtains as closely as possible about us, and opened the window; and, as there was no smoking after they took their berths, I [thought I] might sleep. In the morning I had a severe pain in my heart, and breathing was quite difficult.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 7

I had yet ten hours on the cars. Close by our seats the Germans began their devotion, to offer up their morning sacrifice. To whom—to the Creator or to the devil? I spoke to the conductor. He said he could not hinder them but would speak to them in regard to it. He did, and they desisted from smoking in that locality. They went into the rear department. In order to obtain correct information, [I] inquired of the sleeping car conductor. He says that it is the custom to devote one end of the car to smoking. As the door is either left wide open or continually opening and shutting, so that the smoke was fully and thoroughly distributed through the car. I know now what we had to hope for—nothing but poisoned air to breathe the entire journey. I must bear it as best I could.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 8

We passed over some striking scenery. We passed Sumner (?) some miles and there is much on this route that is interesting in the scenery. The engine is climbing up the steep ascent with two engines tugging laboriously with their load of coaches in their serpentine course, bearing to the right, [then] to the left, going through the heart of [the] mountains.4LtMs, Lt 54a, 1884, par. 9

Lt 55, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Syracuse, New York

August 24, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear children, Willie and Mary:

Our important meeting is now over. They estimate we have had from five to eight thousand people out, and the very best part of community. I never addressed a more noble appearing people. They listened, many with tears, while I spoke one hour and three quarters upon temperance. Then at the close of the meeting they came to my tent to speak to me and bid me Godspeed. One lady spoke to Emma [White] and said I was too tired, she knew, to be troubled with visitors, but could Mrs. White be prevailed upon to stay one more week and speak to the people. I could do so much good, that the congregation was composed of the very best class in the city, and if Mrs. White would only stay! Several have come and spoken with me, kissed me, and expressed their gratitude to God that they heard me—noble-looking, richly dressed ladies.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 1

Brother Whitney says just this one meeting alone would pay for all the efforts and expenses of the whole meeting. I bless the Lord that He gave me strength today.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 2

I am, of course, weary, but of good courage. Many say, "I hope this meeting will be reported in the papers, for we want it. It is too good to be lost, and we want to ever remember the ideas presented before us." I feel now that my work is about done.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 3

Tomorrow there will be twenty or thirty baptized. Oh, I am so grateful to the Lord that He can use me, a poor frail instrument to do His work. I am unworthy of this great honor.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par.

4

Several of the first-class ladies have urged me to go with them to their homes, but I have told them this was simply impossible because of other appointments. I leave for Worcester, Mass. tomorrow.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 5

Elder [Uriah] Smith spoke on the Sabbath question to a large congregation this morning, and this evening he speaks on the Eastern question. I feel so grateful that Brother Smith is not lost to the cause. He seems fully and thoroughly united with us; seems like Brother Smith of old. Oh, thank the Lord! Praise His Holy Name, that His love, His wondrous love has been exercised toward the children of men. It is so dark, I must stop. Will write you tomorrow.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 6

Aug. 25, 11:00 a.m

The first two pages were written Sunday after I had spoken to the crowd. The evening meeting was largely attended. Elder Smith spoke with great clearness, and many listened with open eyes, ears, and mouths. The outsiders seemed to be intensely interested in the Eastern question. He closed with a very solemn address to those who had not been preparing for these great events in the near future.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 7

This morning in [the] half-past-five meeting, many precious testimonies were borne. I spoke about twenty minutes. We then had a meeting of the ministers, licentiates, colporteurs, canvassers, and I talked with them about one hour in regard to the preparation essential to prepare them for the solemn work in which they were engaged.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 8

The ministers said these remarks were right to the point, good words of highest value. They begged me to come into the tract and missionary meeting, but I declined.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 9

Dr. Gibbs had been waiting to talk with me. He has cases of fever he must see through. We have just had a talk with him, and I am pleased with him. He is about thirty-three years old, black hair, dark eyes, rather young looking, of good address. I think he is just the man for us. He carries the highest recommendations. Studied in this very city. Has the first-class diploma. He graduated with the highest honors. 4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 10

He has believed the truth for six years, but his wife is the bitterest kind of an opposer. Says she will leave him if he goes with this people, but he has decided to obey the truth. He seems to be conscientious and his highest aims are to glorify God. He wants to do good. He seems to think it would be the highest blessing to be connected with the work of God where he could be a blessing to others. He is compassionate, tender, pitiful, and I think he will serve us well. 4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 11

He will, as soon as he can, settle his business, go to the sanitarium, and there learn something of the manner of treating the sick upon hygienic principles. Thinks if he can settle his business, he can do this in a few weeks and can be prepared to go back with us when I return to California. I asked him in regard to his wages. He will come for eight hundred dollars the first year, and his fare paid over; and he says if he sees the Health Retreat embarrassed, he will feel it a privilege to take hold and put his means into it, for he is not proposing to work for money. He wants to learn the ways of the Lord more perfectly. He wants to be fitting for heaven. He has an offer of three thousand dollars a year at Philadelphia, but in the light of this truth it would be at the loss of his soul. 4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 12

He says he was called away from his medical studies two years. His father died. He could not leave his mother in her bereavement. He took the farm and worked on it for two years and then, when the farm was sold, he returned to College [and] completed his course. He said, "I am a successful physician. I do not [say] this to praise myself but you want to know facts. I have mementos now awarded me for skillful practice in broken limbs and arms, shattered limbs, and removals of tumors. I can get large wages if I go to Philadelphia, but my soul is of more value than three thousand dollars multiplied." I will say I like his appearance much. He says you need not think I fear hard work or that I am not willing to be taught. He is [an] allopath. He says he has practiced eight years. His mother is a noble appearing woman. She was so anxious for her son that we should find a position for him among us, that I told her to telegraph for him. He has here, listened to the truth. He had tried to keep the Sabbath, but he says not as he should. Now he has enjoyed these meetings, every one of them. He took his stand publicly. He came forward Sabbath afternoon and bore his testimony. Seems to be firm and decided for the right and to appear to be a man of noble qualities of mind.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 13

Well, I have been called away to converse or advise with Isador Green, who wants to study for a physician, who, I think would make a failure. I do not think she has the qualifications for a physician. Well, I speak once more and then I am done, I hope. You see how faithful I am to you. Will you do as well among you all for me? May the Lord bless you. I have just bid Lucinda [Hall] and Emma White goodbye to go to the Abbey farm.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 14

I, [be] on to my work. Love to all in the household.4LtMs, Lt 55, 1884, par. 15

Mother.

Lt 56, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Syracuse, New York

August 24, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie and Mary:

Yesterday was a trying day for me. I was in the morning meeting and felt urged by the Spirit of the Lord to present before them the true state of indolence and indifference of the laymen [in] looking to and leaving the work to be done by the ministers, when every one of them that had reasoning powers when they became servants of Jesus Christ pledged themselves as men and women to labor in His service for wages, the gift of eternal life. Yet there were but very few who felt under any obligation to use their ability, their tact, their inventive powers, all their capacity in the interest of their Employer. They devoted all their powers to serving their own selfish interest, and if they did even care for their own souls, they neglected the souls around them, the property of the Master. This was their work, to labor in His vineyard, but their powers were reserved for themselves to glorify themselves, to devote to their different enterprises, and the very work they were hired to do they left undone. The Lord had not given them a different set of faculties than their ministering brethren, but their ministering brethren put them to work in the interest of the One who employed them, while the larger number neglect the appointed work given them by their Master and devoted all their time and powers to serving themselves.⁴*LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 1*

The worldly, temporal interest was made first; the Master's work came secondary or lastly and was in almost every case neglected and negligently done. This is the reason that the churches all through the land are in a neglected or languishing condition, like a neglected field left to haphazard, scarcely any time spent in its cultivation.⁴*LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 2*

I presented before them that the most terrible, fatal delusion was upon souls, that Satan had so blinded their understanding that they could not sense the claims of God upon them and neglected to use their powers in His service, robbing thier own souls of a genuine experience of the things of God and robbing the world of the light of a precious experience which should shine, through them that would constitute them the light of the world.4LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 3

I told them their ideas were all perverted. The things which should be the highest, the first, and that demanded the strength of thought, tact, wisdom, perseverance, diligence, earnest, and untiring effort, were almost wholly neglected for self-serving, self-pleasing. If they devoted a small remnant of their time to forethought, to study, to advance the cause of their Master, they thought the Lord was under obligation to them. Everything they had regarded in a perverted light, and when they came to their senses, they would see that they were symbolized [in a parable]. The man that Jesus addressed, "Son, go labor today in My vineyard," said, "Yea, Lord," but did not go. While the one who refused, repented, and went afterward. Which did the will of the Master, he who assented to the call but would not work, or he who refused and then afterward did repent and did work in the vineyard? [Matthew 21:28-31.]4LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 4

Now God wants workers and not those who claim to be obedient but do nothing to improve or exercise their ability in the very work they are bidden to do. These things are not urged home upon the people. The burden is borne too much by the ministers, and the laymen [are] left to employ all their powers in temporal, worldly things.4LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 5

Well, I tried to urge these things upon the people and they felt it. All day Sabbath we had a large congregation, as many outsiders as our own people. In the afternoon I spoke to 1,000 people, and all listened with deepest interest. There was deep feeling in the congregation as I dwelt upon the days of Noah and our time. I called them forward. The tent was crowded, every seat filled and the tent packed. I hesitated to make the move, but Oh, I am glad I did. After a little while there was a decided move and one hundred and fifty responded in that large congregation. I stood two hours upon my feet, talking all the time. We then had a praying season and divided up into divisions in the tents while those who came forward remained in the large tent. They say the meetings in all the tents were excellent; especially was the meeting a success with those who came forward. They report deep feeling, and nearly all talked. The melting spirit of God was there and the testimony of all was, "This has been a precious, blessed Sabbath day to our souls." 4LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 6

Now this morning there is a meeting to raise means. I do not go out in the meeting. Money matters are not my work. After Brother [S. N.] Haskell left, I was obliged to take the heaviest part of the work and carry it. I do not see in both these camp meetings that the proper things would have been presented before them had I not come. God has given me a message for the people. There is all the chance before me to use myself up for there are but few who give the trumpet a certain sound. 4LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 7

We, Elder [Uriah] Smith, his wife, Sister McOomber, and myself start Monday evening for Worcester. Emma [White] goes with Lucinda [Hall] and Mary Abbey to Brother Abbey's to visit and see if engaging lightly in picking hops will not benefit her. Bro. and Sister Abbey and Eleanor are here at the meeting. 4LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 8

Yesterday, in the morning, during the morning meeting, Lawyer Aims drove up in a carriage and urged me to come to his [home] to see his wife's sister who was very sick. She came to the meeting but was unable to attend. I felt reluctant to go, but as the request came from an unbeliever, I told him I would go. I called upon Elder Smith to go with me. We had a very pleasant ride, and we found one of our sisters in affliction with nervous prostration or slow paralysis. We comforted her, prayed with her and she was blessed; and then we were brought back in style again to the camp. This lawyer, Aims, is a noble man among men, kind, sympathetic, benevolent. Oh, if such would give their talent to God, to plead the higher law, how glad should I be. I stopped here to go into [the] morning meeting and talk to them in regard to their obligation to sustain the cause of God. I think they will raise the ten thousand. 4LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 9

I am getting hungry. I ate nothing since yesterday noon, and after my constant hard labor, I am wanting my breakfast. Today is another hard day for me. May the Lord help me. He is my strength.⁴*LtMs, Lt 56, 1884, par. 10*

Mother.

Lt 57, 1884

Children

Worcester, Massachusetts

September 1, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3SM 112-113.

Dear Children:

I have just read the manuscript of the last three chapters. I cannot see but that it is all right and of the most intense and thrilling interest. I am glad you have these pages, and I want the book, the very first one, from the press, sent [to] me.⁴*LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 1*

Today is the last day of the meeting. Our meeting has been a success. We feel thankful for the tokens of good. Last Sabbath was an impressive, solemn time. I spoke upon some of the very scenes described in these last chapters, and there was deep feeling in the meeting when I called them forward. Two hundred responded, and then we had the most interesting meeting that we have had during the entire meeting. There were deep, earnest testimonies borne. The Spirit of the Lord was truly in the meeting.⁴*LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 2*

I was wonderfully surprised in looking over the congregation to see seated in their midst Byron Belden and his wife, and when I called them forward, they both came forward. I took them into my tent and they have been interested in the meetings. Byron I found to be a boy whose turn of mind is very much like Willie's. He carries a wonderful gravity about him, and when anything is mentioned upon the truth and his taking a part in it, his eyes fill with tears.⁴*LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 3*

He says ever since last winter he has been searching for himself. He has had free access to the Catholic priest's library and he has read the history of Catholicism. Then he read Bower's History of the Popes, read all our works he could get, Thoughts on Daniel and the Revelation and History of the Sabbath. He has searched everything he can get hold of, and he said he could no longer live a life of indifference to religion, unheeding the claims of God. I asked him what he was going to do. He said, "Keep the Sabbath." "What if you lose your place?" "Then so it must be. My soul, the salvation of my soul is of more value than money." 4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 4

He wants to come to California and break up the association of his wife with the Catholic associations. She is a very excellent woman and I believe will yet come out of darkness to the light. She thinks Byron is about perfection, so he has a strong influence over her. They both left this morn, very thankful that they came. He is really in earnest. 4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 5

In the meeting of ministers and principal men: 4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 6

We are now earnestly at work in a meeting with the general men in New York, to raise means to lift themselves out of debt. There is a debt on their meetinghouse in Rome. They have paid the lowest figure to their ministers. The ones engaged in the work of the General Conference have twelve dollars per week; the other ministers, the highest is eight dollars per week; others six; others five; some four; some have been canvassing who have three, two dollars, and some one dollar and a half. 4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 7

I have just been talking with them in regard to giving their workers so little. It belittles the work, degrades the work to men's low ideas and estimate. The Lord is displeased that His work should be placed on so low a level. Men working on the farms in their business have wages that will be compensation for their work, but in the cause and work of God men are showing which is valued the highest. The worldly, the temporal, is exalted far above the high, the solemn, the immortal interest. I have talked earnestly, decidedly on this point and it has done some good. 4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 8

I think, by the remarks made, Brother [S. N.] Haskell is drawing upon them, but no one dares to offer a pledge stating what he will do. This conference is about four thousand behind, taking meetinghouse, tent and the funds required to pay the ministers their low wages. I told them this state was carrying the heaviest amount of financial ability entrusted to them of God and their workman were, some of them, robbed of their real due. The workman is worthy of his hire, even in the cause of God. I told them that they were not dealing with equity and would have that class of workers according to their limited ideas and small compass of their thoughts and faith revealed by their works.4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 9

God will honor those who honor Him by respecting and honoring His cause. None dare to venture any pledge for money. Another meeting is to be held. Ten thousand dollars are called for. It will come. Harmon Lindsay and Charles Lindsay are before us. They will do something, perhaps one thousand each. We have another meeting to this point.4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 10

Elder [Uriah] Smith seems hearty, whole-hearted, urgent to have me attend General Conference. I proposed to go directly from Kansas to California, but Brother Smith said they never would consent to have me go home before attending the conference. He seems so different from what he did. He is, I know, a changed man, and I am so glad that Satan did not succeed in tearing him from us. The Lord will work for us if we will place ourselves in the right relation to God. Well, this is the last I shall put in this letter.4LtMs, Lt 57, 1884, par. 11

Mother.

Lt 58, 1884

Children

Burlington, Vermont

September 9, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Children:

I send you these articles I think more appropriate for the Review and Herald than for the Signs of the Times. I had thought I would not write you any more letters. I have written many letters, but all I have received is one containing a few words from Willie [White] and one from Marian [Davis], at Worcester, repeated at Burlington, Vt. When we commenced this meeting the weather was good, nice air, but it became very warm. Then Sunday had thunder showers, but brought no relief. It has rained considerably ever since; it is most oppressive.⁴*LtMs, Lt 58, 1884, par. 1*

I have not been well as usual for Sabbath, Sunday and Monday—old malaria struggling for the mastery. I have not eaten much of anything since I came here. Sunday [I] was too sick to sit up, but although I could not eat, I went on the stand in the afternoon. Strength was given me and I spoke with power for one hour. Felt right then the spell was broken. Am very weak, but anticipate no greater difficulties. It is muggy, very foggy, and very depressing.⁴*LtMs, Lt 58, 1884, par. 2*

Our meeting has been good. I think I have spoken five times. Utterly refused to speak at all yesterday. These meetings are so arranged that one needs to be in perfect health to meet the demand.⁴*LtMs, Lt 58, 1884, par. 3*

If your California meeting was changed [to] one or even two weeks later, I think your prospect would be more favorable for help, but as it is exactly at the time of the Michigan meeting, you will stand a poor show for help.⁴*LtMs, Lt 58, 1884, par. 4*

Another year's round of camp meeting such as this year will, I think, finish up some of the workers. No rest but continual work is not the thing for me. I am too old. They will have to count me out. I have been thankful for the strength the Lord has given me here. I praise His name and will try to have faith still and, although worn, will trust Him. You may say, Why do you write so much? I answer, my head is clear and when I am seen to be writing, I am not obliged to be using my throat which is more severely taxed. If they think I am obliged to write, then they keep away from me.4LtMs, Lt 58, 1884, par. 5

I have not received one line in regard to [the] Healdsburg place or anything that pertains to my interests there. I sometimes think when all are so silent, I will be silent, but then I find myself writing again. When I am able to eat once more, I shall get some strength. I have scarcely eaten one meal ever since I have been here in Vermont.4LtMs, Lt 58, 1884, par. 6

Will you send me a package of shittim bark? Send to Jackson, Michigan. We leave this morning.4LtMs, Lt 58, 1884, par. 7

Mother.

Lt 59, 1884

White, W. C.

Portland, Maine

September 11, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3SM 111; 3Bio 262.

Dear Son Willie:

We have just read the matter in regard to the time of trouble. Brother [Uriah] Smith thinks that chapter by no means should be left out of Volume 4. He says there is not a sentence in it that is not essentially needed. This seemed to make a very deep impression upon his mind, and I thought I would write to you in reference to this matter. I have read it and it is just a thrilling power with it. I see nothing that will exclude it from the book for general sale among unbelievers.4LtMs, Lt 59, 1884, par. 1

As yet I have not commenced work here because [I am] not really well. I begin this my labor evening. Yesterday afternoon I got Sister Morton's horse and rode out to Gorham to see Lizzie. She was about the same, if anything, a little more comfortable. We had a very nice visit, considering her sad state of affliction. The meetings are going well. Today they had a very interesting meeting. There is a softened subdued feeling in the congregation. We are so glad that Elder Smith is with us again. Elder [S. N.] Haskell says he preaches as he never has done before.4LtMs, Lt 59, 1884, par. 2

We leave here next Monday for Lancaster, stay over night, [and] then go on to Syracuse. [We will] meet Emma [White] there and then go to Ohio. Edson [White] says it is impossible for him to leave now, as he is making business arrangements that will involve great care, thought, and work, but says he will meet me in Omaha.4LtMs, Lt 59, 1884, par. 3

Everyone says you must be at General Conference. I have no duty to make for you but should be glad to see you and counsel with you should you come. Cannot Elder Waggoner and Willie make it their duty to be at the meeting in Omaha the last week of the meeting? And [the] Missouri [meeting] immediately following these will be important meetings, we think. I am sorry I cannot thank you for the letters you have written me. Will you please to see in regard to the papers sent to Lizzie N. Bangs? They do not come. She misses the Signs much. I thought I made permanent arrangements that these papers to my friends should come regularly. What does this mean? Have they all stopped? Does John White receive the papers?⁴*LtMs, Lt 59, 1884, par. 4*

Mother.

Lt 60, 1884

Children

South Lancaster, Massachusetts

September 16, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 262.

Dear Children:

I came here yesterday and stopped over night. Expect to go on the way today to Syracuse. Our meetings in Portland closed with Sunday night, except the morning meeting. Now I wish I could just be left to go back to California to attend the camp meeting in Oakland, the last week of it, but I suppose they will hold on to me.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 1

There is the most healthy influence left in the community. The meeting will be there next year. We managed to have Elder Goodrich superseded by Elder [S. N.] Haskell. This is as it should be. Nothing will be accomplished unless there is someone with broader plans and ideas than they have had for the last six years.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 2

Our meeting was well attended from first to last, although not one-half the efforts were made that might have been and should have been; but everything seemed to be paralyzed in Maine. Everything is done on so small a scale. They cannot get their ideas up. As for Sister Morton, she will never be employed again as a reporter. She is next to nothing. If we could employ Mary Clough, we should see something done. We must educate a reporter to be at all our meetings. We should have two of them at least. It is such a pity that we cannot have first-class reporters to give to the papers the very best points of the subjects, both argumentative and practical.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 3

On the ground, I met many old schoolmates and relatives who were delighted to have the privilege of acknowledging their relationship. There are many I might mention, but you will not know whom they are.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 4

After I ceased speaking, Elder Webber brought into the tent Lower Carlton, one of the first temperance lecturers in the cause of temperance. He was a noble-looking man, some taller than Father, broad chested with as kindly a face as I ever looked upon. He grasped my hand and said that he felt it an honor to take my hand, [that] a large circle of the first talent in Portland was with him and [that] he would express their sentiments as well as his—they had listened to temperance lectures from many able men in all parts of the world, but this was far superior to anything they had ever heard. You, Mrs. White, went to the bottom of things. You have the true platform of temperance. Your presenting tobacco as you did is just [what it] should be. The tobacco curse is nothing less in its evil effects than the liquor curse. You have put ideas into minds that have never been started there before. He blessed me with weeping eyes and deep tearful voice and said he would pray the Lord to spare my life to carry on this work in which I was engaged. I never in all my life had so eloquent a commendation as I received from this man. I scarcely knew what to say.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 5

All seemed to regret that the meetings could not hold one week longer. I think our people are encouraged with the result of this meeting. Monday morning we held our last meeting. I spoke fifteen minutes. Brother Haskell says that fifteen-minute talk brought from five hundred to a thousand dollars into the treasury.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 6

Brother Preston was deeply moved. He took his position on the testimonies and fully with our people to help with his influence and with his means. It was a precious meeting. Sunday the two tents, joined, were packed, and a wall of people several feet deep was upon the outside. They were held as if spellbound for one hour and a half. I felt grateful for the privilege of speaking to the people in Portland. We shall expect to see something done in Maine the coming year.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 7

Brother [Uriah] Smith's discourses are highly appreciated. I never saw him in the place He is in now, never. He is just delighted and deeply impressed with the subject matter of the book. He is in as great a hurry to see it and have it before the people as we are. The last years' labors are blossoming into fruit. Everywhere the work has been deepening and widening. Received letters from Brother [G. I.] Butler that Dr. Lay has come out clear. Brother Sampson has passed through a fierce battle with the powers of darkness. He is clear on the testimony and he seems to bear with him the Holy Spirit in a large measure. Elder Butler says the fruits of last year's work, the testimony I bore, can never be fully estimated and the result known until eternity.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 8

In much love,4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 9

Mother.

Be sure to not send me a line anywhere in any place, any of you. It might be too great a tax. I rose at four o'clock to write.4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 10

You must come to General Conference, Willie. You are needed. Come to the meeting at Omaha,4LtMs, Lt 60, 1884, par. 11

Mother.

Lt 61, 1884

White, John

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 27, 1884

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 270; 6MR 307.

Dear Brother John White:

Your welcome letter was received and read today. Were glad to hear that you are as well as you are and sorry to learn that Sister Ann was not as well as usual.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 1

Willie [White] is here with me. Mary [White] did not come East. We do not come anywhere near Sunset Home on our homeward trip. We take [the] palace car from Battle Creek direct without change to Kansas City [and] then take the Topeka and Santa Fe road. There are about forty in our company. We shall occupy one car and about half of another car. Elder Waggoner and Willie came that route.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 2

The decision of the conference is passed, that W.C.W. accompanied by his wife shall accompany his mother to [Europe], that W.C.W. is needed to advise in the furnishing of the offices with machinery necessary to the printing of their French paper [and] the starting in of the work.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 3

I could not prevent this decision, but I told the conference I could not consent to go unless the writings that are now unfinished could be completed this winter. We take over with us helpers in addition to those we already have.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 4

You asked if Mary [Chase] will come to your place. I think she would do so. She certainly needs someone to have some care of her. I think her children should take charge of her. Such heartlessness is the wonder of my life. Whatever may be her faith, whatever her course of action in the past, that cannot change her relationship to her children and their responsibility to care for their mother who needs their care. Adaline has related to me the base conduct of her father and stated that it was impossible for her mother to live with him. That they should leave their mother to be cared for by strangers seems so unnatural. I leave soon for California. She has good friends here, but this is no excuse for this heartless neglect.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 5

Bro. John, I wrote you, as you told me, the particulars in regard to Mary. I have done for her those things she needed to make her comfortable this winter, because I was on the ground [and] you were not. I thought of your abundance. It would be a pleasure to you to share this expense. If not, I will do it cheerfully whether it cramps me or not. I do not urge you to do anything; but as [you are] her own brother who is well able to do this, I expected it.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 6

I laid the whole matter out before you that you may know just what I was doing. I am willing to do my part. I have done it all along. You have also helped Mary and I think would not have been deprived of the privilege of doing this. She has necessities all along. One thousand dollars is tied up in a house for Sister Mary, notwithstanding I need the means. I am giving Mary three dollars per week for her board, in the rent of my house. I ask you, my good liberal brother, to share all these expenses with me.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 7

You must know that it is a great loss to me [to be] deprived of the wisdom and ability of my husband to help me plan, to bring in means, [and] that mine is steadily decreasing. I will not rob God in withholding that which He claims in tithes and in offerings, for I do want to lay up treasure in heaven, and I want you to lay up treasure in heaven that you may not lose your reward. I write you this in love. In your liberalities, I plead for [you] to do liberally for your sister out of your abundance and not let her have the impression that she is dropped by you all.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 8

Much love to you, my brother and my sister.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 9

P.S. Nov. 30. I have been looking over my accounts and see greatly the need of all the money invested in the home for Sister Mary

Chase. I must use considerable means to carry forward the publishing work. I cannot be here at all in B.C. You can support Mary with her children's help, amply. I am through now. This burden I have carried until I am satisfied it is not my duty to carry it any longer. I ought not to have been expected to carry it after my husband's death. She can be comfortably and liberally taken care of by her children and brothers. My husband and I carried this perplexing burden for years; since his death, I have carried it. My circumstances are such [that] I can do it no longer.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 10

Yours with respect.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 11

I can readily sell my place now for $1,000. I need the means to put into my business. I am paying interest on the thousand dollars. This I must carry for some time yet.4LtMs, Lt 61, 1884, par. 12

Lt 62, 1884

White, W. C.

Healdsburg, California

December 18, 1884

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie:

We found our team waiting for us at the depot. Brother Cole from Oregon had just hitched the horses when the cars stopped. We went to Brother Chapman's. How rejoiced they were to see us, especially to meet Brother and Sister Lockwood. Bro. Lockwood and his wife are very happy. I came up in the cars Wednesday morning but have been so head tired have done nothing at writing.4LtMs, Lt 62, 1884, par. 1

I had a visit with Brother [Sidney] Brownsberger [and] tried to ply him with questions about the school. All is moving in harmony. Bro. Granger [is] doing nicely, just a fit. I talked about Bro. Pierce. They need an experienced gardener, one who understands how to raise vegetables and garden produce. Can Brother Pierce do this? Brother Mills thought it would pay well to have a man who could take charge and work in this direction. If Brother Jones comes, there will be no need of another teacher. If he does not come, they will have to employ a teacher. Just now, Brother and Sister Lockwood rode up. They said it rained some but they had a cover to the wagon. They feel delighted with California.4LtMs, Lt 62, 1884, par. 2

When you can, will you see Sister Mills and talk with her about Chicago? I am feeling tired, and the weather is so bad now it makes me feel worse. I think Mary [White] ought to come up here, and Willie, this winter. We will have a screen about the fireplace so Ella [White] shall be in no danger. We found the girls glad to see me. All were pleased to have me come home again.4LtMs, Lt 62, 1884, par. 3

I think you had better send Brother Lockwood's trunks up here on the tickets you have, and then we can send them to St. Helena by the wagon that moves Brother Cramer's goods down. Send by the ones who shall come to Healdsburg, the luggage, hand luggage of Brother and Sister Lockwood. Pack things in a trunk and send my things as you see fit.4LtMs, Lt 62, 1884, par. 4

Well, I must stop, for I am good for not much.4LtMs, Lt 62, 1884, par. 5

Mother.

Lt 63, 1884

White, W. C.; White, Mary

On Eastbound Train Nearing Reno, Nevada

Autumn of 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 11MR 146-148.

[Willie and Mary:]

Nearing Reno: Will be at Reno in one half an hour. We had a very good night's rest. After you left us, we were told our position was in the next car and thither we went, seated ourselves, and found it was filled with men. We were the only women in the car. At night we had two other women. We had tobacco effluvia creeping into our car, which made my heart very active and my throat and lungs sore, but I may not be troubled as much today. My head aches some, but I feel of good courage.4LtMs, Lt 63, 1884, par. 1

We have no checks for trunks. Probably you have discovered this, as well as we. We reasoned [that] the checks will be forwarded to Kansas City. We learned there was a washout at Truckee. The train coming West was delayed, I think, one day and a half. This is all the news I have to write.4LtMs, Lt 63, 1884, par. 2

Willie, I wish Elder Waggoner and yourself would, in connection with those in St. Helena, put Sister [Jennie] Ings in officially as matron of the institution there. This will give character to her work. We have not yet taken lunch, so cannot speak understandingly of our liberal outfit, but will tell you in our next [letter] how this suits us. I am not as debilitated as last year and think I will do well. My trust is in God. Will write again today when I may have something to write.4LtMs, Lt 63, 1884, par. 3

Mother.

Nearing Elko Station about six o'clock: We have had a very pleasant day. A number of men stopped at Reno. Brother Balborn and wife called upon us while the passengers were taking breakfast. We had quite a pleasant visit. There are only three men, besides us, in the car. The porter has been an old hand on the train, kind as kind can be. We have had a little dust and a small spurt of a shower.4LtMs, Lt 63, 1884, par. 4

A telegram was received in regard to our trunks, and the conductor insisted on my telegraphing back to you, while he would telegraph to the parties in San Francisco. I knew it was not the least use to telegraph [you], for you must know the trunks were not on the train. He insisted on our going into [the] baggage car. They got a chair and we climbed up and found no trunks of ours. Then he telegraphed. The agent said he must punch my tickets or baggage would not be sent; the conductor said I must not get my tickets punched until the telegraph should notify us the trunks were on the way. But the agent said he was mistaken, so my tickets are punched. We have plenty of room, good food, and plenty of it. Sister McOmber scalded up the chicken. Will scald the meat tomorrow morning. We arrive at Ogden at seven tomorrow. I wish you had told me just how far you had paid for [a] sleeper. Sleeping car conductor says [it was] only [paid] to Ogden, so we must go through that process of securing tickets in the Ogden depot. I shall get the porter to do this for me.4LtMs, Lt 63, 1884, par. 5

We are doing real well. I am feeling well. We are having a pleasant trip. Feel very thankful to the Lord for His mercies and blessings.4LtMs, Lt 63, 1884, par. 6

Lt 64, 1884

White, W. C.

Extract from Lt 42, 1884.

Lt 65, 1884

Osborn, Brother

Crystal Springs, St. Helena, California

February 7 (?), 1884

Portions of this letter are published in HP 305; 12MR 42.

Dear Brother Osborn:

I have been reading a letter from Ligonier, from your niece to Brother Rogers, stating that you were living with them and had been sick. I sympathize with you in your affliction. I would have been pleased to have met you at our camp meeting in Indiana, but was disappointed.⁴*LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 1*

I have been anxious for your soul. I hoped that the influence of the meetings would have aroused your interest in matters which concern the future, immortal life. I have some knowledge of your situation. You have not much comfort and joy with the members of your own family. I am sorry for you and wish it were otherwise, but I do not want you to fail of obtaining a home in those mansions Christ has gone to prepare for those who love Him.⁴*LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 2*

We have now an opportunity to show that we make Christ our all and in all. We have now precious golden moments in which we may make our calling and election sure. The infinite sacrifice has been made for every one of us, and if we do not avail ourselves of the blessings Christ has placed within our reach, we have only ourselves to blame. Every provision has been made for us, at an immense sacrifice, that we should not only see and acknowledge the love of God but taste and see that the Lord is good. We may have an experimental knowledge of this love. This is your privilege, my dear brother.⁴*LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 3*

I have felt an interest in your case because the Lord has been pleased to present it before me, showing me your trials, your dangers, your errors, and what you must do and what you must be in order to be saved. You have become distrustful and suspicious because you see selfishness exhibited in so many ways on every side. You have not, in your trials, drawn nearer to God, trusting in Him as a child would trust in his parents, but you have become distrustful of God. You will find Jesus your very best Friend.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 4

Jesus gave His life for you. Like a child who has full confidence in his parents and who is not troubled for fear of being taken advantage of and misused, you may rest in God with perfect confidence that He will be to you a friend and a helper. If you commit the keeping of your soul to God as unto a faithful Creator, you will not distrust Him. You will not let loose your hold upon God. You will not be filled with doubt and misgivings, but will hold fast the promises, assured that God will not withhold from you any good thing. We need not expect to be free from trials, but we may trust in God implicitly for grace to bear every trial, for strength to endure every temptation, so that the trial becomes the occasion of triumph. Having all things and seeing all things present and future, He can and will, if we trust Him, prepare us to meet every temptation as it comes. We have the privilege of taking hold of the hand of Jesus and asking Him in faith to guide us. We must not contend with God through His providence. We must be believing, looking to His goodness, His love, manifested toward us in our waywardness.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 5

You remember my appeal to you in former letters. I still urge that appeal, that you should lay up your treasure in heaven, not upon the earth. The Lord has placed in your hands means, and the question is, Will you let this means go into hands of those whom you know will not use one dollar of it for the glory of God, but for the indulgence of self? You have, my dear brother, been using your means, or allowing others to use it, where it will do no good in God's cause. I do want you should use your means to extend the truth, to build up the kingdom of Christ, to lay up for yourself a treasure in heaven.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 6

It is not for you to expect every blessing of God and return nothing. Through Christ we possess all things; without Christ we should have had nothing but poverty, misery, and despair. Shall we respond to this love which Jesus has bestowed upon us? To be sons of God is to possess all things. What more can you want? If the Christian is not content with such an inheritance, nothing can give him contentment. We are indebted to the Lord for all we possess. Then let us return to the Giver all that He claims as His own. Let us not commit robbery toward God.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 7

On my last journey east I gave about three thousand dollars to the cause of God and could say with David, "Of thine own have we given thee." 1 Chronicles 29:14. It is all the Lord's; will we return unto the Lord a portion of that which He has entrusted to our keeping to advance the interest of His kingdom when He calls for it? Oh, that God would give me wisdom to speak unto you wise and forcible words!4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 8

Says the apostle, "They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." 1 Timothy 6:9. How few are there who duly consider these words! When men have obtained means, how desirous they are to retain it! How afraid men are to speak the truth in regard to these things written in God's Word. "Sell that ye have, and give alms." Luke 12:33. Who is willing to tell men who are losing their soul in consequence of their love for the means in their hands, "Sell that ye have and give alms"? This is a strange doctrine in our day. But who has the courage to declare this unpopular truth? Who will declare it from the press as Christ presented it?4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 9

Men just touch upon these things and glide away from them as soon as possible, as though they were on forbidden ground. How many repeat Christ's sermon upon the "Mammon of unrighteousness" [Luke 16:1-13] with earnestness, as though they meant it? The reason is, the people do not like it. It offends their ears and stirs up their souls with a bitter resistance. I tell you plainly, they want all their means to use for selfish purposes.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 10

I have been shown that you are not using the Lord's money as He requires of you. There is a great work to be done. Will you come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty? I have respect for your soul. I want you to have eternal riches. I want you should redeem the time and give back to the Lord His own.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 11

A great work is to be done to prepare a people to stand in the day of the Lord. Missionaries should be at work in every large city, where our publications should be kept for distribution. Missionaries should be in all quarters of the earth to enlighten those who are in darkness, to make ready a people for the soon coming of Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 12

There is a great work to be done to combat all the prejudice, not only of the ignorant but of the learned. There are schools to be supported, that we may educate the youth and teach them the Bible and to love and reverence God.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 13

I have been shown that large cities must be entered. The warning message of the soon coming Saviour must go forth to all the dark places of the earth. Missionaries are to be sent to Europe, Australia, and other foreign countries. A large work is to be done. The Saviour of the world is now saying to many, "Why sit ye here all the day idle? Go work today in my vineyard." [Matthew 20:6; 21:28.] The Lord is inviting you to act a part in this closing-up work. Christ invites you to act as colaborer with Him. Will you do it?4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 14

Who can estimate the value of souls? He who died for you inquires, "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own life? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Mark 8:36, 37. He who so loved man that He came from the realms of bliss, from His royal throne, and humiliated Himself to clothe His divinity with humanity, has given us unmistakable tokens of His love and the value He places upon man. He who has made for us this infinite sacrifice summons us to estimate the value of the soul, to strike the balance between earthly gain and heavenly loss, between temporal success and everlasting failure.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 15

You love the earthly treasure, but Christ points you away from the earthly to the heavenly. He invites you to lay up your treasures above. Will you do this?4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 16

Will you dispense your means while you live? Will you say, as you present your offering to God, “Of thine own, O Lord, we freely give thee”? [1 Chronicles 29:14.]4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 17

As Christ’s ambassador, I entreat of you to use the means God has lent you without further delay in advancing His cause in the earth. We are crippled on every side for want of means to do what should be done in the work and cause of God. Satan manages to keep the means in the hands of the enemy and away from the treasury of God. But if those who have means will not use it to put it out to the exchangers, the Lord will raise up others to take the place of these selfish ones and pass them by. I do not want that your love of means shall ruin you. You have the power to do. Will you, my brother, do now what you can?4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 18

I do not feel that you can charge me with any selfish motive in this appeal which I make to you because I am doing continually just what I am urging you to do—seeking, selling, giving alms, laying up a treasure in heaven. I felt urged by the Spirit of God to write you the letters that I did some time ago. You did not act on them as you should have done, as God wanted you to do. And now I write to you again. In the name of Jesus I call upon you to act, to give back to the Lord a portion of the means He has lent to you. Will you do this?4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 19

When every case shall receive finally as their works have been, will it then appear that you have acted well your part? Will it then be registered in the books above that your means were used in worldly enterprises to please yourself, for the sake of gain? You saw not, felt not, the necessities of the cause of God. You were absorbed in handling God’s money entrusted to you in pleasing yourself, and yet you received no satisfaction in so doing. It did not bring peace or rest to the soul. Selfishness led to continual investments to increase the earthly treasure, but it brought disappointment and care and anxiety and distress. It did not bring you love. It did not bring you peace or joy, but unrest.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 20

You feel discontent, fretfulness, and hardness of heart in the manner you are using and seeing used the money lent of God for wise and holy purposes. Will you entrust to heaven’s bank some of this means lent you of God to advance His work? You shall know how every dollar is expended. You shall have a voice as to where it shall go. Or, will you invest yourself, as you desire, in some of the branches of the cause?4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 21

I tell you as God's ambassador, all the means you may give will not buy for you salvation. You must give yourself. In surrendering yourself to the claims and influences of the Saviour, your life may be as a fruitful branch in a beautiful vine. The fruits of the Spirit may adorn it. Clusters of rich graces will appear, such as love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness, and meekness, which will make it attractive.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 22

You have been, I was shown, shutting yourself within yourself, disgusted with the selfishness you see exhibited around you. Those who take an interest in you, for their own selfish schemes, have made you distrustful and suspicious. This will ruin you unless you come to Jesus, your best, your truest Friend. Not long will your probation last, and I do not want it shall close without a different record than now stands in the books of heaven. Who is handling your means? What does God receive from it—that which is His own—entrusted to you to be used to His glory? What usury of God's lent money have you brought to the treasury?4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 23

You may say, Have I not a right to do what I will with my own? Here is your mistake. It is not your own. You have been committing robbery toward God for years. This means belongs to God. What good will your means do if you leave it all behind you, whether it be ten thousand pounds or ten thousand pence? If you leave much, the enemy will only have more in his ranks. I entreat of you to send your treasure before you into heaven by using the Lord's goods to advance His cause in the earth. Make haste, I entreat of you, lest you close your career with terrible indebtedness to God because you have squandered His means in worldly schemes and robbed God. Settle your accounts with high heaven before you be called hence, and then use your influence with your brethren that they shall do as you have done.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 24

You have a great work to do, but the treasury of the Lord is robbed for selfish purposes, and we cannot do what we would do to save souls and spread the triumphs of the cross of Christ. Many are robbing God in tithes and offerings. May the Lord impress upon your mind the words I have written. I have arisen while others were sleeping to write this letter to you.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 25

In much love.4LtMs, Lt 65, 1884, par. 26

Lt 66, 1884

Brethren and Sisters in Monterey

NP

Circa, 1884

This letter is published in entirety in 5T 341-348.

Testimony to the Monterey Church

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Monterey,

My mind has been exceedingly troubled in regard to your condition. I have not been able to sleep, and I rise at twelve o'clock to write to George Lay, and to you as a church.⁴*LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 1*

I do not know what might have been the condition of George Lay at the present time, had you pursued a righteous, Christian course toward him,—such a course as every child of God should pursue in such a case. Some of you will not be able to comprehend my words; for your own course has placed you where you have not sanctified discernment. You have allowed strong, hard feelings against him to come into your hearts, and have justified yourselves in treating him with indifference, and even contempt. You have reasoned that by his unbelief and his wrong course he was certainly injuring the church and endangering souls, and you must have no fellowship with him. But will you, in the light of God's great standard of righteousness, critically examine every word and act of your own that you can call to mind, and compare these with the life of Christ?⁴*LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 2*

If you have been doing the will of God, then His light and His approval will second your efforts, and prosperity will attend you. I wish the members of this once prosperous church would each begin to build over against his own house. When they see their course in its true light, they will know that they have made a very great mistake in allowing their own critical, Pharisaical spirit to control their tongues and develop itself in their treatment of their brethren. This unchristian harshness has excluded Jesus from the Church, and has brought in a spirit of dissension. It has fostered a disposition to judge and condemn, a hatred of those who do not see things as you see them. Even if your brethren say and do many things that really injure you, will you push them aside, and say, "I am holier than thou"? [Isaiah 65:5.]4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 3

"By their fruits ye shall know them." [Matthew 7:20.] Christ has not been revealed in your deportment toward some who were much nearer the kingdom of heaven than yourselves. The Lord has opened before you your wrong toward His children; your want of mercy and love, your determination to control minds and make them see things just as you see them. And when light came to you, what course did you take? Did you merely admit that you were wrong, or did you heartily confess your error, and humble your proud hearts before God? Did you cast aside your ways, and accept God's teachings? Did you go to the very ones you had bruised and wounded, and say, "I have been wrong; I have sinned against you. Forgive me. I have failed; I have worked in my own spirit. I had a zeal but not according to knowledge. It was the spirit of Jehu, rather than the meekness and lowliness of Christ. The Word of God directs, 'confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed.' Will you pray for me that God will forgive me for the distress and anguish I have caused you?"4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 4

If you who have engaged in this work of bruising and condemning [and] have not heartily repented, then light, peace, and joy will not come into your souls. When you are careful, kind, and tender to your brethren in the same degree that you have been hard, unforgiving, and oppressive, you will confess your faults, and make restitution as far as possible; and when you have done all on your part, you may ask the Lord to do that which is impossible for you to do,—heal the wounds you have made, forgive you, and blot out your transgression. When there is so great reluctance to confess a wrong which is laid open and plain before the erring, it shows that they are controlled by their own untamable, unsanctified natures rather than by the spirit of the gospel of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 5

If God has ever spoken by me, you have most earnest work to do in zealous repentance for showing to the erring the satanic element in your character, not in coldness and indifference merely, but in neglect and contempt. If they are indeed in darkness, and doing things that imperil their souls, you should manifest greater interest in them. Show them that while you will be true to principle, and will not swerve from the truth, you love their souls. Let them know by your words and actions that you have not a spirit of revenge and retaliation, but that, for their sakes, you will sacrifice feeling and subdue self. Represent Jesus, our Pattern; manifest His spirit at all times and under all circumstances, and let that mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus. Your ways have not been God's ways; your will has not been God's will. The precious plant of love has not been cultivated, and watered by the dews of grace. Self-love, self-righteousness, self-complacency, have exerted a controlling power.4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 6

What has Jesus done for you, and what is He continually doing for us individually? What have you that you have not received? Said Christ,—“I am the vine, ye are the branches.” “Every branch in me that beareth not fruit He taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.” [John 15:5, 2.] The branches do not sustain the vine, but the vine supports and nourishes the branches. The church does not support Christ, but Christ, by His vital power, supports the church. It is not enough to be a branch; we are to be fruitful branches. “He that abideth in me,” said Jesus, “and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit.” [Verse 5.] But if the fruit produced be that of the thorn bush, it is evident that we are not branches of the Living Vine.4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 7

Life is disciplinary. While in the world, the Christian will meet with adverse influences. There will be provocations to test the temper; and it is by meeting these in the right spirit that the Christian graces are developed. If injuries and insults are meekly borne, if insulting words are responded to by gentle answers, and oppressive acts, by kindness, this is evidence that the Spirit of Christ dwells in the heart, that sap from the Living Vine is flowing to the branches. We are in the school of Christ in this life, where we are to learn to be meek and lowly in heart; and in the day of final accounts we shall see that all the obstacles we meet, all the hardships and annoyances that we are called to bear, are practical lessons in the application of principles of Christian life. If well endured, they develop the Christlike in the character, and distinguish the Christian from the worldling.4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 8

There is a high standard to which we are to attain if we would be children of God, noble, pure, holy, and undefiled; and a pruning process is necessary if we would reach this standard. How would this pruning be accomplished if there were no difficulties to meet, no obstacles to surmount, nothing to call out patience and endurance? These trials are not the smallest blessings in our experience. They are designed to nerve us to determination to succeed. We are to use them as God's means to gain decided victories over self, instead of allowing them to hinder, oppress, and destroy us.4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 9

Character will be tested. Christ will be revealed in us if we are indeed branches of the Living Vine. We shall be patient, kind, and forbearing, cheerful amid frets and irritations. Day by day and year by year we shall conquer self and grow into a noble heroism. This is our allotted task; but it cannot be accomplished without continual help from Jesus, resolute decision, unwavering purpose, continual watchfulness, and unceasing prayer. Each one has a personal battle to fight. Each must win his own way through struggles and discouragements. Those who decline the struggle lose the strength and joy of victory. No one, not even God, can carry us to heaven unless we make the necessary effort on our part. We must put features of beauty into our lives. We must expel the unlovely, natural traits that make us unlike Jesus. While God works in us to will and to do of His good pleasure, we must work in harmony with Him. The religion of Christ transforms the heart. It makes the worldly-minded man heavenly-minded. Under its influence the selfish man becomes unselfish, because this is the character of Christ. The dishonest, scheming man becomes upright, so that it is second nature to him to do to others as he would have others do unto him. The profligate is changed from impurity to purity; he forms correct habits; for the gospel of Christ has become to him a savor of life unto life.4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 10

Now, while probation lingers, it does not become one to pronounce sentence upon others, and look to himself as a model man. Christ is our model; imitate Him, plant your feet in His steps. You may professedly believe every point of present truth, but unless you practice these truths it will avail you nothing. We are not to condemn others; this is not our work; but we should love one another and pray for one another. When we see one err from the truth, then we may weep over him as Christ wept over Jerusalem. Let us see what our heavenly Father, in His Word, says about the erring: "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." [Galatians 6:1.] "If any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins." [James 5:19, 20.] What a great missionary work is this! How much more Christ-like than for poor fallible mortals to be ever accusing and condemning those who do not exactly meet their minds.⁴*LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 11*

Let us remember that Jesus knows us individually, and is touched with the feeling of our infirmities. He knows the wants of each of His creatures, and reads the hidden, unspoken grief of every heart. If one of the little ones for whom He died is injured, He sees it and calls the offender to account. Jesus is the Good Shepherd. He cares for His feeble, sickly, wandering sheep. He knows them all by name. The distress of every sheep and every lamb of His flock touches His heart of sympathizing love, and the cry for aid reaches His ear. One of the greatest sins of the shepherds of Israel is thus pointed out by the prophet: "The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them. And they were scattered, because there was no shepherd; and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered. My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill; yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them." [Ezekiel 34:4-6.]⁴*LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 12*

Jesus cares for each one as though there were not another individual on the face of the earth. As Deity, He exerts mighty power in our behalf, while as our Elder Brother He feels for all our woes. The Majesty of Heaven held not Himself aloof from degraded, sinful humanity. We have not a High Priest who is so high, so lifted up, that He cannot notice us or sympathize with us, but one who was in all points tempted like as we are yet without sin.4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 13

How different from this spirit is the feeling of indifference and contempt that has been manifested by some in Monterey toward George Lay and those who have been affected by his influence. If ever the transforming grace of God was needed, it is needed in this church. In judging and condemning a brother, they have undertaken to do a work that God never put into their hands. A hardness of heart, a censorious, condemnatory spirit that would destroy individuality and independence, has been woven into their Christian experience, and they have lost the love of Jesus out of their hearts. Make haste, brethren, to get these things off your soul before it shall be said in heaven, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still."
[Revelation 22:11.]4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 14

You will have many perplexities to meet in your Christian life in connection with the church; but do not try too hard to mold your brethren. If you see that they do not meet the requirements of God's Word, do not condemn; if they provoke, do not retaliate. When things are said that would exasperate, quietly keep your soul from fretting. You see many things which appear wrong in others, and you want to correct these wrongs. You commence in your own strength to work for a reform; but you do not go about it in the right way. You must labor for them with a heart subdued, softened by the Spirit of God, and let the Lord work through you, the agent. Roll your burdens on Jesus. You feel that the Lord must take up this case, where Satan is striving for the mastery over some soul; but you are to do what you can in humility and meekness, and put the tangled work, the complicated matters, into the hands of God. Follow the directions in His Word, and leave the outcome of the matter to His wisdom. Having done all you can to save your brother, cease worrying, and go calmly about other pressing duties. It is no longer your matter, but God's. 4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 15

Do not, through impatience, cut the knot of difficulty, making matters hopeless. Let God untangle the snarled-up threads for you. He is wise enough to manage the complications of our lives. He has skill and tact. We cannot always see His plans; we must wait patiently their unfolding, and not mar and destroy them. He will reveal them to us in His own good time. Seek for unity; cultivate love and conformity to Christ in all things. He is the source of unity and strength; but you have not sought for Christian unity, that you might knit hearts together in love. 4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 16

There is work for you to do in the church and out of the church. "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit." [John 15:8.] The fruit we bear is the only test of the character of the tree before the world. This is the proof of our discipleship. If our works are of such a character that as branches of the Living Vine we bear rich clusters of precious fruit, then we bear before the world God's own badge as His sons and daughters. We are living epistles, known and read of all men. 4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 17

Now, I fear that you will fail in doing the work you must do to redeem the past and become living, fruit-bearing branches. If you do as God would have you, His blessing will come into the church. You have not yet been humble enough to make thorough work and meet the mind of the Spirit of God. There has been self-justification, self-pleasing, self-vindication, when there should have been humiliation, contrition and repentance. 4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 18

You should remove every stumbling-block, and make "straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way." [Hebrews 12:13.] It is not too late for wrongs to be righted; but you must not feel that you are whole, and have no need of a physician, for you need help. When you come to Jesus with a broken heart, He will help and bless you, and you will go forth in the Master's work with courage and energy. The best evidence you are in Christ is the fruit you bear. If you are not truly united to Him, your light and privileges will condemn and ruin you. 4LtMs, Lt 66, 1884, par. 19

Manuscripts

Ms 1, 1884

Remarks/Temperance

Jackson, Michigan

September 26, 1884

Copied from RH 10/21/1884.

Ms 2, 1884

Sermon/Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White

Los Angeles, California

May 13, 1884

Portions of this manuscript are published in UL 147.

(Sermon by E. G. White at the Los Angeles Campground, 2:30 p.m., May 13, 1884)

Philippians 1:8-11. A constant advancement, an intelligent advancement in the knowledge of Christ, “Filled with fruits of righteousness”—there is a higher standard for us to reach. We are not making all that advancement that it is our duty or our privilege to make. How is it that we use the talent that God has given us in temporal matters and not in His service? Ought we not to have greater interest in eternal things than in those things which concern our temporal wants?4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 1

We have heard desire expressed that husbands and families should come into the truth. This is right; it should be a prominent wish. But do we do all our duty? Do we make all the advancement that we should? Do we not come far short of our duty in meeting the work of progression? Don't be a spiritual dwarf. We love to see infants and watch their baby ways, but the same ways would be disgusting if retained until the child was two years old. So the Christian must grow. Be conformed to Christ, not deformed. Just feel as though you were anchored in Christ. Let there be a solidity to the sisters who are alone. Avoid frivolity and keep constantly watching.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 2

The rich blessings of heaven are all ready to be showered upon us. Don't be selfish. With too many, all there is to religion is: for me and my family. They will not go out of their way to help and bless any others. In such cases God cannot bless them. It is when we are drawn out from self that God blesses us. He wants us to be drawn out from ourselves. That which we sow, we will reap. If you sow selfishness, you will reap selfishness, that is, you will have it fastened upon you. Let us get out of self and talk of the mercies and blessings of God.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 3

Let all the sisters feel that if they haven't a husband to lean upon, they will lean more heavily upon God. Every one of our sisters can be a living missionary and can bring light into every meeting. Do we act as though we were called from darkness into marvelous light? or as if we were lugging along a heavy light? We must talk light and pray light, and light will come in. If only women in the church [would] show that God can work through women! It was Mary that first preached a risen Jesus. Your husbands will respect that zeal, that noble purpose, if Christ dwells in you. Why, there are richer blessings for those that have the harder conflict, for Christ is a present help in trouble. But we must be divested of selfishness, be acquainted with the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. And we shall thus grow more and more like Jesus, till the crown of immortality is placed upon our brows.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 4

[Portion missing.] ... King's highway. Some know nothing of this. They think allowance must be made for them when angry, because they are soon over it.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 5

Empty self of all evil and find Jesus right here. He is in our midst and knows the heart of each one of us. You wound Him. Let us come to the fountain and wash and be clean. How willing He is to hear and save and bless. Hypocrisy always had His rebuke, but contrition and humility always were met with compassion. Break down barriers of stubbornness and unbelief, and let Jesus come in. "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." 1 Peter 5:6. What greater elevation than to become assimilated to the character of Christ? God grant that these meetings may not close and leave us where they found us—not where they found us, but worse off. We want to act in earnest, as though doing business for God. Act like men and women that are to be arraigned before God.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 6

[Portion missing.] ... and dressing. To understand the life that measures with the life of God is worth more than to know how to prepare for this short life. This takes time. But it takes time to provide for temporal affairs, and must we suppose that it will take less time to understand about the life to come? Our minds must be clear so that we may appreciate spiritual things.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 7

To temperance add patience, and “to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.” If we thus live on the plan of addition, the result will be an abundant entrance into the kingdom of Christ. Some say, If I knew I should not fall, I would start out. Well, you will not fall if you keep climbing with the eye fixed on Christ. As we add, God multiplies.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 8

[Portion missing.] ... nothing to do with what the world thinks. We are not our own. Not one of the world can give a ransom for our souls; and since none in this world are high enough to do this, are they the ones that I must study? No. I must study Christ and His Word to know what is truth. We must understand the truth and not only understand it, but obey it.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 9

Those who hear and do not obey are like those who build upon sand, but those who hear and obey are founded on the rock. Where are we building? How are you building?4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 10

We must love the Lord with all the heart—not a part—and if we do this, the promise is sure, “Ye shall live.” No language can describe the life that we shall live—an eternal weight of glory.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 11

So, as we understand, we must commence a heart work. Cleanse the soul temple of all defilement. If you are selfish or covetous, put this away. How shall we do this? Learn of Christ. Come into the school of Christ and learn how to perform this sum of addition which Peter gives. “If these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren or unfruitful.” [2 Peter 1:8.]4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 12

So many give all their energy of bone and muscle to the world. They profess to be Christians. Are they? No.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1884, par. 13

Ms 3, 1884

Sermon/Parental Responsibility

Los Angeles, California

May 14, 1884

Previously unpublished.

(Notes on a sermon by Mrs. Ellen G. White, Los Angeles Campground, Wednesday, 6 a.m., May 14, 1884.)

I feel so grateful to God for His mercies and blessings. It is the duty of every one of us, as obedient children, to follow the track that He has marked out for us. In so doing we will have a rich experience. Sisters whose husbands are not with them have hard times, but Jesus knows all about their trials. He understands all of them. Now they should not feel constantly discouraged, but should feel that God has claims on their husbands and them and that if the husband will not do his duty, they will do all they can to make up the deficiency. They need not carry a constant load about with them, but may feel that Jesus is with them.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 1

Have we set a proper example? If we are really doers of the Word and not hearers only, we shall carry out the counsel of the Word in every particular, carry it into every transaction.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 2

The first duty resting upon you as fathers and mothers is to impart a proper mold to your children. The first thing is to have your children learn implicit obedience to your word. When you have taught them this, you have taught them the principle of obedience to God. But too often the children have the reins in their own hands; and in such cases, the parents are sinning against God.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 3

It is your duty to require perfect obedience.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 4

Eli remonstrated with his sons, but did not restrain them. As a consequence, God could not go forth with His people. God passed over Eli and came with a message to an innocent child, because Eli had sinned in not restraining his sons. And when the warning came to him, giving him a chance to work, he did not even then do as well as the Ninevites did—repent. He was in the same condition as many are now, discouraged, thinking it of no use to make an effort to correct his children. He was submissive to God. [He] could say, The will of God be done, but he was indolent. The neglect of his duty had made him blind. The ark was of no consequence to them when they were not keeping the law which it contained. They had learned to look to it for help. Eli trusted more to the ark than to the God who gave the ark. The people of God are in similar danger now. They say, We have the law; we understand the truth. [They] expect that knowledge to save them while they are not yielding full obedience to the law. They do not let it transform their characters.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 5

If you are neglecting your children because it is easier to do so than to restrain them, you are guilty before God. Are you seeking to devote time to educate yourself to understand your children? They are not all cast in the same mold. How much time is devoted by mothers to needless ornamentation and not to their children! The first work for children is to be done by the parents. If children receive the mold of the world, they are ruined. Therefore you must take the most intense interest in them. Teach them to come up uncontaminated by bad and intemperate habits.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 6

Young men often learn intemperance at their own mother's table. Perhaps you have never put the winecup to your children, but you may have done worse. You may have let them have their own way or indulged them in passion. If you allow this, they will come up in the judgment and say that you are responsible. The first manifestation of passion should be checked. Children should not imagine that they can have their own way. The parents' word must be law. Don't deny them proper enjoyments, but check lightness and frivolity, giggling, etc.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 7

This softness of mothers, which they call love, allowing children to run things themselves, is the worst kind of love. When you pamper and pet your children, you are doing a wrong thing, placing them where they have no hardihood to resist temptation. Let them be clothed in modest apparel and not do as others do, just because they do so. In this age of the world, you have got to take a decided stand. Go to God. Study the matter to learn what is your duty for yourself. You must be constantly advancing and preparing the holy temple for God. You must be constantly gaining an experience. When your children want to control you, take them to the Word of God and show them that you cannot yield to their impulses and concede to the fashions of the world. Bring in your children, as the Israelites did in Egypt. Separate from the world by the blood of Jesus.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 8

If you did not embrace the truth till your children were partly grown, so much the more is there need of earnest effort. Do not think that you can be indolent and then have a minister come along and counteract all your work. Do not correct in anger; do not strike a hasty blow, but take your children quietly and kindly and tell them that you cannot have them do wrong things. In order to teach children self-control, you must learn to control yourself. I never struck my children a blow until I had first prayed with them; and let me tell you that when you do so, you will seldom have occasion to strike a blow.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 9

Letting children grow up undisciplined is like letting soil lie uncultivated. The devil will be at work while you are idle. Children left that way are never happy. "A child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame." Proverbs 29:15. One undisciplined child will ruin hundreds of others. And who is responsible for all this mischief but the mother who first let the child have his own way? God has given us precepts and truths, line upon line, and we must take them and apply them to our children. Parents should first educate themselves properly and then their children.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1884, par. 10

Ms 4, 1884

Sermon/Notes on a Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White

Los Angeles, California

May 15, 1884

Previously unpublished.

(Notes on a sermon by Mrs. E. G. White, Los Angeles Campground, Thursday, 6 a.m., May 15, 1884.)

Text: "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." Luke 21:34.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1884, par. 1

Christ has enjoined upon us to take heed, to watch, lest we be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life. The reference here is not to being drunk with liquor, but to being intoxicated with this life. Reason is perverted, and things look unnatural. Satan has his agents who will present matters in such a light that there will not be a right view of the temptations, so that we shall be diverted to some temporal thing and be blind to the good we might receive.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1884, par. 2

We neglect to seek first the kingdom of God. He does not want us to make temporal affairs our first object. It should be our aim and object every day to be fitting for the kingdom. God has devised every means for our welfare. But the ladder itself will do us no good if we do not climb. We may reach up to the very highest attainments, if we make diligent efforts. We climb this ladder round by round every day. Children need to be instructed and their weak points strengthened, precept upon precept. Teach them to place their feet on the ladder, and then they are growing.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1884, par. 3

The most powerful sermon that can be preached to the world in favor of Christianity is a well-ordered family; and when you have led them along, restraining them and placing them in the right way, you have done a work that will stand through eternity.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1884, par. 4

Life is not all trials. There are victories and blessings. We may rejoice in the midst of trials.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1884, par. 5

“[Continuing] instant in prayer” [Romans 12:12—that is, the mind must instinctively reach out after God. We must educate ourselves so that it will be natural for us to look to the Lord. Instead of this, we naturally look to someone to whom to tell our troubles. (Related case of Nehemiah praying before he made [an] answer to the king.) When we come into that position where we pray more, where we can grasp the promises instantly, we shall get what we ask for. God will give us more than we ask.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1884, par. 6

Our only safety, when sin is all around us, is in clinging close to the Lord, having Him in us. Enoch walked with God under as unfavorable circumstances as we have. When you are about your work or on the streets, pray; keep the mind ascending to God. We want to see greater victories. We want to hear of the triumph of faith. Don't think that you have got all there is for you. Look to God above the ladder. The light is there; the glory is there. Look above the darkness of this world. Don't rest until His salvation is in your hearts, and you are a living church. We shall then see the deep movings of the Spirit of God, and you will be the light of the world. Get the victory right now.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1884, par. 7

Ms 5, 1884

Sermon/Notes on a Sermon by E. G. White

Los Angeles, California

May 16, 1884

This manuscript is published in entirety in 1SAT 10-12.

(Notes on a sermon by E. G. White, Los Angeles, California, May 16, 1884.)

We are required, whether we eat or drink, to do all to the glory of God. One of the signs that we are in the last days is that this is not done. "As it was in the days of Lot." Luke 17:28. Minds are too largely occupied with thoughts of what to eat or drink or wear. Men have no time to think of what will fit them for eternal life. Shall we not act like rational beings? The greatest question that ever occupied the human mind is, What shall I do to be saved? If the thoughts take a low plane, the character will be correspondingly low. But if the thoughts are led to grapple with the difficult problems in the Bible, the mind and character will be strengthened. In the world much time is given to matters of eating and drinking and dressing. Shall we be like the world, or shall we show that we cannot spend our time as they do? Be careful not to go to extremes. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 1

In regard to tea, coffee, tobacco, etc., we know that we have no use for any of these things. I have just seen a man who had sold his reason to drink. We don't want to be dependent on any of these things. As a people we are strictly temperate. We believe that using tobacco goes side by side with liquor drinking. We would present the pledge as much to the tobacco devotee as to the liquor drinker. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 2

We should pay attention to diet. Three meals a day are as many as anyone requires, and in many cases two are better than three. But while you take the three meals, do not encourage your children to eat at all times. Bring your fruit upon the table. As for preserves, they are not best for us. Some simple pies that are not injurious may be used. As to discarding salt absolutely, I do not think we should.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 3

Some conscientious souls have dropped everything at once and have not used anything to supply the place of the meat, etc., which they have dropped. Persons become debilitated on account of such sudden changes. Could we have the assurance that the meat is healthful, there would not be so much objection to its use. But very much of it is diseased. Men have flocks and herds with disease, and they are sold for the market even when they are dying from disease. I once found a most disgusting scrofulous sore in a quarter of lamb that was apparently very healthy. You cannot tell that meat is healthy even when highly recommended. How much of this is eaten!4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 4

Animals are maltreated on the way to the slaughterhouse. There was one case of an animal that refused to go to the butcher. Its eyes were put out; it was pounded almost to a jelly and finally dragged to slaughter and sold in market.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 5

As for pork, I never have anything to do with it, because God tells me not to touch it, and He knows best. It is a scavenger. Its only use is to gather up filth. God does not want us to become scavengers to the scavengers. Our safest position is to do as the Lord tells us.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 6

We want to eat that which will give us the best quality of blood. Hadn't we better be studying the Bible than spending our time fixing up so many varieties of food? Have few kinds at a time and change often. Don't have the very same things right along all the time. Not many varieties at one meal, but varieties at different meals—this is the best plan. Food must be palatable in order to be nourishing.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 7

(Related experiences in experimenting with doing without salt or any seasoning whatever, also in doing without meat, and in coming down to two meals a day.)4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 8

We don't make the health reform an iron bedstead, cutting people off or stretching them out to fit it. One person cannot be a standard for everybody else. What we want is a little sprinkling of good common sense. Don't be extremists. If you err, it would be better to err on the side of the people than on the side where you cannot reach them. Do not be peculiar for the sake of being peculiar. Away with cake. Persons may kill themselves with sweets. More harm is done to children by sweets than by anything else. The best food that I have obtained is the rolls.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 9

Dry food is better than so much wet food. Eat what the system requires to produce good blood. Poverty of diet will produce disease of the blood. Be regular in your meals. Have wholesome food at all times, and make no difference for company.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1884, par. 10

Ms 6, 1884

Sermon/Notes on a Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White

Los Angeles, California

May 17, 1884

Previously unpublished.

(Notes on a sermon of Mrs. E. G. White, Los Angeles, California, on May 17, 1884, 2:30 p.m.)4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 1

“It is time for thee, Lord, to work: for they have made void thy law. Therefore I love thy commandments above gold; yea, above fine gold. Therefore I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right; and I hate every false way.” Psalm 119:126-128.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 2

We can see the influence the making void of God’s law had upon David. It was not as it is with many. It made him appreciate God’s law more highly. He esteemed it more than fine gold. He had traced out and seen the results of making void the law of God. He saw that those who transgressed the law had misery, while those who lived in obedience to it had peace and happiness with them and their families. As he sees the two classes, the obedient and disobedient, he does not fall in with the transgressors.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 3

The moral law is the foundation of all government in families and nations. When it is neglected, we can see the effects in the wickedness that follows. Wherein have the people now transgressed and made void the law? The ministers denounce it and teach that it is not binding upon men. As a consequence, men feel at liberty to ignore their own impulses for right and do as they please. (Related incident of two young men who reformed on hearing sermon on law.)4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 4

God’s law is the great standard of right. First [commandment]: No other gods before Me.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 5

Fourth [commandment]: Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. There is no doubt in the commandment; all is positive. God sanctified the very day of His rest. The foundation of the Sabbath was laid when the foundation of the earth was laid. The man of sin has led the way in tampering with God's Sabbath, and the Christian world has followed and has dressed up Sunday in Christian garb and presented it to the world. God hates robbery for offerings. Never before has there been a time when there was such a need for the people of God to vindicate and magnify the law of God. When we see the law made void, what position should we occupy? Should we compromise? No; because the world chooses to transgress the law is no reason why we should do so. There is a world that is going down to ruin. God bears long with evil and therefore men presume upon His clemency. But God keeps a reckoning with nations, as is seen in case of the Amorites. 4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 6

What shall we do in this time when iniquity is prevailing? Those who will take their stand to stem the current will have reproach and persecution. When will this persecution come? When the message goes with [a] loud cry. Those who do not love the truth do not want to hear. The truth of God is aggressive. Those who carry it must meet with opposition. They cannot submit to laws and to the powers that be when these are in opposition to God. After the resurrection, the disciples went forth and proclaimed Jesus, [even] though He had been proscribed and crucified. It was contrary to the law for them to do so, yet they did not desist even when thrust into prison and forbidden to preach. So we have decided to obey God rather than man. 4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 7

(Case of Peter cited, when imprisoned by Herod.) (Miraculous deliverance of Paul and Silas.) The light of truth would never have reached within those prison walls if Paul and Silas had not been imprisoned. We have a message to bear wherever we are, and we must be constantly letting our light shine. The conversion of the jailer was in the direct providence of God in the imprisonment of Paul, and if we obey the truth of God in the face of the world, we shall be brought into strait places. The whole world will not be in harmony with the law. 4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 8

We must expect to deny ourselves and to separate ourselves from the world. We are to look into the moral looking glass to see our defects. It is no marvel that men take the position that they are holy and without sin when they have trampled God's looking glass under their feet. They cannot see themselves, except by a standard of their own making. By this they are perfect. The nearer men get to the Lord, the less boasting they will do. The farther men get away from the Lord, the more satisfied they are with themselves. Daniel was a man whom God loved, yet he confessed his sin and the sin of his people. 4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 9

There is a difference between us and those who claim holiness. While they do not keep the law, while they give nothing, they claim everything. But we who keep the law of God, who give all to the Lord, claim nothing. We have not the faith that we ought to have, since all heaven is interested in our welfare. We want a sanctification that will take all there is of us—brain, muscle, and all—a sanctification that will endure God's search. We do not claim any holiness; we make no boast, but leave that for God to say. We cannot be holy while transgressing the law. 4LtMs, Ms 6, 1884, par. 10

Ms 7, 1884

Sermon/Notes on a Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White

Oakland, California

May 24, 1884

Previously unpublished.

(Notes on a Sermon by Mrs. E. G. White at Oakland, California, Sabbath p.m., May 24, 1884.)

Luke 4:16-22. Up to this period there was an overpowering conviction in the minds of all that Jesus was all that this text claims; they witnessed to His words by a hearty response. But you can see how soon unbelief came in. The question arose, Who is this? As soon as this temptation came in, they did not retain their former good impressions. They did not consider that it was the God of heaven that had been working in their hearts to make these impressions. They put themselves in the enemy's power and consequently could not endure the plain truth which Jesus spoke to them, and those who had been ready to accept Him now sought to kill Him.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 1

The same thing is acted over and over again today. Christ comes, not in person, but by His Word and in the person of His servants, and is rejected because of the plainness of the truth. All have to take one of two positions—either for or against Jesus.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 2

If we accept Him, what will He do? See verse 18. “Preach deliverance to the captives;” “heal the brokenhearted.” What gracious words! How eagerly we should join with Him in this work! How many there are with broken hearts and disappointed hopes without Jesus. He comes to give peace and joy. And yet, how many think that to accept Christ implies a great sacrifice.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 3

Is it not because they do not appreciate their own need? Is it a sacrifice to have the broken hearts healed? What more could He do than He has done? Who is it whom the multitudes flocked to hear? It was Jesus, and yet they would not accept the truth at His lips. If they had, He would have done for them all that they needed.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 4

The work of every mortal is to work on the Lord's side. Who can measure the worth of the soul? There is no way in which we can estimate the worth of the soul except by the light that shines from Calvary. We there see how Christ valued the human soul. And since He has given Himself for us, our intellect and all our powers belong to Him.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 5

Adam and Eve obtained forgiveness only through Christ, and they showed their faith in Him by types. When He came, type met antitype, and these ceremonies lost their force. Why, then, did the Jews not accept Him to whom the types pointed? For the same reason that men do not accept Him today—because of the bewitching power of sin. Their own selfish desires and pursuits interposed between them and belief in Him.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 6

What a wonder that Christ died for sinners! Who can understand it? Never can the mystery of Calvary be explained to finite minds. The mind faints as it attempts to grasp it—that God should give His only Son to suffer shame and reproach, to be tracked by spies, to suffer ignominy, and finally to die. And yet, after all this sacrifice, men talk as though they do not need Christ!4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 7

There is only one hope for humanity—the Man of Calvary. Why, then, do we not accept this Saviour fully and heartily? Why not accept this salvation that was bought at such infinite cost? All heaven was poured out to man in the one gift of God's Son. Why, then, do we not love to talk about His matchless charms and His love? Because He is not in the heart. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." [Matthew 12:34.] We need to feel the power of a personal Saviour. Many of us are in the condition of the Jews; we will accept Jesus if He comes to give us power, if He allows us to have our own way. But we must come to Him, not bring Him to our standard.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 8

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us."

[1 John 3:1.] The Pharisees did not want a change in their own lives and course of action. We do not want to be like them, ignorant of the Scriptures and of the power of God. If you realized the Scriptures and the need of a Saviour, you would not be content with the little that you now do. Learn of Christ; His is the wisdom that we want. Each one wants to carry his own burdens. Why not come to Christ for rest? If you are in perplexity, go and ask the Master to help you. When you find your inclinations leading in the way of some expensive luxury, go and ask Jesus for wisdom to guide. He will teach you. You can learn self-denial, and He will give peace to those who follow Him and learn of Him. The nearer we draw to Jesus, the more we shall decrease, and He will increase.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 9

How are we standing before God? I wish every one could see it. As we give ourselves to God in humility, our names are recorded in the book of life—not because of our pompous feeling, but because we accept Christ in humble belief. Is there one heart so hard, so stubborn, as to remain in impenitence in view of the great love that God has bestowed on us? Then we want to employ our powers for His glory. Jesus doesn't want us to be with the company outside the city, and therefore He came to heal us. Christ took everything upon Him. He felt as the sinner will feel when he is rejected of God. He felt forsaken of God. All this He suffered that we might be saved from it. How must Christ feel when we are indifferent to His claims and turn from Him? What an insult, to be unmindful of such great love!4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 10

Can you doubt His love? Is there one who feels that though Christ hears others He does not hear him? He is our ever present Helper. Has He not done all that He could do? Did He not die for us? Then will He not help us and pity our infirmities? He is willing to help us every step of the way if we will only trust Him and follow Him.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 11

Our talents must all be used in His service. We cannot use any more talents than He has entrusted to us; but we are required to give Him all. As we serve Him to the best of our ability, He gives us increased powers. Do not give to the enemy one bit of the talent that God has given to you. We pride ourselves on our honesty with our fellow man, but if we rob God of that which is His due, what cause have we for self-congratulation? Christ has bought us and owns all that we have. Why should we not give Him the freshness of our powers? If you put ability into your business, put more energy into the service of God.⁴*LtMs, Ms 7, 1884, par. 12*

Ms 8, 1884

Obedience to Law

NP

June 12, 1884

Previously unpublished.

In the Sunday school lessons for the Christian at work, we make an extract from an article headed, "Obedience to Law."4LtMs, Ms 8, 1884, par. 1

"'By me kings reign, and princes decree justice.' Proverbs 8:15. 'By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth.' Proverbs 8:16. There is no argument there that monarchy is His preference. On the contrary, when His people first wanted a king, He was exceedingly displeased, because it was a declaration that they no longer desired Him as their theocratic governor.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1884, par. 2

"Nevertheless, in accordance with their wishes He gave them a king, just as, in accordance with our wishes He gives us a president. In other words, He ordains that no nation can exist without an authoritative head. Whether that head shall be emperor or king or president or democratic judge, He leaves to the particular nation to determine for itself.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1884, par. 3

"Therefore the vox populi, in choosing magistrates, becomes vox Dei, and the duty of the citizens immediately follows to show the magistrates respect, reverence, and obedience within certain limits to resist the magistrate in the just and lawful exercise of his power to resist God. And is a sin, a crime, deserving damnation, or, as the word is better understood, judgment such as comes from God's disapprobation?4LtMs, Ms 8, 1884, par. 4

"If, however, the magistrate transcends his civil authority and attempts against the citizen's conscience, conscientious enlightenment by the clear Word of God, to require wrong things, then the citizen, rising to a higher law, is justified in refusing obedience, saying with Peter and the other Apostles before the council, 'We ought to obey God rather than man.'4LtMs, Ms 8, 1884, par. 5

"The discrimination is emphatically brought out by our Lord in the injunction, 'Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's.'Matthew 22:21. Within the sphere of civil relations, Caesar is supreme; within the sphere of moral and religious duties, God alone is supreme. And so also, it is the duty of children to obey their parents and wives their husbands and servants their masters, each according to his sphere and its just limitation."4LtMs, Ms 8, 1884, par. 6

Ms 9, 1884

Visit to Multnomah Falls

East Portland, Oregon

June 20, 1884

Portions of this manuscript are published in TDG 180, 3Bio 252-253.

Yesterday at ten o'clock we reached this place—East Portland, Oregon. On our way from Walla Walla Tuesday morning the cars stopped, as they generally do, twenty minutes at Multnomah Falls. Nearly all left the cars to climb the high ascent to obtain a clear view of this wondrously beautiful, grand sight. Sister Ings and Willie [White] accompanied me. Elder Waggoner, Raymond, Elder Jones and wife were all climbing the steep ascent. There were steps built in the embankments, then a narrow zigzag path, then more wooden steps. This was repeated many times until we reached and passed on to a rustic bridge which spanned a chasm above the first fall. The grand fall is above this and called the Bridal Veil. The point from which the water flows is about 900 feet high. As the water descends it breaks upon the jutting rocks, scattering off in widespread, beautiful sprays. It is a lovely sight.⁴*LtMs, Ms 9, 1884, par. 1*

I would have been pleased could I have spent an entire day in this place, surrounded with lovely scenery. But we were grateful for these few moments to gaze upon nature's lovely, grand scenery, even if we had to do severe climbing to view it—standing on the bridge made for this purpose. The waters—rolling from the very top of the high, inaccessible mountain, dashing upon the rocks below, throwing the water like a veil widespread on either side and below us—this water, accumulating from the flow above and dashing over the rocks in a broader stream, presented an enchanting scene of nature.⁴*LtMs, Ms 9, 1884, par. 2*

We looked above, then beneath, and were led to exclaim, "How wonderful are all Thy works, Lord God Almighty!" Surely this is the work of the great Master Artist. We feel our littleness, our nothingness, in the presence of such manifestations of the great God. I called to mind the words of the psalmist when he calls upon everything that hath breath to praise the Lord, upon animate and inanimate creation to join in one chorus of praise and thanksgiving to God. [Psalm 150:6; 148.] His thus calling upon senseless, unreasoning things is the most powerful rebuke to those blessed with intelligence, if their souls do not glow and their lips do not proclaim the majesty and glory of God.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1884, par. 3

“Praise ye him sun and moon; praise him, all ye stars of light ... Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons, and all deeps: fire, and hail; snow, and vapours; stormy wind fulfilling his word.” Psalm 148:3-8. All these agencies of God in nature are summoned to bring their tribute of praise to the Most High. And who among God’s creatures will be silent when every star as it traverses its course, every breeze as it sweeps the earth, and every cloud that darkens the firmament, every shower of rain and every ray of sunshine—all are showing forth the praises of God who reigneth in the heavens?4LtMs, Ms 9, 1884, par. 4

[Later:] We reached Portland Thursday noon. The cars stopped at the East Portland depot just beneath the hill where our camp ground was located. There we could look up and see the waving flag, “What is truth?” and the white tents, presenting a very nice appearance. But I had worked far beyond my strength and was taken with malaria and was confined to my bed in camp nearly four days, very, very sick. The prospect of my laboring looked very dark; nevertheless, I was not discouraged.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1884, par. 5

At 5 o’clock p.m. I was helped to the stand and with great weakness spoke half an hour. The Lord blessed me. The next day I spoke one hour and a half to a large Sunday audience. I gathered strength every day.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1884, par. 6

Ms 10, 1884

Sermon/Portland, Oregon

Portland Oregon

June 29, 1884

Notes only; not on file.

Ms 11, 1884

Proper Breathing and Good Speaking

NP

1884

Previously unpublished.

Some of our most talented ministers are doing themselves a great injury by their manner of speaking. They are intelligent men and should know that they are not pursuing a course which God can approve. Some do not stand properly; they incline the body forward, thus cramping the lungs. With proper thought and care this can be remedied. When the chest is narrow, the lungs are cramped; they cannot take in a full inspiration of air, and speaking causes great exhaustion. Ministers should stand erect and speak slowly, firmly, and distinctly. The voice should go down deep. Take a full inspiration of air at every sentence, and throw out the words from the lowest part of the lungs, exercising the abdominal muscles. The chest will become broader, and by educating the voice, the speaker need seldom become hoarse by constant speaking.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 1

If our ministers will observe these few simple rules, giving attention to the laws of health in other respects, they may preserve their life and usefulness much longer than when engaged in any other business.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 2

I would say to my ministering brother, unless you educate yourself to speak according to physical law, you will sacrifice your life, and many will mourn the loss of that martyr to the cause of truth. The facts in the case are that by his own wrong habits he has done injustice to himself, injustice to the truth he represented, and injustice to the world, and has robbed God of the service which he might have rendered in the cause for years, had he not shortened his days by his own wicked disregard of physical law.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 3

God would have had his servant live, but he committed suicide. He paid no regard to speaking in a manner which would save his throat and lungs, but nearly destroyed the vocal organs and did violence to his lungs, and when they could no longer suffer the abuse, they failed him. Health and life have been sacrificed by the indulgence of a sinful habit.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 4

If they begin right, it will be very much easier than if they labor without proper instruction and training. God is pleased with men who do not think that they have attained perfection, but who are constantly trying to improve and attain. He would have us come in connection with Him, increase in understanding and wisdom, and reform our habits, ever rising higher and approaching nearer the standard of perfection.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 5

The minister of Christ should continue to search the Scriptures. He will never know so much of Bible truth that he need not search the Scriptures to know more. He may safely dig for knowledge as for hidden treasures; the mind will strengthen with every such effort. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Timothy 3:16, 17. A true Bible Christian will not find anything in the Word which will justify him in disregarding the laws of life and health.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 6

The Saviour of the world would have His colaborers represent Him, and the more closely any man walks with God, the more faultless will be his manner of address, his deportment, his attitude, and his gestures. Coarseness and uncouth manners were never seen in our Pattern, Christ Jesus. He was a representative of heaven and His followers must be like Him. We are to make daily improvement in ourselves; our ways and manners are to become more like those of the holy angels. Every uncouth gesture and coarse, uncultivated expression should be put far from us. Every imperfection may be overcome if we learn of Jesus and closely follow His example.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 7

Some of our ministers have good matter to present to the people; but the manner in which it is presented has much to do in deciding whether it will be accepted or rejected. All who labor in the great cause of reform should study to become efficient workmen, that they may accomplish the greatest possible amount of good.⁴*LtMs, Ms 11, 1884, par. 8*

Ms 12, 1884

The Fruit of Persecution and Suffering

NP

1884

Fragment. Previously unpublished.

The Lord often brings a crisis in the affairs of men that they may feel their need of His interposition, and when at such a time His people have sought Him, He has wrought deliverance for them.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1884, par. 1

At times, He suffers persecution to make great havoc with the church, so that to human sight Satan appears to be on the point of extinguishing the light of truth in the earth. But in these seasons of peril and distress, the faithful ones are led to rely less upon self and more upon God, their importunate prayers are heard in heaven, and when apparently weakest, they are strongest in the strength of their almighty Helper. God reserves the greatest manifestations of His power for exigencies when the necessity cannot be denied and men must acknowledge the interposition of a divine hand.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1884, par. 2

The test of faith and obedience will come to all the people of God. Like the apostle Paul, we must obey the divine voice, whatever that obedience may cost us. Upon all who are partakers of His grace, the Lord enjoins duties that involve peril and sacrifice. Christ Himself has trodden the path before us, and we should not expect to share His glory if we refuse to partake of His sufferings. The most exalted of the redeemed host that stand before the throne of God and the Lamb have gained their white robes and starry crowns only through "great tribulation." [Revelation 7:13, 14.]4LtMs, Ms 12, 1884, par. 3

Ms 13, 1884

The Ladder to Heaven

NP

1884

This manuscript is published in entirety in 19MR 338-355.

[First two pages missing.] Here is made a revelation of Jesus Christ as the only connecting link between God and sinful man, that the repenting sinner might find pardon. Christ spoke words to Nathanael which had reference to this mystic ladder: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." John 1:51.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 1

Here Christ associates Himself, as the Son of man, with the mystic ladder. The angels of God are ascending and descending on the one even as they did on the other. By means of this ladder a constant communication is kept up between heaven and earth, and the actions and affairs of this earth are all known in heaven. The counsels of heaven are executed on earth, and the doings of men are judged in heaven. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 2

Providence does its work gradually. The ladder that man must climb is made up of successive steps heavenward like the rounds of a ladder—step above step, upward to the wisdom of God, whose glory is at the upper end of the ladder. Angels rest not day or night from active service in the positions assigned them. They ascend to bear their testimony of record of what they have done and of the state of individuals and to receive further orders, and they descend to execute the orders they have received. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 3

Christ is the ladder, the foot on the earth in His human nature, the top in heaven in His divine nature. His human arm encircles the race while His divine arm lays hold upon the Infinite. All the intercourse between heaven and earth since the fall is by the ladder. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 4

“Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ: Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.” 2 Peter 1:1-4.4Lts, Ms 13, 1884, par. 5

“Like precious faith” “through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ.” [Verse 1.] This is a genuine faith. It is not a fruitless faith. True saving faith is a precious treasure of inestimable value. It is not superficial. The just lives by faith a truly spiritual, Christlike life. It is through faith that the steps are taken one at a time up the ladder of progress. Faith must be cultivated. It unites the human with the divine nature.4Lts, Ms 13, 1884, par. 6

The life of obedience to all of God’s commandments is a life of progression, a life of constant advancement. As the elect, precious, have increased understanding of the mediatorial work of Jesus Christ, they see and grasp the rich promises that come through the righteousness of Christ. The more they receive of the divine grace the more they work on the plan of addition.4Lts, Ms 13, 1884, par. 7

“Grace and peace” will be multiplied “through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord.” [Verse 2.] Here is the Source of all spiritual power, and faith must be in constant exercise, for all spiritual life is from Christ. Knowledge of God inspires faith in Him as the only channel to convey heaven’s blessing to the soul, elevating, ennobling, refining the soul, as—through the knowledge of God—it is brought up to the high attainments of glory and virtue. “According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: Whereby are given to us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.” [Verses 3, 4.] Here the Christian is encouraged by an assurance of divine help, if he will comply with the conditions.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 8

“And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue.” [Verse 5.] There is no promise given to the one who is retrograding. The apostle, in his testimony, is aiming to excite the believers to advancement in grace and holiness. They already profess to be living the truth; they have a knowledge of the precious faith; they have been made partakers of the divine nature; but if they stop here, they will lose the grace they have received. They must go forward. The apostle prayed that grace and peace might be multiplied to them. They were to climb the ladder of progression.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 9

Without giving “all diligence” to make step after step upward to God above the ladder, there is no gaining ground in peace and grace and the work of holiness. “Strive,” said Jesus, “to enter in at the strait gate.” Luke 13:24. The way of the believer is marked out by God above the ladder. All his endeavors will be in vain if he has not virtue of character, a practical knowledge of Christ through obedience to all His requirements. Those who have faith must be careful to show their faith by their works.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 10

It is common for men and women to speak of themselves as Christians whose whole claim lies in the assuming of the name. They do not reveal that they are partakers of the divine nature. They do not reveal love for Jesus or for religious things. As far as their words and their spirit and their character are concerned, no one would suspect they were Christians. Their assent to the truth has no virtue. This counts for nothing in the sight of God.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 11

True faith works by love and purifies the soul. Truth is an active, working principle, molding heart and life so that there is a constant upward movement, climbing the ladder Jacob saw, to the Lord above the ladder. In every step of climbing, the will is obtaining a new spring of action. The moral tone is becoming more like the mind and character of Christ. The progressive Christian has grace and love which passes knowledge, for divine insight into the character of Christ takes a deep hold upon his affections. The glory of God revealed above the ladder can only be appreciated by the progressive climber, who is ever attracted higher, to nobler aims which Christ reveals. All the faculties of mind and body must be enlisted.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 12

“Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge” [2 Peter 1:5]—knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, knowledge of the great plan of salvation. To be ignorant of God’s commandments and laws will not excuse a soul. He will not dare to plead around the throne of God, “I did not know the truth. I was ignorant.” The Lord has given His Word to be our guide, our instructor, and with this heavenly enlightening there is no excuse for ignorance. Christ speaks of those who have eyes but see not, ears but they hear not. God has given them precious hours of probation. He has given them His truth. He has said plainly if they do His will, they shall know of the doctrine. Therefore, those that might be wise in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ but do not choose this wisdom will be banished from His presence when the judgment shall sit and the books be opened.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 13

To knowledge must be added temperance. “Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air: but I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.” 1 Corinthians 9:24-27.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 14

They that run in a race to obtain a corruptible crown are careful in their diet. “Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things.” [Verse 25.] The strict, severe habits of discipline are essential to give a full, healthful tone to all the nerves and muscles.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 15

Athletes cheerfully comply with the conditions in order to be trained for the highest taxation of their physical strength. They do not indulge appetite, but put a constant restraint upon themselves, refraining from food which would weaken or lessen the full power of any of their organs. Yet they fight “as one that beateth the air” [Verse 26], while Christians are in a real contest. Combatants in the games seek for mere perishable laurels. Christians have before them a glorious crown of immortality, incorruptible. And in this heavenly race there is plenty of room for all to obtain the prize. Not one will fail if he runs well, if he does according to the light which shines upon him, exercising his abilities which, to the best of his knowledge, he has kept in a healthful condition. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 16

The combatants in the games used a spare, course diet and denied themselves of luxuries in order to keep their muscles in a healthful condition. Should not Christians do as much? Paul says he was doing the same that he might win eternal life. The “body” which he kept “under” [Verse 27] is the fleshly appetites and inclinations which need to be continually curbed. Any habit or practice which will weaken the nerve and brain power or the physical strength disqualifies for the exercise of the next grace which comes in after temperance—patience. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 17

Add “to temperance patience.” [2 Peter 1:6.] It was through intemperate appetite that Adam and Eve lost Eden, and it will be through habits of strict temperance and denial of hurtful indulgences that we shall have calm nerves and mental acuteness to discern good from evil. A man who is intemperate, who uses stimulating indulgences—beer, wine, strong drinks, tea and coffee, opium, tobacco, or any of these substances that are deleterious to health—cannot be a patient man. So temperance is a round of the ladder upon which we must plant our feet before we can add the grace of patience. In food, in raiment, in work, in regular hours, in healthful exercise, we must be regulated by the knowledge which it is our duty to obtain, that we may through earnest endeavor, place ourselves in right relation to life and health. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 18

The apostle says we succeed in the grace of temperance that we may add patience. Patience under trials will keep us from saying and doing those things which will injure our own souls and injure those with whom we associate. Let your trials be what they will, nothing can seriously injure you if you exercise patience, if you are calm and unexcited when in trying positions. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 19

Solomon places the control of one's self above the exploits of the bravest and most successful heroes. There is a moral grandeur in being patient under trials and provocations. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." Proverbs 16:32. It requires discipline and firmness of purpose not to give expression to passion but at all times to take care that no words shall escape the lips that will dishonor the Christian character. Self-control will be a valuable acquisition to the graces of the Spirit, and parents should teach their children, by precept and example, this precious lesson of patience and self control. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 20

Patience implies that we have difficulties to encounter, annoyances to meet. The Word of God says, "A soft answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger." Proverbs 15:1. "Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools." Ecclesiastes 7:9. The injunction of the inspired apostle is to "be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath." James 1:19. Anger provokes anger. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 21

We can see the wisdom of Peter in placing temperance to be added to knowledge before patience. [2 Peter 1:6.] This is one strong reason for overcoming the appetite for all stimulants, for as the nerves become excited under the influence of these irritating substances, how many and grievous are the evils that are done! But the healthful use of the unstimulating articles of food will not excite the nerves by irritating the stomach and [debilitating] brain nerve power. There is necessity for the Christian adding patience to temperance. There will need to be a firm principle and fixedness of purpose not to offend in word or action either our own conscience or the feelings of others. There must be a rising above the customs of the world in order to bear reproach, disappointment, losses, and crosses, without one murmur, but with uncomplaining dignity. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 22

It is easier to act the part of a martyr than to be patient under provocation and to control a bad temper. Sound religious principles must be brought into the life to repress anger rather than inflame it by giving vent to it. We may feel very angry, but if we control that anger and are not betrayed into expressions of hasty feelings, we will not lose the respect of our brethren or respect for ourselves. The Pattern, Christ Jesus, is our example. Patience is a heavenly attribute, and Christians must cultivate it.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 23

We must not ever keep before us the feeling that we are slighted. The very fact that we suspect evil will go a long way toward creating that evil which we allowed ourselves to suspect. Our feelings will sometimes be deeply hurt, our temper sadly tried, but the sooner we shall forget the cause of this disturbance, the better will it be for us and all connected with us.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 24

A lying tongue will stir us to make some sharp thrusts, but it is only for a moment that lies will have force. If we treat these falsehoods as they deserve—with neglect—others will soon see there is no foundation for them. We are to leave our reputation with God. Slander may be lived down but can never be talked down.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 25

A petulant, ill-natured man or woman really knows not what it is to be happy. Every cup which he puts to his lips seems to be bitter and wormwood, and his path seems strewn with rough stones, with briars and thorns; but he must add to temperance patience, and he will not see or feel slights. Alexander and Caesar found it easier to subdue a world than to subdue themselves. After conquering nation after nation, they fell—one of them the victim to beastly intemperance, the other to mad ambition.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 26

Patience must have its perfect work, or we cannot be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. Troubles and afflictions are appointed unto us, and shall we bear them all patiently, or shall we make everything bitter by our complaining? The gold is put into the furnace that the dross may be removed. Shall we, then, not be patient under the eye of the Refiner? We must refuse to sink into a sad and disconsolate state of mind, but show calm trust in God, counting it all joy when we are permitted to endure trials for Christ's sake.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 27

Having added patience to temperance, we are then to ascend the ladder of progress and add to patience godliness. This is the very outgrowth of patience. Said the Apostle Paul, "We glory in tribulations also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience experience; and experience hope and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Romans 5:3, 4.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 28

Here, then, is an advance grace, godliness, which is to have the spirit and the likeness of the character of Jesus Christ. To raise us to His divine ideal is the one end of all the dealings of God with us and of the whole plan of salvation. For this His Spirit strives with us to exalt us to this great purpose. The corruption of the world is seeking to steal our senses; all the unholy influences on every side are working to hold us to a low, earthly level—blinding our sensibilities, degrading our desires, enfeebling our conscience, and crippling our religious faculties by urging us to give sway to the lower nature. Corruptions around us find corruptions within. Each works upon the other.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 29

To draw us away from all this is the precious ladder. The eye is attracted to God above the ladder. The invitation comes from the glory above it, Come up higher. The heart is attracted. Steps are taken in advance, one after another. Higher and still higher we ascend. At every step the attraction becomes greater. Higher, holier ambitions take possession of the soul. The guilt of the past life is left behind. We dare not look down the ladder at those things which long poisoned the springs of true happiness and kindled remorse, weakened and depraved the will, and repressed every better impulse. The eye is steadfastly fixed, with grateful, trembling emotion, upon God above the ladder. Christ is the ladder. We lay hold on Christ, climbing up by Christ, resolving to return, broken, contrite, subdued, to the Father above the ladder. The offers of God's mercy, of living connection with God, of grace multiplied as we advance step by step, make the distance from earth more apparent.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 30

The aim of God's Word is to inspire hope, to lead us to fasten our hands to this ladder and climb step by step heavenward, with ever-increasing vigor. It is the key to the sense in which we partake of the nature of God. We attain a likeness of character to God by the imparting of His own grace. In the measure of our limited powers, we can be holy as He is holy and can reproduce the truth and love which exist in Him who is at the top of the ladder. As wax takes the counterpart of the seal, so the soul receives and retains the moral image of God. We become filled and transfigured by His brightness, as the cloud—dark in itself—when filled with the light is turned to stainless whiteness. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 31

There are still additional steps to take. Add "to godliness brotherly kindness." [2 Peter 1:7.] Thus there will not be merely a profession of Bible religion, but a sincere, earnest practice of godliness. We must be partakers of the divine nature before we can represent the Christlike character and practice the works of Christ. The climbing Christian will not sit passive, claiming the promises, enjoying the grace given him of God, but will work from principle. He is a worker together with God. The grace given him of God teaches him how to be kind and tender and helpful to his brethren. There is no waiting for an over-powering, magical change to be wrought into the conversion of others without any action of our own. Life becomes a humble but earnest working out of salvation with fear and with trembling, knowing that God worketh in us both to will and to do of His own good pleasure. The very exercise of brotherly kindness assimilates the soul to Christ and brings him into sympathy with Christ. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 32

Growing in grace is an earnest working out of what God works in. It is an earnest of future glory, the working out here upon the earth of the spirit that is cherished in heaven. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 33

The Word of God enjoins upon every one of His children: "Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous." 1 Peter 3:8. Now, unless godliness was added to patience, man would not show that brotherly kindness. In His mission to our world, Christ has shown man the graces of the Spirit of God, which, when accepted, fashion and mold the entire man, externally as well as internally, by abasing his pride and leading him not to esteem himself highly but to esteem his brother as precious in the sight of God because Christ paid an infinite price for his soul. When man is valued as God's property, then we will be kind, amiable, and condescending toward him.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 34

The religion of Jesus Christ is a system of the true heavenly politeness and leads to a practical exhibition of habitual tenderness of feeling and kindness of deportment. He who possesses godliness will also add this grace, taking a step higher on the ladder. The higher he mounts the ladder, the more of the grace of God is revealed in his life, his sentiments, his principles. He is learning, ever learning, the terms of his acceptance with God, and the only way to obtain an inheritance in the heavens is to become like Christ in character. The whole scheme of mercy is to soften down what is harsh in temper and refine whatever is rugged in the deportment. The internal change reveals itself in the external actions. The graces of the Spirit of God work with hidden power in the transformation of character. The religion of Christ never will reveal a sour, coarse, and uncourteous action. Courtesy is a Bible virtue. The virtue of this grace of brotherly kindness characterized the life of Christ. Never was such courtesy exhibited upon the earth as Christ revealed, and we cannot overestimate its value.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 35

The next step in the ladder is charity. Add "to brotherly kindness charity," which is love. [2 Peter 1:7.] Love to God and love to our neighbor constitute the whole duty of man. Without brotherly kindness we cannot exhibit the grace of love to God or to our fellow men.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 36

This last step in the ladder gives to the will a new spring of action. Christ offers a love that passeth knowledge. This love is not something kept apart from our life, but it takes hold of the entire being. The heaven to which the Christian is climbing will be attained only by those who have this crowning grace. This is the new affection which pervades the soul. The old is left behind. Love is the great controlling power. When love leads, all the faculties of mind and spirit are enlisted. Love to God and love to man will give the clear title to heaven.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 37

No one can love God supremely and transgress one of His commandments. The heart, softened and subdued with the beauty of Christ's character and bridled by the pure and lofty rules which He has given us, will put into practice what it has learned of love, and will follow Jesus forthwith in humble obedience. The living power of faith will reveal itself in loving acts.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 38

What evidence have we that we have the pure love, without alloy? God has erected a standard—His commandments. “He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me.” John 14:21. The words of God must have an abiding place in our hearts.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 39

We are to love our brethren as Christ has loved us. We are to be patient and kind, and yet there is something lacking—we must love. Christ tells us that we must forgive the erring even seventy time seven, and how infinitely greater is the love of God than is our love. It is not the greatness of our sin but the depth of our repentance that brings the pardoning love of God to our hearts. When there is much forgiven, the heart loves much. Love is a tender plant. It needs to be constantly cultured, or it will wither and die.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 40

All these graces we must have. We must climb the whole length of the ladder. “If these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall.” 2 Peter 1:8-10.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 41

The only safety for the Christian is to be unwearied in his efforts to live on the plan of addition. The apostle shows the advantages to be gained in thus doing. For those who add grace to grace, God will work on the plan of multiplication, so that the graces will be in and abound in the religious life, and he will not “be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.” [Verse 8.] Those abounding in the Christian graces will be zealous, lively, vigorous in all practical Christianity and will practice righteousness—just as the branch abiding in the vine will produce the same fruit that the vine bears and will bring forth much fruit. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 42

He who does not climb the ladder of progress and add grace to grace “is blind, and cannot see afar off.” [Verse 9.] He fails to discern that without taking these successive steps in ascending the ladder round after round, in growing in grace and the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, he is not placing himself in a position where the light of God above the ladder is reflected upon him. As he does not add grace to grace, he has forgotten the claims of God upon him and that he was to receive the forgiveness of sins through obedience to the requirements of God. He is in the position of a sinner before God. If he has the graces of Christ, he will exercise and increase them, but if he does not bear fruit in good works to the glory of God, he remains in a state of blindness and ignorance, self-indulgence and sin. He “cannot see afar off.” His eyes are fastened upon the earth, not on God above the ladder. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 43

This class may have earthly advantages but have no discernment of the privilege and blessings of living in the light which shines from God above the ladder. They know not the things that make for their peace. They cannot look backward with clear spiritual sight, as they do not view things in the light of heaven. They once enjoyed the love of God. They repented of their sins and enlisted to become servants of Jesus Christ, but they forgot all the vows made to God at baptism—all the solemn obligations taken upon themselves to seek for glory, honor, and immortality. 4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 44

Says the apostle, “If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things that are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are (through the baptismal vows) dead (to the world, dead to its customs, its ambition, its pride, its pursuits), and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is your life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.” Colossians 3:1-4.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 45

These things are to be often in mind. Meditate upon them. Think of your serious obligations you have entered into, and do not defraud God by violating any one of your solemn promises.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 46

“Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure.” 2 Peter 1:10. We need not have a supposed hope, but an assurance. To make our calling and election sure is to follow the Bible plan to closely examine ourselves, to make strict inquiry whether we are indeed converted, whether our minds are drawn out after God and heavenly things, our wills renewed, our whole souls changed. To make our calling and election sure requires far greater diligence than many are giving to this important matter. “For if ye do these things”—live on the plan of addition, growing in grace and the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ—ye shall mount up, step by step, the ladder Jacob saw, and “ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.” [Verses 10, 11.]4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 47

Let us consider this ladder which was presented to Jacob. The human race was cut off from intercourse with God. They might look at a paradise lost but could see no means of entering it and holding communion with heaven. The sin of Adam cut off all intercourse between heaven and earth. Up to the moment of man’s transgression of God’s law, there had been free communion between earth and heaven. They were connected by a path which Deity could traverse. But the transgression of God’s law broke up this path, and man was separated from God.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 48

As soon as Satan seduced man to disobedience of God’s holy law, every link which bound earth to heaven and man to the infinite God seemed broken. Man might look to heaven, but how could he attain it? But joy to the world! The Son of God, the sinless One, the One perfect in obedience, becomes the channel through which the lost communion may be renewed, the way through which the lost paradise may be regained. Through Christ, man’s substitute and surety, man may keep the commandments of God. He may return to his allegiance, and God will accept him.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 49

Christ is the ladder. “By me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture.” John 10:9.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 50

This is the ladder, the base of it resting upon the earth, the top reaching to the highest heavens. The broken links have been repaired. A highway has been thrown up along which the weary and heavy laden may pass. They may enter heaven and find rest.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 51

The ladder is the medium of communication between God and man. Through the mystic ladder, the gospel was preached to Jacob. As the ladder stretched from earth, reaching to the highest heavens, and the glory of God was seen above the ladder, so Christ in His divine nature reached immensity and was one with the Father. As the ladder, though its top penetrated into heaven, had its base upon the earth, so Christ, though God, clothed His divinity with humanity and was in the world “found in fashion as a man.” [Philippians 2:8.] The ladder would be useless if it rested not on the earth or if it reached not to the heavens.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 52

God appeared in glory above the ladder, looking down with compassion on erring, sinful Jacob, addressing to him words of encouragement. It is through Christ that the Father beholds sinful man. The ministering angels were communicating to the inhabitants of the earth through the medium of the ladder. The only way that man can be saved is by clinging to Christ.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 53

We ascend to heaven by climbing the ladder—the whole height of Christ’s work—step by step. There must be a holding fast to Christ, a climbing up by the merits of Christ. To let go is to cease to climb, is to fall, to perish. We are to mount by the Mediator and all the while to keep hold on the Mediator, ascending by successive steps, round above round, stretching the hand from one round to the next above. In the work of redemption, we may have a knowledge of Jesus Christ by planting the feet on one round after another in perfect obedience to all the commandments of God. This is a necessity for each individual, striving and making progress at every step. It is simply impossible to enter heaven without constant striving. There is fearful peril in relaxing our efforts in spiritual diligence for a moment, for we are hanging, as it were, between heaven and earth.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 54

We must keep the eye directed upward to God above the ladder. The question with men and women gazing heavenward is, How can I obtain the mansions for the blessed? It is by being a partaker of the divine nature. It is by escaping the "corruption that is in the world through lust." [2 Peter 1:4.] It is by entering into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, laying hold of the hope set before you in the gospel. It is by fastening yourself to Christ and straining every nerve to leave the world behind, laboring to diminish by successive steps your distance from God, who is at the top of the ladder. It is by being in Christ and yet led by Christ, by believing and working, trusting in Jesus, yet working upon the plan of addition, holding onto Christ and constantly mounting upward toward God.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 55

When the successive steps have all been mounted, when the graces have been added one after another, the crowning grace is the perfect love of God, supreme love to God and love to our fellow men. And then the abundant entrance into the kingdom of God.4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 56

We point you to the mansions Christ is preparing for all those who love Him. We point you to that city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. We show you its massive walls with the twelve foundations and tell you that these walls must be scaled. You look discouraged at the magnitude of the work before you. We point you to the ladder set up on earth, reaching to the city of God. Plant your feet on the ladder. Forsake your sins. Climb step by step, and you will reach God above the ladder and the Holy City of God. None who will resolutely mount up on the ladder will fail of everlasting life. "For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." [Verse 11.]4LtMs, Ms 13, 1884, par. 57

Ms 14, 1884

An Autograph Message

NP

1884

This manuscript is published in entirety in YI 05/05/1959.

[An autograph written by Ellen G. White, given to Robert Taylor, Jr. by his non-Adventist neighbor.]4LtMs, Ms 14, 1884, par. 1

My Dear Sister,

Your duty, safety, happiness, usefulness, and ultimate salvation call loudly upon you to use diligently all the grace which Jesus has graciously given you, that you may be deemed worthy of still larger and more precious trusts in displays of divine goodness. Become strong in the Lord. Grow up into Jesus Christ, your living Head in all things, and achieve a destiny on earth worthy of the priceless gift of eternal life in heaven.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1884, par. 2

See in the Saviour's dying blood
Life, health, and bliss, abundant flow,
And in that sacrificial flood,
A balm for all thy grief and woe.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1884, par. 3

Ellen G. White

Ms 15, 1884

The Ohio Camp Meeting

NP

[September 11-22,] 1884

Previously unpublished.

We met with our brethren and sisters in Columbus, Ohio. There was a large gathering upon the fairground, three miles out from the city. We were convinced that locating the meeting here was not the best judgment. If we have decided it is in God's order to enter the cities, then let the meeting be as close to the cities as possible, that all who desire may attend the meeting and receive light and be benefitted by the meetings.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 1

There is in our camp meetings, the way that they are conducted, a convincing power that God is with us, that we have the truth. We greatly desire to bring the truth before the people, as many of them as we can reach. We want the world to hear the evidences of our faith. We have no desire to put our light under a bushel, or under a bed, but on a candlestick, that it may give light to all that are within the house.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 2

Less can be accomplished in locating our camp meetings three miles out of a large city, where it is difficult for the people to attend, than to hold them in less prominent places, where the people are, and where they can come out to the meetings.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 3

A mistake was made in Vermont similar to this. The location for the camp meeting was most desirable, but it was too far away from the people whom we wished to be benefitted by the meetings. Our labors are not to be exclusively for our own people, but for all who will hear.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 4

Tracts and papers have been scattered largely by missionary efforts which generally should go before camp meeting. Then, if the meeting is not located where the people can with a little effort reach it, the object is not gained in locating our camp meetings in these cities. They might as well be in the next county.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 5

There was a better outside attendance than we could reasonably expect when the meeting was at such a distance. Those who came to hear seemed interested. The light of truth shone forth in clear rays and convincing power to the people as His ambassadors preached the Word.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 6

The Bible readings were of special interest. The social meetings were seasons of refreshing. It was good to the soul to listen to many testimonies that were borne. Some were taking their positions upon the truth for the first time.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 7

Our early morning meetings were well attended and were precious seasons of confession of sins, of defects. Confessions were made of unimproved opportunities; and there were many testimonies filled with expressions of gratitude and thankfulness for the precious tokens of God's love and favor they had experienced during the meeting.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 8

Sabbath afternoon was a day that we all will remember. After speaking to the people, we called them forward for prayers, and many responded who had never been converted. Some were backslidden. Some appeared deeply humbled and bore their testimony as willing to give up all, that they might become children of God.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 9

Many confessed their backslidings, and some came forward who greatly desired a more special evidence of their connection with God.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 10

We tried to point one and all of these souls to Jesus, the compassionate, loving, sin-pardoning Saviour, and to convince them of His willingness to receive them. Now they must cast their helpless souls upon the Mighty Helper, who would not turn one soul away who came to Him in penitence and contrition. While His scathing rebuke was upon the self-righteous, the self-sufficient who felt no need of a Saviour, He always looked with pitying love and compassionate tenderness upon the humble, sin-sick soul who applied to Him as the Great Physician. They were to look to Christ and His gracious promises. 4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 11

We tried to impress upon them not to confuse faith with feeling. Feeling is no criterion for us. The inquiry should arise from every heart, What has the Lord spoken? I rely upon His Word. "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call ye upon Him while He is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." Isaiah 55:6, 7.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 12

We tried to encourage the exercise of faith. We could not teach the unconverted or the backslider or those who were seeking for a deeper experience in the things of God, that they had nothing to do but to believe. This doctrine is pleasant to a very large class, that Jesus has done it all, and they have nothing to do but believe. [This doctrine] is a deception of Satan. There is something for every one of us to do, if we ever enter the golden gates of the city of God. Said Jesus, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne." Revelation 3:21. We all have the opportunity of studying the life of Christ and seeing how He conducted Himself in our world. We are to be as He was in this world. Jesus was tempted in all points like as we are. 4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 13

The oft-repeated story that we are to only believe is not Bible truth. The work to which Jesus has called us is not only to believe, but work—to show our faith by our works. We are to watch carefully, to see if our own will is being followed in the place of God's will, and if our own ways are chosen before God's way. There are spiritual evils in ourselves. There are natural dispositions strengthened by habits that have ascendancy over the reason. This must be given up. This is a work resting upon every one of us. It is not a pleasant or agreeable work to turn from inclination to God's ways, to turn from our own standard to God's great moral standard. 4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 14

The great mirror is presented into which we are to look to discover the defects in our moral character. The great and constant danger with every soul is of acknowledging the principles of truth and yet not weaving them into our life experience. There are habits which have held the soul in bondage, vicious practices which dwarf and pollute the soul-temple. These must be given up.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 15

Some reformation may be made. The outward conduct may improve, while no attack is made on the love of sin cherished in the soul. But those whom Christ can forgive will have true penitence for sin. There is an inwrought principle in the soul, revealing a change of mind and spirit. This change will be evidenced by the outward deportment, corresponding with the profession of faith. Every capacity and power of soul and body is brought into submission to the service of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 16

Jesus has promised to be found of all who seek Him in sincerity and truth. Something is left for us to do. We are accountable beings, and to us is allotted a task in the struggle for immortality and eternal life. The life of Christ is before us. We may plead with God for help, because we have fallen so low. We cannot lift ourselves up, while Jesus has provided for us divine power to combine with man's human effort. We need not be discouraged. The life of Jesus, the cross of Calvary, calls upon man for the stretch of every muscle and the strain of every power. Not one of us will be saved in indolence and inactivity. Just as inconsistent would it be for us to look for a harvest where we have never sown and knowledge where we have never studied. Idlers? No, No! You cannot afford it. We have a work to keep down that which if it is allowed to rule will exclude us from a pure and holy heaven.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 17

Satan is constantly at work to stir into activity, to separate the soul from Christ. There is, there must be, a wrestling with those passions which must be overcome if we enter the pearly gates of the city of God. The light of truth is very precious, and that light discovers the errors, the defects, the baseness, of the character. Constantly looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of your faith, will bring you over the dangerous ground in safety. The archfiend will oppose every step of advance. You cannot be an idler. You must fight the fight of faith. Resist inclination. Abase self; exalt Christ, and you will not fail in this warfare.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 18

While the servants of God were praying for those who had come forward, the Spirit of the living God came into the congregation. I realized His blessing in a large measure. We knew indeed that angels were in our midst and the Lord had purposes of mercy toward the repenting ones.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 19

I thought, Should those who took their stand fully on the Lord's side at the Ohio camp meeting feel their daily accountability to God and meet this accountability, it is impossible to compute the amount of good they may do in letting their light shine forth to the world. With the Word of God in the hand and religion in the heart, good, and not evil, will follow in our track, that you may say in confidence, "The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."Psalm 46:7.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 20

The meetings increased in interest from the commencement to the close. Quite a number who had been backslidden from God began to seek the Lord earnestly, and as they returned unto the Lord, their testimony evidenced the surety of the promise, "Let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." [Isaiah 55:7.]4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 21

We visited Elder John W. White, my husband's brother, and his good wife Ann. We had a cordial welcome at their pleasant home, "Sunset Home." Since parting with my brother at my husband's funeral, one year ago he had received a shock of paralysis, which for a time made him a great sufferer. The right arm has lost its cunning, but is not wholly useless.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 22

Emma White was here taken very sick. We were obliged to leave her sick while we met our appointments in Jackson. Everything that kindness and attention could do was done to relieve her of her suffering. We made her case a special subject of prayer. The blessing of the Lord rested upon us. This was all we could do for our afflicted daughter. We were obliged to leave for our appointment at Jackson.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 23

We had all contracted severe colds. Friday morning [Sept. 19] upon the Ohio campground we were chilled through, which resulted very unfavorably to us all, and especially so in the long and dangerous illness of Mrs. Emma White. We have learned to our sorrow, again and again, it is dangerous to health to make any delay in preparation of our tents when we can have a fire. One day too late may cause great suffering and even the loss of life. Especially is this the case when the workers are debilitated with constant labor.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 24

The preparation for fires and for food should be especially attended to, that no embarrassment may be brought to the workers. Every preparation should be made for fires and for eating, that it should not be necessary for the ministers to suggest and be obliged to make their wants known. Some will suffer rather than do this. I have known our best and most responsible workers to allow themselves to be placed in most inconvenient and uncomfortable positions both in sleeping and in taking their meals. This ought not to be. Your care for your ministers will not be lost. They can serve you better if you keep them in a good condition to work.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1884, par. 25

Ms 16, 1884

Satan's Last Deception

NP

1884

Portions of this manuscript are published in LDE 164-165.

Satan sees that he is about to lose his case. He cannot sweep in the whole world. He makes one more, last, desperate effort to overcome the faithful by deception. He does this in personating Christ. He clothes himself with the garments of royalty which have been accurately described in the vision of John. He has power to do this. He will appear to his deluded followers, the Christian world who received not the love of the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness (transgression of the law), as Christ coming the second time.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 1

He proclaims himself Christ, and he is believed to be Christ, a beautiful, majestic being clothed with majesty and, with soft voice with pleasant words, with glory unsurpassed by anything their mortal eyes had yet beheld. These, his deceived, deluded followers, set up a shout of victory, "Christ has come the second time! Christ has come! He has lifted up His hands just as He did when He was upon the earth, and blessed us."4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 2

Here it was [that] the masterly effort of Satan would have deceived the very elect. But who were the ones blessed by him? Whom did he make glad? Whom did he honor? The combined powers of earth, the churches fallen by rejecting light and the messages of mercy Heaven had sent to heal Babylon but she refused. (Christ had declared the friendship of the world was enmity with God. Whosoever would be a friend of the world was the enemy of God.) The papal power, the man of sin which thought to change times and laws, that had presented a rival sabbath to the world to be worshiped, the apostate power who sits in the temple of God showing himself that he is God, the power that drank the blood of the saints is united with the Protestant churches, having two horns like a lamb but speaks as a dragon; the deceptions of spiritualism which have perpetuated Satan's lie uttered in Eden, "Thou shalt not surely die" [Genesis 3:4—all these are bound up in bundles, a corrupt harmony under a corrupt leader. The blessing is pronounced by this false christ upon the worshipers of the beast and his image, [the people] who have received the mark of the beast and the mark of the image of the beast.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 3

Here is the only hope of God's people—the unerring word of Jehovah that there would be a remnant only in this trying time who would keep the word of Christ's patience, who would not worship the beast, papal Rome, or his image (Protestants who are represented by the image beast with lamb-like pretensions but speaks as a dragon). "If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb: and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name." Revelation 14:9-11.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 4

Appearances will deceive. The masterly miracle-working power of Satan has carried the whole world with them and the fallen churches, and those only who have [made] the Bible their study, who have the law of God engraven in their hearts, will stand the test of this time of satanic delusion and peril. If it were possible, Jesus tells us, they would deceive the very elect. Satan in personating Jesus Christ is worshiped as God. Shout upon shout of victory is heard in adoration and in praise.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 5

Angels of God are waiting the mandate from the divine Advocate which shall place man above the wrath of Satan. The Lord of heaven and of earth sorrows and rejoices over His repenting, believing children. Their steadfast [adherence to] principle was attended by loss, sacrifice, and peril. Their adherence to the commandments of God provoked calumny and [the] hatred of the disloyal and apostate churches. Whatsoever is not sustained by the Bible standard must not be entertained. Those who are the agents of Satan are vindictive, cruel, and like their master. Those who make the Bible their standard must expect abuse, outrage. In the cause of truth there can be no compromise.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 6

Jesus is looking from His throne upon His people. His interest is identified with His suffering brethren. With joy the angel hears the word from Jesus, "Take away the filthy garments from him and clothe him with change of raiment." And He said, "Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment." [Zechariah 3:4.] Satan sees that he is about to lose his last chance of subverting these souls and he brings all the powers of his satanic generalship into intense activity. This last great act in the drama is in personating Jesus Christ. His disguise is discerned by none but those who are established in the Scriptures and acquainted [with] the word of God. [possible page missing here]4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 7

The saints look on with amazement. Will they also be deceived? Will they worship Satan? Angels of God are about them. A clear, firm, musical voice is heard, "Look up." There was one object before the praying ones—[the] final and eternal salvation of their souls. This object was before them constantly—that immortal life was promised to them who endure unto the end. Oh, how earnest and fervent had been their desires. The judgment and eternity were in view. Their eyes by faith were fixed on the blazing throne, before which the white-robed ones were to stand. This restrained them from the indulgence of sin. They were ripening for heaven. They had been cultivating spiritual mindedness, and striving soul, might, mind, and strength with persevering energy to copy the Pattern, that they might be without spot or wrinkle or any such thing, and meet their Lord in peace. Their souls went out in all the intense longing for to see Jesus, and by beholding by faith the character and purity of Jesus they were being transformed into His image. They were being brought into close harmony with Jesus Christ, and they had indomitable purpose. They would not dishonor God; they would not receive the mark of the beast or of his image; they would overcome as servants and sons of God, that they might inherit all things.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 8

As a child lost weeps and longs for home, so did the remnant long to see Him whom their souls loveth, their Deliverer, Him in whom their hope of eternal life was centered. Pilgrims and strangers amidst labors, sorrows and conflicts, they turn the eye of faith heavenward, exclaiming, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Home—the mansions Christ has gone to prepare for them; how they long for their home in glory, how they long to enter within the gates of the city and dwell in the presence of Jesus forever. Their desires have been cherished long, and as Satan and his angels inspired the world, the church, and state against them, their souls with intense longings have cherished the soul-inspiring hope of overcoming and wearing the crown of life. Their character had obtained the heavenly mold that gave them discernment to see the disguises of Satan. Their understanding of Scriptures had given them a fixedness of purpose, an indomitable energy, which rendered them impossible to be molded or subdued by earth or hell. If they would be discouraged, Satan would have overwhelmed them.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 9

They count all things loss for the excellency of Christ. They could not be bribed or seduced or terrified. They were deaf to the siren song of pleasure, blind to the dazzling splendors presented before them to confuse, to allure, their senses. Worldly distractions, ambitions, honors were presented before them but only to be rejected. Indifferent to the threats and unmoved by terrors of the infernal powers, they could not be overthrown by Satan's devices.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 10

One effort more, and then Satan's last device is employed. He hears the unceasing cry for Christ to come, for Christ to deliver them. This last strategy is to personate Christ and make them think their prayers are answered. But this answers to the last closing work, the abomination of desolation standing in the holy place. [Text ends here.]4LtMs, Ms 16, 1884, par. 11

Ms 17, 1884

Diary Fragments — June 4-6, 1884

NP

1884

Previously unpublished.

June 4, 1884

Wrote seven pages to Healdsburg, seven pages of important matter for the church.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1884, par. 1

June 5, 1884

Morning meeting under tent. Rode out [with] Professor Brownsberger, Elders Waggoner [and] Corliss. Elder Waggoner preached in [the] evening [on] Peter's ladder. Wrote eighteen pages of foolscap.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1884, par. 2

June 6, 1884

Morning meeting, very good attendance. I had freedom in speaking to the people. Hearts were touched and Jesus did come [into] our midst. Many excellent testimonies were borne. Had Bible readings.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1884, par. 3

Wrote seven pages to Elder Haskell; seven pages to supply lack in sanctification article. Wrote one page to Eliza Burnham.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1884, par. 4

1885

Letters

Lt 1, 1885

Directors of the Sanitarium at Battle Creek

Christiania, Norway

November 3, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in MM 211; 11MR 78-79.

Dear Brethren:

Some things at the sanitarium have troubled my mind. I wrote about them and supposed that the matter had been copied and sent to Dr. Kellogg; but after we came to Switzerland, I found it in my portfolio. I then had no time to write in regard to this. I will now forward that which ought to have been sent before. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 1

I was not willing that this should come to those who might use it to the Doctor's injury, but now I must write it out. I was shown that he had been in danger, great danger, in the past, of making shipwreck of faith by exalting science above the God of science. He has not a clearly defined position in reference to his faith, and should be guarded, or he will certainly wander in the mazes of skepticism. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 2

I have not felt that the enlargement of the sanitarium was advisable, for several reasons. The foregoing is one. Another is, there is in him an element that will have a controlling power over him, unless he walks humbly before the Lord and is under the influence of His Spirit. It is a disposition not to allow others to obtain a thorough knowledge of all branches of the important work at the sanitarium. This is not as it should be. He should feel anxious to have men obtain all the knowledge they can possibly acquire. The work has grown large, under the Lord's guidance, and yet there is not one man that can be depended upon to work by Dr. Kellogg's side. This is not because no man can be found, but matters are so managed that the people look to Dr. Kellogg and expect him to give them personal attention. Thus expectations are encouraged which cannot be realized; then there is dissatisfaction. Those who cannot obtain his personal help think that the advice and attention of others is of little value.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 3

The Doctor can change this order of things. He alone has the power to do this. He can and should give greater encouragement to those who labor in connection with him. He needs to look at some of these matters in a different light. Should he be unfitted for his work, who would take his place? He should not keep his knowledge in this way, saying, "Thus far shalt thou go, but no further." Students should have every opportunity to learn all that it is possible for them to learn; for there is great need of physicians who are thoroughly qualified for their work.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 4

The sanitarium carries a heavy debt. Debts have been continually accumulating as improvements have been made. These improvements are all excellent, but there is, I have been shown, danger that the Doctor, with his inventive powers, will carry the matter altogether further than our finances will warrant. The effort to develop talent has not kept pace with the outlay of means for the purpose of increasing the patronage of the institution. While facilities are provided to accommodate more patients, scarcely anything is done to obtain talented and caretaking men to carry the burden of the work with Dr. Kellogg.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 5

The strain upon the Doctor is too heavy. He grasps at too much. His studies and bookmaking, in connection with the care of patients and so many other responsibilities, have been too much for his strength. Although there were limited facilities for the accommodation of patients, there were all the patients he could attend to, and more than he ought to have had, until he could educate reliable helpers to share his burdens. He is at fault here. We appreciate Dr. Kellogg, and we cannot consent to let him do work that others should do, to look after matters aside from his special professional duties, matters which others might look after. He should train others to do this class of work, so that the burden of so many things will not fall on him. He is a superior practitioner; but his mind is so full of contemplated improvements which he enters into, that he is so burdened with responsibilities he should not have, that it becomes worn, his nerve, brain power is strained, and he views matters in such an exaggerated light and speaks in such a way as to depress his own feelings and greatly discourage others. There are many evils resulting from this. If the Doctor continues to do as he has done, he will break down and become nervous, impatient, harsh, and denunciatory. He will justify himself when he needs to correct his wrongs. I urge those who are appointed to guard the interests of this institution to do their appointed work, to exercise their judgment, and through decided efforts change this order of things. Our sanitarium must not be the ruin of Dr. Kellogg. Brethren, you must do something in this matter. The Lord lays the responsibility upon you as directors. You should make more earnest efforts to secure men who will share this burden while Dr. Kellogg is able to give them the benefit of his knowledge and experience.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 6

The greatest service which the Doctor can render to the cause of God is to be a patient, true, God-fearing educator. He is to make that sanitarium a means of great reforms upward. He cannot find perfection anywhere, and should not expect it, but he must bear with the perversity of men and try to teach them.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 7

Dr. Kellogg has obtained his scientific knowledge by agonizing effort. He has robbed himself of sleep, devoting to study and investigation the hours that should have been given to rest. With the same determined effort, he has put in practice the knowledge gained. But while there are few that would do as he has done, and few who have ability to plan as wisely in many things as he has planned, still his experience and practice have not been faultless, and in some instances work has been done twice over, at considerable loss of means. No experience is gained without some mistakes. Dr. Kellogg should consider that while many of his errors are not brought to notice, the mistakes of others are made to appear in the worst light. No man is perfect; and instead of indulging a spirit of unjust criticism toward those connected with him in the work because they make mistakes, he should give them all the encouragement he possibly can. This will inspire in them confidence and love toward himself. A haughty, independent spirit should never be countenanced in Dr. Kellogg or in any other doctor. All should be willing to learn, and the Doctor should be willing to teach. While imparting to others the wisdom and knowledge God has given him, he will receive of God more than he imparts. He should realize that he is doing God's will and His work. While the students must be ready to begin with lesser responsibilities and give evidence that they can be trusted, he (the instructor) should feel for them the tenderest affection. He should not become discouraged at their ignorance, but should give them credit for all the good qualities he sees in them. In educating himself in this direction, he is obtaining a valuable experience—an experience which he needs in order to be a practical Christian.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 8

If the students make mistakes, let him not think them unworthy to be placed on trial again, as though they had committed sins that cannot be forgiven. He should kindly point out their errors, and they, in turn, should be grateful for a friend so faithful as to tell them their faults and how to correct them. To cast off the erring, or to treat them coldly, would not be doing as Christ has done for him. We are all fallible and need the pity and consideration and forgiveness of one another. Our work is to help one another to reform. The Doctor can draw men to him, he can win the confidence and love of those whom he would instruct, if he connects himself with Christ as the branch with the vine.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 9

It would be well for the Doctor and for the other physicians to go away at times from the pressure of constant care at the sanitarium. He should not have the incessant strain upon him. Provision has been made for larger patronage; and should disease fasten upon him, or he be called from the sanitarium, the result to the institution would show the lack of wise generalship in his not bringing in talent to carry forward the work that the sanitarium might not become demoralized and lose its good reputation. It is difficult for Dr. Kellogg to unload and let the burdens he should never have borne be placed on other shoulders. He has encouraged the custom of having all business matters brought before him and has so long done the thinking for others that if not consulted, he will be inclined to think that due respect was not shown him. Nevertheless, a change should be made. It was not right in the beginning that he should let other men use his brains. Those who cannot do the delicate and difficult work in his line as medical practitioner, which must devolve upon Dr. Kellogg, should think and plan and act for themselves in matters which come within their province; and the Doctor must, in place of censuring them, commend them.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 10

The management of the business interests of the sanitarium should not rest upon the Doctor as it has done. Others must attend to such matters. A multitude of cares may thus be removed from him. He should make every exertion on his part to qualify men to engage with him in the work and should give them an opportunity to share his responsibilities. This would be a mercy to himself and a great blessing to them. Unless he does make efforts to save himself, he will become, unexpectedly to himself, a complete wreck, when with proper exercise of his powers, restraining inclination, he might be able to do a good work, enduring as eternity.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 11

This advice and warning were given to me to give to my husband and have been given to many others. They were urged to unload, and not break under the continual strain and burden. My husband's help and counsel were needed and are needed today more than at any former stage of the work. There is not one engaged in the work who has the qualities of a manager as he had; and God would have had his life preserved, that he might have stood as a counselor; but he has gone down to the grave because others let him bear the load and do their thinking and their planning, and then he suffered their criticisms, which broke his heart. He saw that others failed to discern matters clearly and that they made mistakes. They were not judicious and far-seeing. There were wanting in their characters elements which he possessed in a high degree. His qualifications were just what the work required to mold and develop it and keep from creating extravagant things which could not be sustained; but the time came when others should come in to share the responsibilities. He was waiting for some men of piety as well as of talent and ability to carry the work forward and upward to greater perfection, someone competent to take his place. He was disgusted and distressed because there were so few who were men of discernment, so few who would be burden-bearers, and he thought that in order to save blunders, he must do all the work himself.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 12

Thus he kept on and on, until he dropped under the load. He was unloaded by others before he died, not in the right way, but in a way that God did not approve; and he carried the burden all the same, only made a great deal heavier by the wicked pressure brought to bear upon him.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 13

We do not want this experience repeated in Dr. Kellogg's case. We want the load to be removed while he has some strength left to accommodate himself to the situation. After my husband was removed from the work in such a manner as he was, the very men he dared not trust to share his burdens with him had to carry them all without the aid of his quick, far-reaching foresight, and without the help of his advice and experience. His voice might have been heard today if he had heeded the words of warning.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 14

Because Elder White could see what needed to be done, his brethren for many years were content to let him do their thinking, their seeing, their planning, and their executing. Thus, instead of becoming more efficient, they became less and less self-reliant. Simple, common business matters were brought before him by those connected with him in the work, until he became so accustomed to this that if not consulted about even minor matters he felt that due respect was not shown him. So it is with Dr. Kellogg.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 15

Brethren Murphy, Hall, and those connected with them are making the same mistake which others made in the case of my husband. They are in many respects machine men. They are willing to do if someone will tell them what to do; but their mental powers are becoming weakened, because, instead of thinking and planning for themselves, even in simple matters, they prefer to use Dr. Kellogg's mind. They wait to ask him if such and such things should be done.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 16

Brother Hall occupies the position of superintendent, but so far as thoughts and plans are concerned, Dr. Kellogg has the work of the superintendent to do. The Doctor should not have encouraged these men to depend on him to be brains for them. He has served tables too much. It is a sin and a shame for his mind to be called to so many frivolous, commonplace matters, and in allowing it he does a wrong to those connected with him. They will never become efficient till he shall change his course. Dr. Kellogg has larger responsibilities to take his time and engage his powers, and others should lift from him every ounce of burden they can. He cannot throw his arms about the entire institution. He must train his helpers to be self-reliant, independent, to be wise generals. He should not attempt to order every movement in person. God does not require of him such taxing service, even in the most important enterprises.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 17

The Doctor has succeeded because he would not be defeated. He has faced stubborn difficulties, and has seen them give way before him, because his courage would not be daunted nor his energy wearied. But this is just what his associates in the work have failed to do. Such an experience would be more valuable to them than gold; it would be a benefit through all time and through all eternity. There need not be so many helpless souls who will sink before difficulties. Elder Andrews might have lived had he encouraged and educated others to share the burdens with which he loaded himself down. He deprived them of an education they might have had, because he did so much himself, and allowed them to rely upon his brain, instead of doing their own thinking. Every man can be a man, a whole man. By patient, thoughtful effort put forth with zeal and energy, all may overcome cowardice and ignorance and inefficiency. The superintendent of the sanitarium should do more than merely to echo Dr. Kellogg's thoughts and plans. He should have sufficient breadth of thought and independence of judgment to differ with him in a Christlike manner, if the case demands it. He should use the powers of his own brain, and fill his office, thus growing in judgment and ability, so that every year he will become more capable of bearing responsibilities, that Dr. Kellogg may have periods of entire rest and change.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 18

The same is true of others who are connected with the institution. They should not be mere shadows of Dr. Kellogg, for this is the danger; should the substance be removed, nothing would remain to make the shadow. They should not say Yea to his every proposition. They should never consent to be mere machines, run by another man's brains. God has given them ability to think and to act. He would have them strong, firm, whole-souled, well-balanced men. And they should not be crippled or dwarfed in their knowledge for want of practice. Practical training is essential for all who would become efficient, whole. If students could spend some time in a hospital, they would obtain an experience of great value to them.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 19

If the workers in the sanitarium learn to think independently, they will often be able to help the Doctor in his thoughts and plans, for he will recognize the propositions which reveal thought. He is not infallible; his plans are not always faultless and wise, and another may see failure where he sees success. An associate with a good strong mind to propose plans and offer counsel would be the greatest blessing the Doctor could have.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 20

But there are some who no sooner hear a plan proposed, than they take it for granted that its utility cannot be questioned. Because it is proposed by Dr. Kellogg it must be right, and they at once give it their support. They do not weigh the matter, probe it, sift it, test it, pray over it, giving the Doctor the benefit of deliberate thought and clear plans that would bring relief to his mind.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 21

The Lord has said, No one man's mind or judgment is sufficient to exert a controlling influence in any of our institutions; therefore it is necessary that councils be held, that plans be considered by men of different stamp of character; then if there are defects, they will be discovered and removed. But here the same lack of independent thought is seen. If Dr. Kellogg makes a proposition, others stand ready to vote for it without taxing their own minds to candidly weigh the different points in the matter. Such men are mere ciphers. Brethren, you must have force of character, moral backbone and more power of thought in order to discern what enterprises are judicious, and the best way to take hold of them and make a success. But to do this, you should bring all your plans to the divine Counselor. Do not neglect to pray earnestly and in faith over every matter.4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 22

In order for you to be reliable men, there must be a constant growth of your powers. It is by the exercise of every faculty, even in little things, that we acquire power to engage in larger undertakings. Do not shirk your share of responsibility because there are risks to run, because there is something to be ventured. Do not require others to be brains for you. Do not be like a ball of putty. You must train your powers to be strong and vigorous. Your talents will increase as you exercise steady, unyielding energy in the discharge of duty. 4LtMs, Lt 1, 1885, par. 23

Lt 2, 1885

Butler, G. I.

Refiled as Lt 23, 1885.

Lt 3, 1885

Kellogg, J.H.

Extract from Lt 7, 1886.

Lt 4, 1885

Andrews, Edith

Basel, Switzerland

November 21, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in OHC 158; 2MCP 632; TMK 95.

My dear afflicted Sister:

I wish to write you a few lines. I deeply sympathize with you in your sufferings under the hand of disease. The prospect of your recovery is uncertain. How long your stay will be prolonged it is impossible for us to tell. God alone knoweth the future. But while you have time, while reason and life are granted you, I beseech of you that the mistakes of your life shall not become the ruling power in your last days. If you see your mistakes, confess them. Do not further mar the experience of the young men in the office; do not allow them to be flattered with your accepted attentions which they may bestow; but if you would not link your life with them, should you recover health and strength, then sever the cord of these special attentions and preferences. Be not dishonest with them while your feet are on the brink of the eternal world. Be true to yourself, true to your God, true to your associates.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 1

Your love, your attentions, your friendship have been human and not divine. You have not been one to lead these youth into the path your Saviour has traveled. You have not encouraged self-denial and self-sacrifice in the youth with whom you have associated. They do not look upon your Christian life as God looks upon it. They have idolized you, given their love and sympathy to you, and it has flattered and pleased you. You have held, as it were, an admiration society of each other, and you have been no help to the young. The youth have injured you by their flattery.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 2

Your life has been so filled with human sympathy and human attention that you have not appreciated the love of Christ. You have had an undercurrent in your life which the books of heaven register as double-dealing. This is a great offense to God. I know your feet have not been placed in the footprints of the Man of Calvary. Can we by any means on our part guide these feet aright, that you may stand on the Rock? I caution you to believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God. Oh, my sister, your life has not been what it might have been. Had you drawn your sentiments and conclusions from the Scriptures rather than from hereditary tendencies; had you not followed inclinations rather than where the True Shepherd leads the way; had you read books less and searched the Scriptures more earnestly, you would have been enabled to discern between the false and the true Christian life and character. Your life has been filled with sentimentalism in one sense, your powers have been perverted. There is nothing we should dread so much as being ignorant of Satan's devices.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 3

I hope your associates that have been so devoted to you will not be the means, now in these important moments left you, of blinding your eyes to your great soul need. Do not, I beseech of you, deceive your own soul. Do not deceive others that know your want of devotion, your want of true Christian experience, so that that life which has been a snare to others, imperiling their souls, will be regarded in their spiritual blindness as a martyr's life, worthy of veneration. God does not regard it thus.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 4

Last Sabbath I thought I could see a ray of light in your testimony in the expression that you wanted a new conversion. This is what you need and must have. Delay it not. Confess your errors and forsake them, and leave as true and correct a representation as you possibly can of the Christian's life behind you. Let no doubt be left on any mind as to your true repentance and your true conversion. Satan has thrown the bandage across your eyes, that you cannot see yourself as you are. Others have idolized you for the virtue, the lovely character they thought you possessed. But a selfish love for admiration has had a controlling power upon your life. Oh, look and see, while your affectionate words and manifestations of love have been lavished upon human objects, showing that you could give expression to these sentiments, how little has Christ had of that love. How little love and warm affection have you given your mother. You have not only robbed her of these, but how little have you spoken of Jesus. He has been excluded from your daily converse. Your influence has been to attract minds to yourself, to draw them away from Jesus, away from sacred devotion, to center their love and affections upon you. They have done this, not because of your resemblance to Jesus, not because of your genuine piety, but because they were pleased with you. They saw not and sensed not that with a firmness of purpose, worthy of a better cause; you have followed your own judgement and impulses and have done very much as you were inclined to do, notwithstanding advice and counsel to the contrary. But now the case becomes exceedingly solemn. You are most assuredly losing your hold upon this life, and your faith is not firmly grasping the hand of Jesus. I feel burdened for you. I beg of you to leave nothing undone in righting every wrong.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 5

I realize in treating of this matter I am dealing with a soul that is judgment bound. I dare not flatter you. Let the strength God has given you be employed, even at this late hour, in seeking for the peace of Christ. Cast yourself unreservedly in repentance, and contrition, and faith on Jesus Christ. Come to Him at this solemn moment with simplicity. Satan has had advantage over you, and over others through you. They have idolized you, not because of your devotion to Jesus, but through human sympathy and affection. It is time that you cut every earthly cord. No longer seek to find amusement for yourself that time shall pass by more rapidly, but treasure every moment. Make the most of your God-given opportunities while life is prolonged. Seek earnestly to obtain a better knowledge of Jesus and a fitness for the future life. With that character with which you go down into the grave, you will come up in the resurrection. It is not the character that is changed at the resurrection, but it is the body that will be changed. This mortal will put on immortality, this corruptible shall put on incorruption. Jesus is waiting now at the eleventh hour to reveal Himself to you. If you will hear His voice and open the door of your heart through repentance and faith, He will come in and abide with you.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 6

My dear sister, it is trying for me to make statements to you as I do in this letter. I dare not conceal the plain facts from you. There are not in you the virtues that many ascribe to you. May God give you spiritual eyesight, that you may discern your great need. You have a work to do to sever the tendrils that have entwined about you, and let them be entwining about God. You have no time to lose in doing up your work while life lasts and exercising that repentance that needeth not to be repented of. Do not leave anything undone on your part. I do not want you to banish from your mind the real work for eternity which you have strangely neglected. Every work will appear as it is in the judgment. It may be glossed over here, but there it will stand revealed in its true character.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 7

Will you, my dear child, look especially to this matter and move intelligently? You cannot ignore the past; you have something to do with the past and the present. You have confessions to make in regard to the past; and how anxiously I have hoped to see you engaged in this work without presenting it before you again. Some weeks ago I spoke with you earnestly in regard to this matter. And now again I urge it upon your attention, not because I wish to cause you pain, but because I wish to save you from future sorrow and regrets that will bring you no relief. I love your soul; but it is very hard for you to see and acknowledge a wrong without any vindication of self. It is like taking out a right eye; like severing the right arm.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 8

Your foolish associates have petted you and given you their preferences, and you in your turn have given them your attention. You have encouraged young men to entertain the idea that you loved them and allowed that intimacy which should exist only between persons who had exchanged vows of becoming all to each other. Now this has injured you more than you will ever see in its full bearing. And it has injured those whose hopes you have raised, and who have been disappointed in your refusing at last to marry them. If this had only been acted over once, then the matter would not have been as bad on your part, but the same attentions you would give to a fresh subject. I have talked with you most earnestly in the fear of God, showing you how offensive was this sin of trifling with hearts in the sight of God.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 9

You have through your influence, while carrying the impression of leading minds to God, been leading them to center their affection

upon you; and God has been robbed of the devotion and heart-worship that He claims. You have been cherished, and idolized, and worshiped, because these young men loved you as their ideal of perfection. They have been deceived. Their idol was clay, erring, faulty clay. You are not even bearing the image of the divine. These young men have not that true, earnest, thorough devotion to the work of God that they once had. Their affections have been divided. I want you to see this and sense it and repent of it because you really feel the need of pardon.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 10

I hope that you will become more in earnest now, while disease is slowly wearing away your life forces. The voice from heaven has been appealing to you from the Word of God; the message borne by His servants during the late conference should have so impressed your heart as to lead you to heartily abhor yourself and put away the evil and make earnest work for repentance. The Spirit of God urges me to write these words to you. Jesus died to save you. The grand purpose of His life on earth was to save men and women, that they may comprehend the grand purposes of the plan of redemption and the rich provisions made for their salvation.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 11

The corruptions that are in the world, all the unholy influences on every side are working ever to draw us down to a low level, that we shall be satisfied with human influences to take the place of the divine, that our sensibilities may become blunted and perverted through a wrong course of action. Conscience becomes feeble and the religious faculties become dwarfed, and eternal interests are brought down on a level with common things. Our natural and cultivated tendencies are to lead away from God and heaven until the grace of God works a transformation. The lower nature is ever inclined to bear sway. We are slaves to self-indulgence and frequently seek it in ways that God has reproved, until a low level is reached in the religious life, and the image of God is nearly obliterated from the soul. Now God will pardon and bless if we come to Him with full contrition of soul. But if no confessions and repentance come into the life, then our names will be spued out of the lips of Jesus. Our names will be blotted out of the book of life. The soul must feel its degradation and its need of a physician. Jesus has promised to bless those who come to Him in humility of soul. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 12

Oh, that you would feel what the character of the past life has been, that it has been a deception and has poisoned the springs of true happiness, weakened and depraved the will, preventing its being used in the right direction, while it has been as firm as steel in the wrong direction. The soul needs cleansing by the blood of Jesus. Let us be thankful that it is not now too late for wrongs to be righted. Oh, now with subdued heart, turn to Jesus; lay hold on the hope set before you, with broken and contrite heart. Jesus offers free pardon and proposes to call you His daughter, and you may call Him by the endearing name "Father." He will give you grace to help you in your weakness, and He will lead you to the light. You may have peace. But oh, that will of yours, to carry out your own inclinations: what a power it has been! How others have exalted you and thought you were perfection; but you have not led them heavenward. Will you now come to Jesus while your reason and a measure of strength are given you? 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 13

God will make you free if you come to Him in sincerity in your soul's great need. But do not seek to keep the time, these golden moments, filled up with unimportant matters to amuse you and make you forget the past errors of your life. Do your work now of confession, and by faith lay hold of Jesus' blood. Animals' spirits will only answer to serve us in health and sunshine. Let sad affliction come, let trials enter our circle, and the sunshine leaves us when we need it most. Companions will amuse us with light and cheerful talk; they will frequently flatter us with attention; but the thoughts and heaviness return to us again as unwelcome guests. These are lessons that you have to learn, late: that it is not that which is around us, not place or circumstances, but what is in us; not what we have, but what we really are that makes us have genuine happiness. We want a clear conscience, a spirit under command; and unless we have this, we always depend upon others for sympathy, for appreciation and comfort. And when deprived of human props, we find our spirits dark and uninteresting and cold. Meditation is not pleasant. Self-examination is dreaded. God wants that mind in the right place, centered upon Himself as the Source of peace and happiness and joy, else that mind will be discontented unless drinking in flattery and praise. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 14

You have lost a rich experience, and it would be the worst kind of dishonor to God to regard your life as a success, or as any criterion for others to follow. It can in many respects only stand as a beacon of warning to prevent other souls from being deluded as you have been. But, dear child, your soul is precious. Jesus died for you, and now it is not too late for you to come to Jesus, to look and live. Thank God that Jesus lives to intercede for you. You are not left to vain regrets and disappointments. What this life fails to give the child of God we may by faith see richly furnished in the future life. We must be thoroughly dissatisfied with ourselves before we will feel the need of a Saviour to whom we may look and live. True faith in Christ is obedience to His commandments and to follow His example. The peace that passeth understanding is true belief in Christ, which unites us to Him as the branch is united to the living vine.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 15

The heaviest burden is our own sins, and we do not want in word or in action to encourage anyone to be unconcerned in regard to his errors and mistakes. Much less would we seek to while away the few remaining hours of one, who is apparently about to die, with flattering hopes and seek to amuse and distract the mind, that it shall not candidly contemplate whether he has made his calling and his election sure. If ever there were a time when we should know ourselves, know whether we have been building upon sliding sand or upon solid rock, it is when our accounts for this life are to be closed up, to be unsealed and read in the great day of final settlement. Life looks to many desirable, presenting joy and happiness; but life has its troubles. Living is the solemn reality of the grave. We surely need to build now on solid rock, that we may not be moved from our foundation.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 16

Let nothing, Edith, engage your attention now that will hinder you from making thorough work for eternity. You need a strong arm to lean upon now, and how helpless you would be without God. Let us be full of gratitude that it is not too late to make an entire surrender to God. Go to Him now, weak, sinful, helpless, and let this be the language of your soul, "Save, Lord, or I perish." "Simply to Thy cross I cling." Jesus is willing to help you, but you must feel your need of Him. You must not try to divert your mind from the real work before you of preparation. You are not ready to die; your sins are not confessed; they are not forgiven. But they may be both confessed and forgiven, and all your burdens may seem light. Grasp by faith the good hope of eternal life. That earnest seeking of God, that love you did not give to Jesus in your life, give to Him now in your weakness and helplessness.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 17

Jesus is ready to be found of you. He first loved you, but what ingratitude have you shown to Jesus. Your soul has not been attracted to Jesus. Peace is found in the unfailing promise of God. There has been great need of your searching the Scriptures, but other reading has pleased you better than your Bible. But now become acquainted with God. When your associates visit you, and may try to beguile or divert your mind, tell them the moments for you are golden, that you have yet to learn the songs of Canaan. You have yet to become acquainted with your Redeemer—that the hours are too precious to be squandered; that all your remaining strength must be carefully devoted to securing your soul's salvation.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 18

The future life is to be secured. The promises are rich and full and glorious. These must be appropriated to yourself. Jesus the dear Saviour loves you. He has white robes and crowns of everlasting life for you. The dear Savior will lead you by the fountains of living waters. There will be no chilling winds, no wintry colds, but an eternal summer. There is light for the intellect; love that is abiding, sincere. There will be health and immortality; vigor for every faculty. There will be shut out forever every sorrow and every grief. But the songs of Zion must be learned below before they can be sung in heaven. Where there is no love for God in the heart, there is no joy in contemplating heavenly things. Where a holy heaven has not attractions, it cannot stand as supreme before the imagination.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 19

Oh, my dear child, you need a Physician now, for you are sick—soul-sick. Those who think themselves worthy of admiration from human beings will underrate the offers of pardon from the precious Intercessor. The great purpose of the Bible is to lead us to a pure and holy life here in this world, preparatory for the sinless life in the presence of Jesus and the holy angels. We must be without spot, without wrinkle, or any such thing. Oh, that in your aspirations, in your life while looking to others for sympathy you had taken your Bible and pondered the messages from God to fallen man. You need to dwell upon the assurances of God's Word, to hold them before the mind's eye. Point by point, day by day, repeat the lessons there given, over and over, until you learn the bearing and import of them. We see a little today, and by meditation and prayer, more tomorrow. And thus little by little we take in the gracious promises until we can almost comprehend their full significance. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 20

Oh, how much we lose by not educating the imagination to dwell upon divine things, rather than upon the earthly. We may give fullest scope to the imagination, and yet, "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." [1 Corinthians 2:9.] Fresh wonders will be revealed to the mind the more closely we apply it to divine things. We lose much by not talking more of Jesus and of heaven, the saints' inheritance. The more we contemplate heavenly things, the more new delights we shall see and the more will our hearts be brim full of thanks to our beneficent Creator. Consider the wonderful love of God in giving His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish but have everlasting life. Oh, why do the professed followers of Christ become charmed and all absorbed with human frail beings and set their affections upon them and bow to them as to a deity, while Jesus is seeking to win our love and engage our thoughts, to bind us to His own heart by the disclosures of the tenderest sympathy and inexpressible love. No earthly parent has pled more earnestly with an erring child than Christ pleads for us before His Father's throne, while we are transgressors of His law. No human lips have ever followed with more tender expostulations the erring ones. Have, then, a care how you treat this marvelous love. Read the rich promises of God and believe them. Ponder upon them. Listen to the voice of unspeakable love and pity. In Him we have redemption through His blood. As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. God help you, my precious child, to come to Jesus just as you are, just as the sinner should come, in faith with repentance. Cut loose the tendrils; let them not entwine about earthly things, but let them entwine about God. You may never be lonesome, never feel that you are alone, if you will take

Jesus as your Companion and your everlasting Friend. Learn the lessons now upon your sickbed that you failed to learn in your past life. Trust in Jesus fully as your Saviour, whose death has redeemed you; as your Intercessor, whose pleadings above avail with the Father and secure us peace, pardon. Our names are engraven on the palms of His hands, as our King to whom we must render a reverent and affectionate obedience. Jesus is the believer's life, his hope, his joy. Love is the growth of faith and trust, to have Christ formed in us, to look to Him as a Friend and Counselor. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 21

You have not this experience. You have ever been reaching out for human sympathy, human love, and you have led others to center their affections upon you. You have not loved Jesus, nor served Him. To make God's grace our own, we must do our part most faithfully, work to keep our souls in the love of Jesus, and then we shall bring forth fruit meet for repentance. We are to seek, that we may find; knock, that it may be opened unto us. Every provision has been made for us, and the Bible leaves the responsibility upon us. If we are not saved it is our own fault. I invite you to come to Christ and to come just now; do not resist the Spirit. You must lay hold of eternal life. The forgiveness of sin is promised to him who repents and believes, the crown of life to him who is faithful. 4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 22

Your experience has not been of the right stamp, and I do not wish yourself or others should consider that your experience in the religious life is safe for them to imitate. The design of God in giving us rich promises is stated by the Apostle Peter, that we "might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." [2 Peter 1:4.] We must have earthly, worldly tastes transformed to the divine and heavenly. Heaven would be no heaven to you or to me if our tastes and our meditations and our temper were not Christlike. The pure and heavenly mansions which Christ has gone to prepare for His children are such as the redeemed alone can value by being made meet for them by the inward work of grace in their hearts. I might picture to you the blessedness of heaven, the crowns laid up for the conquerors, the white linen which is the righteousness of Christ, the palm branches of victory, and the harps of gold. But all these alone will not make heaven a place of bliss for any one of us. Without any of these, if we had pure and holy characters, we would be happy, for we would have Jesus and His love. Purity and innocence and conformity to Christ's character will make heaven enjoyable. All the faculties will be strengthened, all in harmony. Perfect bliss can only dwell in the heart where Christ reigns supreme. Christ came to our world to die, the Just for the unjust, the Sinless for the sinful; that He might elevate and ennoble men and women and stamp His divine image upon them. For this His Spirit strives with us, that there may be an ever-advancing vigor and perfection of spiritual life which is the way we become partakers of the divine nature, having the likeness of Christ's character.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 23

My dear child, I beseech of you to seek God earnestly by confessing and putting away everything displeasing to God. He will accept you and give you light and peace and joy.4LtMs, Lt 4, 1885, par. 24

Lt 5, 1885

Butler, G. I.

Christiania, Norway

October 31, 1885

This letter is published in entirety in TM 297-300.

Dear Brother Butler:

I was more sorry than I can express to learn that under your instruction Brethren Farnsworth and Burrill sought to restrict the work at the New York camp meeting. You could not have advised them to do a worse thing, and you should not have put a work into their hands that they were not fitted to do in a wise manner. Be careful how you repress advancing work in any locality. There is little enough being done in any place, and it certainly is not proper to seek to curtail operations in missionary lines.⁴*LtMs, Lt 5, 1885, par. 1*

After looking matters over carefully and prayerfully, I wrote as I did in my notes of travel. I wanted to leave the matter in such a shape as not to discourage the laborers in New York in their efforts to do something, although I desired to give them caution, so that they would not make any extreme moves in their plans. The workers were doing well and ought to have been encouraged and advised to go on with their work. There are men in New York who should have helped them by making needed donations to invest in the cause. They will have to give to the work before they will grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth.⁴*LtMs, Lt 5, 1885, par. 2*

You and your workers should have looked at this matter from different points of view than you did. You should have investigated the work thoroughly and asked yourselves if five thousand dollars was too large a debt to incur in the important work in which these workers were engaged. Your influence should have been exerted in such a way as to cause the people to see the importance of the work and to realize that it was their duty to rise to the emergency. You should have done as I have tried to in my notes of travel. But if our brethren feel at liberty to stop the work when they cannot see where money is coming from to sustain it, then the work will not only be contracted in Michigan and New York, but in every other state in the Union. If our workers are going forward in any place, do not put up the bars, and say, "Thus far shalt thou go and no further." I feel sad that you have closed up the school at Rome, N.Y. I see that the brethren sent to look after this enterprise have not taken measures to advance the work by soliciting donations from men who could give. There are rich men in the conference who have made complaints about the debt that has been incurred who ought to have sustained these workers. While reproach and discouragement have been cast upon the workers, the impression has been made upon those who have means that they have a perfect right to question every enterprise that calls for money.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1885, par. 3

God does not require you to take such a course, that the workers in New York or anywhere else shall not feel at liberty to make advance movements unless they can consult you and ask what your judgment of the matter is before they advance. I cannot sanction the idea that you must have a personal oversight of all the details of the work. If I did, the result would be that no worker would dare to exercise his own judgment in anything. The workers would have to rely upon one man's brain and one man's judgment, and the result would be that men would be left in inefficiency because of their inactivity. There are altogether too many of this class now, and they amount to next to nothing. I write this because I feel deeply on this point. We are not doing one half that we ought to do.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1885, par. 4

It is true that the South Lancaster school must be sustained, but this need not hinder us from sustaining other schools. We should have primary schools in different localities to prepare the youth for our higher schools. It may seem to you that it is wise to close up the school in Rome, N.Y., but I fail to see the wisdom of it. To close up this school will seem to reflect discredit upon all that the people have done and will discourage them from making further advancement. I cannot see that you have gained anything in making the move that you have, nor can I feel that it is in accordance with God's order. It will work nothing but injury, not only to those that have complained about the debt, but also to the workers. Men who have property, and could have helped this enterprise, will breathe more freely. These moneyed men will be encouraged not to do more for the cause than they have done, but to do less. They will feel at liberty to complain concerning anything that calls for an outlay of means. O that the Lord might guide you. You should never in a single instance allow hearsay to move you to action, and yet you have sometimes done this. Never take action to narrow and circumscribe the work unless you know that you are moved to do so by the Spirit of the Lord. Our people are doing work for foreign missions, but there are home missions that need their help just as much as these foreign missions. We should make efforts to show our people the wants of the cause of God and to open before them the need of using means that God has entrusted to them to advance the work of the Master both at home and abroad. Unless those who can help in New York are roused to a sense of their duty, they will not recognize the work of God when the loud cry of the third angel shall be heard. When light goes forth to lighten the earth, instead of coming up to the help of the Lord, they will want to bind about His work to meet their narrow ideas. Let me tell you that the Lord will work in this last work in a manner very much out of the common order of things, and in a way that will be contrary to any human planning. There will be those among us who will always want to control the work of God, to dictate even what movements shall be made when the work goes forward under the direction of the angel who joins the third angel in the message to be given to the world. God will use ways and means by which it will be seen that He is taking the reins in His own hands. The workers will be surprised by the simple means that God will use to bring about and perfect His work of righteousness. Those who are accounted good workers will need to draw nigh to God. They will need the divine touch. They will need to drink more deeply and continuously at the fountain of living water in order that they may discern God's work at every point. Workers may make mistakes, but you should give them a chance to correct their errors, give them an opportunity to learn caution by leaving the work in their hands.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1885, par. 5

Lt 6, 1885

Andrews, Edith

NP

1885

This letter is published in entirety in 10MR 53-58.

Dear Sister Edith Andrews:

Your case has been presented before me. God has given you abilities, and you should use every faculty to His glory. There are dangers which you need to avoid. You need to learn to be unselfish in the home life. Your character needs to be molded after the divine model. A mold has already been given to your character which is not for your best good.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 1

False views of life prevail everywhere. We meet this evil in our daily intercourse with society. If you cherish these false views, there will grow from them other errors, which not only affect your character, but the characters of those with whom you associate.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 2

Right thinking lies at the foundation of rightdoing. It is not safe to follow inclination, or to allow a peculiar temperament, inherited or cultivated, to control the mind.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 3

There are precious souls whose usefulness has been greatly lessened by misconceptions. By cherishing false ideas, they have weakened their physical and mental powers, cutting short lives that might have been preserved for many years.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 4

We do the truth violence and injure ourselves and others when we live in careless indifference with regard to our relation to God. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 5

God is love. He it is whom we should love supremely. The wealth of our affection may flow without restraint in this divine channel. To love God supremely and our neighbor as ourself—this is the fulfilling of the law.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 6

Many love self supremely. They seek their own enjoyment, disregarding the good of others. Those in whose hearts love of self is strong will hate those who refuse to sustain them in a wrong course of action.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 7

There is a great deal said about religion, and many claim to possess religion, but true religion is very rare. There are many external forms, but in many cases these only serve as a cloak, to cover up the most soul-destroying selfishness.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 8

True religion may be distinguished from its counterfeit. There is a test which shows the difference between the precious coin and the base metal. This test is to be daily applied. “By their fruits ye shall know them.” [Matthew 7:20.] Do we reveal love for God and His truth? Do we love our neighbor as we love ourselves?4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 9

True religion shines forth in self-forgetfulness. The religion which must be closed within monastic walls in order to grow is no religion at all, but a mere form. It is amid the activities of life, in the everyday contact with one another, that we are to reveal that love which is made of deeds. Like a thread of gold this love must run through the daily experience.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 10

To separate one’s self from all the disagreeable things of life, to choose a certain line of work to the exclusion of all other things, is self-pleasing.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 11

The youth must fasten themselves firmly to God. Then they will see that they have a part to act in the world’s work. They will see duties to be performed. These duties will not always be agreeable! Notwithstanding this, they are to be performed cheerfully and willingly.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 12

The essence of true religion is a desire to be useful to others, to lighten their burdens and lessen their cares, to do not merely the most pleasing things, but all that needs to be done. It calls for the crucifixion of selfishness. Happiness will come to those who live this religion.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 13

Those who neglect the common duties of life—which somebody must do—to pursue a course of self-pleasing, are gaining a one-sided education. Only those who forget self, who are always studying the happiness and needs of others, are building a symmetrical character. Remember that every action adds to or takes from the happiness of others.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 14

In neglecting the duties which someone must do, in withdrawing to your room to put upon paper in glowing language your devotion to God and the truth, or to relate some incident which has taken place, were you not pleasuring self? Was this done solely for the glory of God? Did no selfishness alloy the pure gold of your action? Was it not your duty to help those who were taking weary steps to add to the general comfort and convenience of the family? Did not the duties they performed lie directly in their pathway? Was there no cross for you to bear?4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 15

God's law is broken by those who disregard the good of others. Those who seek to do good to others act upon true principle. Self-love does not control the life. As we do this, we are making a record which we shall be reluctant to meet when the judgment shall sit and the books shall be opened.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 16

Every unselfish action makes the character more Christlike. When self is crucified, a change takes place in the life. The heart responds to the touch of the heavenly angels. The wrong tendencies transmitted as a birthright and strengthened by education are dropped out of the life. The current of the thought is changed. A love broad, deep, noble, Christlike, fills the heart and overflows to all Christ's children. Whenever the time and attention are absorbed in self-gratification, the law of God is broken.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 17

No one has a right to live only for self. The mind should never be confined in the narrow chambers of self. God has given us a broader sphere of action. The life is to be inspired by deeper, truer motive. A true, noble life is characterized by thoughtful attention to the needs of others. The love of Christ in the soul is a constant wellspring of joy, ever flowing forth to others. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 18

We talk of graduating from our colleges, but there is no graduation from the school of Christ. Throughout the ceaseless ages of eternity Christians will be learners in this school. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 19

Those who when they graduate from college think that they have learned all they need to learn have a very imperfect idea of education. If they looked at the matter in a right light, they would see that their education in practical life was just commencing. They must now use their knowledge and skill in new and untried ways. They will meet with many disappointments. They will be confronted by disagreeable duties. There will be need for patient, persevering effort. They are now to put their education to practical use. Day by day they will need divine power. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 20

There are girls who dislike housework, who would much rather employ their time in sedentary work. This is a great mistake. Many girls die for want of physical exercise. When a girl employs part of her time in domestic work, both she and her mother are blessed. She learns what is of great use to her when the health and happiness of those she best loves depend upon her practical experience. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 21

As possessors of God's free gift of life, we should do all in our power to reach the highest degree of usefulness. Those who do not possess a well-balanced mind in a sound body will fail in their lifework. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 22

Attention to health is one of our most important duties. We owe this to ourselves, to society, and to God. Young men and young women are proverbially careless in regard to their health. Hundreds die in early life, not because of a dispensation of providence, but because of a dispensation of carelessness. Many girls go half clad in cold weather. Others choose to sit reading or writing when they should be taking physical exercise. God gave them organs for use. The living machinery is not to be allowed to rust from inaction. To keep all the powers of the body equally taxed will require self-restraint. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 23

The lives of many who have suffered premature death might have been prolonged to old age had they acted intelligently. Disease and death have become common because of the unpardonable ignorance of those who ought to know better. Exercise is indispensable to the health of every organ. If one set of muscles is used to the neglect of others, the living machinery is not being worked intelligently.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 24

When physical exercise is taken, the circulation is quickened. The heart receives blood faster and sends it to the lungs faster. The lungs work more vigorously, furnishing a greater amount of blood, which is sent with stronger power through the entire being. Exercise gives new life and strength to every part of the body.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 25

The nerves gain or lose strength in accordance with the way in which they are treated. If used too long and too severely, they are overtaxed and weakened. If used properly, they gain strength.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 26

In order to have health, equilibrium of action must be maintained. The mind must harmonize with this, or the benefits are not realized. If physical exercise is regarded as drudgery, the mind takes no interest in the exercise of the different parts of the body. The mind must be interested in the exercise of the muscles. In the education of the youth, physical exercise must be combined with mental taxation.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 27

Young girls who have health never know how to appreciate its value. If their employment is sedentary, they have a distaste for other branches of labor. They complain of great weariness if they take exercise. This should be to them a convincing fact that they need to train their muscles.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 28

Those who have [not] been accustomed to think and plan for anyone but themselves, who find no pleasure in making themselves useful, lose a great amount of happiness. Sentimentalism is a dangerous element to come into the life and experience of the youth.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1885, par. 29

Lt 7, 1885

Bourdeau, Daniel

Healdsburg, California

February 10, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in UL 55; VSS 216.

Much Respected Fellow Laborer:

During the night I have had impressed upon me that you were in trouble. I was in your family, and you were talking extravagantly. You seemed to have no control over your words, your thoughts, or your actions. Said you, "I am done with Europe. I am going to America. I shall lose my life if I stay here. I am misjudged and unappreciated."4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 1

You seemed to be in an abandonment of grief. I stepped up to you and, placing my hand upon your head, said, "Lord, this dear brother is not in his right mind. Satan thinks to have the control of this intellect, but Lord, forbid it! We rebuke the enemy in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth." I thought your agony passed away, and you said, "You then are not against me; you are my true friend." I answered, "Brother Daniel, I have always been your friend." Then a light broke over your countenance, and you said, "Jesus is my friend, and He will not suffer my feet to be moved." I awoke, and this is what leads me to write to you not very long since God gave me this light in regard to your case.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 2

I have been shown that God has a work for you to do which you can do to His acceptance if you firmly rely upon the arm that is infinite. You must not think that God would have you bear the whole burden. The work is His. The cause is the Lord's. He will take care of His own work. You have a vivid imagination, and you put much intensity into your work. This wears you. You must always remember that Jesus loves you, and He requires obedience rather than sacrifice. You can do a much greater and more efficient work if you will cultivate a calm trust in God and do not become anxious, and worried, and troubled, as though Jesus were buried in the sepulcher, and you had no Saviour. He has risen, Daniel, He has ascended to the heavens and is your Advocate before the throne of God. You may refer your requests to God, knowing that you have a faithful High Priest who will be touched with the feelings of your infirmities, for He has been tempted in all points like as we are.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 3

Do not feel that God is unmindful of you. He loves you and will give you rest and peace in Him. There is need of your exercising caution toward yourself. You are almost constantly overtaking both the physical and mental powers because you allow yourself to feel too intensely. You would know just what advice to give another in your case.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 4

Sometimes one of your lengthy discourses might have far better effect upon the people if cut up in three discourses; and most generally you could do more good, and leave a better impression, if one half the time were given to preaching and the other half be used in visiting or to rest your vital organs. The people cannot digest so much at a time; their minds cannot grasp so much; they become weary and confused by having so much matter brought before them in one discourse. There are many of our ministers who err in this respect. Then the result upon themselves is not good. They become brain weary and pity themselves. They feel that they are carrying heavy loads for the Lord and having a hard time. They begin to look to their feelings, and remove their eyes from Jesus who is the Author and Finisher of their faith, and ponder over their painful feelings.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 5

Jesus does not want this sacrifice on their part. This high tone of voice is an expenditure of vital force which is all unnecessary and is a violation of the laws of health. It is not after God's order. It not only worries the worker, but it wearies and annoys the people for whom he works, so that the interest is not kept till the close of the discourse, and two thirds of those long discourses are lost and the preacher is exhausted. The Lord does not work a miracle [to counteract what persons] do to themselves in their imprudent exercise of the powers He has given them. More than half of the preaching labor of the minister is lost in lengthy discourses. God has spoken to you on this point, but you do not obey His voice. You need to be a wiser steward over yourself. You need to guard D. T. Bourdeau, that he shall not do positive harm to himself in his labors and cut short his life. You must on this point reform. When this intensity of feeling is indulged and cherished; when the mind is kept on a constant strain and the voice wound up to a high pitch, a reaction is sure to come. You do not know how to let down. Your active brain invents more work, and the poor mortal body feels the strain and wear, and there is a depression corresponding to the high taxation put upon the powers. Do not allow yourself to make your labors unnecessarily severe. You tax yourself in writing as well as speaking. God does not want this. Work discreetly. Observe strictly the laws of health, and you will preach less and minister more. You will be fresh to do good work for the Master. Have fresh ideas and fresh manna to feed the sheep in Christ's pasture. It is not wise to give them such a variety at one time that their minds cannot take in or comprehend the varied points placed before them.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 6

The Lord would have you reform in your manner of labor, that you may preserve to yourself physical strength and a well-balanced mind; that you may be a wise counselor, and that you may have a symmetrical character. There is a great work yet to be done in saving souls. The warning message has but just begun its work in Europe. Men who have had experience in the knowledge of the truth are scarce. Too much so for you to be sacrificed. Those who are ignorant of the truth were not to receive it in large morsels without giving them time to digest what they do hear, one following the other in quick succession. While some minds are quick to catch an idea, there are many who are slow to comprehend new and startling truths, which involve great changes and a cross at every step. Deal out the precious, weighty truths discreetly. God has delegated His servants to carry this solemn, important truth to all tongues and people. But He does not require any one worker to do the work of two men or to do two weeks' work in one.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 7

The truth is so different in its character and work from the popular errors that are preached from the pulpit, that as it is brought before the people, it almost takes away their breath and senses. It is strong meat and should be dealt out judiciously; then those who listen, if you stop when you should, will be eager to hear more.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 8

God has made His messengers the depositories of His truth, weighty and important with eternal results. Light is to shine forth amid the moral darkness to reveal sin and error. The truth must be given point after point. It must be spoken distinctly and with clear utterance, making a few essential points; then it will be as a nail fastened in a sure place by the master of assemblies. The preacher should labor to carry the understanding and sympathies of the people with him. Do not place the crib too high where the people cannot follow. This would not be wise generalship in teaching the truth.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 9

There should be no efforts to go out of the way to attack other denominations. This creates a combative spirit and closes the ears and hearts to the entrance of the truth. We have our work to do. It is not to tear down, but make up the breach that has been made in the law of God. The nobler work is to build up, to present the truth in its force and power, and let it cut its way through prejudice and reveal the error in contrast with truth.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 10

No work should be left incomplete. Every man who preaches the truth should cultivate the qualities necessary as an educator. He is to present every man perfect in Christ Jesus, establishing the receiver of the truth firmly in the faith, leaving no part of the work incomplete; considering the greatness of the work, God would have His workers keep themselves in the very best condition of physical and mental health, that they may have mental clearness, calm nerves, a quiet, peaceful spirit like Jesus. He would not have them physical and mental wrecks. These teachers are representatives of Christ. They must cultivate a meek and quiet spirit, learning daily in the school of Christ. They must labor as though God were close by their side to do that which it is impossible for them to do.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 11

They are to work in God. "Without Me," says the Saviour of the world, "ye can do nothing." [John 15:5.]4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 12

Every worker should have great care of the vital organs. Labor intelligently, using the precious gifts of God with an eye single to His glory, abusing none of their God-given faculties.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 13

When your efforts have been protracted to an unreasonable length, then comes a feeling of weariness, lack of vitality, and every part of the being cries out with pain and weariness. Your vocal organs cannot bear the strain that has been put upon them by long, loud talking and praying. You can with caretaking, with calm consideration, with self-control, working temperately, yet do a good work for the Master. But you should not go alone. I have been shown that you should unite your labor with your brother or some other preacher. Then you can be a help to each other if you will be entreated and listen to counsel. Neither should tax himself to the utmost limit, for you may be called out at any time to use your long experience to do a work to stand in vindication of the truth which will call for calm nerves, candid reflection, and sharp, forcible arguments. You should consider it a sin to waste your strength, for you can use it all to a wise purpose.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 14

Jesus wants two to be united in their ministerial efforts in teaching and educating the people whom they will bring into the faith. If your brother or some other minister labors with you, God wants you both to be cheerful, hopeful, and trustful, casting all your cares on Jesus and committing the keeping of your soul to Him, as to a faithful Creator, representing Jesus in character. Be strong, yea be strong in the strength of Jesus. The less you talk about yourselves the better will be your influence. Meekness and lowliness are the lessons to daily learn in the school of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 15

Do not either of you feel that the whole weight and burden of the cause rests upon your souls. Jesus is the great burden-bearer. He is your helper. He says, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light."
[Matthew 11:28-30.]4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 16

Jesus will work with your efforts if you take counsel of Him. I was shown that He was looking upon you with the tenderest compassion. He saw you distrustful. He saw Satan tempting you and magnifying your trials before you. If in pain, you thought these were to you the precursors of your speedy dissolution. This is the enemy's work. You may resist him. You may be conqueror. God wants you to be cheerful; to be free; to be happy; to be trustful, saying, with Paul, "These light afflictions which are but for a moment work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are unseen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are unseen are eternal." [2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.]⁴*LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 17*

Every one of your trials is God's workman; and if borne with patience, they are preparing for you a recompense of reward; and you should be of good courage, patient under them. You are in a hard field, but you are where God would have you. You had no rest in spirit until you went across the water to this European field. Do not let the enemy outgeneral you now. There is a work to be done, but in order to do the work you will be surprised if I tell you that you must work less. You must husband your vital forces in order to accomplish more and better work. You must not go on your own independent judgment, but counsel with your American brethren, for they will be to you a strength rather than a depressing power. Work in harmony, and do not look to yourself or talk of your grievances. Look to Jesus. Think less and less of yourself and more and more of Jesus. Do not think that the whole cause must be embraced by your arms. Talk less of self and more of Jesus and His sufferings, His great sacrifice. Jesus loves you. He wants you to be happy. He loves your family; but they need to exercise caution and never bring grievances before you, nor a complaint against anyone. There are nerves of the brain that are worn, and these particular nerves are exercised when anything like another's wrongdoings are presented to your mind. Then you begin a train of thought which is most painful, most distressing; and you concentrate your active brain on these things until small matters grow to gigantic proportion, and you will do or say something to wound yourself and others. You will mar the work of God and lessen your influence. Your brethren do not know your peculiar temperament, therefore they will not know what these things mean. They will not know how to handle your case.⁴*LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 18*

The followers of Jesus will have an experience as Christ had in the wilderness of temptation. And especially those who engage in work for the Master, to rescue souls from the snare of Satan. Those who engage to do the work that Christ came to do will feel the assaults of Satan as did Jesus. They will know something of Christ's experience in the wilderness of temptation. Christ overcame Satan for us; so may His followers through the grace of Jesus. No one must feel that he is abandoned of God because he is subject to sore temptations. When you remain unshaken by Satan's temptations, he will leave you; and if steadfast, angels will minister unto you as they did to Jesus. There is no comfort equal to that which Christians enjoy when the tempted soul has patiently suffered and Satan has been vanquished. They have boldly borne witness for Jesus, relied wholly upon the Word of God, "It is written," and thus resisted every advance of Satan till they have beaten him back as did Jesus in the wilderness of temptation.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 19

Let us in no case depreciate one because he is severely tempted and the billows seem to go over his head. We must remember that Jesus was sorely tempted in all points like as we are, and for the reason that He might succor all who should be tempted, that He might become a faithful High Priest. Let us remember that Jesus identifies His interests with His tempted suffering ones.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 20

When the servants of God are tried and tempted; when they are disappointed in obtaining human sympathy, they may remember Jesus in His hour of greatest agony in Gethsemane. His disciples did not watch with Him one hour. Sleep overpowered their senses. Jesus was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. The King of glory, the Son of the everlasting Father, left His royal throne, clothed His divinity with humanity, and became a man of sorrows. No man's trials or sacrifices could compare with that which His suffering spirit endured. The majesty of heaven walked through midnight blackness, and for what? "Who for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despising the shame." [Hebrews 12:2.] It was to redeem fallen man. It was that He might bring many sons and daughters to glory that an overwhelming weight of woe was upon Him. He suffered rejection, coldness, contempt of those

He came to bless and humiliated Himself to save them. He suffered weariness, persecution, buffeting, loneliness, anguish, betrayal, and crucifixion. The whole flood tide of human woe was gathered to His soul.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 21

The followers of Jesus need not be amazed if they are made partakers with Christ of His sufferings. How can Christ look upon those for whom He has done so much, for whom He has paid so infinite a price, and yet they have never appreciated His great gift for them? The work of Christ's representatives will be similar to that of their Redeemer. They are not to look to self or trust in self. They are not to place too high an estimate upon their own efforts. And when they see that others do not regard their efforts as highly as they themselves estimate them, they become to feel that their labors might as well cease. But this is the work of the enemy. We live not to men, but to God. God estimates our work at their fullest value. God estimates nobility of character; and whether men appreciate it or not, it lives after the man is gone. After man has nothing more to do with anything under the sun, the example he has set, the golden words he has spoken live through all time and through all eternity. This influence which was after the divine pattern never dies. His life has been connected with God.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 22

We all have a personal influence, and our words and actions leave an indelible impress. It is our duty not to live for self, but for the good of others; not to be controlled by feelings, but to consider that our influence is a power for good or evil. God would have His workmen be that which David charged Solomon to be: "Show yourself a man." [1 Kings 2:2.] In our associations with men we are bound by the law of Jehovah to influence them in the direction of good. This power of personal influence must be felt on others. The law of God requires that we love our fellow men as we love ourselves. Then every power and action of the mind must be to that end to do the greatest amount of good. To overdo cripples the powers God has given us, wearies and disables us so that much less good is done than might be accomplished if we work intelligently. Had all the powers been treated considerately, what a precious work might have been done. How pleasing to the Giver for man to hold the royal gifts of the soul so that they shall tell with power upon others. It is the connecting link between God and man and reveals the spirit of Christ and the attributes of heaven. The power of holiness, seen but not boasted of, speaks more eloquently than the most able sermons. It speaks of God, it opens to men their duty more powerfully than the language of tongues.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 23

God wants His ministers to communicate that which is heavenly and divine, for they are representatives of Him. God has designed that the power of influence shall be of heavenly birth. We shall be either a light to cheer, to illumine, or a tempest to destroy. God is not pleased that any one of His representatives shall worry, weary and wear themselves out, so that they shall not diffuse the sweet fragrance of heaven in their lives. We have but one life to live. Jesus has come to our world to teach us how to live that life, that we may represent the character of heaven. We must never grow faint-hearted, for it will be far worse for ourselves and for others within the reach of our influence. God requires us to behave with dignity under trials and temptations. The Man of sorrows, who was acquainted with grief, is before us as our example. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with My Father in His throne."[Revelation 3:21.]4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 24

Brother Daniel, you need no urging to do more work, but you do need help. I was shown that experienced laborers were greatly needed in the European field to give mold and character to the work. Brother Augustin Bourdeau should be guarded not to take himself from the work to serve tables. He has too often bound upon himself burdens which prevented him putting his energies into the work. He should consecrate his powers and ability to God to save perishing souls. These brothers are the only experienced workers who understand French, therefore there is a large field for their labors if they will work intelligently in the strength of God.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 25

The light and privileges that you both have had lay you under contribution to God to use this light to bless others. In the past it has sometimes been the case that Bro. Augustin did not cling to an interest with that perseverance and zeal to bind off his work completely and thoroughly so that he could present every man perfect in Christ. He should encourage less devotion to temporal things and more thought and deep earnestness in eternal things. If the enemy can create things to draw you away from your work, he will be diligent in this kind of business. But if he sees that he cannot obtain power over you to draw you away from an urgent interest, that you will not leave your work to ravel out, but will bind it off, then he will not work that device any longer.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 26

God's work is to be primary; other interests secondary. Satan is playing the game of life for the souls of men, and God's ministers must watch for souls and work faithfully to repulse the enemy and gain the victory. We have need of wisdom, sharp thoughts, and a better knowledge of Satan's devices, that he will not, right before our eyes, accomplish the ruin of precious souls. We have a source of strength that is at our command, and we need not become discouraged or be driven from the field through Satan's devices.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 27

Your family, Bro. Daniel, must keep disagreeable things from you, for the very relating of them magnifies them to your mind. Now Jesus knows your every weakness, and He pities and will help you. The work is great in Europe, and you may act a part in it if you will take hold of the strength and mighty power; and Jesus will help you. You have precious ability if wisely employed. Jesus will recognize you as a co-laborer with Him in the great work if you will stay your soul upon Him. Your motive will be questioned. You will meet with disappointment. Christ endured all this. Consider Him who endured the contradiction of sinners against [Himself] lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 28

Look up, my brother; in the name of Jesus I bid you look up. Do not look at yourself; do not talk doubts. Talk faith, hope, and courage, and Jesus will bring you off more than conqueror. But you, my brother, and your brother Augustin dwell too much upon yourselves. You, my brethren, need to lie low at the feet of Jesus. Daniel does too much, while Augustin needs to weave into his work more life and spirit. His temperament is more sluggish and needs the quickening influence of the Spirit of God. He needs a greater earnestness and more vitality to represent the importance of the truth to the people. Brother Augustin must not have his interest divided. Both of you, my brethren, will show wisdom in not talking of yourselves. Bro. Augustin, you need to be more thoroughly devoted to the work. You allow small things to draw you away from the work. You have need to concentrate your mind upon your ministerial duties.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 29

Be cautious in your labors, Brethren Bourdeau, not to assail the prejudice of the people. There is danger of our ministers' saying too much against the Catholics and provoking against themselves the strongest prejudices of the Roman Catholic power. The power of the priest over his charge is great, and difficult to break. There are many souls in the Roman Catholic faith who are looking with interest to this people. If the priest can prejudice the people with his stay-away arguments, he will do so. When the truth is uttered against the fallen churches, their ministers will make that an excuse to warn their people not to attend, to hear the truth.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 30

As an interest is about to close up, be careful not to ripen it off too suddenly, but keep the confidence of the people, if possible, that souls who are in the valley of decision may find the true path, the way, and the life. As laborers together with God we are provided with spiritual weapons, mighty to the pulling down of the strong hold of the enemy. Ever preserve the love of Jesus, presenting the truth as it is in Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1885, par. 31

Lt 8, 1885

Starr, G. B.

NP

March 13, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother:

According to our agreement, I went and saw Sister Mills. I laid the case before her, and she spoke very encouragingly in regard to the sale of her place. I asked her if $10,000 would buy the place, and she said that it would. The mortgage is six hundred. She said she would write immediately to her brother, then she would let me know. Since then I have written another letter to her, sent it to Br. Jones to be taken to her, that he might know what she has said in reference to the matter. And I did not hear from them for some time. But now I understand that he took the letter to her, and she said that she had not yet heard from her brother in Chicago and could tell nothing about it until she did hear. My opinion is that her brother is seeking to obtain possession of the place himself. And she has the fullest confidence in him, so I think he will take advantage of her. If you could go and see this brother and probe this matter thoroughly, you might get some light on the subject.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1885, par. 1

I have written and I have urged one and another to go and see Sister Mills. Elder Waggoner promised that he would go. He may have gone, I cannot tell. But I would advise that you go and see what can be done with reference to the property. I received your letter; was glad to hear that the prospects in Chicago were as favorable as they are. We hope and pray that a good work may be done there. The mission was started in a very feeble way. And I do not think that Elder Andrews views it in the right light. I do not think he is prepared to do as he ought to do, to encourage the Illinois Conference in doing what they ought to do. But they had not ought to be discouraged on that account, for God lives and God will help them in the work.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1885, par. 2

I have carried the burden on my mind and have tried to interest others to go and talk with Sister Mills, and they seem to think that they cannot do anything until she makes an advance.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1885, par. 3

You have our sympathy, and we hope you will have the courage to keep at the work; and God will work with your efforts.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1885, par. 4

Yours in Christian labor.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1885, par. 5

Lt 9, 1885

Bourdeau, Br-Sr.

Refiled as Lt 68, 1886.

Lt 10, 1885

Waggoner, J. H.

Christiania, Norway

November 4, 1885

See variant Lt 10a, 1885. Portions of this letter are published in TSB 182-184; 5MR 243, 245.

Dear Brother Waggoner:

I have somewhat to say unto thee. Letters have come to me from Brother and Sister Grainger and Sister Mills, giving an account of the meeting in Healdsburg. Many letters of confession have come to me from different ones. Sisters Ross, Decker, Baker, Brother and Sister Harris, and Brother and Sister Howard all really express in their letters genuine repentance for sin.⁴*LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 1*

Brother Lockwood wrote me that he had proposed raising money to pay Elder Daniels' debts. I wrote back that this was a wrong move. The work done in Healdsburg I did not doubt was of God, and I was grateful to have the Lord work by whom He will. I had no envy, no jealousy that this result did not follow my earnest, wearing labors for that church. I believed God was working with them, but now was their time of trial and test. Fanaticism might reveal itself among them and that there would be danger of their thinking too much of the man and giving Elder Daniels the glory. I urged them to take up the long-neglected work of which the church had been guilty and show an interest and labor for outsiders, visit them, hold Bible readings with them, and seek to bring them to a knowledge of the truth.⁴*LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 2*

I understand that Brother Daniels was not at the camp meeting. I told him he ought to have been there and taken all he could with him. If God had given souls the illumination of His Spirit, it was for a purpose. This light was to be reflected upon others. I wrote cautiously, and yet I would not have dared to come out and condemn the work, lest I should be found fighting against God. But I understand that you and Elder Loughborough and some others have done this. I am written to for advice and counsel. Now, my brother, you may see some things which you think you should condemn in Elder Daniels. He is hasty; he feels strongly and acts impulsively; but whatever occasion of personal feeling exists between you, there should have been on your part the forbearance of long experience and the calm reason of a father. I have letters stating that Elder Daniels was forbidden to preach. His credentials were not renewed. Did God give you light from heaven to do this? or did you move in your own spirit, prompted by your injured feelings? I do not like this kind of work. What right had you or any one of you to pursue the course you have toward Elder Daniels? He is not a perfect man, but I know how God regards him—as a man of erring, impulsive disposition, but one who loves and fears Him, and one who will reach hearts if he has those in whom he can have confidence as counselors to help him.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 3

I hear you took the Healdsburg people in a tent and stated that if you were at liberty to relate some things which you knew concerning Elder Daniels, they would regard the work as you did; and thus you left a blot on one of God's servants, leaving them to think and imagine the worst things in his life.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 4

Is this the way God has dealt with you? Do you wish the Lord to take your case in hand and deal with you as you have dealt with Elder Daniels? Your course in this I cannot approve. The Lord's Spirit is not in it. The lord forgave the debtor who owed him a large sum, but the man went out and demanded a debt of another creditor which was a very small sum. He went to him exclaiming with vehemence, "Pay me what thou owest." [Matthew 18:27, 28.] And because he could not, he seized him and put him in prison till he should pay the debt. This I think represents the case. I will wash my hands from all such transactions.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 5

You could not do a worse thing to separate the Healdsburg church from you than this. Why did you allow that hard, old, overbearing, arbitrary spirit which God has reproved many times to come in and possess you? Has not Elder D. had far less experience than you, fewer advantages, far less light, fewer opportunities and warnings and appeals than you have had? And if his credentials shall not be granted him, in the sight of a holy God, should not yours be withheld? I want you to look at this matter just as it is. I felt that you were the last man to exercise criticism and severity toward any one. God does not require it of you. You have shown yourself in many respects a far weaker man than Elder Daniels. You have shown less power of self-control than he has done. You have no right to lord it over God's heritage. You will surely be dealt with by your heavenly Father as you deal with and judge others.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 6

I wrote you from Great Grimsby, but I did not send it. I felt such pity for you, such pity for your weakness. I will send it when I get back to Basel.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 7

Now the case of Elder Daniels has been presented before me, and I know him much better than you do. Because you may take views of him as you now do is no reason why his labor should be pronounced not of God. Just such a work as I hope has been done in Healdsburg will be done in every church in our land, and through ways and means that we do not look for. Let this work go forward everywhere. Let sins be confessed. Let iniquities be revealed. Let it extend far and near. This work will be done. Men may pronounce against it because it does not come in their exact line. Fanaticism will also come in as it always has done when God works. The net will gather in its meshes both bad and good, but who will dare to cast the whole thing overboard because all are not of the right kind of fish? I feel deeply over this matter. I do not doubt but that Elder D. has erred in some things, but has his error been of that character that it makes him unworthy of a place among God's people? Answer this to your own soul.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 8

The Lord would have you lay off this spirit of sharpness, and He would have you less sharp and more humble. In my prayers for you, and in my dreams, I do not feel that assurance that I desire that you are drawing near to God, purifying your soul through obedience to the truth. I fear God is not with you, and this is why your discernment is taken away. I have had some most distressing dreams which make me tremble for you. And then when you venture to exercise your power in the way you have done toward Eld. D., I have to tell you freely, I have no confidence in it. Take your iron heel off from the man. When you get upon the track of one whom you think has not treated you as he should, you bear down heavier and heavier, and with crushing power. Should God deal with you according to the magnitude of the offense as you have dealt with Elder D., there would be no hope for your future. O how glad I am that our cases are not left to be judged by man. We want the spirit of tenderness and of compassion and love. May the Lord set the matter before you as it really is, and may you so humble yourself before God that your sins may go beforehand to judgment. God has sent you warnings. Do you heed them?4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 9

In my dreams you are in peril, in danger of losing your soul through neglect to renounce the hidden things of dishonesty, and to come to the clear light and freedom of the Spirit of God, making your heart pure and clean through the sanctification of the truth. You have not clear spiritual discernment, and how could you do as you have done in regard to matters at Healdsburg? Not one word of complaint has come to me through Elder D., but members of the church in whom I have confidence have written to me, and I feel sad enough. I have not answered one of these letters yet. I have not had time. But I beg of you to wrench yourself from the snare of Satan. Do not feel for one moment that the Lord is dependent upon you to do a certain work. You are dependent upon the Lord, and He can work through whom He will. But before you judge and condemn others, look well to your own soul. Give others just that compassion that you want shown to you.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 10

You want a personal piety, a daily experience in the things of God, and to sense the importance of pure and holy principles governing your course of action in all things. If you obtain the confidence of those for whom you labor, you must be circumspect in life and character, if you would have them believe you to be a true child of God, a special instrument in His hands to do His work. You may then vindicate the Sabbath, and you may be successful, as a polished instrument of God, in securing converts to the truth.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 11

Brother, be thankful for these words. Be thankful that it is not too late for wrongs to be righted. Do not feel called upon to pronounce sentence against any one. Do not, I beseech of you, give place to the devil. I beg of you, for Christ's sake, to break every foul snare of Satan. I beg of you to not let your sun set in darkness and gloom of despair. I beseech of you not to let the weak traits of your character overcome you, that God will set you aside as unfit for any part in His work. O my brother, I want to see you a free man. I want to see you triumphing over Satan. I want to see you marching in through the gates into the city of God a conqueror. I want to see you receive the riches of the immortal inheritance. But whatever your position has been, God will not excuse sin in you more than in the weakest of His children. According to your light and knowledge you will be judged. Do not, I entreat of you, feel that your course has been a light matter. God warned you of your danger, but after He warned you, you did worse; you gave yourself up to work wickedness. What is your position before God? How stands your record in God's books?4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 12

I want that there should be men of judgment who have the compassion of Christ, who shall visit Healdsburg and remain there long enough to investigate and pray and attend the meetings, and not stand away off and then denounce the work. What is the fruit of this work? By their fruits ye shall know them. There will be fanatical ones. Sister Baker cannot be relied upon. She knows not what manner of spirit she is of. She will be liable to take extreme views, and some others will do the same. If there were not some of this spirit, it would be a new thing under the sun.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 13

But if you had not barred the way, the Lord's Spirit might have come into your camp meeting. I have been shown that there is so little of the work of repentance and true conversion as the operation of the Spirit of God on hearts, transforming the life and its inward workings, cleansing the soul from sin, that should this Spirit of God come among us, many would not discern it. They would not think it was a God-send. The blessing of God in its workings would be considered fanaticism. I pray you not allow your personal feelings to rule you, for God will as surely work through means that we do not expect; and let God work in any way He will.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 14

I do not regard Eld. D. as a man well balanced. I do not regard you as a man well balanced. You have great weakness in some points. He has great weakness in some points. May God help you to set your own soul in order and make clean work for eternity.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 15

My brother, you have had the respect of the church, old and young. But your course is condemned of God, and you have not had His Spirit, and you are not a free man. You have pursued a course that has caused your good to be evil spoken of. The very things that transpired at the Piedmont Sabbath school reunion I would not have occurred for thousands of dollars. You, a gray-haired man, lying at full length with your head in the lap of Georgie Chittenden. Had I done my duty, I would have rebuked you there. Many saw this and made remarks about it. After such exhibitions as this, of what value would be your admonitions to them to be guarded against everything of this free and easy familiarity? You have yourself neutralized your efforts to elevate the young by your example. The course of intimacy with Sister Chittenden and her family has been a subject of remark. And how could you expect to have influence with the young as a father when such manifest want of judgment and such weakness have been exhibited by you. If you will only be a man in your old age, instead of a sentimental lover; if you would only be guarded, God would not remove His wisdom from you as He has done. Your reputation would have been dearer to you than your very life. Better, far better, go down to the grave with honor untarnished than to live with a reproach upon your name.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 16

Now look, my brother, at the years you have been living in unlawful sympathy and love with another man's wife. And you have a daughter who would be glad to give you attention and sympathy and make a home for you, but you have been so completely infatuated that everything in this life that was sensible and proper has been distasteful and insipid to you. I do not feel that the charm is broken, that you are a free man. You have not broken the snare. The Lord is not supreme with you. Now, my brother, it would be folly for you to think that you have wisdom to discern spiritual things while you have been growing weaker and weaker for years in moral power and separating from the God of wisdom. The letters written to your wife are harsh and unfeeling. The withdrawing of your support in a large degree is not wisdom or right on your part. And had she not a cause when she was at Oakland to be jealous of you? Did not she see in you the interest, sympathy, and love you gave to Sister Chittenden? Now, for Christ's sake, save your harsh condemnation of others, for this shows that you are not Christlike, that you have another spirit. I write thus plainly because I feel deeply that you need to make a more determined effort than you have done, before you stand free in the sight of God. All your sharpness and overbearing comes from you with an ill grace. Do humble yourself under the hand of God. Do make sure of the favor of God, and put sin away from you. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 17

There are but few who know to what extent this intimacy has gone, and God forbid it shall be known and your influence lost to God's cause and your soul lost. I beg of you to not take it upon you to pronounce judgment against anyone but yourself. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1885, par. 18

Lt 10a, 1885

[Waggoner, J. H.]

[Christiania, Norway]

[November 4, 1885]

Variant of Lt 10, 1885. Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother [Waggoner]:

Letters have come to me from Brother and Sister [Grainger], giving an account of the meetings in [Healdsburg]. Many letters of confession have come from different ones, expressing genuine repentance for sin.⁴*LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 1*

I wrote to Brother [Lockwood] concerning the revival work in [Healdsburg], that I did not doubt but that it was of God, and I was grateful to have the Lord work by whom He would. But at such a time the test and trial of faith might come. Fanaticism might reveal itself among the members of the church, and there would be danger that they would think too much of the man by whom the Lord had wrought and give him the glory which was alone due to God. I wrote to the members of the church and urged them to take up the work which they had so long been guilty of neglecting. I appealed to them to show an interest in behalf of unbelievers, to visit them, to hold Bible readings with them, and to seek to bring them to a knowledge of the truth. If God had illuminated their souls by His Spirit, it was that light might be reflected upon others.⁴*LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 2*

I wrote cautiously, and yet I dared not condemn the work, lest I should be found fighting against God. But I understand that you and Elder [Loughborough] and some others have not hesitated to do this. I learn that Elder [Daniels] has been forbidden to preach, that his credentials have not been renewed. Did God give you light from heaven, directing you to take this course, or, prompted by a feeling that Elder D had injured you, did you move in your own spirit? My brother, you may see some things which you think you should condemn in Elder D. He is hasty, and feels strongly, and acts impulsively. He is not perfect; but I know how God regards him—as a man of erring, impulsive disposition, but yet one who loves and fears Him, one who will reach hearts, if he has the support of those in whom he can have confidence. Whatever the occasion of personal feeling which exists between you, there should be on your part the forbearance of long experience manifested and the calm reason of a father displayed.4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 3

Do you wish the Lord to judge you as you have judged your brother? I cannot approve your course in this matter; for it was not prompted by the Spirit of God. The lord forgave him, the debtor, who owed him a large sum; but the man went out and demanded of another the payment of a debt of a very small amount, exclaiming with vehemence, "Pay me that thou owest." [Matthew 18:27, 28.] Because his fellow servant could not pay the debt, he seized him and put him in prison till the claim could be met. I think this parable represents your course in this matter.4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 4

Has not Elder D had far less experience, far less light, fewer advantages, fewer opportunities, fewer warnings and appeals than you have had? I do not doubt but that he has erred in some things, but has his error been of such a character as to make him unworthy of a place among God's people? Answer this for your own soul; for you will surely be dealt with by your heavenly Father as you deal with others. The fact that you take the view of Elder D that you do at present is no reason why his labors should be rejected as if they were not of God.4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 5

I do not feel assured as I desire to do that you are drawing near to God, purifying your soul through obedience to the truth. I feel that God is not with you, and that this is why your discernment is taken away. God has sent you warnings. Do you heed them? I beg of you to free yourself from the snare of Satan. Do not feel for a moment that the Lord is dependent upon you to do a certain work; you are dependent upon Him; He can work through whom He will. Whatever your position may be, God will not excuse sin in you any more than He will excuse it in the weakest of His children. You will be judged according to the light and knowledge you have had. You should look well to your own soul before you condemn others. You should give to others the compassion that you desire should be shown to you.4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 6

You are ready to crush one whom you think has not treated you as he should by your severity. Should God deal with you as you have dealt with Elder D, there would be no hope for your future. O how glad I am that our cases are not left to be judged by man! We should seek for a spirit of tenderness, compassion, and love. The Lord would have you put away this spirit of harshness, and humble yourself before Him. May He set this matter before you as it really is, and may you so seek Him in humility of heart, that your sins may go beforehand to judgment. 4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 7

Men of sound judgement, who have the compassion of Christ, should attend the meetings at [Healdsburg] and prayerfully investigate the work. No one should stand afar off and denounce it. What is the fruit of this work? "By their fruits ye shall know them." [Matthew 7:20.] There will be fanatical ones in such meetings who will be liable to go to extremes. If the spirit of fanaticism were not developed under such circumstances, it would be a new thing under the sun. 4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 8

Just such a work as I hope has been done in [Healdsburg] will be done in every one of our churches through ways and means that we do not anticipate. Let sins be confessed. Let the work of repentance and turning to the Lord go forward everywhere. Men may denounce the revival work that will be done, because it does not come just as they expect. Fanaticism may come in, as it so often does when God works in a special manner. The gospel net will gather in its meshes both bad and good; but who will dare to cast the whole away because all are not the right kind of fish? 4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 9

If you had not barred the way, the Spirit of the Lord might have come into the camp meeting. I have been shown that there is so little of the work of repentance and conversion, so slight a manifestation of the operation of the Spirit of God on the hearts of men, transforming the life and cleansing the soul from sin, that many would not be able to discern the working of the Spirit of God should it come among us in great power. Its workings would be regarded by them as fanaticism. God will surely work through means that we do not expect, and let us beware that we be not found fighting against Him. 4LtMs, Lt 10a, 1885, par. 10

Lt 11, 1885

European General Council

Refiled as Ms 19, 1885.

Lt 12, 1885

Butler, G. I.; Haskell, S. N.

Orebro, Sweden

October 28, 1885

This letter is published in entirety in SpTA #6 61-67. ^{+Note}One or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Dear Brethren Butler and Haskell:

My prayer is that the Lord may be with you in great power during the coming conference. Some may be absent that you might wish were present, but Jesus is your helper. I sincerely hope and pray that those who bear responsibilities in Michigan, New England, Ohio, Indiana, and other states will take broader views of the work than they have done. I hope Michigan will take a step in advance. I feel to regret the fact that there is such a dearth of breadth of mind and of far-seeing ability. Workers should be educated and trained for the fields of labor. We need missionaries everywhere. We need men and women who will give themselves without reserve to the work of God, bringing many sons and daughters to God.⁴*LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 1*

I have been shown that there is one practice which those in responsible places should avoid; for it is detrimental to the work of God. Men in position should not lord it over God's heritage and command everything around them. Too many have marked out a prescribed line which they wish others to follow in the work. Workers have tried to do this with blind faith, without exercising their own judgment upon the matter which they had in hand. If those who were placed as directors were not present, they have followed their implicit directions just the same. But in the name of Christ, I would entreat you to stop this work. Give men a chance to exercise their individual judgment. Men who follow the leading of another, and are willing that another should think for them, are unfit to be entrusted with responsibility. Our leading men are remiss in this matter. God has not given to special ones all the brain power there is in the world.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 2

Men in responsible positions should credit others with some sense, with some ability of judgment and foresight, and look upon them as capable of doing the work committed to their hands. Our leading brethren have made a great mistake in marking out all the directions that the workers should follow, and this has resulted in deficiency, in a lack of the caretaking spirit in the workers, because they have relied upon others to do all their planning and have themselves taken no responsibility. Should the men who have taken this responsibility upon themselves step out of our ranks, or die, what a state of things would be found in our institutions.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 3

Leading men should place responsibilities upon others, and allow them to plan and devise and execute, so that they may obtain an experience. Give them a word of counsel when necessary, but do not take away the work because you think the brethren are making mistakes. May God pity the cause when one man's mind and one man's plan are followed without question. God would not be honored should such a state of things exist. All our workers must have room to exercise their own judgment and discretion. God has given men talents which He means that they should use. He has given them minds, and He means that they should become thinkers and do their own thinking and planning rather than depend upon others to think and plan for them.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 4

I think I have laid out this matter many times before you, but I see no change in your actions. The Lord would have every responsible man to drop responsibilities upon others. Set others at work that will require them to plan and to use judgment. Do not educate them to rely upon your judgment. Young men must be trained up to be thinking men. My brethren, do not for a moment think that your way is perfection, and that those who are connected with you must be your shadows, must echo your words, repeat your ideas, and execute your plans.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 5

There are men who today might be men of breadth of thought,

might be wise men, men to be depended upon, who are not such, because they have been educated to follow another man's plan. They have allowed others to tell them precisely what they should do, and they have become dwarfed in intellect. Their minds are narrow, and they cannot comprehend the needs of the work. They are simply machines to be moved by another man's thought. Now do not think that these men who do follow out your ideas are the only ones that can be trusted. You have sometimes thought that because they do your will to the letter, they were the only ones in whom you could place dependence. If anyone exercised his own judgment and differed with you, you have disconnected from him as one that could not be trusted. Take your hands off the work, and do not hold it fast in your grasp. You are not the only man whom God will use. Give the Lord room to use the talents He has entrusted to men in order that the cause may grow. Give the Lord a chance to use men's minds. We are losing much by our narrow ideas and plans. Do not stand in the way of the advancement of the work, but let the Lord work by whom He will. Educate, encourage young men to think and act, to devise and plan, in order that we may have a multitude of wise counselors.4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 6

How my heart aches to see presidents of conferences taking the burden of selecting those whom they think they can mold to work precisely with them in the field. They take those who will not differ from them, but will act like mere machines. No president has any right to do this. Leave others to plan, and if they fail in some things, do not take it as an evidence that they are unfitted to be thinkers. The wisest responsible men had to learn by a long discipline and practice how to use their judgment. In many things they have shown that their work ought to have been better. The fact that men make mistakes is no reason that we should think them unfit to be caretakers. Those who think that their ways are perfect, even now, after long experience, make many grave blunders, but others are none the wiser for it. They present their success, but their mistakes do not appear. Then be kind and considerate to every man who conscientiously enters the field as a worker for the Master. Our most responsible men have made some unwise plans and have carried them out because they thought their plans were perfect. They have needed the mingling of other elements of mind and character. They should have associated with other men who could view matters from an entirely different point of view. Thus they would have helped them in their plans. 4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 7

This same character of spirit is found here in Europe. For years Elder Andrews held the work back from advancing, because he feared to entrust it to others, lest they would not carry out his precise plans. He would never allow anything to come into existence that did not originate with him. Elder Loughborough also held everything in his grasp while he was in California and England, and as a result the work is years behind in England. Elder Wilcox and Sister Thayer have the same spirit of having everything go in the exact way in which they shall dictate, and no one is being trained in such a way as to know how to get hold of the work for himself. 4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 8

What folly it is to trust a great mission in the hands of one man so that he shall mold and fashion it in accordance with his mind, and after his own diseased imagination. Men who have been narrow, who have served tables, who are not far-seeing, are disqualified for putting their mold upon the work. Those who desire to control the work think that none can do it perfectly for themselves, and the cause bears the marks of their defects. 4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 9

Prussia

[1885]

In another letter I have spoken in reference to your accumulating so many responsibilities in Battle Creek when there is so little managing talent that is consecrated to the work of God to take care of these interests. I have spoken in disapproval of the enlargement of the sanitarium on the ground that so large a share of its responsibilities is resting upon one man. Doctor Kellogg has to be both physician and manager. Now, my brother, these things are not as God would have them. He is not pleased that so much means should be invested in one locality. Other men should be educated to share in the responsibility that Doctor Kellogg is burdened with in order that, if he fails, another will be prepared to carry the institution forward. We feel to thank God that Dr. Kellogg has the good health that he has, but he may not always have it, and the fact that he has it now is no reason why our people should sleep till the last moment. They should manage this matter wisely. Great interests are at stake, and unless Dr. Kellogg has less responsibilities, he will not be enabled to stand the pressure for a great while. 4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 10

There is great need that someone should also stand at the side of Brother C. H. Jones in order to share the responsibilities that he carries, so that if he should fail, another could go forward with the work without a disagreeable break. If he were relieved of some of his burdens, he would last the longer. He should not have so great cares, and so heavy burdens to carry, and should not be obliged to work when he should rest. The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light. [Luke 16:8.] Jesus said this, and we see that the world works on a different plan in these matters. Weighty responsibilities connected with the business of the world are not placed wholly upon one man. In large business enterprises, responsible men choose others to share their burdens, and lift their responsibilities, so that in case one should fail, there is someone ready to step into his place. Someone should feel a burden over these matters, and a decided change should take place in the manner of our work. 4LtMs, Lt 12, 1885, par. 11

Lt 13, 1885

Kellogg, J.H.

Refiled as Lt 62, 1886.

Lt 14, 1885

Church at St. Claire, Nevada

NP

[March 13, 1885]

Portions of this letter are published in OHC 34, 94; TDG 81; 1MCP 321; 2MCP 691.

My Dear Brethren and Sisters:

While speaking to you on the campground at Reno, I recognized a people I had been shown in church capacity who were not living up to God's requirements. The angels of God are constantly active to bring enlightened beings up from a low and degraded state to purity, to holiness, bringing their perverse will into subjection to the will of God.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 1

A violation of the law of God is the greatest loss and deepest injury that can be conceived. It lost for our first parents beautiful Eden and opened the flood gates of woe to our world. It is through the sacrifice of Christ alone that in God's wise plans fallen man has been granted another trial.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 2

We have the example of Adam and Eve before us, and the result of their transgression should lead every soul of us to avoid sin, to abhor sin, as the hateful thing it is, and to feel, in view of the sufferings which sin is sure to inflict, that it is better to suffer loss of all things than to depart from the least of God's commandments.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 3

God has done all for us that God could do to prevent ignorance and sin and misery in our world; and if man had co-operated with God in His work, by putting away sin and cultivating personal piety, we should see altogether a more happy condition of things in the church at St. Claire.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 4

The author of sin is the devil; and whenever we sin, we place ourselves decidedly on the devil's ground and under his power. Not one of us will have one word to plead in the judgment as an excuse for sin. But when we see that there are those who claim to believe the truth who are not Christians, then we feel to humble ourselves in the dust, and plead, Spare Thy people, O God, and give not Thine heritage to reproach.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 5

Men and women and youth will hear and acknowledge the theory of the truth and doctrines which we profess to believe, and yet their daily life and character evidences that they know nothing of the power of godliness. The truth has not sanctified the soul of the receiver. Those who are indeed children of God will come out from the world and be separate. They will be a peculiar and distinguished people. They will be the light of the world. They will always be few in number; they will be humble, Christlike, distinct and separate from sin and sinners, because they are unlike them. They live in the world, they are industrious in business, that they may acquire means, do faithful honest labor, that this means may be used to advance the cause of God in our world.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 6

Will you please to carefully compare your life and character with God's great moral mirror, and observe and keenly criticize the reflection of your character in the light of God's law. Will you look with sincerity; for your soul's interest is at stake. It is life or death with you. A mistake here will be fatal. Be diligent to make your calling and election sure. How are you to do this? By believing all of God's commandments.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 7

The faithful and beloved disciple had occasion to write, as the defection of the church was presented before him, "Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen and repent, and do thy first works." [Revelation 2:5].4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 8

Many who have had light and knowledge have turned from their sin only for a time. They did not preserve their integrity. They did not search the Scriptures carefully, with a heart to obey them, and put away every sin, seeking by the grace of Christ to overcome their defects of character.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 9

They were not fully converted; and when temptations came, they did not keep their garments white and pure. They did not retain the simplicity of their faith, they did not keep their first love; and notwithstanding they believed the truth, they did not bring it in personal contact with their lives. Their minds became earthly, sensual, devilish. The strength and purity of faith had diminished. Zeal had grown cold. And the trees of the Lord's planting, the fruitful plant, now bears the fruit of a degenerate and strange vine. It stands before the world as a monument, not of goodness, but as an evil, corrupt tree, bearing corrupt fruit.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 10

I have no liberty to call names; but your own consciences must convict you that the picture of the tree bearing no fruit to the glory of God means you. Now this church have not all been working for unity, for elevation, for purity; and yet we would not say, erase their names from the church books. But earnest effort should be put forth to show them what they must do to be saved. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean; and I will receive you." [2 Corinthians 6:17.]4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 11

There is a solemn work to be done for your souls. Come to Jesus with contrition, with repentance. Come just as you are, sinful and polluted, and O plead for the salvation of your souls as you never pleaded before. Humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." [1 John 1:9.]4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 12

I want you to be saved. You are few in numbers, but if each will keep his lamp trimmed and burning, he can reflect light. The more light the Lord permits to shine upon our pathway, the greater the guilt incurred if we do not respond to the light. The more efforts the Lord makes through His instrumentalities to win a soul, the more deep and flagrant is his offense who rejects the means God has employed. I feel deeply for your souls, and I desire you shall improve the present opportunity to find Jesus, to renew your allegiance to God.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 13

All merely human effort is vain in the conversion of the soul. Man can accomplish nothing without God; but man must co-operate with God. Your will, your way must become God's will and God's way. This co-operation of the divine energy with human endeavor can accomplish much. We are laborers together with God in working out our own salvation and in the activities in which we engage in personal religion.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 14

When there is anything accomplished in co-operation with God, in obedience to His laws, God is to receive all the glory. Man has no right or title to any part of it. All our powers are to be sanctified to God. We can do nothing in our own strength. God requires all that there is of us, and we must withhold nothing from Him. We must work, believe, and pray. We are required to employ all our powers and opportunities diligently and conscientiously to be laborers together with God.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 15

How can we be thus, and not learn the trade? How can we take hold of and employ all our powers as God shall direct, and yet not be growing in intelligence as to the very best way of laboring? To be laborers together with God we must distinguish the voice of the true Shepherd from the voice of a stranger. There must be a searching for the truth as for hidden treasures. There must be no vanity, no mixing and mingling with worldly amusements, no strife in politics; but there must be a diligent, thoughtful prayerful study of the Oracles of God. The simple-hearted, God-fearing teachers must be respected in their work. There must be a constant work to harmonize in everything you do, with the prayer of Christ, that we may be one as He was one with the Father.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 16

This is the duty of every church, however small or however large. Christians must be light-givers, holding forth the words of life. They are exhorted by the apostle to be the highest achievements of piety. The world will not be convinced by what the pulpit teaches, but by (what) the church lives. The path to heaven is dark or bright, just as in proportion as the church gives forth a clear and strong, or doubtful, fitful light. The preacher in the desk announces the theory of the gospel, but the practical piety of the church demonstrates the power of truth, showing its real value.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 17

The gospel is a system of practical truths destined to work great changes in human character. If it does not work the transformation in life, in habits, and practice, it is no truth to those who claim to believe it. Man must be sanctified through the truth. And said Jesus, "Thy Word is truth." [John 17:17.] Unless the truth of God shall lift up man out of his depravity, his intemperate and profligate habits, and make him reflect the image of God, he is lost.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 18

Your lives, my brethren and sisters, must be after a different model than they have hitherto been and constitute the demonstration in the sight of heaven and earth that you are lights in the world, holding forth the words of life. The piety of the members of the church constitutes the world's standard of the gospel. Then let every church member in St. Claire do his duty well; for you are laborers together with God. Let your example be in harmony with the great Pattern.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 19

Do all things without murmurings and disputings, without grumbling, without envy. Do not repeat or believe the old slander that the man of one talent brought against God, "I knew thee that thou were an austere man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strewed." [Matthew 25:24.] This parable represented the many professors of religion who gauged their piety to reach the lowest standard possible and escape perdition.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 20

There is a need of your being diligent, prayerful students of the Bible, then you will see the exalted standard and aim to reach it. And you will be letting your light shine to an unbelieving world. You will sacredly observe the Sabbath in regard to which many of you have been very negligent. Some of you have practiced cutting off both ends of the Sabbath, dragging in your own work upon God's holy time. Now this has a decided influence against the truth you claim to believe and makes your influence detrimental to others.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 21

Then there are some who use narcotics and by indulgence are encouraging wrong habits that are obtaining a controlling power over the will, the thoughts, and the entire man. Now it would be better if the unbeliever should never come under the influence of such professors of religion who have no vital power for good. They endanger their Master's cause. They are traitors to holy trust.4LtMs,

Lt 14, 1885, par. 22

You are brought together in church capacity, and every member has his work to do as a faithful sentinel to God. In the family the performance of religious duties should be maintained. Your children should be educated by precept and example to reverence the hour of prayer. In simplicity you can call upon God in faith as your heavenly Father. It is your duty to talk to your children earnestly, interestedly in regard to the salvation of their souls. Tell them of Christ; His love for them should be often presented with loving tenderness. Never complain of your brethren or find fault with them, for this will have a demoralizing influence upon your own soul and upon your children.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 23

Never allow them to make complaints to you because they are required to behave with propriety in the house of God. If they are not required to respect religious service, it is certainly better that they remain away. Family influences, I am sorry to say, are against the church in many ways, yet many do not sense this evil. Let this order of things cease. Will parents bear in mind that Jesus is an honored guest in your assemblies for the worship of God? Then for Christ's sake restrain your children from misbehavior in the place of worship if you would honor the Master of assemblies. Let the restraining influence of parents be exercised in requiring of their children respectful attention and reverent behaviour in times of religious worship.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 24

There is a work devolving upon parents, the most important ever committed to mortals, to train your children day by day, both by precept and example, to have clean, pure characters, to be obedient, to cultivate simplicity of habits. You, parents, are to bring your children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. This will require so much time, so much earnest prayer, that you will not be found engaged in gossip or talebearing.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 25

Your talents, my brethren, have been unused and uncultivated. Your lifework is not that which the Lord would have it to be, or what you will wish it had been. No church can prosper unless there is a silencing of the tongues of those who are busybodies in other men's matters. They do harm, and only harm, while they take credit to themselves as being a strength to the church. They are not peacemakers, except it be to speak peace to the evildoers and quiet their awakened consciences so that they shall not make thorough work.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 26

Let the work of individual effort go forward. Let each keep his own soul uncorrupted and his own hands free from defilement. In order to be good soldiers of Christ, you must work to secure concerted action. Every part of the Lord's army must seek to work in harmony. Let each of Christ's soldiers act with reference to others; connected with Him, union is strength. There is no individual independence in this great work of God.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 27

When difficult work has to be done, some are altogether wanting; they have not kept themselves in working order. Those who will preserve order in the church must not be busybodies, not peddling hearsay, but be quiet, doing their own business. They are expected to do difficult work, to bear painful trials, to wear Christ's yoke and lift His burdens. Has not the Master given to every one of His soldiers something to do? There is a great work for you to do in St. Claire, and you have a mighty Helper in Jesus Christ.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 28

There are those who have, during this meeting, wanted liberty and peace of mind, but they have not fallen upon the rock and been broken. It has been hard for self to die; and when they return home, they will have to meet the assaults of the enemy, because they gained no real victory here. They will be overcome. They have not really received into their hearts the engrafted Word.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 29

When God speaks through His delegated servants the people are to listen to His words and obey the counsels given; but it is so hard for some to yield their own way, they make up their mind that God must say so and so, and are ready to reject every utterance which does not coincide with their past work and their preconceived opinions. Remember, every one, it is by what God does say to us that we shall be tried at last, not by what we imagine He ought to say. You must bring your souls up to the light, the standard of God's Word. Let none venture to choose darkness rather than the light, and keep away from the light lest their deeds shall be reprov'd. He who desires truth in the inward parts has declared that only the pure in heart should see God.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 30

Your ideas of God and His work must become enlarged. You must not lose sight of the work of Christ. You have reason to fear and tremble, for some are in a position where they have no just sense of right and righteousness. They have no true conception of God's mercy or of His judgment. This makes the situation more difficult and trying for those who labor for you. If you suppose for a moment that God will treat sin lightly, or make provisions or exemptions so that you can go on in committing sin, and the soul suffer no penalty from so doing, you are under a terrible delusion of Satan. Any wilful violation of the righteous law of Jehovah exposes your soul to the full assaults of Satan.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 31

When you lose your conscious integrity, your soul becomes a battlefield for Satan; you have doubts and fears enough to paralyze your energies and drive you to discouragement. When the favor of God was gone, you know that some of you have tried to supply the place and seek compensation for the loss of the Holy Spirit's witness that you are a child of God in worldly excitement, in the society of worldlings.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 32

In short, you have plunged deeper into sin, become intemperate, until every better feeling was under the control of the adversary of souls. Satanic influences were at work to make you reach a point where in your sinful course conscience will not make her voice heard. You are stupefied, your moral sense is perverted.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 33

This is a terrible picture, yet it is nevertheless true. Some regard sin as altogether so light a matter that they have no defense against its indulgence or its consequence. You do not rise high enough in your efforts. How can you but tremble in the sight of your own inefficiency. How can you hope that a righteous God will be constantly granting you forgiveness for the offenses you are constantly repeating?4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 34

Why not yield your will unreservedly to the will of God? Your spiritual sensibilities are almost completely benumbed. The testimonies that I bear to you, by pen and voice, will not make any radical change in the life of some, in their habits or their practices, because they do not sense sin. If the fallow ground of the heart could be broken up, then there would be some hope that the good seed would find lodgment and spring up and bear fruit. But I greatly fear that some of you will not make that work in repenting that needeth not to be repented of. Your will must be summoned to the conflict. Remember that temptation is not sin. Remember that however trying the circumstances in which a man may be placed, nothing can really weaken his soul so long as he does not yield to temptation, but maintains his own integrity.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 35

The interests most vital to you individually are in your own keeping. No one can damage them without your consent. All the satanic legions cannot injure you unless you open your soul to the darts and arrows of Satan. Your ruin can never take place until you will consents. If there is not pollution of mind in yourself, all the surrounding pollution cannot taint or defile you.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 36

Eternal life is worth everything to us or it is worth nothing. Those only who put forth persevering effort and untiring zeal with intense desire, proportionate to the value of the object they are in pursuit of, will gain that life which measures with the life of God.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 37

With some in your midst, religion is purely a matter of feeling. You will see a fair show of fervor and devotedness for a time, but soon a change comes, their ardor is not fed, and careless indifference takes the place of the feelings which were strongly and pleasantly affected while the love of Christ and the glories of heaven were dwelt upon. Their feelings, their experience have no connection with the belief of the truth. Their hope is not founded on the statements of the Oracles of God, which they know to be true, and which would be a firm foundation to their faith. When their experience changes, faith and hope and religion depart.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 38

They made a profession of religion and were baptized, but they show they were on sliding sand instead of the solid rock. They do not find all as pleasant as they anticipated; they want to sip of the pleasure of excitement, the ballroom, the dance; they show that they have not yet tasted of the living water, of the fountain of life. Because they have no hunger of soul for righteousness, no soul thirst for the waters of life, they drink at broken cisterns that can hold no water. Their religion rests only on the sandy foundations of their own fluctuating feelings.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 39

If you are intelligent Christians, you will maintain religious vitality, and will not be deterred by difficulties which shall beset you, because your hope is wrought in God. You will work the works of God in gloom as well as in the glory, in shade as well as in the sunshine, in conflict as well as in peace. The truth must be treasured up in your hearts as well as incorporated into your being, so that no temptation and no argument can induce you to yield to Satan's suggestions or devices.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 40

The truth is precious; it has wrought important changes upon the life and character, exerting a masterly influence over words, deportment, thoughts, and experience. The true followers of Christ live not to themselves, but to Him who died for them. The soul that appreciates the truth lives under its influence and senses the tremendous reality of eternal things. To them God lives and is ever cognizant to all their words and actions.4LtMs, Lt 14, 1885, par. 41

Lt 15, 1885

Waggoner, J. H.; Jones, C. H.

Healdsburg, California

March 7, 1885

This letter is published in entirety in 20MR 48-50. +NoteOne or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Dear Brethren Waggoner and Jones:

I have read your letters once and will read them more carefully later, but I find nothing in them to lift the weight from my mind in regard to arrangements for the publication and sale of my books.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 1

I accept the explanations you make in regard to the draft. I have not laid up anything in my mind against you over this matter. However, I feel more and more convinced that I should never again allow myself to be left at the mercy of my brethren as regards means, if I can avoid it.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 2

From the light that God has given me, I am more and more convinced that you are acting unwisely in investing so much means in buildings. Since debts are now bearing you down, like weights of lead, I would advise you to “hug the shore” more closely in this respect. When you have means with which to build, then it will be time for you to increase your facilities. Bring your work within the limits of your resources, even if you must thereby endure great inconvenience. This is the light that God has repeatedly given me for you. It would be pleasing to God if you were to give this matter more careful study than you have given it.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 3

With reference to my book, I desire to say that I am not complaining because I think the office has been receiving too much for publishing it, but because I am not satisfied with the income it brings to me. Some plan should have been devised whereby more than fifteen cents' royalty per copy would come to me. I do not remember that I was ever consulted regarding this matter. I thought that my brethren would guard my interests as sacredly as they would their own interests or the interests of the office. I know where to apply means to help the cause fully as well as my brethren know where to apply my means for me.⁴*LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 4*

I have just received a letter from Brother Ostrander, in which he defends Brother Hamilton, against whom I made the charge that he appropriated means belonging to me and used it for his own convenience, building a house in Boulder. To make a bad matter worse, he exchanged this building for land in Longmont. This land was mortgaged, and it became necessary for me to invest six hundred dollars to lift the mortgage in order to avoid losing all that Brother Hamilton used. Thus about two thousand dollars, which I greatly need, is tied up. And now Brother Ostrander proposes to relieve me of all further difficulty in regard to this property by taking it off my hands. The mission in Colorado is embarrassed, and the proposition is that I donate to this mission the two thousand dollars tied up in this property. My brethren may feel ready to give me this kind of relief, but I am not ready to accept their proposition.⁴*LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 5*

My brethren of wise judgment could have managed my book—[Spirit of Prophecy] Volume IV—in such a way that relief would have been brought to me. They could have published a statement to the effect that this book had cost me much time and money to prepare and put on the market; and that, as I had pledged largely for the support of missions—no less than three thousand dollars—in addition to meeting other heavy expenses, the profits on the first edition of this book would go to the author to reimburse her for a portion of the heavy expense incurred; that the profits on the second edition would be divided between the canvassers and the author. Thus you could have helped me, but you did not.⁴*LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 6*

Hereafter I cannot put implicit confidence in all the plans you devise and execute, so far as my work is concerned. I will keep on the lookout for a manager; and when I find one who is suitable, I will employ him. I will not trust my book interests with my good brethren who plan in such a way that a certain portion of the profit is taken off by this one, and by that one, and only a very small portion is left for me. All your explanations and figures do not help me at all. My books are selling well, and yet I have scarcely enough money to procure the necessary things of life; and when I send to the office for funds, there comes to me the oft-repeated reply, "You have overdrawn your account." My helpers are not paid for the work they have done. I am carrying a heavy burden of debt, on which I pay interest. My books are constantly sold in large numbers; and yet the profits bring me but little relief.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 7

Matters are so arranged that those who write books cannot receive proper compensation, because the books go through so many hands that the profits are consumed in this way. Whether canvassers, or tract and missionary societies, or whatever it may be that brings about this result, I protest against such an arrangement. If we should revive the old plan of our ministers' disposing of the books, and receiving part of the profits themselves, I believe there would be a better state of things than exists today. Under present arrangements, it seems as if almost everything is absorbed by the tract and missionary societies, leaving very little profit for the author. I shall have something more to say on these things.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 8

Only the expense of publishing and selling my book, Vol. IV, should have been taken from the profits. The rest should have been saved for the author. No canvassers were needed for Volume IV. It would have been sold without going to all this expense. I am not satisfied with the result. Those who have felt that they were doing me justice by awarding me fifteen cents for each copy sold have erred in judgment.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 9

The notice of the higher prices placed on the book should never have been published. No explanation of this was made at the time. If nothing in explanation could have been written, the notice would better have remained unpublished.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 10

I will make no rash moves, but I cannot submit to the arrangements made. They are unjust. The money used in paying canvassers for selling the first edition was misspent; for I should have received the profits on that edition. I know where to use this means to the very best advantage; and yet I have nothing to use in any way. I economize in every way possible and still do not have sufficient to meet running expenses. I am sick at heart and discouraged over the present state of affairs. If the notice of the advance in price had been published before the first ten thousand books were sold, it would have been far better. I have trusted too much in my brethren. I regret making this mistake. In the future I must look after my own interests more closely.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 11

Yours with respect.4LtMs, Lt 15, 1885, par. 12

Lt 16, 1885

Andrews, Edith

Healdsburg, California

January 15, 1885

Previously unpublished.

My dear Sister Edith Andrews:

I have been shown some things in regard to your dangers and your connection with others in your work. All the ability that God has given you is to be improved to His glory. Your thoughts and actions need to be closely investigated.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 1

There is one kind of education you need which you have not—that is to be devotional, to be unselfish in your home life. Your character should be molded after the divine model.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 2

You have had as your birthright traits of character transmitted to you which the grace of God would enable you to overcome, but these traits have been cherished as virtues. The Lord seeth not as man seeth.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 3

Your usefulness and religious life are affected greatly and unfavorably by this phase of your character. Your influence upon other minds is not good. False views of life prevail everywhere to a greater or less extent, and from erroneous ideas will grow other and greater errors which affect not only the make-up of your character, but that of those with whom you associate. Right thinking lies at the foundation of right action. You have ever been controlled to a great extent by your inclination to follow a course that pleases you. To control the desires and actions, to meet the mind and will of God, you have but little experience in this line.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 4

There are precious souls whose usefulness in this life has been greatly lessened, for their experience has been mingled with misconception and false ideas that have had a controlling power over physical and mental capabilities. These errors have detracted from their usefulness and also cut short the life God has given to be preserved for many years.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 5

You so relate yourself to others that self is served; self is made a center. You gather about you a few select friends, and these administer to your vanity and self-love. You pet them and they pet you and you live upon their sympathy and you injure them and they injure you.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 6

Each individual is one of a great whole—one member of a common body. They have a part to act in the great whole. They cannot break these bonds, although they may ignore them. They do violence to their character and prove a snare to others if they do not carefully study God's plans and purposes in their relation to one another. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. God is love; and a heart imbued with the love of Jesus will fasten upon Jesus, the proper object, will love Him supremely; and the wealth of affection may flow in this divine channel without restraint or any danger.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 7

To love God supremely is obeying the first four commandments. The last six requires that man shall love his neighbor as himself. In obeying these last six commandments, God's child cannot live for self and seek his or her own enjoyment and happiness with a disregard to the present and future happiness of others. When self-love is strong, there will be no love bestowed upon those who do not praise and flatter you. You will dislike to be with them. You want yourself to be highly thought of, appreciated, petted, adored. You are an injury to those who remain much in your company or whom you associate with. All that you do seems to be perfection to them. They are misled. They do not judge of your character correctly.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 8

There is with you a love for the society of young men, and you attract them to you. You give them encouragement. You love to be in their society. You lead them on that they think you have preference for them. They know not that you are a coquette, and they become less and less interested in the service of God. You have injured them. You have interposed yourself between them and their Saviour. Remember, it is with Him who looks on the heart that we have to do—as is the heart, so is our religion. All the heart, all the soul, all the affections God requires. Unless the law of God is written on the heart, we in truth never obey it. The truth of God cannot profit or illumine the soul while it assents to professedly believe without sinking into the heart, reforming the life and character.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 9

The love, the pity, the compassion of God may be revealed; entreaties the most touching, invitations most earnest, may be mingled with promises the most free, cheering, and ample, and the heart be proof against them all. The truth does not sanctify the soul. The professed love for Jesus exercises not a controlling power upon the will, the inclination, because the truth has not subdued and sanctified the heart. Unless your affections flow in a different channel and are withdrawn [from] mere human objects and earthly things, and set on things above, then you cannot be on the Lord's side. The enemy finds a stronghold in the hearts of these, although their outward appearance may be very much like the life of a devoted Christian. The Heartsearcher knows that heart, that the love of the Saviour is not there. The foundation of spiritual upbuilding of character has not been laid. Christ is not in the soul, the hope of glory. There is no room in the heart either for the Spirit of God or the truth. Some idol has erected his temple there which is worshiped with the devotedness due to God alone. Hence the heart is closed against the truth. The affections are engrossed. The whole secret is the heart is not impressed and delights not in Him who is love.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 10

When the conscience is aroused, convinced, the heart, unless it immediately surrenders, [has] pain; unrest and absolute distraction are often produced by the conflict which is described in the Scriptures as the flesh warring against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh. The struggle ceases only when the soul surrenders to God. You have a work to do for yourself before you can be a blessing to others. Your influence is injurious to others. [For] these with whom you associate, religion has not taken the helm of life. The truth does not occupy the citadel of the soul.4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 11

If you would have Christ formed within, the hope of glory, you must have a radical change. Your love for admiration must die, and Christ must be in you the hope of glory. This sentimentalism must die. This centering your love upon a few is not sanctified affection. It is not of holy, pure principle. This is a human element, not divine, not heavenly. Your uncle had much of this same element in his character which greatly injured his discernment and spirituality. We have had to meet this in our experience quite frequently. 4LtMs, Lt 16, 1885, par. 12

Lt 17, 1885

Andrews, Edith

NP

February 10, 1885

Previously unpublished.

My dear Sister Edith:4LtMs, Lt 17, 1885, par. 1

There are some things I wish to present before you. I have questioned whether it could be my duty to write to you in regard to some things. You are in danger of making the same mistake your uncle made—of having a one-sided education. He loved books and reading which proved to him a snare because he would devote himself to this kind of employment. He would frame every excuse for this kind of work, and it was most taxing and exhausting.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1885, par. 2

You have weak lungs. Many who were placed as you are would overcome this difficulty, but I must tell you I have but little hope that you will do this because your habits are of that character that you will not see the evil tendency of these habits until it is too late. Your brain has now the taxation, while your muscles are almost totally inactive. There is not a healthful circulation of blood. You sit in a room where you are seldom sufficiently warm and seek to heat your feet by artificial means, but do not consult reason or religion in the matter. An interdict should be placed upon you, forbidding all such sedentary employment. Those who have pursued the course you are doing have paid the forfeit with their lives. Had they used the reason God has given them, they need not have died, but lived.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1885, par. 3

With your intelligence you ought to know how to use limbs, brain, and muscle wisely that if possible the condition of things now existing might change. You know better than to treat yourself as you have done. But you have a very determined purpose, and it is difficult to make you see the importance of a change of habits. While God has given you reason, and you do not obey the dictates of reason, but are guided and controlled by impulse, God will not work a miracle to preserve that life that you daily needlessly imperil.4LtMs, Lt 17, 1885, par. 4

It is the law of life that physical exercise is necessary for health. If one set of muscles is used to the neglect of others, there is a debility that must come to the unused organs. There is a want of harmonious action. Brain and muscle must be worked in order to have each equally taxed. If the muscles are used in active exercise, the circulation of the blood is quickened in its passage through the system. The heart receives blood faster, propelling it to the lungs, then the lungs work more healthfully to furnish the oxygen required by the larger amount of blood. The heart does its work more thoroughly, propelling the blood through the whole body. Healthful exercise gives new life and strength to every part of the body. The nerves ... [unfinished].4LtMs, Lt 17, 1885, par. 5

Lt 18, 1885

Burgess, J. A.

Healdsburg, California

January 20, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Brother Burgess:

I am troubled to find bills unsettled against me. Myers says there is about thirty dollars charged against me. What does this mean? Have you everything you have received in money, and how it was expended? We find not a scratch of anything of the kind here. Now will you please send in the accounts? Will you state definitely how you used the money sent from Oakland? Did you leave unsettled bill at Myers or in any other place? It would be a satisfaction to me to know about these things. Have you any of my money in your hands?4LtMs, Lt 18, 1885, par. 1

I was dunned for a debt you left unpaid at Goldenstone. I told him you were an honest man and would settle the debt, but I should pay no such debts. Why have you not made to me a statement of matters that I might know just how they stood? I am pressed for money as never before, and then to have a bill of thirty dollars presented to me troubles me. Will you tell me, Is this a just debt or Myers' meanness? Let me know at once.4LtMs, Lt 18, 1885, par. 2

Lt 19, 1885

Smith, Brother and Sister [Uriah]

Healdsburg, Calif.

March 23, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in 5MR 175.

Elder [Uriah] Smith and Wife:

Much respected brother and sister: last evening I returned from St. Helena [to] your letter and one from Sister Hall at Sanitarium, which contained a draft for Sister Klase of $2,200. I was glad to read your letter. It made me have courage to feel that you miss the articles. But be assured it is by no design of mine that you do not have them. I have placed in Eliza's hands articles for some time ahead, but there has been high pressure here to do some work in completing books that have been contemplated some time.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 1

There has been every exertion made to prepare a sketch of life and travels to go into Volume 4. Marian is doing this. The testimonies have been waiting some time to be published, and Eliza, who has prepared these articles, was called below to Oakland to help M. K. White to read proof sheet. That is quite an important work as you well know. She left Marian to prepare articles for the paper, and Marian was driving upon Life Sketches; so among all the work, you have not received the articles you should have had; and I knew not but that you had them until I saw none in the paper. Be assured that it was not for the money I wrote them. But Eliza has employed nearly all her time for both papers. They have, during the pressure, prepared seventeen articles from Vol. 4 so as to devote the time to work mentioned.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 2

I have had difficulty of head and more especially of my eyes since I returned from the Eastern meetings. Have been utterly unable to use my eyes because of constant pain in the back of the ball and temples. I would not submit my eyes to be treated by any doctor. I knew they needed rest, complete rest, but these books to be prepared have forced me to use them. By binding up the left eye, I have used the right eye considerably. My general health is good. My throat and lungs, heart, and head have been bad, but I am improving. [I] write now a little every day under the pressure. We are getting out Testimony No. 32—about completed.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 3*

I do not mean there shall be a break in the articles again if I can prevent it.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 4*

The two hundred came in good, for I had to provide for a bathroom to bring water into my house; and it cost me something near three hundred dollars for windmill and tank house and pipes and everything relating to it, when I expected it would cost me only one hundred. But you know this is how matters generally turn out in regard to improvements. But I am glad of the two hundred just now.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 5*

If I should relate to you the experience I have had in regard to money matters since I returned home, you would laugh, I know. I can laugh now, but I assure you in the pinch it was no laughing matter. I did expect on my books to receive enough to get me free from financial embarrassment; but no, all that I received was five hundred dollars above actual expenses, not counting in my time or family expenses.⁴*LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 6*

Now, Brother Smith, I think that my brethren should have considered my case, my continual expense, and worked for my interest in regard to the profits of Vol. 4. The profits of the first edition I ought to have had, then the second edition be put in the hands of the canvassers, and let those who handled the book share the profits; but to set my profits only fifteen cents on a copy from the commencement is a mistake and very hard for me. I was so surprised when this was done without my counsel or consent, I felt discouraged. I was needing entire freedom and rest from my journey, but did not get it. Sister Klase was much exposed in the sanitarium while the building was finishing; doors were constantly swinging and the draught was bringing difficulties on her lungs of a serious character. She coughed all through the journey and was asked to make a batch of bread [for] the boarding house at

Oakland; and in the condition her lungs were in, it was the worst thing she could do. She was before this very much troubled with her left lung. She bled at the lungs, and then they sent her to me at Healdsburg. Just as she was feeling strong again, Elmer fell from the top of the tankhouse and broke his leg in a very bad place. We have taken care of them both for three months, so you see not much rest for me. I should say the mother had the principle care of Elmer. That is all she could do. We have done the rest. Sister Klase was worried. I told her I would not charge her one cent for their board. Board here in Healdsburg is five dollars per week. This is done by me as freely as if Sister Klase were my own sister, for she is precious as gold. I think Elmer a worthless boy, but no discount on the mother. Bro. and Sr. Lockwood were with us for about two months. They were no burden to me, but a help in many ways.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 7

But the books do not help me to hardly meet my expenses of publishing them. I told Willie I should have to dismiss my help, lessen my family expenses, cease my writing in a great measure, for it was impossible to carry a heavy burden of debt as I am carrying.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 8

My eyes will not admit of my reading this over, for I must write to Eld. Canright, so excuse mistakes.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 9

Sister Smith, please write me.4LtMs, Lt 19, 1885, par. 10

Lt 20, 1885

Friends at Healdsburg

Modesto, California

July 14, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear friends at Healdsburg:

Our train left Oakland about 11 o'clock at night, Monday. We were compelled to have considerable confusion as usual in packing up and getting off. We went down to the point at half-past seven, and there was a crowd that came to see us off. We had to go thus early to get our places, take our seats, and then we went out to walk and get the air, for it was very close in the place where the cars stood. It would be so much better if there had not so many come down to see us off. We did not get ready to sleep until midnight. There is a great deal of jerking and jostling. I slept nevertheless until morning, but feel the need of more sleep. It will take some days for me to get rested. We are not badly crowded, but there are about as many as our party on the cars.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1885, par. 1

We met here Skeltons, Sabbath-keepers, just from Kansas. They are going to locate in Fresno County.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1885, par. 2

We are promised an entire car at Mojave. I designed to have left you more money to pay for the hay, but it has taken pretty close work to get money to defray the expenses of this journey. Draw from Pacific Press if you need [money] any time, Brother and Sister Lockwood. We return the same route we came. Some extra advantages were granted us over the Central Pacific, so we took this.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1885, par. 3

I would be pleased to have you send to Byron Belden, Pacific Press, a couple of boxes of plums when they get ripe. The plums were sold readily for two cents and a half at Oakland, which was about two cents at Healdsburg. Willie says he sent you a telegram to send down plums. Byron will dispose of them. When there is a general ripening of plums, you may, if agreeable, visit Petaluma, and let Byron Belden know just when he and Sarah will go to Petaluma and go back with you, and she will prepare plums, dry and can some for themselves. If this is not convenient, then let the matter pass. I would like you to send one box to Pacific Press for Sister Borlan.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1885, par. 4

Addie, I have talked with Sister Loughborough, and she will rent you the room at head of stairs, and Sister Davis as roommate, and board you for two dollars and half. This is reasonable. Mary Loughborough will have to sleep upon the lounge in sitting room. This is the most favorable outlook I can see for you. I feel fully better than I could reasonably expect after such a tax of getting ready and having kept awake till midnight. I will rest if possible on this journey.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1885, par. 5

Brother Lockwood, do as well as you can with the fruit. Keep account of what it brings, for I wish to know in regard to the profits on the place. I have had a good long talk with Elder Rice in regard to [the] Health Retreat, and I feel relieved.4LtMs, Lt 20, 1885, par. 6

Lt 21, 1885

Waggoner, Sister

Great Grimsby, England

August 20, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Sister Waggoner:

Before I left California I tried to write you, but I was not able. I will write now the things which I feel urged upon me.⁴*LtMs, Lt 21, 1885, par. 1*

I have been shown your case, my sister, and there are serious defects in your character which you need to see and overcome. You are selfish, thinking and planning for yourself. You are not doing your duty to your father Elder Waggoner. He needs the sympathy, the love, and the affection of his children which he has not had as he deserves. Had you felt as a daughter should, you would not have felt peace or rest or any way excusable until you had planned a home for your father. Ellet is at fault here. He should have made this one of the objects of his life, to have made a pleasant home for his father. His father has helped you and planned and worked for you, and he should have in return love, sympathy, and attention from you both. His life has been a disappointment, and you have not tried, as it was your duty, to make up for this lack. You have thought and planned for yourselves and calculated for yourselves, and you might have been doing your duty to your father and would have been blessed in so doing. God will not bless such neglect and indifference on your part. It is your privilege to make a home for your father and to be kind and tender to your father.⁴*LtMs, Lt 21, 1885, par. 2*

I want to say, my sister, in your present state of supreme self-love, selfish plans, all you do is mingled with self. Now if you do not overcome this and make every effort to work to overcome your peevish, irritable spirit, you will never be an overcomer. The Lord would have you to be a truly converted woman, patient, kind, and tender. The grace of Christ is needed daily in your heart and overcoming grace to be seen in your deportment. May the Lord help you now to make most thorough efforts to overcome.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1885, par. 3

You have a work to do for yourselves which no others can do for you. Will you take hold of this work and be just as determined to succeed here as you have been to succeed in having your own way and carrying out your own will? There are now golden moments for you to improve. Make the most of them for Christ's sake. Bring all the happiness, light, peace, and love you can into your home life. Let Jesus be a treasured guest in your home. Do not, I beg of you, neglect to do the very duties that are left for you to do. Be wholly and entirely the Lord's. You may develop Christian characters which will stand the test of the judgment.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1885, par. 4

Yours with respect.4LtMs, Lt 21, 1885, par. 5

Lt 22, 1885

Gibbs, Dr.

Basel, Switzerland

September 5, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in EGWE 35, 40, 43-44, 46.

Dr. Gibbs

Dear Brother:

Here we are in Europe at last. We have come through safely and have had a pleasant journey—no accident or harm has come to any of us with the exception of a severe cold contracted in Great Grimsby. Everything looks familiar as though I had passed through this country before. The odd, queer looking houses look as familiar as though I had been familiar with the sight.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 1

We reached Liverpool the eighteenth of August, but I will not be minute here, for I have written an article for the paper which you will no doubt see before this reaches you.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 2

We will state some few things for the satisfaction of those who know Bro. Drew. We found him comfortably situated in a convenient house with good furniture, easy chairs, and decorated with pictures and tasty ornaments. His wife is a French lady that was for years lady's maid to a noble lady. They have a little Miss Drew nearly two years old.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 3

Liverpool has about three hundred thousand inhabitants. Brethren Drew and O'Neal from Southampton are engaged in the missionary work. But what can those do to let rays of light shine in this great city? I am filled with pain at heart when I consider the few workers and so much to be done. There will have to be help sent to this city Liverpool.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 4

August 19. We traveled on the cars to Great Grimsby. This is a very large place, but cannot have the honor of being called a city because it has no grand cathedral. It is the custom here to have outdoor meetings.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 5

I spoke in the temperance hall Friday evening on the subject of temperance. I spoke to our people in their place of meeting—twice Sabbath and once Sunday forenoon. There are some very substantial, noble souls who have embraced the faith in Grimsby. Several came from Hull and from Ulceby. A few in both these places were keeping the Sabbath and seemed to enjoy the meeting very much. I was urged with tears to come to both these places and speak to the people. I consented to have an appointment circulated for Monday night at Ulceby. Sunday night I spoke to the people assembled in the town hall. There were about one thousand present. The Lord gave me much freedom. The very best class of people were out to hear and gave the best of attention. Monday night I rode on the cars ten miles out to Ulceby. Here are two large families keeping the Sabbath besides other individuals alone in families. Brother Armstrong and his wife were convicted of the truth. He is a baker by trade. He has the general custom. He supplies with bread one of the lords who lived in Ulceby who was a member of or connected with the royal family; and when these great ones of earth patronize a merchant or trader, the people will all follow their example. Should he lose the custom of the nobility, he loses the custom of the people.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 6

Sister Armstrong received the truth and could only weep and pray for her husband. How could he keep the Sabbath, he queried, with a large family dependent on him? He hesitated some time, but was unable to find peace or rest until he decided to obey the law of God and trust his case in the hands of the Lord.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 7

He visited the mother of this lord and frankly made known his convictions and his purpose to obey. She thought it was very foolish in him to keep Saturday when all the world kept Sunday, and she told him they could never consent to eat any bread except warm, fresh, that-day baked. Brother Armstrong told her he would supply her late Friday night and early Sunday morning. But she said it would not do at all. So he was paid up and discharged. The nobility sent to Grimsby for their bread. It looked very dark for Brother Armstrong, but he said if he were left to want he would not break the Sabbath. One week passed; then he was summoned to the lord's house. The mother had another interview with him and enquired if he had not changed his mind and given up that foolish notion in regard to the Sabbath. He told her he was more than ever decided that he must obey God in keeping all His commandments. Well, she said, I am sorry for myself and for you, but I think we must have your bread. I have had poor, sour bread since I discharged you. I think, said Bro. Armstrong, I was just the most thankful, happiest man in the town. The Lord was merciful. His power controlled this matter. You see by my relating this circumstance something how matters work. It is very difficult for poor people to keep the Sabbath. It is not luxuries that they lose, for they have not these; but it is the bare bread that sustains life that they lose. Many believe, but have no kind of a show of getting the simplest food to sustain life. I have faith that the wealthier classes will be reached through the lower classes, and then there will be men of business who will employ workers, and thus a way will be opened for the honest to receive the truth.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 8

We returned to Grimsby, and Wednesday we took the cars for Bexley and spoke under the tent. The Lord gave me His Spirit in large measure. We were obliged to ride from the depot in a dog cart. It was foggy and rainy. I took cold. The eastern breakfast I do not fancy—a little tea and thin slices of bread and a plate of cake. But we did the best we could with this, substituting water for the tea. You may imagine this shadow of a breakfast, dry lunch on the cars the day before, and no supper—speaking one hour and a half, and then this make-believe breakfast, but I let that go.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 9

We had a good attendance. The tent was full and one hundred outside. They listened as if spellbound. We could say as we looked over the congregation there were honorable women not a few. They seemed to drink in every word. After this meeting closed, all who could get access to me shook my hand heartily, saying, "God bless you for the words you have spoken. You are doing a good work. May the Lord long preserve you," and thus one and another expressed their feelings. I mean, when a favorable opportunity presents, to go over the ground again and speak to these interested ones.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 10

We rode four miles in a rainstorm, but in a covered carriage this time. We reached London about half-past eleven o'clock where we met W. C. White and Brother Kellogg. W.C.W. left Grimsby to meet Brother Kellogg in London. Sunday night we tarried in London twenty-four hours, but I was not well. I could not sleep the night before until past one. I could not lay off the burden I felt for the souls in England. I was pleading with the Lord to arouse His people, that the missionary spirit might burn in the hearts of those who were now at ease in Zion, and that the warning message might be given to these great cities. There are five million of people in London, and one hundred workers would not be too many to try to reflect light on this great city. Who will come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty? Who will go without the camp bearing the reproach? I spoke in Southampton to the church three times and in the large hall Sunday night.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 11

I was taken sick Sunday morning; was unable to sit up; my head was throbbing; every nerve in my body seemed to be quivering. I was sick, sick, and I knew I could not talk that night without the Lord wrought in a special manner for me. I arose from my bed; was taken in a hack to the hall. There before me were more than a thousand people. I thought I would excuse myself and take my seat, but the Lord helped me. My hoarseness departed; my headache ceased, and I was free. I spoke one hour and twenty minutes with clearness and power. This is another token of God's mercy. I thank Him with my whole heart for this blessing. The people listened with the most profound attention. Many wept, and I was better after speaking. Have been improving ever since. Spent two nights and two days in London, but was confined to the hotel, writing an article for Southampton weekly paper. We came to this place last Thursday, September 3. We found here a beautiful house, room and well situated; three good rooms on third story have been appointed to us. The view from our windows is not as grand as the view at St. Helena, but it [is] beautiful, beautiful. I spoke yesterday, [September] 4, to the believers in this place. There are about fifty assembled here to worship God. The meetinghouse or room is good. The room is about as large again as at St. Helena—well lighted and ventilated.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 12

I spoke followed by two interpreters—French and German. The people seemed to be blessed. There are now new ones embracing the truth all the time. The German interpreter is not keeping the Sabbath. Brother Bourdeau became acquainted with him while riding in the cars. He was out of work, and he recommended him to come to Basel and they might employ him. He is now translating Life of Christ into German. I hope he will keep the truth.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 13

A German has just come to Basel Friday. He is a professor in a school. He embraced the truth by reading, and of course he could not retain his place. He begged the privilege of substituting Thursday for Saturday, and it was granted until another teacher could supply his place. The work moves slowly, but hearts are certainly being convicted and converted. I feel deeply in regard to Europe. We want money! We want workers in this broad field! May the Lord give no rest to those who are now feeling irresponsible and may feel indeed "I am my brother's keeper."4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 14

We do not forget you at St. Helena. I have written to Brother Rice and Sister Ings, but no letter of response comes; and I now write to you. Perhaps you will be able to write or dictate to another a few words of reply. I will not be able to write many private letters, but will write occasionally.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 15

I feel sure that if each one connected with the Health Retreat will work with the Spirit of Jesus, there will be drawing in even cords. There will be harmony and love and unity of action. I believe, Dr. Gibbs, that the Lord will set His hand to help you in the discharge of your duty, if God is made your dependence and your trust. If all connected with the Health Retreat will have faith unfeigned, they will see the institution prosper. We must make God our counselor, and He will give us of His wisdom. The Bible is our directory. Let us study its pages and closely follow the precepts of God's Word.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 16

You can have a great influence for good as a physician. You can lead souls to trust in the Great Physician. You need daily a living experience in the things of God. You want a personal knowledge of the truth, that you may be a physician of the soul as well as of the body.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 17

The Lord has a work for us all; and if we do this work with fidelity, we shall receive the reward of everlasting life. There is no place on earth where religion is so appropriate as in an institution like the Health Retreat. I hope that there will not be a want of devotion in any one connected with this institution. In God, it will prove a success; without the wisdom of God, it will be a failure. The people will have growing confidence in the institution as they see that it is conducted from a religious standpoint. I think much can be accomplished by lectures upon the false habits and wrong customs, and presenting the true and healthful habits in contrast. There are so many who are ignorant of the laws of life and health.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 18

I have not questioned at any time but it was in the providence of God that you should connect with the Health Retreat Institute, and God will bless you in your efforts. Only walk humbly before Him. Your life has not been cast in pleasant places; but if you love, fear, and honor God, He will be to you wisdom, sanctification, and righteousness.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 19

How pleased should I be could I walk in and see you all and learn of the cases you have treated and the increased knowledge of the truth you are gaining, that you can guide others into the path of truth and holiness. We have but little time to work now. The day is far spent, and the night is at hand; then let us work with an eye single to the glory of God. Hide self in Jesus. All our works and our character are passing in review before the High and Holy One who inhabiteth eternity. Every one will receive of the Master as his works have been, whether they be good or evil. We want to so live that our names will not be blotted out of the book of life, but be confessed before God and the heavenly angels. Remember me to Sister Ings, Brother Rice, and Sister Klase, Sister Weatherwax, and the Crawford girls.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 20

Yours with respect.4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 21

[P.S.] Please inform me how my cow and calf are getting along, and

Kit. Have my cottages been rented? How many patients have you?4LtMs, Lt 22, 1885, par. 22

Lt 23, 1885

Butler, G. I.

Basel, Switzerland

September 18, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in 15MR 345-370.

Dear Brother Butler:

(In this you will find my diary transferred, giving you a history of our meetings.)4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 1

I attended the morning meeting. There was quite a large gathering of Germans, French, Italians, and English. The prayers were offered in all these languages. The Lord was near to bless His people. My heart was drawn out in earnest supplication that this meeting might be the beginning of better days for the laborers in these fields and for all assembled. I pleaded earnestly with God that heavenly wisdom might be given to every one engaged in the work, that at this important council the Spirit of Jesus would soften and subdue hearts. I had the assurance of His word and Spirit that the Lord would hear and would answer our prayers. Nearly all our American brethren bore good testimonies, as did also Elders Matteson and Oyen.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 2

I have had testimonies for this people especially on the necessity of love and unity. I have felt urged by the Spirit of God to keep before them the necessity of being teachable, easy to be entreated, that it was entirely out of place for Christ's servants to be self-sufficient and independent. I have tried to impress upon them that we are individually bound together in the great web of humanity, and all that we do has relation to others, and any one man is not a whole. It is not safe to follow one man's mind and one man's judgment. We are to be helps to one another, but never to be the shadow of any man. God would have us think and act as free moral agents, gathering light from Him to reflect upon others, while we must be willing to be entreated of our brethren and to gain wisdom from men of experience.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 3

I spoke upon James 3:13-18. Words went home to hearts. No one man is to consider himself authority in all things. We should be willing to learn one from another. Great and noble-minded men are teachable. Selfish and narrow minds are not willing to be taught. It is the privilege of men associating with men to lay every man's mind with which he comes in contact under tribute, absorbing every particle of common sense that they can gain by the experience and education of others. If there are things that are not of value, cast that aside. If the heart is humble, the purpose true, they will have sanctified ears and perception to distinguish between the true and the false.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 4

After meeting, Dr. Vincenzo Guerini, an Italian, filled a tooth for me. He is a refined gentleman, a dentist. He is considered the best workman in Naples. He is fully in the truth. A man of excellent spirit.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 5

September 19

At half-past six a.m. had a consultation with Brethren Bourdeau, Whitney, and their families. We were considering the best way to help the Italian Mission. We can see only one way, if we can bring it to pass, to connect Brother and Sister Mallon from Torre Pellice with the Basel Publishing House and A. C. Bourdeau with his family [to] go to Italy and occupy their house. Then Brother and Sister Mallon would feel that the work would go forward in Italy, should they leave. Their property is involved, and by disposing of their printing material, they could relieve themselves of financial embarrassment and still have their house and lot left. May the Lord direct, is our prayer. The talent of Brother and Sister Mallon is much needed in the publishing house in Basel.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 6

Brother D. T. Bourdeau spoke in the early morning meeting. In the afternoon I spoke to the people from Colossians 1:24-29. I felt great weakness before going into the desk. I pleaded most earnestly with God in prayer to help me and to bless the people in a special manner. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon me and upon the people. I was followed by three interpreters: German, French, and Danish, but this did not embarrass me in the least. The heavenly angels were in our midst. I was blessed in speaking, the people blessed in hearing. I cannot see but that my message is having a better impression than on the minds of my American brethren and sisters.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 7

After the discourse we had a most precious meeting. Our brethren of all nationalities spoke of being greatly blessed, and of being very grateful to God for the word spoken. One brother who has been laboring in Naples, Biglia by name, had been unwilling to come under the control of the conference. Yet he depended on them for means to carry on the work in his own way. He had manifested a spirit of independence. He expressed himself with deep feeling and confessed his unconsecrated condition. He said, "I have heard and read about the mission of Sister White, but now I have seen and handled this matter myself. I acknowledge that the power of God has come to my heart through her testimony. I receive it as from God. I humble myself before God. God's voice in reproof of my sins has come to me through Sister White."4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 8

Other testimonies acknowledged the blessing of God which the people had received. Surely we could say with Jacob, "The Lord is in this place." [Genesis 28:16.] Many with tears say this is the best meeting that they ever experienced. Our American brethren seemed to be blessed and bore testimonies with brokenness of heart. They were excellent, humble testimonies. The testimonies of the Spirit of God are received. I really think the testimonies for some reason have greater power upon our American brethren who are over here in Europe than when I addressed them in America.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 9

We sit down again in quiet in our room. It is four hours that we have been in meeting. Brother Bourdeau regretted that I had not spoken in the early part of the day, for he feared the people would become drowsy through weariness; but I saw no sleepiness; all seemed to listen with intense interest. After one hour there was a Bible class held.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 10

September 20

I had a private interview with Brother John in regard to his manner of labor in holding open-air meetings. He now thinks that he had better connect with Elder R. F. Andrews in Ireland. Sister Ribton has written to him an urgent letter for labor where she is. I had talked with Brother Whitney in regard to Brother and Sister Mallon's uniting their talent with the publishing house in Basel. It is thought best to carry this through. May the Lord help in working up this matter.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 11

I attended the morning session of the council. I was requested to speak in regard to holding tent meetings in Europe. I told them that according to the light the Lord had given me, tents could be used to good advantage in some places and, if conducted properly, would result in great good. I did not know at the time why they called me out on this, but learned it was because Brother John had previously spoken rather against tents being the best for meetinghouse purposes.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 12

I then presented my objections in regard to open-air meetings. They are very wearing to our ministers, because taxing to the vocal organs. The voice is strained to an unnatural pitch and would be greatly injured by this method of labor. Another objection was that discipline and order could not be preserved; such labor would not encourage studious habits in diligently searching the Scriptures, to bring from God's storehouse things both new and old. The worker is not qualifying himself to become a thorough workman; he cannot possibly prove his own work by concentrating his labors to bring out and organize a church; he does not do the very work so essential to be done, not only to preach, but to follow up his labor by ministering; by becoming acquainted with interested ones; going to their homes; opening to them the Scriptures around the fireside; making plain essential points of present truth; and removing the objections which always will arise when the truth is brought in conflict with error. The Bible talks, the humble, earnest prayer with the family, accomplish a greater work than the most powerful discourses can accomplish without this personal effort. In the open-air meetings, there cannot be that complete work done in binding off the work, that he may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 13

Sometimes great good may be done by this manner of labor. But as a practice it is better to reach the people in some other way. Our ministers have not the physical strength to endure the taxation of the vocal organs in this kind of labor. Our ministers should be guarded in regard to preaching long discourses. It is a great tax upon the speaker and a tax upon the people to digest so much matter. Sermons of one-half the length would be of far more value than the long sermons usually preached, which are wearing out the strength of the ministers by exhausting efforts that are not necessary.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 14

If ministers would work intelligently in their ministry, they would have left a source of strength to be given to more personal efforts and to the work that is essential to be done for the perfection of the work in all its parts. Many of our workmen wear themselves out when God does not require it. Many of them cripple their energies or become martyrs to their imprudence. Our workers need to become educated upon these points. There is a great work to be done in this cause, and the laborer can do much more work if he does not preach at one time so long as to weary himself and his hearers.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 15

September 21

Reports of labor and the manner of laboring, and the extending of the work into new fields, were discussed. I attended the morning meeting. There were two seasons of prayer, both in French and English. Brother Mallon bore an excellent testimony. He is an Italian, having a printing office and publishing a paper. His wife is an excellent woman—intelligent and speaks several languages. She translates and is a real general. I spoke to the people in reference to the laborers' going out two by two. I told them that this was Christ's arrangement. I spoke at some length on this point.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 16

Meetings in the forenoon were upon the work of entering new fields and of carrying forward the work in the most economical manner. W. C. White related with what poverty the message was proclaimed in its first rise. He spoke ably and with deep feeling. I followed, relating our experience in our early work. I spoke of the embarrassment of the cause now because of empty treasuries. The only course I could see to pursue was to lay these empty treasuries before the Lord and plead for Him to supply the great need. I exhorted the workers to have more faith. The Lord has means somewhere entrusted with His stewards, and He now calls for this means to be invested in His work.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 17

I have had to break off writing to have an interview with Brother Albert Vuilleumier. He is in some perplexity. His brethren urge him to be ordained, but he wishes to wait one year longer. He will work, he says, all the same, but he fears that he has not sufficient experience. I believe him to be an excellent man. He wished to know how he should present the truth in entering new fields, whether the Sabbath should be presented first. I told him that the best and wisest plan would be to dwell upon subjects that would arouse the conscience. He could talk upon practical godliness, devotion and piety, and present the self-denial, self-sacrificing life of Jesus as our example until they will see the contrast between that and their self-indulgent life and become dissatisfied with their unchristian lives. Then present to them the prophecies; show them the purity and binding claims of the law of God; not one jot or tittle of this law is to lose its force, but hold its binding claims upon every soul to the end of time. When the law of God is made void, when the Christian world is joined with the Catholic and the worldly in making of none effect the commandments of God, then God's chosen people arise to defend the law of Jehovah.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 18

This is the guile that Paul used; this is the wisdom of the serpent and harmlessness of the dove. When we come to a community acquainted with our faith, this cautious course need not be pursued; but in every case special efforts should be made to come close to hearts by personal labor. Avoid running down the churches. Do not let the people receive the idea that your work is to tear down; it is to build up and to present the truth as it is in Jesus. Dwell much upon the necessity of vital godliness.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 19

September 21

Brother and Sister Whitney, Brother and Sister Mallon, W. C. White, and myself had a conversation in regard to Brother and Sister Mallon's connecting with the office. Sister Mallon was our interpreter. Her husband cannot speak English. We greatly desire that this change should be made, for the talent they possess is greatly needed in this printing office. The work would be enlarged and publications multiplied in different languages. In case Brother Mallon should leave Italy, then someone would have to take their place to hold what has already been gained to the cause of truth and gather in others. We see no one to go but Brother A. C. Bourdeau. Italy would be a good field for him to work in. His experience would enable him to do a good work, we hope. We told them that Daniel and Augustine should labor together and help each other. In the next six months, work should be put forth in or near Geneva, where several colporteurs have been at work. From Brother Mallon we learned many important facts in regard to the Italian field. It will require a strong, determined, persevering effort to move things there; but when once the work takes hold, there will be numbers gathered to the cause of truth.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 20

We expect to see the work of God advancing rapidly the coming year, in fields which we now contemplate the workers entering. I feel very solemn in view of the work that God would have done in this country and consider that if it can be entered upon in the right way, the Lord will make the cause of truth to triumph.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 21

We must make special efforts while the angels are holding the four winds, but there is constant danger of going forth to labor in self-confidence and leaving Christ out of the question. We want a strong hold from above; we want to press our petitions to the throne of grace; we must grasp the promises of God by living faith, in America and also here in Europe. In Christ we can be a host. Without Christ defects and mistakes will be seen in all the work. We are nearing the end; we are doing up the last great work for eternity; we are learning ourselves, and teaching others, that a people may be prepared to stand in the day of God's preparation. We cannot afford to do work at random; we cannot afford to be doubleminded; we should now consecrate all our powers to God without reserve. We should not work to the point where we exhaust our powers and cut short our days, but work in accordance with the laws of life and health and do no more than we can do intelligently and with thoroughness. We have thought too much depended on what we could do and have not depended enough on the Lord God of Israel to work for His people. God does not require any one of us to preach long discourses, and offer long prayers, and raise the voice to a high pitch, and hold so many meetings that the physical and mental powers are nearly wrecked.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 22

September 22

We had a very precious season in the early morning meeting. There were many prayers offered in French and English, and a number of interesting testimonies were given. I then gave a little talk upon faith, setting before them that it is our unbelief that is offensive to God and withholds us from God. If our faith is in accordance with our light and privileges in this age, then heaven is open before us, and the rich promises of God are fulfilled concerning us; nothing is wanting that Christ requires. The experience and character of His followers should equal to the talents received. Faith, obedience, and love are to be developed in the character, equal to the light and grace given. If there is not an increase of faith, there will be a decrease of light and blessings. Light is shining; and if we follow the light, our experience will grow brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. All who walk in the truth will be renewed in knowledge and true holiness and will be obtaining daily victories over self, pride, and the love of the world.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 23

If there is not an improvement of the talents given of God, our condemnation will be in proportion to the grace and truth bestowed. If these were abundant and powerful, then our condemnation will be in accordance with them. The general distrust of God, the dwelling in an atmosphere of constant unbelief, is an offense to God; it is dishonoring to His name; it is distrusting His Word. Without faith it is impossible to please God.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 24

Many testimonies were borne by the hearers in response, through the translator, expressing their gratitude to God, acknowledging that they were seeing new light, and that faith was better understood by them. They could see now why they had not advanced more in Christian experience. It was because they had wanted to walk by sight and not by faith. Some then urged that the meeting continue one week longer. They said the lessons they were having from Sister White were of great value to them; that they were gaining much knowledge by the Bible studies and the instruction given upon the work of colporteurs and canvassers. The meetings of counseling together made it essential that all should remain. The decision was in accordance with the proposition.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 25

September 23

I attended early morning meeting and had great freedom in prayer to our heavenly Father for the special blessing upon those assembled. I had a spirit of intercession, that the servants of God should be fully qualified by the descent of the Holy Spirit to do their great work to perfection. The Spirit of the Lord was indeed in our midst, and there was a solemn impression that rich blessings are prepared for those who love God. While praying, I felt deeply impressed that the church of Christ is called to respond to the light given, to the privileges granted them, to be a powerful and holy people, a name and praise in all the earth. This is what Jesus is able to do for His church, and this is what He desires she shall be; and on this ground alone, she can meet the claims of the gospel and enjoy its fulness. We seemed to be brought very near to God. Several excellent testimonies were borne of advancement and appreciation of the benefits they were receiving.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 26

I made remarks from (James 1:3) and onward in regard to appropriating faith. I presented before them the precious promise, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering." [Verses 5, 6.] God requires heart service. To obey is better than sacrifice; without obedience and pure love, the richest offering is too poor to be presented to the Owner of all things. The Lord gave me great freedom in presenting these ideas before the people, and I think they were received and appreciated.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 27

We met with Elders Bourdeau and their wives, Elder Whitney and wife, and Brother Kellogg. We were to consider the matter of Brother A. C. [Bourdeau] going to Torre Pellice, Italy, to commence a work there. We told them that this work would move slowly at first; but if they labored in wisdom, souls would be converted. When one or two souls were converted, they would begin to labor for others, and there would be an army for the Lord raised up in that place. There are quite a number of places in the valley; and if they made a beginning, the work would spread through all these places. Many honest souls were buried up in the rubbish of superstition and erroneous doctrines, which they received from their preachers, who educate the people to look to them, as if they were the true teachers of righteousness. There will be at some time, I know not how soon, a disturbance in the valleys of Italy. The confidence of the people in their teachers will be shaken; the eyes of many will be opened, and the truth will be proclaimed among them. It seemed light to us that A. C. Bourdeau should commence his work in these valleys, while Brother and Sister Mallon were still there. That Daniel and Albert Vuilleumier should commence in a place near Geneva, and thus the work go forward, the two Bourdeaus uniting when it was positively necessary.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 28

We thought it wisdom to advise Charlie Andrews to go to America, with the purpose of learning to become an efficient workman in the binder's trade. Mother Andrews could have her choice to go to Italy with Martha and her husband, to remain in Basel, or go with Charles to America. Up to this point all ideas and decisions were unanimous.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 29

Then Daniel presented his ideas in regard to France and Italy—that they should become a separate conference, standing separate from Switzerland. The means of France and Italy should not go into the conference at Basel, but be managed by these conferences, when as yet there were scarcely enough in either place to hold a meeting. I told Brother Daniel that this would not be in accordance with God's will. He pleaded that it would be better for the French that they should not unite with the Swiss Conference, for they were independent and naturally jealous; and if pressed to rules or order, there would be revolutionary feelings. I told him these were the strong reasons that I would urge why they should unite with the Swiss Conference, and their interests be blended together, and they should not take on an independent spirit, but as followers of Christ be subject one to another. This is the very means that God has ordained that one shall have influence over another, and all be transformed and molded after the divine Pattern, that all the believers in Christ are to be sanctified through the truth.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 30

The truth is one. It will take people from France and Italy and, mingling them with other elements, soften and refine them through the truth. Teach them that in humility and union there is strength. The love of Christ and living faith would have a transforming power upon the ideas of the man, and upon the man, and upon the character. The temper and the life experience will be softened and ennobled by divine truth. The influence of the truth is to take away from man that which is impetuous and rebellious and bring him into harmony with heaven. God's purpose is to bring all into harmony and unity on the platform of truth as it is in Jesus. There are to be no separate interests formed or maintained by the believers in present truth.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 31

The cause in Europe is yet in its infancy. I can see in this proposition of Brother D. T. Bourdeau that which alarms me. It has not the divine enlightenment. God's will is that the interests of every lover of truth shall be combined. Whatever God requires is the very best and safest course to follow. Now we find it profitable to yield obedience to God's plans. All who embrace the truth must be educated from the very first that their own ideas and will are not to be a power, but we are to study God's will. His will is to become our will, our ways must be submitted to God's ways.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 32

The truth is all-powerful and far-reaching. It will unite nationalities in one great brotherhood. I told them I could not see a greater evil to the now weak cause in Europe than that which Daniel was urging. Then Brother Daniel began to soar. He repeated his grievances in times past—the abuse he had suffered from his brethren in Battle Creek, that he was placed under Brother Andrews in Europe. He became very excited. I told them I had no more to say and left the room. When he wants my counsel again, I shall tell him that when he is willing to act like a reasonable man, then I will talk with him. This idea that French must stand French, and the Germans stand Germans, and thus the nationalities stand apart in their independence, is a device of the devil. It is the truth alone that saves the nationalities. The truth proves its power. It comes from God, and it is His own Spirit in its agency which renders it effectual in the conversion and sanctification of those who hear and accept it. The sufficiency is not in the preacher, but in the mighty agency of the Holy Spirit, which gracious influence transforms the soul, bringing every thought into subjection to Jesus Christ.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 33

Christ in men unites them on one grand platform, preparing for the uniting in one family in heaven. It is the truth that makes men one and removes national prejudice. God forbid that any one of us will plan and devise to keep up separate interests. Nothing but the quick and powerful Word of God, working in the heart of His delegated messengers to give the knowledge of the glory of Christ, can gain victorious results, which are essential for the blending of hearts and minds, that they may be of the same judgment, speaking the same things.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 34

Our private conference ended, I went into the council, and resolutions were presented in reference to A. C. Bourdeau's removal into Italy. I presented some of the reasons I had given in the private council, why this change was advisable. These were well received. The decision was carried. Then came on the case of Brother Biglia. He was advised by the council not to confine his labors to Naples, but to go into new fields. I then stated that this was according to the mind of the Spirit of God for the workers to change from field to field, for should they be confined to one field, there would be danger of the work's being carried forward after one man's ideas. God would not have His church in any place to receive the mold of one man's mind, and He would not have His workers cherish the idea that no man can understand the situation of the church and do for them quite as well as himself.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 35

The Lord speaks to His delegated servants. He will give them the very message He wants them to have. The work of all bears the mark of imperfection. Self becomes interwoven more or less with the work. If the workers have weakness in some points of character, these defects are revealed and too often influence the people. Some cherish these weaknesses as a virtue, but another laborer coming into this field may be strong upon the very points where the other is weak, and he may be able to give a more perfect mold to the work. He presents new ideas and gives new impressions. The workers in any field must not become the people's pets, and idols, among the truth-believing people. One more council meeting is passed into eternity with its burden of record.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 36

September 24

I went into the early morning meeting. I engaged in prayer, and my burden was for a special blessing upon the laborers, that they might be fitted up for the great work before us. I bore my testimony in regard to coming up to our high privilege. I presented before them the words of Christ, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink," the promise is, "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." [John 7:37; 4:14.] I was afraid the meeting would close and we fail to receive all the good that the Lord has in store for us.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 37

I urged upon my brethren to make the most of the present opportunities, to exercise greater faith, that they would receive help and strength from the great Source of strength.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 38

I told them that they should be constantly guarded not to build up separate interests between the different nationalities. Some have pleaded that we must be very careful in our labor, for these people have peculiarities, and the truth must be presented to them with the greatest care. There is much more made of this than there should be. We have one Lord, one faith, one baptism. The gospel of Christ is to reach all classes, all nations, all tongues and people. The influence of the gospel is to unite in one great brotherhood. We have only one model to imitate, and that is Christ. Then we shall all be in perfect harmony; nationalities will blend in Jesus Christ, having the same mind, the same judgment, speaking the same things, and with one mouth glorifying God. This is the work the world's Redeemer is to do for us. If we accept the truth as it is in Jesus, national prejudices and jealousies will be broken down, and the spirit of truth will blend hearts in one. We will love as brethren; we will esteem others better than ourselves; we will be kind and courteous, meek and lowly, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 39

I warn my brethren, Keep your partition walls down. In all your efforts as God's workmen, "preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." Colossians 1:28. This can only be done by striving according to His working, which worketh in you mightily. God knows just how to meet the peculiarities of the different nationalities. Do not, my brethren, interpose yourselves between the work and God, for God knows better than you how to reach these men and women, and He will clothe His message to this people with that power which will reach their hearts and unite them with us in warning the world by giving the trumpet a certain sound. Men are not infallible, and we are not to bend to men's fallibility and human judgment. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 40

The third angel's message is infallible. It is to unite a people to do a special work, preparing them with perfection of character to unite in one great family in the mansions Christ has gone to prepare for those who love Him. And all the laborers are God's workmen to present infallible truth, to do the work of blending hearts in one. Never let your words or your efforts be directed to the end to disunite that which God would have united. You should influence France to work for the upbuilding of the cause in Switzerland. Do not encourage a one-sided interest, but all labor to cement together, that they may have a molding influence on one another; that if any of the nationalities are encouraging peculiar ideas, that one may have a reformatory influence upon the other. Urge upon all to receive Christ's mold and imitate Christ's character. The apostle states, "Ye are all one in Christ Jesus." [Galatians 3:28.] Christ in the German believer will recognize Christ in the French believer. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 41

"Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." 1 Corinthians 1:10. The truth will have the same molding influence upon hearts whatever their nationalities. Every human heart that accepts the truth will bow to the majesty of its sway; and when Christ is abiding in the heart by faith, they will be of one mind, for Christ is not divided. They will be strong in His strength, happy and united in His peace. The truth is the same in its subduing power upon all hearts. It will refine and ennoble the character of the receiver. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 42

This testimony was for the good of the people, especially for all the workers in this new field; but up jumps Daniel Bourdeau as though all I had said had been especially directed to him. He explained and justified and talked out his purpose and made public the matter which we were seeking to keep dark. All our efforts had been to establish confidence in Daniel and to encourage his heart to be a man. Up to this point he seemed to be doing nobly; but he had cherished the pet plan of keeping France and Italy an independent conference, and to have me thwart this plan was next to death to him. Now he becomes the subject of Satan's strong temptations. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 43

I had, during the meeting, spoken upon general principles, setting before our brethren the harm of long sermons and prayers, and loud talking, presenting to them the sure results of such a manner of labor. This he took all to himself. Now I had overturned his imaginary castle that he was building, and he acted as though he had received his death blow. He attended but a few meetings and was working himself up into a frenzy. He was packing up to go home Friday morning. I had no desire to talk with him. I felt discouraged in regard to his case. I had no hope of leading him to see the offensive character of his course before God. A. C. Bourdeau wished me to talk with his brother and try to help his mind, but I had no courage to say a word more to him. The Lord had been at work in the meetings. He gave me precious words to speak to the people day after day, not only to comfort, but to set before them the necessity of a radical change of heart, a transformation of character, that the laborers should go forth to their fields of labor imbued with the Spirit of Christ. I had treated Daniel tenderly, but the evil in the heart was not eradicated; it was only slumbering, ready to burst forth on the slightest provocation. That provocation had come, and now the results. We went along with the meetings, but Daniel entered no more into the spirit of them.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 44

September 25

I attended the early morning meeting. My soul seemed in an agony as I prayed to God for Him to work. I knew our case was urgent. The ministers were not having that work done for them that must be accomplished before the Lord would work with any power. I felt that my prayer was heard, that the answer would come. Daniel was absent, taking counsel with Daniel and the adversary of souls. He was determined to go back to Geneva. His wife wept and implored him to stay. She said she could not go home with him in his state of mind. He said, "Well so be it; we can separate as well now as any other time." I was solicited to try to do something to help him.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 45

I prayed over the matter and felt a burden upon my soul to speak to him again. I had walked my room in an agony of mind, saying to myself, I cannot talk with him; I cannot meet his defiant, stubborn spirit. He was like a man bereft of his reason. He would talk all the time and while others were talking would break in upon them.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 46

I sent for him and his wife to come to my room. Brethren Whitney, A. C. Bourdeau, Brother Lane, and W. C. White were all that were present. I began in a very decided but solemn manner to address him. He said he would rather see me alone. He repeated what he had suffered at Battle Creek, and in Vermont, from the abuse of his brethren. I told him I wished him to be silent, that I had the word of the Lord for him.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 47

He became silent, and I gave such a message as I wish never to speak again to mortal man. I told him to look back upon his past life and see that when his track was crossed he had manifested the same spirit that now possessed him. It was the spirit of the devil to all intents and purposes; that I had no mild words to pet this demon racing within him, but I would combat it. I set before him his course—when he could not have his own way he was in a perfect frenzy. A man with as little self-control as he had was unfit to be entrusted with grave responsibilities in the work and cause of God. How could he expect his brethren would have unlimited confidence in him when he at times abandoned himself to be controlled by Satan's power? His only hope was in being a converted man through and through. I asked him what dependence we could place in him, if when his ideas were crossed the raging demon was aroused. I told him for his soul's sake not to leave the house until he was a converted man.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 48

He felt abused because he thought I had made remarks to hit him. I said, Let us look back over the few days that we have passed together in these precious meetings. The most urgent appeals have been made by the Spirit of God. The true Christian character has been presented again and again. The fulness of the blessings of the gospel of Christ has been presented to the people. No one could doubt but that the presence and power of God had been in our midst. Now after all these tokens of good from the Lord, because some ideas of yours are not received, you open the door of your heart to the devil, and let him control the citadel of the soul. We have dealt very tenderly with you. We have been dealing on general principles before the congregation, presenting the true Christian character.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 49

Some who had been teaching the truth to others needed to learn its first principles first themselves—mercy and the love of Jesus. Some who ought to be strong men in Christ as far as experience is concerned are weak as babies. Their age and experience, opportunities and privileges, should make them strong men under temptation, but their life and character reveal they are only children. Some come to this meeting with great self-confidence—firm to carry out their own ideas. Decided testimonies have been given to me to meet these cases. The arrows from the Lord's quiver wounded you. Why do you place yourself as a target, and then flutter as though wounded? Why not get out of my way, and let the testimony from God be set home by His Holy Spirit to hearts that need this? You get up and begin to excuse yourself, and justify yourself, thus exposing yourself to the congregation, saying to all, "Sister White means me, but all do not understand my case." You are, by this course, hedging up my way and hurting yourself.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 50

I remember in the Beethoven Hall in Portland, Maine, those who were looking for Christ's coming met there to preach the second advent. Upon one occasion the hall was crowded. No less than eight ministers were present, who were in opposition to the message given. Brother Edmunds arose and said, "We have a message from the Lord to the people, but when we proclaim it, lifting up our voice like a trumpet, to show the people their transgressions, and the house of Israel their sins, the ministers are offended, and say, 'You are abusing me.' They step in between us and the people and say, 'You are severe; you hit us.' But we say to the ministers, 'Stand aside from between us and the people, and let the sharp arrows of the Almighty reach the hearts of the people, and you will not then be hurt; but if you catch every arrow from the Lord's quiver, do not blame us. With tears I implore you to stand aside and let the warning voice arouse the people, that they may get ready for the great day of the Lord.'" 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 51

Daniel, we entreat of you to set your heart in order, that you will no longer be as a target continually being wounded. You have a determined will that is hard to bend. A few times in your life you have made a surrender to God, and you need to make that surrender again. Whenever your ideas are crossed, however perverted, then you lose that self-control so elevated and noble in the Christian character; you become untamable, unreasonable; your self-love and independence become so strong there is not one in your house or in connection with you who does not feel your presence and arbitrary power that will permit no liberty of conscience. By this course, you alienate your brethren and even your own kindred from you. You force them to take a position at variance with you, and then you feel that they abuse you. Your own course pursued brought around these results. Your brethren saw these defects, that should you carry out your mind the results would be disastrous to the cause of God. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 52

Now consider how many times Jesus has forgiven you and taken His wilful and rebellious child back to His arms. He has pitied and forgiven you the heavy debt you owed to Him, and yet notwithstanding this amazing love exercised toward you, you go forth like a debtor presented in the Scriptures whom God forgave an enormous debt, but who found one of his fellow servants which owed him a few pence and he laid hands on him and “took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest, and thrust him into prison till he should pay the debt.” [Matthew 18:27-30.] 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 53

For you to pursue a course similar to this, Daniel, is poor policy. God in mercy has forgiven you great sins, and your brethren, whom you grieve and afflict with your wrong, who have studied and planned how to help you—if their decisions and plans injured your dignity, you have held them to strict account. You will relate your grievances while you have no just sense of your own wrongs which led to the necessity of the action of your brethren in your case. Unless you are a thoroughly converted man before you leave this house, I believe the Spirit of God will never make another appeal to you. It is life or death with you. You will surely be stricken down with paralysis, or the devil will drive you to suicide. I have, in the messages hitherto borne to you, tried to establish you in the confidence of your brethren; to strengthen and settle you; but if you leave this house with the devil as your counselor, you are a lost man. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 54

I have not in this message any comfort to give to Satan. The arrows of the Almighty must wound you so sorely that you will feel that you need a physician. “I have torn,” saith God, “and I will heal; I have smitten and I will bind you up.” [Hosea 6:1.] When you come, meek and lowly, then Jesus will pardon your transgressions. I charge you not to leave this house till the power of the enemy is broken. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 55

We then knelt in prayer; my soul was drawn out in an agony for Daniel Bourdeau. He prayed for himself rather faintly. I prayed again and again, with strong crying and tears, for God to cast out the devil. Brother A. C. and Marian his wife prayed with great brokenness of spirit. A terrible struggle was going on with Daniel. He did not fully surrender, but his face looked as though soul and body were rent asunder. He made concessions, but had not yet yielded. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 56

September 25

In the evening we had a ministers’ meeting. I had feared that Daniel would not be present, but he came into the meeting. I opened the meeting with prayer. The spirit of earnest intercession was upon me, and the power of God was in our midst. Daniel prayed after me. He began to break and confess; we had a remarkable meeting. All prayed with weeping and humiliation of soul and hearty confessions. I told them all that the object of our assembling together was to seek the Lord. I told them I was alarmed that at this late stage of the meeting, being Friday, that Satan was developing his power, he was stronger than they. We must have more than human help; we must seek God unitedly; and with strong faith claim His grace and strength to help us just now. Brother Vuilleumier offered a most earnest prayer. I could not understand a word of it, being in French, but the Spirit of the Lord pervaded the meeting. Brother Matteson's prayer was full of the Spirit. All seemed to humble themselves before God. Brother Andrews began to feel and confess his coldness and to plead with God for help. Brother Wilcox began to throw his heart into the work. The council had advised his stay another year in England. This seemed to take life and soul out of him, and he took to his bed. He was quite sick for three days. He has a hard battle to fight. He needs a great work done for him before he can be a true missionary. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 57

Light, precious light, was breaking in. My peace was like a river; Jesus was very near to me. How full of light and love, to impart to all who diligently seek Him! This was indeed a precious season to our souls. 4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 58

September 26 was set apart as a season for fasting and prayer. I slept but little Friday night, but went into the ministers' meeting in the morning. I opened the meeting with prayer; the Lord poured upon me the spirit of supplication for my ministering brethren. Angels of God were in the building. Daniel broke out in most urgent prayer. He confessed and confessed and pleaded for the forgiveness of God. Prayers and tears were mingled together. It was a most precious season. I bore a message with many tears, stating the solemn work of the watchmen and the necessity of faithfulness. The power of God rested upon me and upon those who heard. I never heard Brother Matteson talk as he did in that meeting. He seemed so humble, and his face shone with spiritual light. Every testimony was borne with deepest feeling. The crust over Elder Andrews is breaking. Daniel made a good confession in every way.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 59

What a precious meeting this was to us all. The Lord's presence was in the meeting and His power to bless. This has been a season of taxing labor to me, but the Lord has given me strength for my day. Daniel says he is now going to cease building up himself, and propping up Daniel Bourdeau, and pouring over his past difficulties. He says he never loved his brethren as now. He is going to talk faith and hope and courage, and be a strong man for God. May the Lord give him might in the inner man! He says the peace of God is in his heart.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 60

Yours in the work.4LtMs, Lt 23, 1885, par. 61

Lt 24, 1885

Bourdeau, Daniel

Basel, Switzerland

November 23, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in 8MR 106-107.

Dear Brother Daniel:

Elder Whitney has read to me your letters to him, and I have also read your letter to me; and as it is not thought consistent to go by Geneva [Genoa?], Italy, I will write you a few lines.⁴*LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 1*

Elder W read to me the matter you had written for a tract or publication to come to the public to notify them of your meetings.⁴*LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 2*

Now, my dear Brother Daniel, I think it would not leave the best influence upon the people for you to advertize in this manner. Although we are not to be ashamed of our nationality, as Brother Loughborough and some others have appeared to be, in that they have sought to imitate the customs and blend with the peculiarities of the nations where and for whom they labor, thinking this would give them influence with the people, yet we must also consider in what matter we shall best introduce ourselves to the people with the object of gaining their confidence and engaging their attention.⁴*LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 3*

I have been shown that we need to move with the greatest wisdom, that we shall not in anything create prejudice by giving the impression that Americans feel themselves superior to people of other nations. There have been two errors—one error in seeking in our words and actions to exalt foreign national customs above our own American habits and practices, and suiting our American stamp to adapt it to foreign countries which will bring us no influence. Then there has been still another error of extolling in conversation and in the labor for souls American practices as far above those of other nations. We need to be constantly guarded and on every point. The religion of these nations they think superior to all others and are exceedingly jealous on this point. They send their missionaries to the uncivilized heathen; and to bear on the front in our approach to them that we are sent to this country from America as missionaries will create the suspicion and jealousy at once that [they] are regarded as heathen. It is a fact that we are missionaries and they are worse than heathen, but it will not answer to tell them so. This is missionary ground; we are doing missionary work, but the peculiar prejudice will be stirred against us if we put it just as it truly is. 4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 4

Now, my brother, I think it would be better if you did not put before the people so distinctly that you are an American and a missionary. I do not think it wise to present the sayings of men in reference to our own capabilities. Let nothing appear before angels or men savoring of self-exaltation, elevating yourself, that you are a smart man or a great man, and quote not the praises of men. But just go to work in the fear of God. Make no great spread, but keep self out of sight and let Jesus appear and commence in a humble manner. It is not best to arouse in this country and in such a place as Geneva the special attention of the clergy. If you enter large halls and then have to come down to the smaller buildings, it will not have the best influence. It would be best to take the lowly seat and then come up higher. 4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 5

The devil will outgeneral every effort we may as a people make if we do not exercise great wisdom. The course you propose would work more successfully in England than in this country; but the more success would, we think, from the light given, attend such an effort made in England as we think would be best in starting the work in Geneva. The more you make a big stir, the greater will be the pressure brought upon you and the people, to hedge up your way. The more gently you work in seeking to reach the people, the less prejudice will be aroused against you and your work to prevent the people from coming out to hear you. You want notices, but nothing of the kind to puff and to exalt yourself and call attention to the man which will be calculated to call out the bitterest opposition from men who consider themselves to be great teachers and who will feel that their rights and their dignity are invaded. You can come before the people as an evangelist to open the Word of God to them. And the truth presented will be new and singular and startling. These will speak for themselves and begin to work like leaven; and then as you shall find access to the people in a limited degree, the way is still open to make advance moves and still broader efforts; whereas, if the prejudice is aroused at once, the people will be warned, lies will be circulated and decisions be made against any effort you may make before the people really know what doctrine you are advocating. You will have the bitterest opposition from the scribes and Pharisees who are ignorant of the Scriptures and the power of God.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 6

I do not think you ought to ever commence an effort alone. You should have, I think, Brother Ertzenberger or your brother to work with you; and then, do not do all the labor yourself. Divide the labor equally. Brother Ertzenberger is the only one who seems now prepared to help you, for there is a dearth of ministers. But one man alone ought not to commence the work, depending on one man to do the preaching. The work should not bear the mold of one man's mind; there should be two at least to engage in the work of preaching, even if you think you can do better preaching. Others may not feel as you do about it. You have in every effort you have made overdone, overtaxed your physical powers, and weakened yourself. When you had men who could help you, you felt as though you must do it all, and this is not right for you [to] overdo. You have talked too long and too frequently. You have ability; and if you use this ability prudently, you may do mighty strokes for God in advocating the truth. But when you become wearied, you fail in many ways. You become nervous and unbalanced. In such a place as Geneva, you need constantly to keep a reserve power in a rested condition, that when the enemies of truth shall attack, you may calmly and intelligently and in the strength of God work valiantly in standing in defense of the faith.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par.

7

You must not do all the preaching yourself, but a change of labor, a change of gifts, is often more profitable for the people. Where one would fail to reach some souls, the co-laborers may succeed. When you become worn, Satan knows it and he has fitted himself to work, at this very time, with peculiar temptations; and if yourself is attacked, then you will be very sensitive and not be inclined to pass right along without noticing the slime of Satan, preaching the truth; but you will be desirous to set yourself right, to make the matter sure that you have been abused, that you overdo the matter and hurt your influence. Your work is not to vindicate yourself and to answer charges against yourself or us. I was shown that one great hindrance in your work [is] that you overdo in much writing. Every impulse and suggestion you must not think must be written out. When you are making a public effort, the more you speak upon the truth, the more earnest and intense become your feelings until you are like a man intoxicated. You do not hold the rising of self-control firmly. Your feelings run away with you, and you are not balanced with reason and discretion and good judgment. You do double work because your interest and feelings urge you forward; your brain becomes taxed. Satan knows then how to arrange matters to make circumstances so that you will appear your worst, and you are in danger of counteracting the good that you have done. All your powers are needed evenly balanced to do necessary labor at the right time. 4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 8

Elder Sanborn is an excellent preacher, but he doesn't know how to bring the people to a decision at the right time. God has made you successful where he fails. You can with the blessing of God plant the feet of those who are in the valley of decision upon the solid rock. Now, my brother, if you become overworked and your physical and mental powers exhausted, this very important work will not be done as it would be if you had worked prudently, not following impulse, but principle and reason. You want a reserve force to draw upon in an emergency that the binding off of your work shall be most thorough and complete. 4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 9

My brother, you have asked me for my judgment. I have given it to you. You are God's ambassador, not your own servant to use your powers unwisely as you please. You must practice temperance in all things, in preaching, and praying and writing for your salvation; soul and body depends upon the wise use of your powers. You feel inclined to write, and it is a tax to your mental powers. You should not write one-half the amount you do. Let your brain have some chance to rest. Exercise physically in some way, but this constant writing God does not require of you. Take time to enjoy your family.

Be cheerful, be happy, and throw off care and do not talk of trials or of yourself, but forget yourself all you can. As soon as you center your thoughts on yourself, you are a weak man and you expose your weakness to others. In regard to the halls you mentioned, I advise you to get the one you mentioned which seats 120 persons. Then your proposition to pray short is good, for long prayers frequently destroy the interest of the people before the first note of the discourse is struck and draws upon the strength of the preacher.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 10

I believe the Lord will help you; but do not do all the work of speaking yourself. Let there be another to unite with you. And you had better have less writing and speak less; and when you do speak, be in a condition to do justice to your work, than to speak double the number of times and have it less able and clear and forcible.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 11

May the Lord help you and strengthen and bless you greatly is my most earnest wish and humble prayer.4LtMs, Lt 24, 1885, par. 12

Lt 25, 1885

Vaucher, Jules Alfred

Geneva, Switzerland

December 16, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in LYL 47-48; 8MR 429-430.

Dear Friend:

I understand that you have desired to have my judgment in regard to matters that trouble you in reference to marriage with Brother Vuilleumier's daughter. I understand that the father of the one upon whom you have placed your affections is not willing that his daughter should connect with you in marriage. While I would feel due sympathy for you because of your disappointment, I would say that who should feel interested in his own child more than her own father; and also her mother? The very fact of your urgency of this matter against the wishes of the parents is evidence that the Spirit of God has not the first place in your heart and a controlling power upon your life. You have a strong will, a firm, persistent determination to carry out anything you have entered upon. 4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 1

Will my brother please look to his own spirit and criticize his motives and see if he has a single eye in this matter to act in all things for the glory of God? I was shown the cases of several in Switzerland who were very much exercised upon the subject of marriage, that they had their minds so fully engrossed with this subject that they were disqualifying themselves to do the work God would have them to do. Some of these were in Basel, but not all. There were several in other places. From what I learn of your case, you must be one of these, for one was presented before me who would not submit to any objections to his marriage. He was a young man of determined will, but this persistency of will he interpreted as an evidence that his plans and purposes were right when he was deceived in himself. 4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 2

Now, my brother, will you show that you want your will to be in subjection to the will of God? I have been shown that in these last days there was a great desire in the minds of youth to marry, and it was the case that many of these marriages were instigated by the enemy. There is a bewitching power in the subject of marriage, and I was shown that many become bewildered and think it the very attainment of bliss to enter the marriage relation; but it is far from this as time has proved, for both have become dwarfed in spiritual things and have proved that in the place of helping one another they were great hindrances to each other. There was a young man shown me who was seeking to become one of the family of Bro. Albert Vuilleumier whom he did not seem to accept. He was in great trial and worriment of mind. I cannot but think this applies to you. This brother was not fitted in any sense to take the responsibilities of a husband or of a family, and should the union be formed now there would be great unhappiness as the result. The young man was not prepared for the marriage life in any way, and it was a snare of the enemy to bring him into a position of desperation where his strong will would assume control that would not submit to any reason.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 3

Now, my brother, my advice is for you [to] give your mind and affections to God and lay yourself on the altar of God. Gird up the loins of your mind, for unless yourself and some others shall come into a more yielding, teachable frame of mind on this subject, you will be unfitted for the work of God.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 4

There is the fifth commandment that must be respected, and had this commandment been more respected than it has been—had children been obedient to their parents and thus honored them—how much suffering and misery would have been spared! The inexperienced child cannot discern what is for her best good and how to wisely choose a companion that will make her life pleasant and happy; and an unhappy marriage is the greatest calamity that can befall both parties.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 5

But we are living in the last days. Christ is soon to come; and in the place of the workers' having their minds absorbed with the question of marriage, they had better be studying to show themselves approved unto God, workmen that God shall bless and God shall make a channel of light. If the truth has a sanctifying power upon the life and character, the minds will not be so fully and entirely taken up with one [another] that it will be next to death to separate their affections. God wants your affections. God wants all that there is of you. Will my brother closely examine his heart and see whether he is in the love of God or not? Will he see what feelings are arising there against Bro. Albert Vuilleumier because he cannot bring his mind to consent to there being a union between you and his daughter? If you were indeed learning in the school of Christ to wear His yoke, to lift His burdens, to learn of Jesus' meekness and lowliness of heart, you would not urge your will and your wishes so persistently.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 6

Now, my brother, there were several shown me in this continent who were not in a position to do all that good that they might do in the capacity of laborers. There has been a spirit of criticism cherished. In the place of winning souls they would drive them. Some who had made a great mistake in their labors, they were very narrow in their ideas. They felt that it was their privilege to be conscience for others. They must make a raid against dress and would take on great burdens in reference to the dress of the sisters. They felt it their duty to tell them how to dress. These men were not, while doing this, actuated by the Spirit of God, but they were prompted by their own spirit—traits of character which must be overcome in the place of ruling and becoming a power in the church. I think you are one of this class who, had you a wife, would want that she should lose her identity in you—you prescribe for her what she should wear, what she should do, and you would leave her no liberty of conscience. You would be dictatorial, overbearing, and crush out individual independence.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 7

Will you please to look carefully into your own heart, for if you see aright you will see that the love of Jesus has but a little place in your heart. There is much I could say more upon this important subject, but I will address a few more words to you and leave the matter at this time.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 8

I advise you to humble your heart before God and put away your own will and leave yourself in the hands of God, feeling that if it is right and in accordance with the will of God, then you would move forward in the matter of marriage; if it is not the will of God, you do not wish to take this step. Then just leave this matter for the Lord to manage. Do not unfit yourself through your strong will to carry your points at all hazards. Stop where you are and inquire, What is the spirit that controls me? And then inquire whether, with your present strong, untamable spirit, you would be a man to make any woman happy, whether you would be fit for the kingdom of heaven. Are you loving God with all your heart? Are you loving your neighbor as yourself?4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 9

The very first duty that rests upon Bro. Vuilleumier's daughter is to obey her parents, to honor her father and her mother. This she can do if you will not keep her mind in a state so unsettled that she cannot do her duty to her parents. The mother needs the help of her child; and when she will become a few years older, then she will understand better how to choose a husband that will make her life smooth and happy. A woman that will submit to be ever dictated to in the smallest matters of domestic life, who will yield up her identity, will never be of much use or blessing in the world and will not answer the purpose of God in her existence. She is a mere machine to be guided by another's will and another's mind. God has given each one, men and women, an identity, an individuality, that they must act in the fear of God for themselves.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 10

I would advise Sister Vuilleumier to claim the privilege of her daughter's services as due her as long as she feels it for her own and her daughter's interest. This is the mother's duty to sacredly guard the future happiness of her beloved child. If she feels that a marriage is to be contracted that would not be for the welfare and happiness of her loved one, it is her privilege to say whom she would not have her daughter connected with; and it is her daughter's duty to obey. This is God's plan and should be carried out to the letter. There are so many unhappy marriages, can we be surprised that parents are cautious and want to guard their children from any connection which may not be wise and best?4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 11

Will you, my brother, show more devotion to God, more earnestness in His service, more of the love of Jesus, less of criticism, greater kindness, pity, and love, and labor earnestly for the future, immortal life.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 12

With love to your soul, I remain,4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 13

Your Sister in Christ.4LtMs, Lt 25, 1885, par. 14

Lt 26, 1885

NA

Basel, Switzerland

December 24, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in EGWE 89.

This morning Sr. Edith Andrews fell asleep about half-past five o'clock. Her last hours were without a struggle. She had suffered considerable pain in her left lung up to the time I came from Italy, one week ago last Thursday. I visited her last Friday, and she talked very freely with me. Said she had read and reread the testimony for her, and she had made every effort in her power to correct every wrong in her course with others. She said sometimes she felt the blessing of the Lord, and then again she thought she had done so wrong the Lord would not accept her as His child. She wanted to know if I thought the Lord would forgive her. I assured her that He would, that He had pledged His word that He would pardon every transgression, if we would only return unto Him with true repentance and contrition of soul. I believe, Edith, you have done this; and wherein you are too feeble to do the work as thoroughly as if you were well, Jesus' precious mercy and merits supply the deficiencies on the part of His repenting, humble ones who seek to take hold of His strength. 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 1

In this feebleness, I presented before her the words of promise from God. "And the Lord passed by before him, and proclaimed, The Lord, The Lord God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin." Exodus 34:6, 7. Thus God has proclaimed His character Himself. Will you, my dear child, believe Him? What sins can be too great for Him to pardon? Every soul is precious in His sight. He is merciful, infinitely more willing to pardon than condemn. He is gracious. He is touched with the feelings of your infirmities. He knows your weakness. It would have been much better had you obtained the experience of becoming acquainted with God when in strength; then you would have been able to trust Him fully whom you had proved; but you have made your best efforts, and now Christ stands ready to supply where you lack. His merits will be imputed to you; His boundless goodness will heal your backslidings, and He will accept today the best you have to give, and He will love and bless you. "He is longsuffering, not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance." [2 Peter 3:9.] "He doth not willingly afflict or grieve the children of men." [Lamentations 3:33.] He suffereth long and is kind. His love is without a parallel. He is slow to anger and of great kindness. He has waited and waited for you to give Him your affections, an undivided heart. God will never leave nor forsake one penitent soul that looks to Him in faith. 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 2

You can show honor to God by believing fully in the merits of Jesus Christ. We have a Saviour that can save to the uttermost all who come unto Him. He did not leave a sinking, doubting Peter to perish. The hand thrown up in appeal to Jesus with the prayer, "save, Lord, or I perish," was immediately responded to. [Matthew 14:30, 31.] He did save him fully. He will save you because you ask Him in faith. 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 3

I cannot express the comfort these words brought to Edith. The tears came from her eyes and dropped from her cheeks while she looked so peaceful and at rest. She said, "I believe He accepts me. I believe He loves me, and I, all undeserving, have His peace." 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 4

I prayed with her. She was blessed and relieved of pain in her left lung, and it did not return. Again she was comforted and had no more afflicting doubts. While praying, I felt that Jesus came very near to us. I felt the assurance that Jesus did pardon her transgressions. All present were melted into tears. Our hearts were filled with peace and love to Jesus. Edith had no more trouble of mind, for she knew the Lord blessed her then in answer to prayer. 4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 5

Sunday I was called to her bedside in the early morning. She was greatly distressed for breath. She gasped out, "Sr. White, pray for me." I dropped upon my knees and poured out my soul before God with strong crying and tears. The Lord heard, the Lord answered, relief came, and Edith responded quite strong and heartily, and at the close praised God. Bro. and Sr. Whitney followed in prayer. We felt that Jesus' presence was in the room, saying, "Peace be unto you." Our hearts were filled with joy, comfort, and love. How precious was Jesus to us in this trying hour. Edith had the evidence as she has never had it before, that Jesus loved and blessed her. I talked with her some and told her that she need not feel that she must have her mind laboring and strained in her feebleness, but when tempted by the enemy, that Jesus will not save her such a sinner, as she had often expressed to me; but all she had to do was to look and live. Say to Satan, "Jesus is my Saviour, He has bought me by His precious blood. Jesus, 'simply to Thy cross I cling.'" She seemed comforted, relieved, blessed. She thanked me that I had prayed with her and comforted her.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 6

She said, "I have no longer any fears. I am willing to go. Hope thou, O my soul, in the Lord. I am trusting in Jesus, no longer in myself." Words came to me so encouraging to speak to the afflicted one, telling Jesus who had passed through death and brightened the portals of the tomb, that when Jesus, the Life Giver should come in His glory, He would call up His faithful believing ones to a glorious immortality. You may say, Edith, "I commit the keeping of my soul to God as unto a faithful Creator."4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 7

At night I was called again. She was supported by Bro. Whitney while strangling for breath. Every breath was an agony. I dropped on my knees and again besought my heavenly Father to give Edith relief from this terrible distress. Our prayers were heard, relief came. Said she, "Praise the Lord, He has heard prayer. I feel so much better."4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 8

Again I pointed her to the strong helper, the precious Saviour, and she felt the assurance of His love. Said she, "Oh, how good is the Lord, He loves me, even me. O I thank you Sr. White, I thank you; you have comforted me, and the Lord has blessed me." The Lord gave me words to speak to Edith, and I felt indeed that angels of God were round about the child. For two days she has not seemed to have a clear mind, but has not suffered much except with restlessness, until she fell asleep in Jesus this morning, half-past five o'clock.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 9

There was also another death last evening. Sr. Keller was expecting to attend the missionary meeting, and was copying her missionary letter, when she said, "My head pains me." Her daughter went to lay down the little child she was holding, and when she got back her mother's head was bowed upon the table—she was dead.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 10

We feel that we are admonished to be ready, for our probation may close when we least expect it. I had great comfort in telling Edith of Jesus, who is the Life Giver. She at the edge of the grave, I could in all faith tell her of Him who is the resurrection and the life of the soul and the body. That those who sleep in Jesus, will He bring with Him from their graves. The light of Jesus irradiates the grave and lights the beyond with its blessed rays. Edith was not afraid to die.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 11

Let us be making our preparation for heaven.4LtMs, Lt 26, 1885, par. 12

Lt 27, 1885

Smith, Uriah

Refiled as Lt 92a, 1886.

Lt 28, 1885

Walling, Addie

Christiania, Norway

November 3, 1885

This letter is published in entirety in DG 159-160.

[To Addie Walling:]

Brother Whitney returns today on his way to Basel, Switzerland. Edith Andrews is steadily failing. I think this climate is better than Basel for my lungs. There has been much labor brought upon me through the love-sick sentimentalism of the workers in the office. I hope, my dear girl, you will keep free this. You will gain the confidence of all whom you respect if you are reserved and do not encourage the attentions and the society of young men. If I had time, I would write you some things I have had to meet here and in every place where I have been. Edith, poor child, is not fit to die. She has attracted attention to herself and had a few favorites and neglected those who were worthy and good because they did not just meet her taste. These few she lavished her affections upon—thought her perfection, and have petted her, and she petted them and idolized one another. So, you see, God was left out of the question. This sentimentalism has injured the usefulness of excellent young men in the office and unfitted young girls for their work.⁴*LtMs, Lt 28, 1885, par. 1*

I talked very plainly with Edith, and she does not seem to sense her condition. I have written to her, and I think she will now see her mistakes. She has had no experience in genuine religion, but has everything to do now in her feeble condition to know Christ and the power of His grace. O that she had learned this while in health. I do hope you will not be deceived, Addie, as this poor child is. I hope you will be an earnest, true Christian day by day, seeking God in prayer. Do not be so busy you cannot give time to read the Bible and seek the grace of God in humble prayer. Follow no one's example or custom in dress or in actions. If they lead to indifference and worldliness, do not express vanity in dress, but dress becomingly, neatly; but seek earnestly to be meek and lowly of heart and be obtaining a rich experience in the things of God. Learn to overcome vanity which exists in the heart that is not sanctified through the truth. Do not be forward, but be retiring and modest. You will now be by many looked to and criticized to see how you will come forth from Sister's White's teachings. Do not misrepresent me, but seek to give influence by your course of action. Ever be true, open, sincere, and frank. All affectation despise. Keep yourself aloof from young men. Let them know that there is one girl who will not be crazy and bewildered at their first notice and attentions. I want you to be prepared to travel with me and help me, if I want you.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1885, par. 2

You see those who have married cease their improvement and settle down to a dwarfed life. Be not afraid to tell me your whole mind and to seek counsel, and I will give you all the help I can. But above everything else, preserve self-control and a self-possession and womanly ways without appearing to know everything. Do not claim to know too much. Be modest in conversation, for people will be disgusted if a young girl talks as if she knew a great deal. You may evidence your wisdom by works, but do not do this by words and self-praise. Be cautious, discreet, and humble.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1885, par. 3

We want to learn daily in the school of Christ. Now, my dear daughter, I have written you much more than I expected to write, but I may not get a chance to write very soon again.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1885, par. 4

I am glad you do not live in Italy, at least in this valley, for women and girls have a hard lot. They work very hard, and fourteen hours per day, and obtain less than twenty cents per day. We need missionaries all through this valley. There are men who live high, who are paid as missionaries, but who do nothing in missionary work. They eat and drink and have a good time. They are supported by societies from England.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1885, par. 5

Yours, Aunt Ellen.4LtMs, Lt 28, 1885, par. 6

Lt 29, 1885

White, W. C.

[St. Helena,] California

February 15, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Willie:

Your letter was received evening after the Sabbath. I spoke to the fifty assembled with great freedom. D. Ely was present. We had a social meeting. There very much needs work to be done.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1885, par. 1

Willie, Brother Staines had better come to Oakland. His cough is a dry, congestive cough. He says he feels relieved as soon as he gets down to the valley; can breathe much better. Had he better try it at Healdsburg or Oakland at once? He wants me to say to you that he cannot be depended on to do any work, and much needs to be done just now. I asked him if it were too much to take care of the horses. He thinks he could just feed them and hitch them up if it were not for cleaning them off. The dust is injurious to his lungs. His cough is hard and dry.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1885, par. 2

Today I will go to Healdsburg. Think I may come down to Oakland before I return. I think in about a week I will go on that tour you mentioned, to Fresno. Received a letter from Elder Ings. He says that you have written for him to go to Nevada. I fear that it is too cold and windy for him there, and he has rheumatism. But if I go to Fresno, then there is work he can do in connection with Elder Daniels and self. Had I better visit Woodland before going to Fresno? I half decided to go to Oakland today, but will write instead.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1885, par. 3

I am sleeping better; am improving in health I think.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1885, par. 4

Brother Staines cannot live in this high altitude. His heart and lungs are congested. He is exhausted. Sanford and Jenny are very clever. He does not appear to think of going to Oakland. All his plans about his place is to stay. He is improving all the time. You did not say one word about whether he was to go to Oakland or not.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1885, par. 5

There ought to be one sound man on this place—no more sick, debilitated ones. It needs a full man and needs him now. Brother Staines told me last night that Brethren Pratt and Atwood say they have received letters from two or three parties who wish to come. We cannot depend upon Sister Staines to do much. Her little girl is a pet—noisy, ill-mannered, unrestrained—and if Brother Staines is so feeble that he can do nothing here, the sooner a good man can come the better. This is no place for any half men, broken down by overwork. He says he felt strong in Oakland, but like a wilted rag here. He goes to drive the team for us today to Healdsburg. He seems very desirous to go, or I would not admit it. Love to all.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1885, par. 6

Mother.

There is an earnest desire for me to speak Sunday and circulate the appointment. Many outsiders desire to come in and hear me. I think where our institutions are located, missionary work should be done and circulars distributed.4LtMs, Lt 29, 1885, par. 7

Lt 30, 1885

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Healdsburg, California

February 16, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Children:

I received Willie's letter before leaving St. Helena and answered it immediately. I am becoming more rested and conclude my wisest plan is to go back to St. Helena with Brother and Sister Lockwood, start them in housekeeping, tell them the work I want done and the best way to do it, and then when you come return here to Healdsburg. Then Marian and I will make all we can of the time left us before you start for Europe. I am glad Mary is coming. I think Sister Place will be ready to come back to Oakland by that time. Our family will be small, and we would be very glad to have Mrs. Mary White and the little Miss White as our guests⁴*LtMs, Lt 30, 1885, par. 1*

I have prayed the Lord to show me my duty in regard to going to Europe, but get no positive light. I cannot consent to go without it. If I should go, Mary White must go with me. But I see not my duty in that direction.⁴*LtMs, Lt 30, 1885, par. 2*

Brother Staines came down with us. He seems to breathe better as soon as he strikes the valley. He enjoyed the journey yesterday. The horses were as gentle as they need to be. I had thought of coming to Oakland, but think of nothing special to come for, therefore shall give it up unless you shall telegraph me to come for some special object. I will go back to St. Helena Wednesday. There are things that will keep me here till then.⁴*LtMs, Lt 30, 1885, par. 3*

Brother Decker was most sorry I came down from St. Helena, as he was coming up today to see me. Brother Mills was to bring him. Well, I am fully determined to do what I can of my writing. My eyes have been too painful to do much while I have been gone.⁴*LtMs, Lt*

30, 1885, par. 4

Write me here as soon as you receive this before it goes out of your hand.4LtMs, Lt 30, 1885, par. 5

Mother.

What about Chicago property? What about Sister Mills? Let me know at once, for I ought to write to Brother Starr.4LtMs, Lt 30, 1885, par. 6

Lt 31, 1885

White, W. C.; White, Mary

Healdsburg, California

February 17, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Children, Willie and Mary:

Yesterday I received a draft from Smouse for $800 (eight hundred dollars). What had I better do with it? Use it to do something for Health Retreat? Let me know. Send word to St. Helena, Crystal Springs. I think now that something ought to be done there.4LtMs, Lt 31, 1885, par. 1

Brother Staines feels more cheerful. He has felt, he told us, very lonely at the Health Retreat, as though he were watched and disliked because he wanted to keep the institute things together.4LtMs, Lt 31, 1885, par. 2

Will you tell me how many tools were purchased with my money? All that is credited to me by Brother Rogers is one axe and one wheelbarrow which has been common property. All who live there just feel that the institute must carry them. Well, something must be done to set things right. While Brother Staines stays, he should have words spoken, giving him some authority to speak and act. Now Brother Hicks comes to the barn; no one was there, but he takes a bag of feed to his home. Brother Staines asked him why he did so. Well, he said he was out; he must have some, and he took it. Brother Staines sent down to Vallejo to get this feed fifty cents cheaper than at St. Helena. He told him he must replace it.4LtMs, Lt 31, 1885, par. 3

There is such carelessness—borrowing and carrying away tools without saying, May I have them? The families of St. Johns are expecting to be carried, accommodated in all things by the Health Retreat. This is not right. I do hope Brother Staines will try it a little longer and will be able to stay, but at all events Henry Wallace is needed just now to work with him. Can write no more.4LtMs, Lt 31, 1885, par. 4

Mother.

Write me at once. Tomorrow we go to Health Retreat.4LtMs, Lt 31, 1885, par. 5

Lt 32, 1885

White, W. C.

“Crystal Springs,” St. Helena, California

February 19, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Son Willie:

We came here all safely. Brother and Sister Lockwood are in my house and well pleased with the place. They enjoyed the journey much. When Mary and you come to Oakland, set up a bed in the parlor and take all the comfort you can.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par. 1

Brother Staines is poorly. He says he cannot even lift a trunk. He should not have even the care of the horses further than to feed and drive them a short distance. What will be done in his case I cannot tell. Poor man! We must have one full man on this hill, and we cannot do without such a man. Delay in this matter is time lost.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par. 2

Whitman, who was at the office, came to me for advice and work. I set him papering and painting the house. Then we can see his worth and treat him accordingly.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par. 3

I hoped you would receive my letters from here and Healdsburg in time to answer them, but was disappointed to receive not a line when I returned here. I enjoy being here very much and shall improve in health I am sure.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par. 4

I think Brother Staines will have to go into the valley. He enjoyed riding, but is not strong enough to endure long rides. Take these things into consideration, and do write something at once. I have not received a line from Sister Scott in answer to my letter.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par. 5

It rained yesterday, but we were not the sufferers from rain. It is beautiful today—cool and clear and bright.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par.

Will you write me whether Wallace can come here? No half man or broken-down man is wanted, for we have an abundant supply. Get one able-bodied man on this place at once. I shall send for someone myself and pay him myself if you do not get round and do something in this direction. Brother Staines is not able to do that which is essential on this hill, not by a great deal. If he were not a broken-down man, he could do something. He can go to Oakland and try it there. If he is better, he can have that job on 38th Street to do. Brother Lockwood will find all he can attend to here and wants to stay here.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par. 7

Love to all.4LtMs, Lt 32, 1885, par. 8

Mother.

Lt 33, 1885

White, W. C.

St. Helena, California

February 20, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Willie:

I have a draft of eight hundred dollars. I want you to sign your name to the notes, with my name, and return them to Smouse. They were left at Healdsburg. I will have the notes sent to me, sign my name, then send to you for your name, and you send them on to Smouse.4LtMs, Lt 33, 1885, par. 1

Now I want a draft of one hundred and fifty dollars. I have purchased a horse, a traveler, on condition that if it does not please me, Lockwood will take it. Sanford Rogers had this trade nearly made one year ago. He wanted the horse for his own use, but could not raise the money. The owner asked $150 for it then. Sells it to me for $125. He has three other horses and has no use for this one. It is gentle but spirited, one of the swiftest travelers. He is not at all afraid of anything. The cars may come close to him, and he is perfectly calm.4LtMs, Lt 33, 1885, par. 2

We are getting settled nicely here. Of course, no carpets are down, no stove yet, but we get along and get something to eat. I wish you would send Wallace up here now. We want not a weak, feeble man, not a novice, but a man who can do something—one who can see what is to be done and do it. The hope of Brother Staines' doing anything here will prove a failure. If he were ever so well qualified, he has no strength; and the more of such ones are about an institution of this kind, the more unfavorable will be the impression made upon minds.4LtMs, Lt 33, 1885, par. 3

Brother Hicks is full of business. I have begged for Brother Roberson to do my work, such as digging, etc., until I hardly dare ask him again. I have eighteen nice trees from nursery to set today in the place of the ones that were not good. Brother Lockwood should not go into the hardest work, for he will soon fail if he does. I shall leave him Kit to use to plow with and dray out rocks. He feels pleased with the place and will do well here, I think. Rogers makes no calculation of leaving the hillside.4LtMs, Lt 33, 1885, par. 4

Sister Lockwood has a large pail with cans in it. She says send that separately, but I do not think that pail better be sent now unless made entirely safe. The bags contain spoons, knives, and forks which they need.4LtMs, Lt 33, 1885, par. 5

Lt 34, 1885

White, W. C.

St. Helena, California

February 22, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Son Willie:

I am going to the post office with my new horse. Brother Lockwood drives him. He is a fast traveler—just what I want now. We have been studying what to do to get all our horses home. If Lockwood goes, he must have some way to get back again. I just thought Mary, Elder Daniels, yourself, Miss Ella White, had better come here directly from Oakland and go over with us. Some things need your decision very much. If you have a spare boy around who wants to harden up, let him come and help Lockwood for cheap wages—rolling rocks for wall, clearing off brush, etc., etc.4LtMs, Lt 34, 1885, par. 1

Now I want you to be sure and come over. We have platform wagon and two horses to draw it. We have a firm, steady, splendid traveler that can take the platform wagon or phaeton. We have room for you all, plenty of room. The journey would be delightful to Mary, Elder Daniels, and yourself. Now tell me in your very next letter whether you will do this. If not, we shall have to invent some other plan. You can ride now with pleasure. We have no need of whip; let the lines lie perfectly loose. If we want a little quickening of speed, the slightest intimation will set his head up and he be off like a race horse. At the slightest word to stop, he obeys. Come, Willie, do come this time with Mary and Brother Daniels.4LtMs, Lt 34, 1885, par. 2

Willie, my proposition on second thought does not look as bright as when I wrote last, supposing I could not make sale of Rogers' place. I do not want to jump out of the frying pan into the fire. My place in Oakland now rents well. I want my plan carried out—the barn put on empty lot and made into a house. Brother Rogers charges too high for his place, and he will estimate mine just as low as possible. I will not make this trade unless you can see light in it. Please to write at once.4LtMs, Lt 34, 1885, par. 3

Mother.

Brother Lockwood and I have just returned from post office. Received your letter in regard to Brother Staines' coming to Oakland if he is able to work. He says he is feeling much better, but the work to be done here is of that kind he dare not do it; therefore he is doing nothing.4LtMs, Lt 34, 1885, par. 4

Your letter has decided me to go to Healdsburg and get where my writings are and get off this matter for Sketches, Vol. 4. She [Marian Davis?] says she has not the matter ready. We have not worked at it, but will take hold of it now at once. We can do this by going to Healdsburg. Will go there tomorrow. Not a man can be hired to do anything. All are in the vineyards. I got Brother Hicks to show Ransom how to set out fruit trees, by setting one, but Ransom cannot do hard work. I shall get the Wilkinson boy to come up and help Ransom for a month.4LtMs, Lt 34, 1885, par. 5

After talking over matters with Brother Lockwood and Marian, we decide not to go tomorrow. If you can come to St. Helena and drive my new horse over to Healdsburg, then Ransom will not need to go. Marian and Mary White, or Brother Daniels, can drive the old team, and you can drive the new horse. The difficulty is, how can Ransom get back if he drives the new horse Billy? Now to the point: Can you come to St. Helena? When can you come? If you cannot come at all, let me understand the matter at once. Telegraph to me tonight; and if you cannot come, we will devise some way to get our horses through. I dare not drive Billy horse now. He has not been hitched up since Christmas. He is perfectly gentle, but high of life.4LtMs, Lt 34, 1885, par. 6

I think now you understand the situation. If you do not come this way, we will go day after tomorrow. If you come, then let the telegram be sent to Brother Jack. We will call for it of him.4LtMs, Lt 34, 1885, par. 7

Mother.

Lt 35, 1885

White, W. C.

Gytteborg, Sweden

November 17, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 327-328.

Dear Son Willie:

We are one day's journey on our way to Basel. We could go no farther last night and stopped here at a good hotel. They had two beds in a small recess, but a good, large parlor. They brought in an iron bedstead that folds up, opened it, and made a bed on that for me. I took the two large pillows which you are acquainted with in the beds in Sweden and made me a good feather bed. Our large roll that you are so well acquainted with was checked, and we could not get it from the cars. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 1

I have arisen at half-past three. I have had a good bath, and now I am taking a little time to write to you. On the cars yesterday I felt just tired enough to sleep. We all four did good business at it, and when we had to change cars (for we were at the end of the road) I awoke first, and we but barely got our things out of the cars into the train we were to go on. Our people were so sleepy they seemed almost benumbed. The day was fine and the scenery resembled in some degree the roughness of California. It seemed that the land almost everywhere was nothing but high bluffs and rugged rocks. There were little patches of ground between the high bluffs that were made the most of by cultivation, as in Colorado. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 2

But you will be anxious to hear how our meetings came out. Sabbath I spoke to the people upon Joshua and the angel, and I think the minds of many were impressed. I spoke plainly in regard to the Sabbath and its importance as a part of the message. The house was full. Brother Hansen left as soon as I had done speaking. Brother Oyen in the afternoon read the message I had written, or a portion of it that had been translated, which was sixteen pages of that large foolscap. There was not time for many testimonies to be borne afterward. Brother Hansen made no response, but he sent word that he would be pleased to take me over the city on Sunday forenoon, and I responded that I would be pleased to go. He showed me every attention, and I managed to bring in again the vexed question of the Sabbath. He said he meant to get round to change his position just as soon as he could, and we had a very pleasant social time. He sat in the carriage where Sara generally sits. Annie sat beside him to interpret. He said if I would promise to come next spring he would make extra efforts to learn to talk and to understand English. I told him I thought without a doubt I would come. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 3

In the afternoon I was to speak to the church at three o'clock, and the congregation was about half outsiders. The house was crowded to overflowing. I spoke on Daniel. "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." [Daniel 12:3.] The Lord gave me much freedom in speaking, and there were many melted to tears. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 4

I bid them all farewell and while they were singing tried to make my escape, for I saw our faithful coachman waiting at the door. But I was not to escape so easily. There was a rush for me, and one and another took my hand, kissed it, and with tears running down their faces, told me how much good my message had done them. They held my hand so firmly and lovingly I could not withdraw it readily, while others were waiting to shake hands with me. The carriage was surrounded. We just had to wait, and then I was so sorry I had not waited in the house and shaken hands with every one of them. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 5

We had to get up early as the cars went at half-past six. The coachman came for us at quarter before six. At the depot we met a large number of our friends again. Brother and Sister Hansen were present, and their daughter and Annie, Brother and Sister Olsen, and several that I was introduced to for the first time. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 6

This last meeting left a good feeling with nearly all, and I am inclined to think that all has been done that could be done on this visit. I am glad that you will visit Christiania on your way to Basel. They need help and will continue to need help for some time. Brother Olsen, I think, will do them good when he shall come to this country.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 7

I would not leave this place until you return if I had an assurance it was duty to stay here. But we cannot stay one day after Sunday unless we meet with the loss of our tickets entirely. And then Italy may require some help; we may be called there. I expect Satan will work with masterly activity to make of none effect our labor in Christiania, but we can only do our part. God must do the rest.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 8

I felt very weary in speaking and writing. I left twenty-seven of those largest pages of foolscap for the church. May the Lord save His people from Satan's snare. Oh, that God would give more of His grace! Time is so short. We cannot afford to move blindly now. We must give the trumpet a certain sound. I do not want to do anything to discourage a soul.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 9

Brother Hansen's case is one that must be treated wisely, or we will lose him and Satan will triumph. While we must exalt the truth, we must seek to draw these souls who are certainly deceived to the light. Annie thinks that he has confidence in me, but that he has considerable in himself too.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 10

As I lay off this burden of labor for the church in Christiania, I am feeling some burden in regard to matters in Healdsburg. I cannot but feel sad every time I consider the turn things have taken there. I feel a sadness and a remorseful regret over the state of things, for I know just as well the afterresults of such matters as though the future were presented before me in a panoramic view. Why cannot we learn the precious lessons of Christ in His school as He has invited us—of meekness and lowliness of heart, to wear His yoke, to lift His burdens, and thus become one with Christ? Must our heavenly Father humiliate us by bringing us down into the valley of humiliation as the only way to give us the proper estimate of ourselves? We need to move steadfastly to behold Christ in order to think little of ourselves.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 11

I feel distressed when I see that some men of large experience think little of their sins and much of their virtues. They get as high as possible in their own eyes rather than to see themselves as God sees them. When men speak against them, they are stirred and angry. There is no stopping to see and closely investigate whether they have not reason for this unfavorable impression.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 12

When the Lord shows and reproves sin, there is a turning away from the subject as from a disagreeable picture, but they do not cease to sin. The work of soul cleansing is not pleasant, the bruising of self is not pleasant, but the health of the soul depends upon this close, critical work. Pride, cruel in its influence, is cherished. Our Saviour has rebuked pride as exhibited by the Pharisee in his self-congratulation, and he is represented as spreading his virtues before God, whose eye reads the intents and the purposes of the soul.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 13

I call upon you, my brethren, to fear this fatal spell. It is on many of you, and it makes you deaf and blind to compassion, to mercy, to truth. Your friends may praise you, be satisfied with you as you are. Every look, every word, every action may flatter you. They think you do so much good work that God will accept it; it will recommend you to God's favor. But let me remind you that God's judgment is totally different from human judgment. Let us not slumber on in our imperfections until the second death. I find myself pondering the Healdsburg church and its revival and the condemnation of it with a sadness I cannot express by pen or voice.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 14

There was a church who had been deep in the experience of a new work, and it was worthy of a careful, tender, God-fearing investigation when there was the least suspicion that things were not all reliable. Elder Daniels might not be perfect in his plans, in his spirit, in some of his movements, but there should have been the most prayerful study how to cure the to-be-feared, existing evil without marring and wounding the work of God and endangering souls. It was not one man's case alone to be dealt with, but a large and important church was involved, whose whole after-experience would bear the marks of the present management. This spirit to denounce and condemn so readily, as if it were a small matter to tear a man up by the roots, has been manifested many times. It is a work that savors of Satan wherever it is seen; and as a people who are seeking to save souls rather than to blast and destroy, we need to mix into our manners and ways of dealing with men and women more of the compassion and love of Jesus and less of self. I have seen the harm done by our brethren's seeing something wrong in a man and then questioning or picking him to pieces and leaving no good thing in him, but just discarding him as a useless piece of timber, that I am most thoroughly distressed over this kind of management. Let the love of Jesus melt the iron out of your souls, and let sweet sympathy and compassion come in for those who show imperfections.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 15

I have read the letter of Brother Jones to W. C. White, and this is all the light I now have about the management of matters at Healdsburg. And I do not say that Elder Daniels has been right in all things. He has, without question, done and said many unwise things. But will you forbid him to work because there are mistakes and errors mingled with his work? Have my brethren a perfect record of their manner of labor? Have they not had errors in judgment mingled with their best endeavors? Were they cast aside, condemned as unworthy to do anything in the vineyard of the Lord?4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 16

From the letters written I have reason to judge a good work was begun in Healdsburg. Those who felt it was wrong, and condemned it, committed, I believe, one of the greatest errors. And now the condemnation has been made, it will be as in similar cases after once the work of a brother or the manifestations in a church are condemned; then there is a seizing hold of very little things to make good the decision that they made hastily and in an unwise manner. Thus I look at the matter.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 17

I have only the letters from Brother Jones, written to W. C. White, that tell what they have done. I do not condemn these brethren or their work, but I cannot endorse it; I cannot see divine wisdom or Christlike tenderness and compassion in the work. You may think it is now your duty to remodel matters, uprooting the confidence of the church in what has been done. But the end is not yet. I see too much the mold of man in this matter. Had not the decision and judgment been made in the haste of a denunciatory spirit, and had these brethren had more of Jesus in their hearts and made the efforts they did at Healdsburg, they would have a different testimony to bear. There is terrible danger of an erring brother's falling into the hands of men who will deal with him in a very different manner than he would wish to be dealt with himself, under similar circumstances.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 18

Brethren, it is high time that revivals similar to the one that has stirred the church in Healdsburg should come to every Seventh-day Adventist church in our land, else the church will not be prepared to receive the latter rain. A work must be done for the individual members of the church. They will confess one to another. They will forsake their sins and their confessions will go beforehand to judgment, or their names will be blotted out from the book of life. Christ will not take their names upon His lips, to plead with His Father in their behalf. And whenever this work begins and wherever it is seen, there will be the working of the power of Satan—envy, jealousy, evil surmising will be in exercise. There will also be some who should attend to their own individual cases who will want to set their brethren and sisters right. They will feel a great burden for others, and fanaticism will come in and matters will be carried to extremes, and this will not be any evidence that the work from the beginning to end is wrong, but the most conclusive evidence that God is at work. Therefore the devil works to counteract the work of God.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 19

If there is a true, there will be, most assuredly, a counterfeit. It would be to me one of the most marvelous things in all my experience of the last forty years, if a brother of Elder Daniels' temperament could, without special help from God every hour, manage so large and important [an] interest as has been going on in Healdsburg. But although he may not reveal perfection in all things, although he may be hasty and impulsive, I see no reason to denounce him, discourage him, and stop his labors. I did think my brethren would show more of the divine in their management of such men and of such a manifestation.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 20

Why I dwell so much on this now is because there will be most remarkable movements of the Spirit of God in the churches, if we are the people of God. And my brethren may arise and in their sense of paring everything [not] done after their style, lay their hand upon God's working and forbid it.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 21

I know what I am talking about. Your management alarms me. I have no confidence in this kind of work you have been engaged in. You have placed matters in a miserable shape. Confusion has come into the church. A different course might have been taken by our brethren and saved all this bad result of reaction. There are always some who will be overzealous, who will follow impressions, who are never well and healthfully balanced, who are always first in the fire and then into the water. They are extremists, overdo everything they touch, and yet some of these are honest. These have precious qualities, and these are not to be misjudged and cast away as worthless.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 22

May the Lord have mercy upon His people and pity the sheep of His pasture. If those who would pronounce against this work were themselves zealous, full of faith, and showing piety and devotion, then the work coming from their hands would bear the marks, not of self, but of Christ Jesus. As a people we are far from having the spiritual works of God in our midst. The zeal for active energy and work will not supply the place of the Spirit of God, which is needed to work with the efforts of the worker, that those who embrace the truth shall witness the piety and the godly zeal and fervent devotion of the worker and obtain correct views of what it means to be a Christian.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 23

Those who do work for God must have devotion and piety mingled with their activity. Then they will be ensamples to the flock. All the promises of God are on condition of obedience. When these conditions are fully met by the people of God, the Lord has pledged His word to fulfil on His part. He will not deny Himself, He will not disappoint His believing ones. The Holy One of Israel is unchangeable.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 24

Faith has not lost its power, nor humble obedience its reward. Let the individual members of the church seek God by humble confession of their sins and putting them away.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885,

par. 25

The Lord's people are in the great day of atonement, and just such a work as is reported being done in Healdsburg will go to every church in our land. They will occupy the same position as did the congregation of Israel in the type. They were waiting with humble hearts for the coming out of the High Priest from the Most Holy Place to bless the people. They were confessing their sins, and these sins were borne into the sanctuary and the atonement was being made in behalf of the sinner. In the place of God's people now being so self-satisfied because so continually occupied in the service and busy working of the cause, these very responsibilities should drive them to prayer and deep, earnest, spiritual heartsearching, that no sin may remain unconfessed and that no sin may be cherished and practiced by them. God reads the heart and the purpose of every soul. He knows the works of all.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 26

We are, as a people, professing to believe and advocate the most solemn truths ever given to man in trust for the world. But many are as far from having works corresponding to the holy trust as was the Jewish nation. The converting power of the Lord needs to go through their hearts and sanctify their thoughts and cleanse their souls as this work was needed by the Jewish nation. I am not speaking blindly or extravagantly. We need Christian love and Christian faith. We must come up higher. We must have the converting power of God, or we shall be laid aside as filthy, polluted vessels, unfit for the Master's use. Our Lord will have a pure church. In His prayer to His Father He urged His petition in behalf of His people: "Sanctify them through Thy truth; Thy word is truth." [John 17:17.] We have limited faith and sinful hearts, and God cannot work in power for us; and if He should work for our brethren, our hearts could not rejoice with them, for our unsanctified conceptions and discernment could not distinguish the work of God from the counterfeit.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 27

We are in the antitypical day of atonement. Time is passing; the cases of all are being decided. Have they done the will of God? Have they correctly represented the holy, sacred character of the truth? Have they taught the law of God to others while their own hearts are not loyal and true to its requirements, and their words and characters are not in accordance with their faith? Oh, how far in spirit and in works do we come from answering the prayer of Christ, which was not limited to the first disciples, which prayer includes all the promises given to His disciples. “Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their word; that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they all may be one in Us, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me. And the glory that Thou gavest Me I have given them; that they may be one, even as We are one.” [Verses 20-22.] 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 28

We are in the antitypical day of atonement, and our position now is to confess and forsake our sins. Whenever the church has confessed and forsaken her sins and believed and walked in the ways of God’s commandments, according to the privileges and light given her, then according to her living faith and obedience the Lord has manifested His power from on high. She has represented Christ, and her light has shone forth to the world in clear and steady rays, leading others by her godly example to honor and glorify God. We are not contending as we should for the faith that was once delivered to the saints, having no carnal weapons of warfare, no envy, no jealousy, no evil surmising, no love for supremacy. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 29

If the life of Christ’s followers today were hid with Christ in God, we should see the mighty workings of His Holy Spirit. But the Lord lets us feel and realize from time to time how weak we are, how unlike Jesus in spirit, and this is why He can do so little for us. We take the glory to ourselves and become unbalanced. May the Lord have mercy upon us and in this day may we, while mercy lingers, place ourselves in right relation to God. If we did not seek for the honor that comes from men, the Lord would bestow upon us His honor. Divine power would be imparted, and we would have Christ as a wall of fire about us and a glory in our midst. The fulness of the blessing of the Gospel has never been withheld from them who walk uprightly. And if as a people, who claim to keep God’s law, we were indeed doers of the law, we would have the favor of God. 4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 30

But how many, many, who claim to be among God's commandment-keeping people, have departed from the holy commandments which have been delivered unto them. If they had walked in the light, been obedient to the light, they would today have been a power in the world and stood on as much higher, holier ground than the primitive Christians as their light and sacred truth were greater than theirs. God's providence for His people is progressive. There is to be continual advancement in faith, in experience, in holy confidence, and a moving forward and upward as God leads the way. They are rising higher and higher in spiritual attainments in the knowledge and the love of God. But the claims of God are today far in advance of our faith and our obedience. We have not complied with the conditions in which the fulfilment of the promises are suspended. We have not taken God at His word and accepted the promises and received the blessing presented to us.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 31

Christ said of a people, He could not do many mighty works there because of their unbelief. [Matthew 13:58.] Will we humble ourselves before God? Will we put sins and deception out of our hearts? Will we be as merciful and tender and pitiful of others as we wish them to be of us? God help us to love one another.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 32

How my brethren dared to take the position they have done in regard to the work at Healdsburg I cannot conjecture, only as that their discernment and wisdom have departed from them. If such a work comes to us, how dare we to pronounce against it because we see that the instrument is only a fallible, erring man? How did you know but that the angels of God had come in to work, although man may take the glory to himself? My earnest, agonizing prayers have been that just such a manifestation of God's power would come to this people. At such a time there will be those who will not be moved, who will pick up everything that looks objectionable, and present these and discard the whole. Now if there were those who had the burden, if they had gone to Healdsburg not to condemn, but to rejoice if they could see fruits that God was at work, and with firm and well-balanced judgment guided the matter, in love presented cautions, letting the good stand as God's work, the evil as the work of the enemy who will ever seek to intrude deceptions when God works, then you would have done a good work. Now you have left the minds dazed and confused, not knowing what is of God and what is not. If they give up that God has wrought for them, they are thrown on Satan's battlefield to be ever suspicious and established in unbelief. May the Lord teach us wisdom.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 33

Mother.

Willie, please send to Lizzie N. Bangs, West Gorham, Maine, a draft for twenty dollars for her especial use, as a New Year's gift.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 34

Brother Heman Gurney, will you please send to Battle Creek several packages of pumpkin powder to be brought to Europe when Willie comes? And if you know of any who have dried corn or small dried fruits, will you please interest them to send what they can spare, as a donation to this mission? These things cannot be obtained here as corn and pumpkin. We shall spend the winter here; and as we have not been situated to buy fruit and take care of it here, these favors requested would be highly appreciated.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 35

This may be copied for Monterey, and fruit can be brought here just as well as not. Now, my son, I will not write any more now. You see, I had only this paper in the satchel. That is why I use it. Our satchels are in the freight care. We take the boat at nine o'clock. Sarah has just got out of bed.4LtMs, Lt 35, 1885, par. 36

Mother.

Lt 36, 1885

White, W. C.

Basel, Switzerland

November 20, 1885

This letter is published in entirety in 20MR 45-47.

[Willie:]

Here I am now in Basel. We reached here last night about eight o'clock. We found Mary doing well. She is looking better than I have seen her for many years. Ella is quite as well as usual, but has some cold.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 1

November [17]. We ate a good breakfast and went on board the boat. It was very rough. We were in the nice saloon on the upper deck, enjoying the smooth sailing, when the captain came up and said, "I advise you to go below and lie down." We inquired if it would be worse than it was then. He said, "This is nothing. You can get to the cabin now, but you will not be able to get there soon." We went down and lay down. We had passed one hour on the boat and were to be five hours more.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 2

Soon Sarah was very sick, then I was sick, and our breakfast fed the fishes. I sweat profusely, then the most wrenching process of throwing up. Sarah lay where she could look directly upon me. She said several times she thought I was dead. She kept speaking to me to get some response. She said my face was as colorless as a corpse. She should understand now fully why I was afraid to be seasick. She never would want me to go on the water again for she thought it was at the risk of my life. There was never a more thankful party that stood upon the terra firma than our company. Kristine was a little sick, but not severely. Kellogg was out upon the deck, and he was some sick, but he stayed there, almost freezing. He dared not go down.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 3

We were so happy to be seated in the cars again. We had a compartment all to ourselves, and I did not sit up much of the day. I was lame and sore. We traveled all night and all day Wednesday and stopped Wednesday night at Hotel Cologne. We had good accommodations, took six o'clock train, and were by ourselves until noon. The cars went only to Manze _____, and we were obliged to wait two hours. When the express train came along, we were crowded into a compartment with men, and we learned it was a smoking car; but Kellogg prevailed upon them not to smoke. But men were continually crowding in with their cigars and pipes. Kellogg finally found us a place in another car with men, but they did not smoke. The road was exceedingly rough. I think I never rode in cars that shook one about so. It was as good as the best movement machines. It took all the soreness all out of me—curious remedy!4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 4

Mary read us your letter, and I was glad to learn you had a similar experience to ours in seasickness. I was full of cold, and I threw up much phlegm, and I think it did me much good. I said then I hoped you would be sick, and, although unpleasant, it would be a great blessing to you as it has been to us.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 5

Brother Whitney wishes us to go next week to Italy. We are thinking of taking the whole family along; go into Brother Bourdeau's house and remain a couple of months. We want the Lord to direct. It is cold as a barn here. The coils do not warm the room scarcely at all. It is a failure, and something will have to be devised of a different character than this to heat these rooms. They will put me up a stove in the parlor today. I have not been warm since I came here, and the very air seems as if I were breathing in the air from a snowbank.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 6

Edith is evidently failing. The rooms she and her mother occupy are not comfortable. They have a little heating arrangement, not the one I had, but similar to it; but that is not sufficient, and the rubber coils are very disagreeable to Edith.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 7

I thought if we could go to Italy and go into a house all furnished, and keep Brother A. C. Bourdeau and sons without any appearance of evil, we would do so. But if there is the least danger of remarks, we would not do this on any account.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 8

Willie, I want Matteson to stand in a proper light before the conference. We see mistakes and failure in his work and mission, but how much better would others have done under the circumstances? I am thinking he has done, in many respects, a good work. He has suffered privation and taken the work from nothing, and all these things deserve our appreciation; and we will encourage him all we can and not say one word to discourage. You know that the man is not guilty of that devotion the people give him. They need to see and recognize other talent, and they will do it, and I know that there is much precious material in Christiania, and I want the dear lambs of the flock to be blessed and strengthened. I do not know as I can say anything more.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 9

I shall think of you and pray for you as we do, and may the Lord work in power for you. Do pray much and tell others I beseech of them to pray much. I will now say, God bless you, my son, with the best of Heaven's blessing. Try to get Edson heart and soul in the meetings. Help him all you can.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 10

Love to Emma and Edson.4LtMs, Lt 36, 1885, par. 11

Mother.

Lt 37, 1885

White, W. C.

Basel, Switzerland

November 23, 1885

This letter is published in entirety in 17MR 323-328.

Dear Willie:

I have sent you one letter since coming back to Basel. In regard to Marian's coming, I dare not say. If I were sure that we would go to America next May, I would not think it best to disappoint Marian's plans. I just want her to do the things that will be for her health and after-usefulness. If she really wishes to give some time to study, she ought to have the privilege of doing this. I dare not urge her to come to Europe. I will send matters to be published if I am able to write. I shall not write as diligently as I have done.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 1

I certainly have never done as much work in the same amount of time as in the last four months, and I am thankful to the Lord for this. How long it will be duty to stay here I cannot tell, but just as long as it seems to be duty to stay I will do this cheerfully, although expenses are going on of housekeeping at Healdsburg. I have my cow and horse that I have to feed, and my expenses are running on, but this is not of any consideration with me. I want to know my duty and do it cheerfully.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 2

Although very weary, I spoke to the people assembled on the Sabbath in the afternoon. Several not of our faith were present. There were four students from the theological college. Two came for the first time. The converted Jew has been turned out because he came to our meetings. This, Brother Whitney thinks, aroused the attention of other students, and two have come quite often to attend the meetings. They are interested. They have not heard a discourse, but have come to the Sabbath afternoon meetings and seemed interested. They have read the papers, and they came of themselves to talk with Brother Whitney and the hands in the office of the reason for their faith. The name of one of the young men is Zree, and he says he will not be prevented from investigating. They seemed interested in the Sabbath afternoon meeting. Many good testimonies were borne.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 3

Edith was brought into meeting and she bore her testimony, but I am sorry to say she is not spiritual and does not know how to come to the light.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 4

Sunday morning I attended early meeting with the office workers, prayed with them and talked with them. They seemed interested and some deeply affected. Then after the meeting closed I talked with the girls in the office in relation to Edith and the close friendship and attention they were giving her. I told them they had made her an idol and had flattered her and petted her until she was entirely deceived in regard to herself. She was not awake to her needs. She felt not she needed a Physician. They had helped her to this state of blindness by their worshipping her, that this extra love was so choice, its fragrance could be permitted to go only to a few, while others, more devotional, more worthy, were excluded. I told them that this deception would be fatal to Edith if it were kept up to the last. She wanted to be diverted and amused when the hours to her were solemn and precious, to be devoted to preparation of heart to meet her Saviour in the morning of the resurrection.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 5

I wished them to review the past and see if in one instance Edith had led their minds and affections heavenward, if they could think of any time she had talked of Jesus and heaven and the truth. I told them she had led their minds away from the truth, away from devotion to God, to human worship. They had an admiration society, seeking to be loved, praised, petted, and this had separated their affections from God so that not one of those who were so sympathetic, so loving, so devoted to Edith, was learning to wear Christ's yoke or to carry His burdens. They were backsliding from God; and in the place of giving Him the heart's best and loveliest affections, they were placing confidence and love upon an earthly, erring creature. They did not love Edith because she was devotional, because she lived so near to Jesus, but because they thought her perfection. She pleased them, but she did not please

Jesus or really love Jesus. I talked to them very plainly and shall not see these young people deceived. I shall talk with Edwin and John Vuilleumier.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 6

Brother Whitney has just come into our room, and he says the two young men have come again to talk with them. He talked and prayed with them. One has investigated so that he sees now that he must lift the cross. He says he does not hesitate because he will be laughed at or reproached, but he feels keenly at the thought of disappointing his parents who expect him to be educated for a minister. He says he has stated to the Principal his convictions, and he tells him that if he does not keep the Sabbath, he must leave the college. Ministers have labored with them; then they bring the arguments to our brethren in the office, and they show them the difference between the teachings of the Bible and the sayings of men. The one who is convinced says he will write an essay on the Sabbath question and read it in his class. There seems to be quite a stir in the college just now. O that God would move upon hearts, convict and convert souls.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 7

Elder Bourdeau is thinking of holding meetings in a hall in Geneva while Ertzenberger and Vuilleumier are working in a place not far from there. Daniel feels like going into the work in earnest. O that God would keep His servants to be wise to win souls. Brother Bourdeau says that he can call these brethren in after an interest is awakened.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 8

We go to Italy next Thursday. Mary accompanies me. Ella will remain at home with Sarah and Kristine. Brother Whitney goes with us to Italy. Sister Bourdeau goes with us, to remain a few weeks. I think it will not be best to remain long now; a few weeks will be enough. If we see occasion for remaining sixty days, the length of our ticket, we can do so. Brother Whitney thinks when I shall return here Brother Ertzenberger better commence meetings here and Brother Conradi join him and make a regular effort to bring souls to the knowledge of the truth.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 9

We are all well under this roof except Edith, and Ella has had cold and is not as well as usual. We see great improvements in Ella. We take great comfort with her.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 10

Well, Willie, I hope you are well and that the blessing of the Lord is accompanying you in your meetings. We pray for you all assembled in Conference. We shall follow you with our prayers. I now must stop writing, for I must rest. God bless you. May His peace rest upon you is the prayer of your Mother.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 11

Willie, Mary was pleased with her cloak pattern. Come to see what she had, she had nothing fit to wear. Kristine has cut it out and nearly made it. Mary and she are very busy now. Mary has got her an entire outfit from the remnant left of my dress, so we shall both have suits alike. I found Mary had purchased her nice flannel, cloth-lined shoes and a beautiful pair of slippers lined with flannel. She thinks much of these comfortable things. Mary speaks from the dining room, "Tell Willie I like the cloak very much." We are really comfortably situated.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 12

Today I went down and selected one of those earthen stoves for my room, which is the parlor. I cannot keep warm with the coils, and the iron stove makes me feel continually oppressed. Have had nosebleed nearly every day since I came home. This stove is on the same principle as those white ones in Sweden, but this one we have purchased is about five feet high, brown earthenware. It is a beauty for twenty dollars; they asked twenty-two. So you see we shall be nicely fixed here for the winter. Kristine is just the one we need, so handy with the needle and willing to do any kind of work. She went into washing Sunday, earnestly, and was down on her knees scouring the tile floor. I think we did well to secure so good help. Brethren Whitney and Kellogg are true and earnest to do all they can for us. Brother Kellogg boards with us. They seem to think I must have everything I need to make me comfortable, But very little has been expended for furniture. Things picked up and borrowed have fitted us out with three good bedsteads and mattresses. Both rooms have carpets, not entirely covered, but answer all purposes.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 13

Willie, please to send Lizzie N. Bangs twenty dollars and charge to my account. Send Lizzie N. Bangs, West Gorham, Maine. I wish you would see if you can get some pumpkin powder from H. S. Gurney and get dried corn and small dried fruit if you can. We shall need some books, and I will send in my next what books I want you to bring to me.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 14

Ella says, "Tell papa I want to see him and kiss him. When will he come home?" See Aunt Mary and tell me how she is getting along. No one mentions her. Give her my love and tell her to write to me and I will answer it.4LtMs, Lt 37, 1885, par. 15

Mother.

Lt 38, 1885

White, J. E.; White, W. C.

Basel, Switzerland

December 22, 1885

Portions of this letter are published in 3Bio 337-338; 8MR 445.

Dear Children, Edson and Willie:

We left Italy one week ago this morning. Mary has probably told you of our journey homeward, which was very favorable. Brother Daniel Bourdeau seemed to appreciate our visit very much. We rode out a couple of hours, and we were instructed in regard to several places of interest. Geneva is a beautiful place. I should prefer living there than any place I have yet visited, if they did not have considerable fog.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 1

We found Edith very low. I visited her Sabbath morning and talked with her and comforted her. She said she had done all that she could do to make her past wrongs right. I then tried to strengthen her faith to believe that the Lord would help her, and wherein she was weak, He could make her strong, could supply every deficiency. Edith seemed to lay hold of hope and was very thankful for the encouragement I had given her. I then prayed with her, and she responded.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 2

Sunday morning early I was sent for. She breathed heavily; was greatly distressed. I prayed for her again while Brother Whitney supported her in an upright position. She was relieved in answer to prayer. I was sent for again that night. Edith was in great distress for breath. We prayed earnestly, and she was relieved. Oh, how thankful I am that we have a friend in Jesus who will be touched with the feelings of our infirmities. How thankful we all are to see Edith placing her hand in the hand of Christ and confiding all to Him. I was drawn out to speak to her of the love of Jesus. While the tempest round us rolls, Jesus, precious Saviour, must be our only refuge. "Simply to Thy cross I cling." We are to claim pardon through the merits of Christ's blood. I never felt Jesus more precious to me and to His suffering ones than when standing around the dying bed of this child.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 3

I have repeated to her, “We are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation.” [1 Peter 1:5.] The arm of God is around His child. I have comforted her in telling her that the Word of God was pledged in her behalf, the cleansing blood of Christ would blot out all her transgressions; for those who seek Him, He will be to them a present help in every time of need. I referred her to Peter, sinking beneath the waves, but he threw up his hand to Christ and such an appeal was not in vain. If he had not looked at the waves, there would have been no peril.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 4

Jesus will respond to every appeal made to Him in our sore need. God’s children are dear to Him as the apple of His eye. He will help the helpless. His voice will come to us in our distress: “Fear not, I am with thee. It is I, be not afraid.” [isaiah 43:5; Matthew 14:27.]4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 5

Edith is, I believe, standing on the solid Rock. She is obtaining an experience of the highest value. She is fitting up for the future life. I love to point her to the resurrection morning when the Lifegiver shall call the dead from their prison houses. Those who sleep in Jesus will come forth to a glorious immortality. Jesus has paid a large price for our affection and love. He always reproveth those He loves, and He corrects their faults and is just waiting and longing to pardon their transgressions. We see Edith going down to the grave, trusting in and loving Jesus. Edith is patient, only expressing gratitude and thankfulness to God.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 6

I have just had a profitable conversation with Martha, who is filled with comfort and gratitude and hope as she sees her suffering child going down to the grave with a hope in Jesus. It is realized here: the hour of our extremity is God’s opportunity. We are, thank God, within the reach of His powerful hand. I told Edith, “In your feebleness, it may seem to you you can but have a feeble hold of Jesus, but Jesus has a firm hold of the soul He has died to save. His aid is prompt and all-powerful. He is nigh unto all that call upon Him.” We feel deeply grateful for the evidences we have of God’s love, of His mercy and kindness to the children of men.4LtMs, Lt 38,

1885, par. 7

I just dropped this to have an interview with Elder Whitney. Brother Albert Vuilleumier comes tonight. His son broke his arm near the wrist yesterday, a bad break. He was not as careful as he ought to have been. He went to start the wheel at the press, and he was not paying attention. His hand slipped through the spokes, and some part of the machinery bent his hand back and gave a blow to his wrist. I think that was the way it was done. He was taken to the hospital at once and is receiving every attention.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 8

The young man I mentioned to you from the theological seminary has taken his position fully on the truth. He came out decided on the Sabbath. His uncles wrote that they would place him in a seminary much more in advance of this and held out great inducements to him if he would come to them, but he is not moved. He seems firm as a rock. All the faculty respect him and told him he might continue in school and observe the Sabbath, but he told them, "NO." He must fit himself not only to believe that which the Bible told him was truth, but be prepared to teach it to his fellow men. He was asked what he would do after he left the school. He said, "I am well and strong. I can work. I am not afraid, but the way will open before me."4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 9

I told Brother Whitney now was the time, after he had taken his position, to open the way before him. He is a good German scholar and understands French well, and now he wants to learn English.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 10

Well, I have had to stop.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 11

Ella just came in to say with wonderful grace, "Tak for moetten." She makes as graceful a curtsy as a little Swedish girl.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 12

They have employed the German in the office, and they like him much. They need help on the German very much. I am so thankful that we can see that the Lord is at work upon hearts. This conversion is the work of God, not of man. His name shall have all the glory. I am told since writing the above that the young man I have mentioned is just the help needed in the office.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 13

December 23

I left this letter to write to Brother Daniel Bourdeau. He sent a long letter to me. He is failing in health, and I am not sure but he will have to go back to America. His lungs have troubled him, but now are relieved, and he has a constant diarrhea. Poor man cannot rest, will not rest. He seems grateful for the help I have given him and wants to have me stay months with him. You know this would not be agreeable to me. He seems to cling to me as a child to his mother. I have written to him comforting, encouraging words.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 14

Last night Brother Albert Vuilleumier came and has brought his daughter that Brother _____—I cannot call his name—has been seeking to wed. I do not think she loves him, but would marry him rather than to hurt his feelings. He has been determined in the matter and it is, I think, a test case here in Switzerland, whether young men shall persist in having a right to pay their addresses to young women when their parents feel it would be unhappiness to both parties. We take the ground that the children should not marry without the consent of their parents. This test case will have a telling influence on the churches in Switzerland, whether children shall obey their parents, shall honor them according to the fifth commandment, or whether they will set aside the rules laid down in the Bible and be controlled by impulse. We think in this case the Bible will be the guide and rule in this matter.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 15

I can tell you, I find abundance of work that keeps coming ready to my hand, and I see no place to rest, even in Europe. I think I will purchase me a horse and carriage and ride out daily. I do not take pleasure in the rides taken with a coachman or hackman.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 16

Well, I am certainly doing more work than at any other period of my life, and I am thankful that the Lord has given me strength to work. I hope that Brother Conradi will come to work awhile with Brother Ertzenberger. When he shall come, we will have meetings here in

Basel; and I believe souls will embrace the truth. I do wish that there were a man well balanced, who understood French, who could labor in Europe. Brother Daniel understands enough. He has a quick mind, much power of brain, and could do a good work if he were more evenly balanced; but the case stands as it does. We will have to pray that the Lord will raise up laborers in His vineyard. We need them, one hundred where there is one, if there could be means to sustain them.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 17

We are doing so little compared to what should be done in warning the world. I think too much, carry too heavy a load on this matter. Oh, I wish I did not feel so intensely, for it keeps me awake, planning, many of the hours at night, when I should be asleep. I hope I shall be able every day to lay my burden on the Burden-bearer. If I could say anything to help our people to see the wants for this time! If I could only arouse them to obtain the missionary spirit! Oh, if the Lord would only set the matter home to their hearts! I see so much want, so great a lack in the workers, so little devotion, so little self-denial, so little spirit of the real laborer, that my heart aches. Time is passing, the end of all things is at hand. He that is to come will come, to call us individually to account for our stewardship. What use have we made of our talents, of our means, of the great light God has revealed to us from His Word? Oh, what do the heavenly books testify of us? The record of every day's work is passing up to God. Have we served ourselves or Jesus Christ? Have we engaged heartily in the work represented by the proclamation of the third angel's message? What are we doing? Time is passing into eternity with its burden of record. Oh, how light many are, how trifling!4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 18

How many are now sighing and crying for the abominations done in the land? How many are consecrated to the work of God and have not a divided interest? How many are feeling the burden for perishing souls? Many will realize the curse that came on Meroz because they feel no burden when the Word of God plainly reveals the position we are standing in as a people.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 19

I see our work has but just begun here; I see so much to be done, and I am doing too much. I wish I could do the work of ten. I would gladly do it. But I can only do the work of one—poor, frail at that. May God work Himself.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 20

In regard to writing in the future, I cannot say. I must write. I think I can do it as well here in Europe as in America. Make just such arrangements as you please. If Marian is worn and has her plans arranged to stay, I can send writing there; but if you think it advisable for her to come, all right.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 21

I have sent by Brother Kellogg to get me a filter in London. I do not think it is safe to use this hard water, either to drink or to cook with. We have a stove that is a treasure. It is something of the same nature as the ones we saw in Sweden, but brown, highly polished. It is an ornament; consumes but little coal.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 22

We all miss you, Willie; will be glad when you return. They write from California that there is but one copy of first volume of Spirit of Prophecy in the office. They are seeking to hurry up the work. I see not why it cannot be put in the hands of the printers. The matter is out, and enough to make a book. It may be I shall have to supply one chapter, but why not have it printed at once? I think that the matters in regard to Grant should be here, that we can meet him if necessary. But with me, I shall never mention his name but go straight forward in my work. This is best. I will not contend with those wicked men. I think it had a good influence in Italy to go right forward and say nothing of Grant.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 23

I am going to try to rest some, and may the Lord help me. I am His property. Well, I will write no more now.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 24

May the Lord give you wisdom in counsel is my prayer morning, night, and noon and return you back in safety. Will Elder Waggoner come with you?4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 25

Much love to you all, children—Edson, Emma, Willie.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 26

Mother.

I want you, Willie, to put in the hands of Marian the means that she needs. I want her to find rest in some way. She must have it, and I lay my commands on Marian to rest. If she can find it in Battle Creek, all right. If not, let her go to some place. If she does not, and you do not think it best for her to come here, I want her to rest. She is of great value to me in my work, and I want her to have means that she will feel free to rest and only do my work for which I will pay her well.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 27

Tell her I have just one minute ago read the letters in which she has specified the improvements to be made in articles for Volume 1. I thank her. Tell her that she has a point about Zedekiah's having his eyes put out. That needs to be more carefully worded—also the rock, when the water flowed—something in reference to this. I think I can make the articles specified more full; and as I am famous for moralizing, this will be no cross. Tell her to write to me, as I prize her letters as if she were my own child. I will write to her when I am more rested.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 28

Mary and Sarah are full of business. Kristine is good, tender; so tender and kind and motherly to Ella. I think her a treasure. We feel that without you something is wanting.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 29

Well, my dear Willie and Edson and Emma, let us draw very nigh to God. Let us live daily as we would wish we had lived when the judgment shall sit and the books shall be opened, and when every one will be rewarded according to his works. I am not cast down nor discouraged, but I feel weighed down as a cart beneath sheaves. We have had several days of beautiful weather. It has commenced raining this afternoon. Tell Mary to find me some histories of the Bible that would give me the order of events. I have nothing and can find nothing in the library here.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 30

It is getting dark, and I am resolved not to use my eyes or brain by candlelight. Well, may the Lord direct in all things—you and us here. Will you see if Aunt Mary is comfortable? Make her a present for me of ten dollars if you think her needy, but do not let my Marian go pinched. If she needs clothing, just get it for her. Make her a New Year's present for me. She has pinched and cramped herself in many ways, dear, precious child. I love her much.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 31

The Lord is good. Praise His holy name. Ella is well and happy. She is a real good little girl. What do you think of my purchasing a horse and carriage? I must do something of the kind for my health. I have had considerable lameness with my hip, and I dare not tax it greatly and walk much. I think of my home and horse and carriage and wish I could enjoy them, but then I am not disposed to cut short my stay here in any wise for these things. I want to spend some time in England in the most favorable season of the year, when there is the least fog.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 32

We expect a letter every day from you. I hope it will come, for we want to hear from you. Brother Kellogg left here last Sunday night for London on his way to Christiania. I tell you, I felt sorry to have him go. He expects to meet you in Christiania.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 33

Mother.

I cannot go through this. I have been interrupted so many times and I am too tired to correct my mistakes.4LtMs, Lt 38, 1885, par. 34

Lt 39, 1885

White, W. C.

Basel, Switzerland

December 30, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Son Willie:

We are having quite a snowstorm, not the first, however. There came about three inches of snow about one week ago, and it has not been warm enough to remove the first snow. Now we will have, I think, good sleighing for New Year's. It has looked very nice to see the Common all covered with beautiful white snow. The trees surrounding the Common and the bridge were pure white as if crystallized. This beautiful sight remained all through the day.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 1

I have not been able to accomplish much for nearly two weeks. I was exhausted, but I am gathering up my forces again, feeling a little stronger. Mary has prepared two articles from a private letter written to Brother [Vocher] who was paying attention to Brother Vuilleumier's daughter. He knew her parents were opposed to this match, but he continued his attentions just the same and was determined to drive the matter through at all hazards, but left it to be decided by Sister White. Well, this letter was written to him. Elder Bourdeau at Geneva is translating it. I think it excellent matter, and it should go into the Review. I have now an article on the observance of the Sabbath which I shall have put in the Review, for it is greatly needed. A portion of that given to Brother Hansen composes part of the article. I write some every day, but cannot write long at a time.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 2

I expect this letter will reach you before you start for Europe. I wish you to see just how my account stands at the office. I thought I would purchase me a horse, but I think not best to lay out money now for horse and carriage; if we go back in May, and I spend some time in England, it will not be best.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 3

Things seem to moving along here very smoothly. We are comfortably situated. I could not myself be more pleasantly and comfortably situated, but the coils do not keep more than warm on our side of the house. Were it not for this tile stove, which is a treasure, I should not be comfortable.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 4

Edith is not. She was buried last Sabbath.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 5

I have no particular news to write to you. I fear we shall not have your company here before the first of February. I wish you to bring on, if you can, a bottle of bay rum. I cannot get it here. Dr. Kellogg gave me a small bottle of something called Menther, I think it was, to rub on the head to relieve the headache. If you ask him, he will tell you what it is. It is quite fiery, causes a burning sensation on the skin. I feel anxious to do all I can, but dare not go into meetings at present. I keep away from everything that will call me out to labor, for I have overdone. I am nervous. I do not believe that there is any place where I can find rest. But I am gathering up my vital forces again and will be able, I hope, to do considerable writing yet. I have written several pages today, about ten, and am some tired.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 6

January 1, 1886

Since writing this I have written about thirty pages and corrected two discourses. I was real sick yesterday, but am much better today. Had a dream of real interest to me last night. I want it a little more distinct before I write it. It was for myself, for my encouragement.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 7

January 1, 1886

Dear Willie: I did mean to get this off last Wednesday, but did not succeed. We are doing all we can to get something before the people to act upon. I have not dared to go into any of their meetings, for I am afraid to be aroused to expend my strength. I need all the vital force I can get now.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 8

It is a beautiful morning, snowed some yesterday. The weather has been quite cold here, and bracing. Elder Whitney said he was going to write to you. I suppose he has done so. He received a letter from two who have embraced the truth in France. This has encouraged Brother Whitney. Elder D. T. Bourdeau has been much encouraged by two, worth some property, embracing the truth in Geneva. Brother Ertzenberger is doing a good work. He attended Sister Kelly's funeral. I wanted to see him, but dared not tax myself with an interview. I am better now, though I have to hold myself in with bit and with bridle, for my soul is full of the truth. It is like fire shut up in my bones. I know we must reach a higher standard than we have yet attained, and how I long to have greater power to reach the people.4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 9

God is our strength. I know many of our workers have tried to labor in their own strength. I know that the converting power of God must be felt in their hearts, or they will utterly fail of the grace of God. Truth will triumph, but who of us will triumph with the truth?4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 10

Will you tell Emma to inquire if she can get me clover, that I may have it here?4LtMs, Lt 39, 1885, par. 11

Lt 40, 1885

Davis, Marian

Rome, New York

July 30, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Dear Sister Marian:

We stepped from the cars about one hour ago; found Brother Wilbur Whitney and his wife waiting for us. A hack took us to his home, where we are now waiting dinner. I have endured the journey much better than I feared. It has been fearfully hot in Battle Creek, and it must result in considerable sickness.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1885, par. 1

We arrived in Battle Creek Monday night. Your father was waiting at depot to see you, but I am glad you did not come. The journey would have prostrated you. The Lord has sustained me; I can never doubt this. Tuesday your brother's wife was buried, and I am glad you were spared this.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1885, par. 2

I do not think it best myself for you to carry out your plans of going to school. You have already accomplished more in fitting up my writings than you will ever do again. You have done this work satisfactorily, and I have perfect satisfaction. My only burden is your continual complaints and your depreciating your own ability. This burdens me. If you would go cheerfully forward, doing the best you can, then trust fully in the Lord, you would do well. If you would cease worrying and fretting and complaining of yourself, and just act yourself, I should be a happy woman. I cannot see one ray of light in your plans of attending school. But if you will not be satisfied, then you must do it, and I will be reconciled.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1885, par. 3

Why are there no pieces sent for the Review? It troubles me. You or Eliza ought to have an article every week.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1885, par. 4

I understand your brother anticipated your coming to take care of his little girl. Now, Marian, if you come East, I shall fear that you will do some such thing as this. God does not mark out your duty in this line, and I hope you will carry on the work of mine you have commenced on.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1885, par. 5

Well, Marian, I have done through the grace of God much work since I came East in writing and in speaking, and today am much better every way than when I left home. Write to me, my sister. In love.4LtMs, Lt 40, 1885, par. 6

Manuscripts

Ms 1, 1885

Butler, G.I.

Refiled as Lt 120, 1886.

Ms 2, 1885

Sermon/Sermon in the Battle Creek Tabernacle

Battle Creek, Michigan

July 25, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 2MR 211; 9MR 42-43.
+NoteOne or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Sermon in the Tabernacle

“Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.” [2 Corinthians 6:17, 18.]4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 1

Here are conditions, promises given on conditions. The conditions are that ye come out from among them, the world, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you. Who said it? The Lord. It is the Lord God of the heavens that said it.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 2

Now just before this the exhortation is given, “Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Beliel? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? For ye are the temple of the living God; as God has said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people.” Then comes the text, “Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.” [Verses 14-18.]4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 3

If we have received all these promises and thoroughly believe them, we shall cleanse ourselves of all filthiness of the flesh, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. This presents before us work for each one to do. It gives us something to do, and there is a warfare that every one of us is engaged in. We are to put on the whole armor of God; we are to fight the good fight of faith. But we know that while we are in the world we are surrounded with temptations and iniquity abounds, and “the love of many waxes cold.” [Matthew 24:12.] It is not a necessity that their love should wax cold because iniquity abounds. The very fact that iniquity abounds should be an incentive to every soul that loves God to be intensely in earnest and interested as faithful soldiers of the cross of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 4

It is the privilege of every soul who names the name of Christ to have a firm hold from above. The grace of God, He says, is sufficient for you in every emergency; His grace is at our command. We may have a living connection with the God of heaven, we may have that strength and that power of righteousness which will elevate us above the common, the earthly, or sensual. But if we study the Bible we shall know that Satan is upon our track, and that he is working with an intense activity, and he lays his snares on the right hand and on the left; but the snare is not laid in our sight, but comes as a deception in order that we shall not discern it as a snare, that our souls may be captivated. When we see the wickedness that is increasing to a certain extent in the world, where is the corresponding power of righteousness to build up a barrier around the soul, and around the church, that this wickedness shall not come among us like a flood?4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 5

These institutions which are placed here in our midst are one inducement and one constant appeal to the churches here to keep themselves in the love of God. Here is a place for youth, that they may come as students to receive an education in the sciences. But is this the end of their work? If it is, they could just as well go to the colleges anywhere in our land, but it is not the end of the matter. It is an instrument of God, and each individual connected with the college should be so interested in the training and discipline and education that the youth should develop into men who fear God, should be women who have a hold on God, that they shall not be those who wish to study to make themselves attractive to fascinate the students to them, but to present Jesus, to present the power of truth, to have this power inwrought into their very being, interwoven in their minds and in their experience, to control the mind and the soul that their character may come out spotless before God, and what then? They will have the look of saints, which is righteousness. They will stand before the throne of God with the white linen on, the white linen of the saints. The great mistake which we have to correct in such a large church is this nominal morality. You may be afraid of it, for it rests in every such church to an alarming extent. "Come out," says the apostle. Whom is he addressing? He is addressing those who claim to be children of God, and if ever these words were applicable, they are to this church. "Come out from among them." [2 Corinthians 6:17.] It is for you to be afraid of breaking down the barriers which preserve vital holiness in your institutions and in your churches. It is for you to present the living Saviour before the people, to present Him in your college, in your publishing house, and to present Him in your sanitarium. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 6

Every physician who is connected with that sanitarium should be a man who has a hold from above. They are not only dealing with the body, but with the souls of men and women; but the judgment is to reveal what kind of work they are doing. You may make Jesus attractive, or you may lower the standard of holiness; but what God demands is a separation from the world. You may break down the standard; but in the judgment, when the books are opened, it will be seen that while the physician professed the name of Christ, professed to be a physician of the body and soul, he let the soul sink to ruin because he did not build up the barriers between these souls and the world. It was pleasure, and it was disposition to feel that the regulations and rules are too strict. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 7

That is what the devil says; that is what he said to Adam; that is what he says to the students in the college; that is what he says to the apprentices in the office; that is what he will say to every institution in the world. While God said to Adam, Thou shalt not take of the tree of knowledge, Satan says He is altogether too strict, He is depriving you of privileges which you may have. Should you eat of the tree of knowledge, you then would have opened before you a field which you have not explored. Many have entered that field; and when they entered that, the floodgates were opened toward the world.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 8

It is the constant effort of Satan to make us think that sin is not sinful after all, and if you let them have their own way they will come out all right in the end. It is to break down the barriers, the distinction between the world and the followers of righteousness—to conform to the world and let the burden drop.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 9

Here are these outside the Saviour, and the physician—according to the light God has given me—occupies a more responsible place than even the ministers who have given themselves to preach the Word. Why is he not dealing that Christian tenderness with the sick, not only with the body, but also with the soul? When one has become a sufferer and is diseased and in darkness and does not know how to get light, is there not open before the physician an opportunity of leading the mind into light and into truth? to lean upon the strong arm of power, the infinite One? Has he not an opportunity which the minister has not of presenting Jesus Christ to them? Is not the physician a dealer with the mind? Have they not an opportunity to open to them the fountain of life? can they not present Christ to them? If any one is lost, let them come in time and drink. “I am,” He says, “a well of water springing up into everlasting life.” [John 4:14.] Ought you not to feel the burden that rests upon you who are connected with these institutions?4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 10

You have but a little time. The judgment is to sit, the books to be opened, and every man to be judged according to what is written in the book; and how stands the record? Have you been trying to maintain a dignity? Have you been trying to fasten the attention of people to you? or have you been seeking to follow Jesus, to walk before Him in similitude of mind? Have you felt that God has given you talents of importance? and those talents are not to remain just as He gave them to you? They are to be improved. One has ability to take care of a farm, the merchant has ability to take care of merchandise; and is it to that which will be said, “Well done”?

[Matthew 25:21.] It is if he conduces his business on the strict rule of honesty and right. Then they will earn the “Well done” from the Master, but is it to end there? No, there is a greater work.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 11

What have you done for the Master? What have you been doing in order that souls might see their duty? What have you been doing to bring souls to the Master? If you have been doing that work, and you can bring sheaves to Him, you will have the “Well done.” What are we to do? Very many here have become connected with the world. Christ says, “I pray not that Thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that Thou shouldest keep them from the evil.” [John 17:15.] It is a constant guardianship. It is to stand as faithful sentinels. It is to have everything connected with us sanctified, the powers which God has given us in order to press humanity, in order to elevate, to ennoble, for Christ said, “I sanctify Myself that they also may be sanctified.” [Verse 19.] To do this work, it will be constant watchfulness, constant care. They must be those who are constantly watching and guarding themselves, that they shall not offend God.4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 12

What is heaven? It is a place desired. We want to be there. There is no sin there, no deception, no corruption, nothing that will mar the sacred paradise of God. Should we not then bring all the heaven into our life that we can. In the place of those who are judgment-bound, being trifling and jesting and joking, and without weight or burden resting upon them, you need to carry away with you a burden of souls, an earnest sympathy and love of souls, that you may do your duty toward them, that you may have acuteness to mold, to fashion the character against a more cunning foe, that it will not be damned in the judgment, but that it will be found that you have done your work, and have done it well. Shall we go with a long face or with groans? That is not for the Christian at all. The more heaven we obtain in our hearts, if Christ is enshrined there, rejoice always, but it is different from the joking or jesting. It is a sweet peace expressed in the countenance, and a holy joy seen in the life. Let them see that you have got a hold from above, that the joy and peace of Christ are abiding in your hearts, and that they have an influence upon your character and upon your life. Christ was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Who was He? The Majesty of heaven. Who was he? The Son of God, the Light of the world. It was He who made the world. It was He who said He was the Light of the world. Whosoever shall know Me shall not walk in darkness. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 13

Who are the company who are sealed with the seal of the living God? What saith the Lord? He says to the angel, Go, and place the mark upon the foreheads of those who sigh and cry for the abominations which are done in the land. [Ezekiel 9:4.] That should keep us in sobriety, in prayerfulness, and watchfulness. And as we see the iniquity taking away the youth right out of our arms, do you suppose it would be so if the right influence were exerted over them by every member who professes to be a child of God? What is the matter? The high standard is left to trail in the very dust. You are acting as the world acts. You are not to follow their moves, but are to come out and be separate. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 14

“I will be a Father unto you,” and what next? “and ye shall be sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty.” [2 Corinthians 6:18.] What, will you be members of the Lord in heaven, children of the heavenly King? Now you who think you will preserve your dignity, you who are aspiring for distinction, and you who are struggling and making every effort for your life to conform just as nigh to the world as you can, in order to obtain distinction, and in order that you may have a name and that you may have esteem, those who have no love for God, let me tell you that you are making a great mistake. He says, “I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters.” Then what if we are on the side of the Infinite One, what if we are on the side of Jesus Christ, what if we shall have no influence? He says, “If the world hate you, you may know that it hated Me before it hated you.” [John 15:18.]4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 15

Purity, humility, lowliness, and loveliness of character have no charm for a large class. They do not desire them. “Behold,” says John, “what manner of love has the Father bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God.” [1 John 3:1.] Look at the cross of Calvary. The light which is reflected from the cross of Calvary will show you what love, what intensity of love, is bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. His Son came to this world to bear the weight of care and perplexity. He was abused and rejected. He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Shall we not then place ourselves on His side? This infinite sacrifice was made for us, that we might become acquainted with Jesus Christ, that we might be led by His countless charms, that we might love His beauty of character, that we might see in His purity of character that which we should admire. The religion [of] Jesus Christ—[they] do not know anything about it. They profess religion, but it is not the religion of Jesus. They confess the truth, but it is not the truth which sanctifies the soul. They may give their attention to models, but it is not those which will give them a place with those who surround the throne with white robes every one of them. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 16

There's a time coming when names are to be blotted out of the book of life, names once written there; but He says unto them also, if you overcome, I will not blot out your names out of the book of life. [Revelation 3:5.] Here men and women play the game of life. Satan is wrestling for the soul, and the temptations are to assimilate to the world, to be like it, to be just as near like it as possible. Christ says, Come out from among them and be ye separate. [2 Corinthians 6:17.] It is the passions of the world that lead the world to think: "I have just as good a character as they have, and just as good a religion as they have. I don't see that the religion that they profess does any more for them than mine does for me, and I think I stand just as good a chance as they do." But suppose you place yourself on the elevated platform of eternal truth. The lawyer came to Christ and said, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" The Master says to him, "What says the law?" "Well," says [one,] "thou shalt love the Lord thy God with just one quarter of your heart, and the rest you may give to your own inclinations. Just one quarter, one half, two thirds"—did He say that? Why, "thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind and with all thy strength, and thy neighbor as thyself. ... This do and thou shalt live." [Luke 10:25-28.]4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 17

There are the conditions. Now, I ask, are you obeying? Those who have made a profession of Jesus Christ, are you loving your neighbor as yourself? Are you straining to reach that high level of holiness? "I sanctified Myself in order that you might be sanctified."

[John 17:19.] If you reach a high standard, another may be inclined to reach it, and an unconscious influence is telling upon the souls and lives and characters of those around you. Suppose the physicians in the institute should take a position to lower the standard, it will be seen in the judgment that they are weighed in the balance and found wanting. Suppose in our college the teachers should be lax and loose, and should not take a consistent course in accordance with the Bible standard—what if they have been lowering the Bible standard? They form characters that will not meet the approval of high heaven, and when the judgment reveals the fact, it will be seen that the youth were drawn away from the path cast out for them to walk in. It will be seen that their very inattentions to religious duties had an influence to draw them in the wrong direction. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 18

Every one of us is responsible before God—those of us in institutions, and every member of us. It is not the ministers alone who carry the weight of responsibility; but every church member must bow before God, or they will never see those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. If such a life is led, they will have little influence and desire for distinction. If that prevails with them, then they have been exerting an influence for God; but if not, they have exerted an influence which shall perish with them. Every church member is a minister in one sense. Said Christ, “Ye are the light of the world, a city which is set on an hill cannot be hid. ... Let your light so shine before men, that they” by seeing—what? Your name on the church book? Your works? Your good works shall “glorify your Father which is in heaven.” [Matthew 5:14, 16.] These good works lift the mind up to Jesus, chief among ten thousand. It is to carry the mind up to the mighty hold of power and fasten it there to worship God, and how by the grace of God which is manifested in your character, which is expressed by your works. All these things reveal Jesus. These things are expressed in our talk, in our devotion, in our zeal, in our intensity to magnify His name. This work rests on the churches. The working church will be the live church. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 19

There are a large number here who ought to be out in small communities, letting their light shine in these communities where they could help and strengthen. They ought to be lending their strength to build up the kingdom of God, and every one who is engaged in this work will grow stronger. What are they doing? Which are at work for the Master? Which are investing their capital in the truth, a truth which has been brought to them? Which are putting their talents to use? As time goes on they will be better able to labor, because they are employing the ability which God has given them, exercising it and becoming more skilled in meeting the darts of the enemy. They are not ignorant of the devices of the enemy. They know how to meet the power of Satan, to lift up the weak, and to strengthen the feeble knees. They know how to inspire with hope the sinking soul, and in this work they are becoming acquainted with God. They are becoming acquainted with Jesus Christ, because they are co-workers. They understand better every day the character of Christ. We want to love God firmly, and right along, not minding whether we are observed, whether we are loved or not loved, but keeping the love of God in our hearts and loving our fellow men all around us, seeking to win souls to the Master, that we can sympathize with them and that we can help those who need help.⁴*LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 20*

Is that not the best way to find that strength which you need? forget yourself? As you forget yourself, you forget a thousand weaknesses, you ride right over those difficulties. You master them because there is work to be done for the Master; and in doing that work for the Master, you forget self, you get your mind away from yourself; and in doing this, your soul becomes strong. You know that the triumphs are for you because you have complied with the conditions, you have tested the Master. I proved the Master when I came on this journey. I proved the Master when I stepped aboard the cars. I said I would start, and as soon as I placed myself in the position to carry out the work and will of the Master—as I thought it was—I had sufficient strength for the day, and it has been given right along as I needed it. You feel the need of it, and you do not think you can do anything. Go to work for Jesus, and you will find that the grace of Christ will be imparted unto you. We won't need to compromise with the lovers of mammon. "What agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" [2 Corinthians 6:16.] If you have idols, let Jesus, let faith come in. What we want is a deeper work in our hearts. There are many who will never enter the pearly portals. Life has been a mistake, and it would have been better if they never had been born. It is a great responsibility to live; it is not a trifling matter. Day by day the record is going to heaven. Life is sacred to some duty, and we are not here to please ourselves. Christ did not seek to please Himself, to seek for supremacy.⁴*LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 21*

Seek to do the duty that comes next, not attempt to climb at one bound to the top of the ladder because you will fall short of it, but to climb round by round until you step off into the kingdom of glory. The work is before us. It is to do up a lifework with an eye single to the glory of God, not to attain the praise of men, not to be of high esteem. What was Jesus? The Majesty of heaven, to whom even angels bowed, the Light of heaven, the Light of the city of God. And what was He? He was a servant. When we think of Jesus, how He walked, how He was of humble mien, think of Him as a man of sorrows; as He stands there upon the steps of the temple beside the high priest clothed in his gorgeous apparel, dusty and weary from travel, He looks over the scene and sees the temple desecrated. There were the sheep and the oxen; and as He cast His eye over the scene, the divine flashed through the human. There was the gorgeous priest, there was the simple and humble man, dust stained, but yet the Majesty of heaven, the King of glory, He who had left the royal courts in order to reach the very depths of human woe and lift fallen man up, He who came to our world to embrace the race with His long human arm and with the other to grasp the throne of the Infinite, that He might connect finite man to the infinite God and unite earth with heaven. This was the man who stood there not in His appearance attractive.⁴*LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 22*

What did attract the multitudes? It was the purity of His character, the goodness and loveliness of His character. It was this which was to charm; and as His eye sweeps over the scene, His divinity held power over mortal man. They held themselves perfectly quiet with bated breath. They looked upon that Man to see what would come next. The silence was painful. He says, "Take these things away. It is written, My Father's house shall be the house of prayer, but you have made it a den of thieves" [John 2:16; Matthew 21:13], and then they fled from the place as if a band of soldiers was following. What was it that had taken the place? The sick were brought into the court of the temple, and He was healing the soul as well as the body. He bent in love over the tender infant, over the decrepit, and those who were suffering with loathsome diseases He healed every one of them. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 23

It is our work to devote our God-given powers, to have them in living union with God, that we may have loveliness of character, and that we may know Jesus Christ. We shall find that we shall be the light of the world, that we shall attract not to ourselves, but to God; not to glorify us, but to glorify our Father which art in heaven. Every one of us has that work to do, but I am afraid the Master could not say "well done" to many of you today. Why? Because you are not doing one thing. Because you are not improving the talents of the mind; because the mind which God has given you, you are not trying to study how you can exalt the Master, glorify His name by the power He has given you. I will say again, I am afraid of nominal morality. I am afraid of religion without Jesus, where ye are neither cold nor hot. I would rather you were cold or hot. Because you are lukewarm you carry no loads, feel no distress for sinners, no agonies for souls as you see them dying around you. "Because thou art lukewarm I will spew thee out of My mouth." [Revelation 3:16.] We are to wash our robes of character and make them white in the blood of the Lamb. What next? You don't want to be blind to the world, to their wickedness and sin, that you should call sin righteousness and righteousness sin. You want to be wide-awake. You want to have the eyesalve applied to your eyes, that you may observe righteousness which you must have in order to be Christ's. You want this discernment, that you may not be ignorant of Satan's devices, that you may know how to defend yourself against him. After you have done what you can, the Spirit of the Lord will lift up the standard against the enemy. It is the power of the Almighty which is given to those who seek for it. All heaven is open to our demand. All heaven was poured out in one grand gift to man. What have we? We have Christ on our side, and then we are to walk with God. We are to feel that God and angels are willing to help us in the work, and then by and by when those trying scenes of the day of God hang upon us, then it will be seen who have been laying up treasure in heaven, who have been working out their own salvation with fear and trembling. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 24

Look at that little company of Christians. They are very small. They do not appear attractive. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be: but when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in Him purifieth himself, even as He is pure." [1 John 3:2, 3.] That is the work. They have a pure character. This is what we are working for, a pure heart, a loveliness of character, that our lives may not be blotted out of the book of life. He says: I will not blot out their names out of the book of life. [Revelation 3:5.] I will set before you an open door. No man can shut it. "I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." [Verse 8.] How can you come on to these things and say that you cannot overcome? Why, yes, you can. I have set before thee an open door. No man can shut it. It has the strength of the Infinite One. It is the One who is our mediator. He is making atonement, and the light of the glory of God reflected upon the face of Jesus shineth upon us children here upon the earth which is strength for every one of us. Are you conquering day by day? It is those who have conquered whose names will not be blotted out of the book of life, but they shall enter in through the gates and have right to the tree of life. Blessed are they who do His commandments, for they shall enter in through the city, and they shall have right to the tree of life. I know that Satan is blinding the eye; I know he is shutting our very sight. Iniquity is interposing between us, but we want to get these things out, we want to get the soul temple cleansed, we want to open the door; for Jesus is knocking at the door of the heart, and we want to welcome Him in, and then we shall come nigh to God and lay hold of His mighty power, a present help in every time of need; and at last the city gates will be thrown wide, and the nations who have kept the faith shall enter in and have right to the tree of life. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 25

God grant this may be the lot of every one of us; may none of you be left out. 4LtMs, Ms 2, 1885, par. 26

Ms 2a, 1885

Counsel to a Physician and Medical Students

Duplicate of Ms 4a, 1885.

Ms 3, 1885

The Obedience of the Sabbath

Christiania, Norway

October 8 [November 7 (?)], 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 3SM 259-260; HP 150, 151; 1BC 1099-1100; 6BC 1102; 5MR 3-6; CTr 109.

My mind has been burdened in regard to the condition of the church in this place. When the mission fields in this country were opened before me, I was shown many things in every branch of the mission that needed a different mold. There was much need of exalting the standard in this place in many respects before a correct and saving influence could go forth to other places. As the truth has been presented here, it has taken persons from the world and from the churches and brought them together in church capacity; but not all who have professed to believe the truth are sanctified through it. 4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 1

One matter has troubled me exceedingly; that is your manner of keeping the Sabbath. While some have been urging their manmade test upon the people, the claims of the fourth commandment have been held very lightly. The blessing of God cannot rest upon this church until there is a reformation on this point. Those who teach the Word should take a higher position in regard to the Lord's claims. They should be careful that in no way they belittle the requirements of God, but that their example is such as will lead the people to correct views and practices. Because the fourth commandment is so widely disregarded, we are to be the more earnest and decided in seeking to honor this precept of God's holy law. The third angel's message is what we are to present to the world. Here God has a test for us; and if we come up to the standard, we shall be a peculiar people. 4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 2

The Sabbath draws a separating line between us and the world, not faintly, but in plain, distinct colors. To those who have received the light of this truth, the Sabbath is a test; it is not a human requirement, but God's test. It is what will distinguish between those who serve God and those who serve Him not; and upon this point will come the last great conflict between truth and error. All who profess to keep God's law should stand united in the sacred observance of His holy Sabbath. 4LTMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 3

Among our people generally in these kingdoms the Sabbath has not stood in the exalted position where God has placed it. The world is the instrument that sifts the church and tests the genuineness of its members. The world holds out inducements that, when accepted, place the believer where his life is not in harmony with his profession. Some of our brethren, engaged in business, have not kept the Sabbath according to the commandment. Some have been in partnership with unbelievers, and the influence of these Sabbathbreaking associates has had its effect upon them. Some have been so blinded that they could not discern the dangers in such connections; but it is only the greater because unperceived. While one partner is professedly observing the Sabbath, the other, with the laborers employed, is carrying on the business of the firm. The Sabbathkeeper, though not outwardly engaged in labor, cannot keep his thoughts from business matters. He may be drawn into settling accounts, receiving or paying out money, or by sharing the profits of Sabbath labor he becomes a violator of the commandment. While he professes to keep the Sabbath, he does not keep it. The Lord looks upon him as a transgressor. He will not accept the gifts and sacrifices of those who are thus disregarding His requirements. Even in business relations we cannot, without involving principle, connect ourselves with those who are not loyal to God. The general whom worldlings serve is in deadly opposition to the Prince of life. Satan works through his subjects to ensnare the followers of Christ. The principles of the Christian are diverse from those of the ungodly. What the one party feels that conscience forbids, the other allows. And this not merely in regard to religious matters, but in business transactions. One acts from selfish motives, regardless of God's law or the faith of those connected with him; and if the other sincerely loves God and the truth, there must be either a sacrifice of principle or frequent and painful differences. A man who has not a daily experience in the things of God will be very likely to choose an easy, compromising course; but one who has a true sense of spiritual things, and regards the salvation of the soul as the very first consideration, will have a continual struggle to guard against yielding to the influence of his ungodly associate, and he will be constantly pained by the conflict. He has great difficulties to meet. To sacrifice the principles of his faith in the slightest particular places him on the enemy's ground; thus he separates himself from God, and he fails of that spiritual growth which is his privilege. 4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 4

Redemption was purchased for us at an infinite cost, and its reality and its magnitude we should keep ever before us. Man has a continual battle with his own heart, with the world, the flesh, and the devil, that are constantly seeking to interpose between him and his God. The only safe course for the followers of Christ is to give heed to the inspired injunction, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? or what communion hath light with darkness?" [2 Corinthians 6:14.] "Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean, and I will receive you." [Verse 17.]4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 5

Some of the people have been sending their children to school on the Sabbath. And some have tried to justify their course by quoting the words of Christ, "It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day." [Matthew 12:12.] But the same reasoning would prove that men may labor on the Sabbath because they must earn bread for their children; and there is no limit, no boundary line, to show what should and what should not be done. Had these dear brethren possessed greater spirituality, had they realized the binding claims of God's law as every one of us should, they would have known their duty and need not have been walking in darkness. They cannot enjoy the approval of God while they place their children where it is impossible for them to obey the fourth commandment. They should endeavor to make some arrangements with the authorities whereby their children can be excused from attendance at school upon the seventh day. If this fails, then their duty is plain—to obey God's requirements at whatever cost. Whenever it can be done, our people should establish schools of their own. If, after they have plainly stated their faith, the officer of justice comes to their doors and compels their children to attend school, then they should faithfully instruct the children, and as soon as possible remove to some place where there are different laws, and they can be free to keep the commandments of God.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 6

Still some will urge that the Lord is not so particular in His requirements as we would have them believe. They profess to keep the Sabbath; but in order to keep their business moving forward, some things must be attended to on the seventh day. If they were to observe the Sabbath so strictly, they would suffer much loss, and they claim that a departure from the exact letter of the commandment is excusable for them. Others urge the difficulty of giving their children an education if they do not send them to school on the Sabbath, and the danger of being brought in conflict with the laws of the land. But here is just where the test is coming, whether we will honor the law of God above the requirements of men. Here is where we are to prove our loyalty. God does not consult our convenience in regard to His commandments. He expects us to obey them, and to teach them to our children, as did Abraham. Abraham commanded his children and his household after him to keep the way of the Lord, and this was why such great blessings were pronounced upon him and his posterity.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 7

When the destroying angel was about to pass through the land of Egypt and smite the first-born of both man and beast, the Israelites were directed to bring their children into the house with them, and to strike the doorpost with blood; and none were to go out of the house, for all that were found among the Egyptians would be destroyed with them. We should take this lesson to ourselves. Again the destroying angel is to pass through the land. There is to be a mark placed upon God's people, and that mark is the keeping of His holy Sabbath. We are not to follow our own will and judgment, and flatter ourselves that God will come to our terms. Suppose an Israelite had neglected to place the sign of blood upon his door, saying that the angels of God would be able to distinguish between the Hebrews and the Egyptians: would the heavenly sentinels have stood to guard that dwelling? That which looks unimportant to you may be of the highest consequence in God's special plans for the preservation of your life or the salvation of your soul. God tests our faith by giving us some part to act in connection with His interposition in our behalf. To those who comply with the conditions, His promise will be fulfilled. But all that venture to depart from His instructions, to follow a way of their own choosing, will perish with the wicked when His judgments are visited upon the earth.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 8

If parents allow their children to receive an education with the world and make the Sabbath a common day, then the seal of God cannot be placed upon them. They will be destroyed with the world; and will not their blood rest upon the parents? We are faithfully to teach our children God's commandments; we should bring them into subjection to parental authority and then by faith and prayer commit them to God, and He will work with our efforts, for He has promised it. And when the overflowing scourge shall pass through the land, they, with us, may be hidden in the secret of the Lord's pavilion.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 9

The Lord suffered His people Israel to go into bondage in Egypt because they did not walk in His ways, but dishonored Him by their continual transgressions. Here, subjected to oppression and hard servitude, they could not keep God's Sabbath, and by their long mingling with a nation of idolaters their faith became confused and corrupted. Association with the ungodly and unbelieving will have the same influence upon those who believe the present truth, unless they keep the Lord ever before them so that His Spirit shall be their shield.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 10

When the Israelites cried unto God in their distress, He heard them and wrought through Moses for their deliverance. Pharaoh saw the mighty working of the Spirit of God; he saw the miracles which the Lord performed by His servant; but he refused obedience to God's command. The rebellious king had proudly inquired, "Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice to let Israel go? I know not the Lord, neither will I let Israel go." [Exodus 5:2.] And as the judgments of God fell more and more heavily upon him, he persisted in stubborn resistance. By rejecting light from heaven, he became hard and unimpressible. The providence of God was revealing His power, and these manifestations, unacknowledged, were the means of hardening Pharaoh's heart against greater light. Those who exalt their own ideas above the plainly specified will of God are saying, as did Pharaoh, "Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice?" Every rejection of light hardens the heart and darkens the understanding; and thus men find it more and more difficult to distinguish between right and wrong, and they become bolder in resisting the will of God.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 11

The Lord brought Israel from Egypt, that they might keep His Sabbath, and He gave them special directions how to keep it. The instructions given to Moses were recorded for the benefit of all who should live upon the earth to the close of time. God has spoken; let us listen to His words and obey them. When the manna was given, the people were tested upon God's law. Then said the Lord to the children of Israel through Moses, "I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in My law or no. ... And it came to pass that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses. And he said unto them, This is that which the Lord hath said, Tomorrow is the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord: bake that which ye will bake to day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning." [Exodus 16:4, 22, 23.] Notwithstanding this special direction of God, some did go out to gather manna on the seventh day, but they found none; and the Lord said unto Moses, "How long refuse ye to keep My commandments and My laws?" [Verse 28.]4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 12

That there might be no mistake in the matter, the Father and the Son descended upon Mount Sinai, and there the precepts of His law were spoken in awful grandeur in the hearing of all Israel.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 13

The fourth commandment is explicit. We are not to do our own work upon the Sabbath. God has given man six days for labor, but He has reserved the seventh to Himself, and He has pronounced a blessing upon those who keep it holy. On the sixth day all needful preparation for the Sabbath is to be made. "Bake that which ye will bake to day, and seethe that ye will seethe." "To morrow is the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord." [Verse 23.] All purchases should be made, and all our cooking should be done, on Friday. Let baths be taken, shoes be blacked, and clothing be put in readiness. The sick require care upon the Sabbath; and whatever it may be necessary to do for their comfort is an act of mercy, and not a violation of the commandment. God does not desire the sacrifice of health, even on the Sabbath. But nothing of our own work should be permitted to encroach upon holy time.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 14

Sunday is generally made a day of feasting and pleasure-seeking; but the Lord would have His people give the world a higher, holier example. Upon the Sabbath there should be a solemn dedication of the family to God. The commandment includes all within our gates; all the inmates of our house are to lay aside their worldly business and employ the sacred hours in devotion. Let all unite to honor God upon His holy day.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 15

God calls upon the workers in this mission to elevate the standard and to show their regard for His requirements by honoring the Sabbath. Christiania is an important point in our mission fields: it is the great center of our work for the Scandinavian peoples. From this place the publications are sent out, and the laborers go forth to proclaim the commandments of God; and it is of the greatest importance that a right influence be exerted by this church, both by precept and example. The standard must not be placed so low that those who accept the truth shall transgress God's commandments while professing to obey them. Better, far better, would it be to leave them in darkness until they could receive the truth in its purity.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 16

There are those who are watching this people to see what is the influence of the truth upon them. The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light; when the claims of the fourth commandment are set before them, they look to see how it is regarded by those who profess to obey it. They study the life and character of its advocates to learn whether these are in harmony with their profession of faith; and upon the opinions thus formed, many are influenced very largely in the acceptance or rejection of the truth. If this people will conform their lives to the Bible standard, they will be indeed a light in the world, a city set upon a hill.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 17

But those who have decided to make their own standard, to be their own criterion, will take positions that will lead the uninformed astray. While professing to love the truth, some betray worldliness in their faith and experience. There is a vein of unbelief running through their experience, because they do not keep near to Jesus, the Light of the world. The cross of Christ is but partially lifted by them. They have not made an entire surrender of their own will and ways to God. They do not love self-denial and are unwilling to conform in every respect to His requirements. They know but little of fervent love or true gratitude to God, and they are satisfied with their attainments, though they have but little knowledge of the Scriptures.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 18

From the first, some in Christiania have bargained that they will come so far in their faith, and no further. They only decided to hold with the church and the world; and unless they are converted, when these separate, they will be swept in with the world. With some, business has come first; it has been a mental reservation with them; and when it comes in conflict with the truth, it is more afflicting with them to give up their idol than to retain a wicked heart. Conscience is on the side of the truth, but their hearts are with the world, and Satan makes speedy work with all such when the test comes. All who venture to choose their own way before God's requirements are on dangerous ground. When the Lord comes closer to them with startling truths and warning, saying, "Thou art the man" [2 Samuel 12:7], and urging them to separate from the world, Satan takes the words right out of their hearts and minds. They see no real force in them; their feelings rise up against God, and in their hearts, if not with their lips, they say, like Pharaoh, "Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice?" [Exodus 5:2.] Many will be deceived to the last because they feel themselves all-sufficient. May God pity the ones whose influence has helped to cause this deathlike slumber.4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 19

Many claim that it is consistent to pursue a course which will save them loss or inconvenience, and by which they can avoid ridicule. So might Noah have reasoned when he built that immense boat on dry land. So might the children of Israel have reasoned when the Lord gave them special directions as to what they should do. Whoever will enter the strait gate and travel the narrow path cast up for the ransomed of the Lord to walk in will find obstacles to hinder his progress. Brethren, if you go forward toward heaven, the world will rub hard against you. At every step you will have to urge your way against Satan and his evil angels, and against all who transgress God's law. Earthly authorities will interpose. You will meet tribulations, bruising of the spirit, hard speeches, ridicule, persecutions. Men will require your conformity to laws and customs that would render you disloyal to God. Here is where God's people find the cross in the way to life. But if the Sabbath of the fourth commandment is sacred, if it is indeed, as brought to view in the third angel's message, the sign between God and His people, we must be careful in every word and in every act to show God honor. If God's requirements are binding, you must obey them all, or you will be found with the rebellious at last. The strong force of the downward current will sweep you off your feet, unless you are united to Christ as the limpet to the rock. 4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 20

God calls upon His people to come out from the world and to be separate. "For what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Beliel? Or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? For ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." "Having these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." [2 Corinthians 6:14-7:1.]4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 21

Let none continue to transgress, flattering themselves that their way is as good as God's way. This was what Satan suggested to Eve in Eden. By this means he caused the fall of man, and he is still urging the same deception. There are very many in the churches who are deceiving their own souls. They reach a standard of their own creating. They think that religion consists in going to church to hear sermons and to have a good, happy feeling. If their emotions are stirred, and a few tears are shed, this is positive evidence to them that they are Christians. Upon these feelings, and a general belief that Jesus is the Saviour of the world, they base their hope of salvation. They do not comprehend that if they ever reach heaven it must be by daily self-denial and conflict. Many whose names are on the church books know no more about practical godliness than the veriest sinner. This fair-weather Christianity will not do in the time towards which we are rushing. Under the sun of scorching trial, all such will be found withered away. A new life is taking possession of Satan's agencies. The test of temptation will reveal whether we are truly the sons and daughters of God. "By their fruits ye shall know them." [Matthew 7:20.] And the trials here will not be so severe as that of the final judgment. It is not best to meet the Lord unprepared and to find that all our superficial goodness weighs nothing with Him. 4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 22

We stand on the threshold of great and solemn events. Prophecy is fast fulfilling. A new life is descending from on high and taking possession of God's people. Some souls will have to advance fast or they will have to be left far behind in darkness. The judgment is hastening. The Word of God is rebuking, warning, and entreating men to reach the Bible standard, but Satan has brought about such a condition of things in our churches that it will be most difficult to bring them to their senses and arouse them to see their God-given responsibilities. If they will with real contrition of heart confess their sins, they may, through watchfulness and prayer, come off conquerors. But they must look beyond earthly gain, away from worldly advantages, to the great beyond. They must hesitate at no sacrifice for Christ's sake, who has paid for them the penalty of the law transgressed. We are now living in the solemn period of the antitypical day of atonement. In the type, the sins of the people were, on the atonement day, to be called to mind and repented of. It was a time of humiliation and affliction of soul. The greatest care was enjoined, that every part of the service be attended to with becoming reverence, lest the anger of the Lord be displayed. The high priest was required to make the most careful and solemn preparation, and he must guard himself with the utmost diligence from all contamination. How much more, while the antitypical atonement is going on in heaven, should those who minister in sacred things be holy. "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." [Isaiah 52:11.] Said Christ, "I sanctify Myself that they also may be sanctified." [John 17:19.] Those who are sent to the people in Christ's stead should be men of God, pure in life, pure in conversation, ensamples to the flock. They have a solemn work before them, "warning every man and teaching every man, in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." "Whereunto I also labor, striving according to His working, which worketh in me mightily." [Colossians 1:28, 29.]4LtMs, Ms 3, 1885, par. 23

Ms 4, 1885

Sermon/Christian Fellowship

Christiania, Norway

November 9, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in 2SAT 20-25.

(Hebrews 12:12-17): "Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way: but let it rather be healed. Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord: looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled; lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright. For ye know how that afterward, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears." The Lord would have His people come very close to Himself. It is important that everyone who professes to be a child of God should carry the spirit and teachings of Christ into his every day life. Let us look critically to ourselves, compare our characters with the only standard of righteousness, lest we shall make any crooked paths for our feet and many shall, through our want of faith and intelligent knowledge of the Scriptures, be turned out of the way.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 1

We want much more of the love of God in our hearts than we have today; and unless we do have the graces of the Spirit of Christ, we shall be channels of darkness. It is our privilege to have the witness of the Spirit that our ways please God. We should not be satisfied unless we have this evidence. We must be pure in heart, and our works must be wrought in God. We need the special working of the Spirit of God upon our hearts. All the profession of the truth that we can make will be of no avail to us unless we have Christ abiding with us. We have altogether too little faith and firm reliance upon God.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 2

We are in days of trial, and the adversary of souls is upon our track; and while we stand out separate from the world, how tenderly we should press close together in faith, in love, doing one another good. United we are strong, divided we are weak. When Christ is abiding in us, we shall have sweet communion with Him. We shall not be seeking to build up self and will not have an overestimate of our own abilities; we will humble ourselves. We will not find fault with others, and we shall be very careful lest we entertain thoughts in our hearts against our brethren and injure their influence. Satan will constantly tempt us to do this. How can it look in the sight of heaven, in the presence of holy beings, to be continually finding fault with your brethren? In the place of being jealous, and thinking that your own ways are right in the sight of God, you should be jealous for your brother's feelings. Now if every one will make straight paths for his own feet to travel in, then he will be able to help his brother. We should take heed to our ways and draw nigh to God day by day. If we have the spirit of prayer then we shall press our petition to the throne of grace; and if we pray more and search the Scriptures with far greater diligence, we will not be denied the blessing God has promised to bestow. We will not then be jealous of one another. God has not set any of you upon the track of your brother, to find fault with him. Keep your own feet in the straight path and then you will by your example encourage your brother. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 3

When Christ told Peter what he should do, Peter answered, "Lord, and what shall this man do?" Jesus said, "What is that to thee? follow thou Me." [John 21:21, 22.] We want to be very jealous of ourselves. We want to examine ourselves and see if we are in the love of God. Unless Jesus is in us, we are reprobates. Every one of us will be tried; and unless we are closely connected with God, the trials that will come upon us will weaken our already weak faith, and we shall become the sport of Satan's temptations. But if we are connected with Christ and draw close to Jesus when these trials come, He will draw nigh to us. Satan will have no victory over us. "Draw nigh to God, and He will draw nigh to you." [James 4:8.] We must commit the keeping of our souls to God as unto a faithful Creator. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 4

We should not allow any feelings to come into our hearts against any of our brethren, for this is not the spirit of Christ; it is not the principle of truth to be finding fault and thinking evil of our brethren. If there are any difficulties that arise in your midst, seek every way that you can to adjust them; this is your Christian duty. You may think that your brother is wholly in the fault, but if your brother does not come to you, you must go to him and try to come together. You must be in harmony; unless you are in harmony one with another, Christ cannot abide in your heart. Will you bow before God in prayer every day and ask Him to let the light of His Holy Spirit come into your hearts, and do not cease pleading with God until every evil thought and feeling is overcome. Christ says, "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed." [James 5:16.] How much of this work have you done? Should the spirit of confession come into the church, you would surely see of the salvation of God. 4LTM, Ms 4, 1885, par. 5

We want to retain Christian fellowship and love in our midst. And remember that Christ has said, "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples if ye have love one for another." [John 13:35.] Can we take this all in? How much has Christ loved us? He denied Himself and was willing to endure every sacrifice, that we might have eternal life. He for our sakes became poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich; and He says, "Love one another, as I have loved you." [Verse 34.] Then let us put Satan out of our hearts and invite Christ to come in. 4LTM, Ms 4, 1885, par. 6

If we allow envy and hatred in our hearts, Christ cannot abide there. We should every one seek to build one another up in the most holy faith, and individually we should look to Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith. Then you can lead others to the Saviour. Christ has said, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat." [Luke 13:24; Matthew 7:13.] We must urge our way through the crowd that is making their way in the broad road; we must be firm to obey God. We must purify our souls by obeying the truth; and the nearer we get to Jesus, the more we reflect upon His lovely character, the more we will reflect His divine image upon those around us. When others see that you are determined to be right yourselves, they will see that the truth of God has an influence upon your life and character; then you will be a bright light to the world. I beg of you to seek most earnestly to be a help to others, complying with the conditions in the Word of God, "Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." [Matthew 11:29.] 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 7

The trouble with many is they have lost sight of Jesus and fail to see the self-denial and love and mercy in His character, and therefore they do not imitate His life. But Jesus wants us to be one with Him as He was one with the Father, and He wants us to be united one with another. We want to show to the world that we have a faith that is elevating, that it makes us kind, courteous, self-denying, and begets in us love and reverence for God, and makes us Christian ladies and gentlemen. We must pray more earnestly for the grace of Christ which is essential for us if we preserve our integrity and spiritual life. If any one comes to you and begins to tell you of the faults of another, if you cannot stop that voice in any other way, lift your voice and sing the doxology. Vain talkers and mischief-makers are Satan's agents in doing his work. There is a great work to be done for this church, and the sad part of it is there are so many well satisfied with themselves. They must be converted, their thoughts must be directed in a divine channel. We have a mighty soul-purifying truth, and this truth is to sanctify us individually. Satan has come down with great power, knowing that his time is short. He will overthrow the faith of some in this assembly unless we keep close to Jesus. We are warned that he will work with all power and signs and lying wonders, and therefore we want to be building up a firm character. All our powers should be trained to war against the enemy, for as Christ's faithful soldiers, we want to be minutemen and give no place to the devil. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 8

Satan's work will be manifested in such power that if it were possible he would deceive the very elect. And if he can, he will get your minds confused, and you will lose sight of the truth and separate yourselves from the God of your strength. God wants you to be in that position where He can do a great work for you. He wants you to have an intelligent faith. You do not want to present to the people a pattern mingled with defects of your character and give the world false views of Jesus. It is our duty as Christians to represent Christ. 4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 9

There are many who have professions of faith and doctrines who are not converted; and unless they shall humble their hearts before God, and bring the truth into the inner sanctuary of the soul, they will not represent Jesus, but dishonor His name and make of none effect the truth of God. They talk much about the power of the enemy, but do not bring their minds to God. Now if you will open your hearts to the truth, then your understanding will be clear, and you can present the truth to others. But if there are doubts and unbelief entertained, Christ cannot bring His light and the glory of His presence into your souls. Cannot you now begin to cultivate faith, and talk of the mercies of God, and praise God with all your hearts? It is by prayer that you will receive strength to resist temptation. Christ will supply your wants and relieve your doubts and fill your soul with gladness.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 10

If we are to do as the apostle recommends us to do—give to every man a reason of the hope that is within us with meekness and fear—then we want the truth stamped upon our hearts. Here is where the great lack has been with many, very many. They have a nominal faith. There has been too much time devoted to small things unworthy of the least thought, and the mind is dwarfed and bound about with the things it dwelt upon. Shall we have the converting power of God in our midst? Christ says, “Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me.” [Revelation 3:20.] Clear away the rubbish you have piled before the door of your heart, and let Jesus come in.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 11

There is something for every one of us to do to clear the King’s highway. We want to confess and forsake our sins and have them go beforehand to judgment, that when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and He shall send Jesus, our sins will be blotted out. What we want is pure and undefiled religion before God. We read in the Scriptures that pure and undefiled religion before God is this: that we visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction, and that we keep ourselves unspotted from the world. [James 1:27.] It is not outward show that makes the Christian. But it is the sanctifying power of the grace of God upon the soul. By their fruits ye shall know them. [Matthew 7:20.] If a man is meek and Christlike, he will reflect this; and if he is puffed up and thinks he knows it all, he takes the position that he does not need to learn in the school of Christ, and the very lessons he needs to learn he does not learn; at last he is weighed in the balances and found wanting. It is too late then for wrongs to be righted. The days of probation was the time for him to learn these lessons. Now is the time to do God's will; and in seeking to conform your will to the will of God, you will have that love for your fellow men that Christ had for you, and you will be indeed a light to the world.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 12

Whenever your lips are inclined to find fault with your brethren's ways and manners, just think that you, too, have sins to overcome; look to Jesus, and pattern after His character. Christ is coming. I remember when we thought that the end was to come in 1844; and when we came together in our meetings, the question would be asked by one and another, "Brethren, have you seen anything in me that is not right? I know that we cannot see our own faults; and if any of the brethren have seen anything wrong in me, I want them to tell me." Sometimes there would be wrongs confessed, and we would bow before God and ask His forgiveness. Then you would see brethren who had had some difficulty going away alone in some barn or orchard and pleading with God together; and then they would come arm in arm, loving one another, and at peace among themselves. We felt that we could not separate unless everything was in harmony. The sweet spirit of peace was in our midst, and the glory of God was around us. You could see faces shine.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 13

[Part of manuscript missing here.]4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 14

We must get closer to God, and then Christ will be our light, and the light of truth will reflect upon the world. We want to educate ourselves to talk of the truth, talk of heaven and heavenly things; converse of the Saviour's love; and then we shall be fitting up for a holy heaven. If Christ when He shall come should find us with all the defects of character we have today, there will be no such thing as our getting into the courts of heaven, and there will be no chance for us to reform then. Christ does not promise to transform our characters then, after He shall come. We must seek righteous characters now. But if we have built up ourselves in our own righteousness, He does not change the character. The change must be here. We must wash our robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb in this world, and then we shall have the white linen which is the righteousness of the saints. But if we go on in our sins, Christ can never take such to heaven. It is only those who are holy who can see a holy God.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 15

And I pray for you, my brethren, that you may make sure work for eternal life. As a messenger of Jesus Christ, I entreat of you to let love come into your hearts. Every soul that shall be saved must be holy and pure in this world. Every soul that falls upon the Rock and is broken, Christ with His everlasting arms gathers him to His bosom. Put your heart into the work. There are many of you grasping the truth with the ends of your fingers, and here is the world looking upon you and witnessing that you are not Christians. If you gather the precious rays of light that God has given you, you can scatter these blessed beams upon the pathway of others. May God wake you up, that you may seek your closets and pray to God, and believe that He hears you; for He says, "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." [Verse 7.]4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 16

Then come just as you are, and He will help you. He will save to the uttermost all who come unto Him. He wants to wash you from every stain of sin. I love Him because He first loved me; I see in Jesus matchless charms, and I want a part with Him in His heavenly kingdom.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 17

And now, my brethren, "Seek the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near; let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." [Isaiah 55:6, 7.]4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 18

May God help us to seek Him and to realize that He will do just as He has said He would. This is the victory, even your faith.4LtMs, Ms 4, 1885, par. 19

Ms 4a, 1885

Counsel to Physicians and Medical Students

NP

July 27, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in PH167.

The Lord is soon to come. Perilous times are before us, and never was there a period when the exhortation of the Apostle—(2 Corinthians 6:14-7:1)—was more appropriate than now. “Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and My daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.”4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 1

This is the important work before us, to separate ourselves in spirit and in practice from the world, if we would comply with the conditions to become sons and daughters of God. The apostle urges home the advantages thus presented, that we should lay hold of them as special blessings. “Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and the spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.” [2 Corinthians 7:1.] Here is earnest work for every one of us; right thoughts, pure and holy purposes, will not come to us naturally; they must be sought for and encouraged.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 2

In our institutions for health, especially, should the pure and holy principles take root downward, and the result will be that fruit will appear. Unless the spirit and principles which characterized the life of Christ be planted in the heart, they will not control the life. Very many professed Christians are so only in name. They have no root in themselves. They have a superficial knowledge of the truth and break off some of their evil practices; but the heart is still filled with pride, impurities, unholy ambition, self-importance, and love for the supremacy.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 3

The soul temple must be cleansed of its defilement, there must be purity of thought and intensity of desire, united with earnest efforts to meet the standard in God's Word, or they will never become elevated, subdued, purified, and wear the white linen which is the righteousness of the saints, and become fitted for the companionship of the pure and holy.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 4

There are a large number who have a theory of the truth, and can prove their doctrines to be scriptural and sound, who hold the truth in unrighteousness. Their course of action denies their faith. Their hearts are not sanctified through the truth. They have not the spirit and power of the truth. They are unholy in heart and are not Christlike in deportment. Their works testify of them that they have not the truth as it is in Jesus.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 5

To be content to do as others do, and to be satisfied with a half-Christian life, is to fail of the standard altogether. Unless the evil of the heart, the deformity of character, be strenuously corrected day by day, according to the copy given us, there will be an entire failure. One darling sin cherished will defile the soul as one drop of ink will color a basin of water.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 6

We greatly need godly physicians; we need men who have high and pure and holy principles in every department of these instrumentalities of God. I have been shown that young men will accept the responsibility of obtaining a medical education and enter upon their course of study, designing to be right and maintain their Christian principles; but do they do this? No; they fall into temptation, and evil influences affect their morals. Among our own people who profess to believe the most solemn truths ever committed to mortals, there is a tarnishing of virtue, a sacrificing of principle. They do not, like Joseph and Daniel, preserve their integrity of morals, much less their Christian principles. The habits and customs of associates who claim to be respectable men and women have a molding influence upon them. Not only the youth, but those of mature age, are inclined to conform to the worldling's standard in order not to be considered singular. They come forth from their student life with their diplomas, but less fitted in may respects for the kind of work necessary for them to do than before they entered college. Faithfulness in little things is overlooked; they do not consider it essential to be so very exact. They have outgrown the pure, conscientious regard for truth and faithfulness they once possessed. They must study to grasp the higher work, the more important, and they are entirely unfitted for this higher work until tested and proven in lesser responsibilities. They need carefully to take up the smaller responsibilities and show themselves close, critical thinkers, having soundness of heart and uprightness, loyal to God and true to mankind in all things.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 7

The physician should show that he carries the burden of the grave, solemn responsibility, as a physician, of the bodies and souls of the sick and suffering. Not a word of careless flippancy should escape his lips; not a word should be spoken, having a tendency to awaken an impure thought; every thought, word, or action should be avoided, approaching to this. Nothing should be said to bring down the minds of any or direct them in an impure channel. A pure, noble-minded, God-fearing physician keeps his own counsel; but novices who have not real experience in dealing with the bodies and souls of men will talk boastfully of their knowledge and their attainments, when they have no experimental knowledge in the business they have entered upon. What these youth need is a better knowledge of themselves; then they will become more intelligent in regard to their duties and will understand that in every department where they may be called to labor, they must possess a willing mind, an earnest spirit, and a hearty, unselfish zeal in trying to do others good. They will not study how best to preserve their dignity as physicians, but by thoughtfulness and caretaking will earn a reputation and gain the hearts of those whom they serve. The heart must be enlisted and all absorbed in the work. The disciplinary process is sometimes in small matters and is too often regarded as menial employment.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 8

If this institution is what God designed it should be, as His instrumentality, it will not copy any institution in our land in its practices or moral standing. It will stand as a peculiar institution, governed and controlled after the Bible standard. No motive will be of sufficient force to move those engaged here from the straight line of duty. It will be reformatory in all its teachings and practice. There will be no uniting in closer harmony with the world in order to receive worldly patronage. Those who are under the control of the Spirit of God will not be found seeking their pleasure or amusement. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 9

If Jesus presides in the sanitarium, there will be a greater and more distinct separation from the world. Pleasure cannot entice from the way of justice. They will answer the injunction, Come out from among them and be separate, touching not the unclean, and in no wise partaking of sin. They will aim to reach the high pure, noble, elevated standard erected by our Lord Jesus Christ. The world, in its practices and ways and manners, will have no attractions to entice from duty. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." [2 Corinthians 6:17.] Will we hear the voice of God and obey? or will we make half-way work in the matter, trying to serve God and mammon at the same time? 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 10

There will be agents of Satan who will induce to sin; but the steady soul who loves and fears God will be as firm in his Heaven-inspired purpose as was Daniel, and will not be swerved from his convictions of duty. There will always be those in high places who have never subdued and overcome self. These Satan uses as decoys. They flatter the pleasure lovers by uniting with them. They court their approval. God has a work for His faithful ones to do, to stand in defense of the truth like faithful Noah. They will warn and entreat and show by their works their faith. They stand as God's agents, as Noah stood, in noble, whole-souled fidelity, the moral character untarnished. They are saviours of men like their Master. They will be exposed to hatred and reproach as was their Master. Enmity will be aroused, hatred and false accusations will pour like a torrent around them to wrench them from their high moral position; but they have their foundation on the Rock, and remain unmoved at their chosen post of duty, warning, entreating, rebuking sin and pleasure lovers by their moral rectitude and circumspect conversation. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 11

God's servants who will hear the "Well Done" from His divine lips will be heroic ministers of righteousness, although they may not preach in the desk. They are constantly ministering, loyal to their sense of God's claims upon them, jealous of their own selves, lest they shall dishonor the Lord that taught them to stand in defense of right and duty at any loss to themselves. This is the work of the Christian soldier. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 12

That which will stand under the pressure of temptation is heart religion. The whole heart must be given to God; if any portion of it be withheld, we have no right to claim the promise of being the favored sons and daughters of God. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 13

The Christian soldier will be trained through daily test to prove his fidelity. If in compliance with the conditions efforts are constantly made to "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God" [2 Corinthians 7:1], then God will do all He has promised; we shall have our names registered in the Lamb's book of life, and in the investigative judgment the True Witness says, "I will not blot out his name out of the book of life." [Revelation 3:5.] The names of the faithful will stand as sons and daughters of God, members of the royal family, children of the heavenly King. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 14

I have been shown that there exists a lamentable ignorance in regard to the guile that lurks in the human heart, which constantly inclines to self-indulgence, to pride, to self-importance, to love of self-exaltation, to seek the praise of men. The solemnity of living is not understood. Souls are lulled to sleep in the cradle of carnal security and discern not the signs of the times and the dangers that beset their path. They do not seek heavenly enlightenment day by day, that they may be guided into all truth and may have clear discernment to pass unscathed through the intricate mazes of falsehood, deception, and iniquity which exist in intense activity everywhere around us, within us. They go stumbling blindly along, not taking in the words of inspiration, "What concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God." Then the conditions are plainly laid before us: "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." [2 Corinthians 6:15-18.] 4LtMs,

Ms 4a, 1885, par. 15

Thousands upon thousands read these words, but neither understand them nor obey them. They come far short of obeying God's specified requirements, and they come equally short in their duty in every respect. Their consciences have become unimpressible through following their own inclination rather than duty.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 16

The most powerful appeals may be made and the solemn realities of eternity, the danger of losing the soul, be set before them in consequence of disregarding the express injunction of Jehovah, and they heed it not. They resent the message given them with, "You are too particular, too critical." The Bible presents the authority and claims of Jehovah, His righteous indignation, because of the careless inattention of those whom Christ came, through infinite sacrifice, to redeem, but they are not moved by the messages of warning. The terrors of the Lord will not have any permanent effect upon them to lead them to heed the warning to "come out from among them and be separate, and touch not the unclean." [Verse 17.]4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 17

The love of Jesus reflected from the cross of Calvary may be presented vividly before them; His pity, His compassion for fallen man, which led Him to leave the royal courts and royal throne, and lay aside His robes of royalty, and for our sakes to become poor, that through His poverty we may become rich; His life of continual self-denial and self-sacrifice may be brought before them; the entreaties of Christ, the most heart-felt invitations mingled with the richest promises, may all be employed, but the selfish heart is proof against them all. The truth of God can find no acceptance, the claims of God presented by His servants they feel are too arbitrary. There must be more license and less constraint. Thus pleads the carnal heart that is untrue to God, that would give Him casual service.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 18

The truth of the Bible has no compelling power to lead such souls against their will away from sin. The heart temple is used for idols. Darling indulgences which keep them in harmony with the world's practices and maxims have a controlling power. The love of Jesus is not a ruling principle in the heart and exercises not a constraining power in the life.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 19

I tell you that which I have seen. There are ten thousand times ten thousand of professed Christians over whom the mind and will of Christ have but little controlling power. Multitudes of favors are bestowed by the God of heaven without awakening one thought of gratitude or thankful return. Individuals of this class find their way into our ranks and are connected with the institutions which God has established as His instrumentalities to honor His name upon earth.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 20

Multitudes embrace the truth who have not its living principles incorporated into their lives. Christ has presented the conditions for all men if they would have eternal life. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." "This do," said the world's Redeemer, "and thou shalt live." [Luke 10:27, 28.] This is not obeyed, and in consequence of this disregard of the special injunction of the Great Teacher, sin and iniquity are cherished in the heart, pled for, wept for, and clung to as precious acquisitions. Anything is preferable to putting away evil.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 21

They profess to believe God, but they do not. With the knowledge of sacred truth is cherished the affection for sin. The Word not obeyed hardens the heart, makes the conscience unimpressible and their ruin more sure than if they had no knowledge of the truth. The affections must be drawn away from worldly pleasures, worldly enjoyments, and centered on Heaven and heavenly things.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 22

The heart is the soul temple; and until that is fully on the Lord's side, it will be the stronghold of the enemy; for the partial surrender to truth and the partial indulgence of self give free access to Satan; his suggestions become mixed and mingled in the mind with truth and are received as all truth, and the effect is that souls over whom these minds have influence are led far away from the grand old landmarks into false paths which separate from God.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 23

When the mind has thus become confused, when right is considered to be unessential, when wrong is not termed sin, then it is an impossibility to dislodge the enemy or to make these deceived souls feel that it is the adversary that has confused the senses and polluted the soul temple. Where truth should be unadulterated, there is a tissue of lies. The Word of God is a dead letter, the love of the Saviour is not there, the first foundation for the building is on sliding sand, there is not one heavenly impulse in the soul, religion is a dead form, God is not in such men's thoughts. There is no vitality and vigor from an inward, religious life, for the soul is not in harmony with God.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 24

We are in need of physicians; but the plan of sending young men to a medical college to learn to treat the sick is questionable; for many of them have not root in themselves, and, as in sending our children to the other colleges in our land, they are brought in contact with every class of mind and are thrown into a sink of iniquity, the companionship of skeptics, infidels, and the profligate, where not one out of one hundred escapes from being contaminated. They do not come forth like Joseph and Daniel uncorrupted, firm as a rock to principle.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 25

Students may receive their diplomas, and yet their education has but just commenced. But generally the student who knows nothing of what it is to bear responsibility anywhere, that has not taken the burden of thinking, the burden of caretaking, of studying complicated cases, feels that he is a ripe scholar. It is because they know so little that they think they know so much. If they knew considerably more, they would sense their inability.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 26

The one who best knows himself will work in all humility. He feels like making no proud boasts; he bears a weight of responsibility, and he sees the woes of suffering humanity, and he will not take human lives into his hands to deal with even the bodies of men without connecting with the experienced physician, regarding him as a father and himself as a child to be instructed and nourished and corrected, if in error. This is the way our medical students should regard Dr. Kellogg. They should work up an experience beginning at the lower round of the ladder and by careful, earnest, thoughtful exertion, climb round after round—religion, Bible religion, being the mainspring of action. They cannot expect to be ranked by the side of Dr. Kellogg who has devoted his time, his energies, and soul to the work for years, unless they shall give evidences of capabilities of mind and intelligence in practice.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 27

They must be content to come up gradually and prove their ability by showing that they sense the responsibilities laid upon them in lesser matters. Physicians who have been able to obtain a diploma from a medical school feel too much on an equal with Dr. Kellogg, when, from the light the Lord has given me, they have but just begun their education. There are but few who carry the load that Dr. Kellogg has carried—not one who has from the very commencement borne the heavy burden of care that he has borne. They do not love the taxing, burden-bearing part. They will deal with the sick, but never lift the load. They take everything very easy. The sick may approach the last crisis, that would wring the heart of the Doctor with intense pain because a life is going out and he can devise no means of saving that life, and another physician connected with him will not sense the danger and devote time to sharp thought and severe mental labor. He works as a machine. He is as calm as a summer's evening, when he should be pressed as a cart beneath sheaves. He takes it all as a matter of course, a thing that must be; when had he more of the intensity of feeling possessed by Dr. Kellogg, he would not throw off the burden for an instant, but by sharp thinking, by earnest prayer, would devise ways and means yet untried, and perhaps would be able to save not only the life, but, through Christ, the soul of the patient.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 28

Dr. Kellogg is a discerning man; he can take in and read character; he sees the habits, the disposition, the manner of working of his fellow helpers. He can see their free and easy stamp of character. When he notices their forgetfulness, the willingness to have the mind caught off upon unimportant things, the readiness to engage in selfish pleasure, the disposition to chat and occupy precious hours that should be employed in close application to business or to study preparatory to engaging in business, how can he trust grave responsibilities with such men that develop that they are not caretakers? Everything they do, their very deportment, the light and chaffy spirit, breezy and high-keyed voices, their careless attitude, show they are not burden-bearers, but are shallow and superficial in thought and action. They do not have a living connection with God. They are not fitted for any position of trust. Dr. Kellogg marks the bearing of the students just from medical college for the tokens that will inspire hope or despair in the heart. Failure or success will be read in the course they pursue. If they are ready to question rules and regulations and order, and will let themselves down to indulgence of self, and by their example encourage a spirit of rebellion, they have a demoralizing influence. The institution might better close rather than suffer this spirit to leaven the helpers and break down the barriers that it has cost thought, effort, and prayers to establish.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 29

If the students bring the demoralizing, polluted breezes from their college life into the institution, give them no place. Let them go to work in the hospitals and be learners until they gain an experience. If they are too self-sufficient to be instructed by one who has had experience, one who has made a success, then their work will be dangerous until they have gained an experience in dealing with disease. And yet Dr. Kellogg sometimes gives offense because he feels that he cannot trust grave responsibilities with inexperienced ones: for if any blunders are made, the whole is reflected back upon him.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 30

Dr. Kellogg is placed in a most trying situation. His adversary has his establishment close by. Here any disaffected ones can gain sympathy and credence and have every act magnified and embellished, misconstrued, and falsified. The standard, in the institution run by Fairfield, is leveled with the dust. It is founded in dishonesty and fraud, and yet the perverse human heart will crave to be built up in its perversity, even by such an influence.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 31

Can we be greatly surprised that Dr. Kellogg is worn? and can we not see that his cares have been greater than any one man should bear? He must feel the grossness of the character of his rival, who will use any means however inferior, and iniquitous, and dishonest to cast reproach upon him. He must brave the assaults of these who have grown hardened in guilt. He must brace himself to resist these who have trampled upon conscience and forgotten that there is a God who registers words, motives, deeds in His book.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 32

But what will give the tempted, tried, and burdened soul a victory? A firm reliance upon God, a continual trust in Him. The truth of God must regenerate the life; it must be planted in the heart; then he places himself on the side of God, and He will be his defense. There must be trust, continually, firmly grasping the promises by the hand of faith and stemming the torrent of evil influence which comes in like a flood.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 33

Students should be willing to work under Dr. Kellogg, heed his suggestions, follow his advice, go as far as possible in thought, training, and intelligent enterprise, but never infringe upon a rule, never disregard one principle that has been interwoven in the building of the institution. The dropping down is easy enough; the disregard of regulations is natural to the heart inclined to selfish ease and gratification. It is so much easier to tear down than to build up. One man with his careless ideas may do more in this work of letting down the standard than ten men with all their efforts can do to counteract and stay the demoralizing influence. This easy-going, convenient religion is a cheap affair, unacknowledged of God. It is as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 34

Dr. Kellogg, in his turn, should try to lead the students to obtain all the knowledge they can bear in every department. If he finds they are deficient in caretaking, in comprehension of their responsible work, he should lay the matter frankly before them, giving them a chance to correct their ways and habits, and reach a higher intelligence by cultivating the powers given them of God. There are many who are in such haste to climb to distinction that they skip some of the rounds of the ladder and have, in so doing, lost essential experience which they should have in order to be intelligent workers. In their zeal, the knowledge of many things looks unimportant to them. They skim over the surface and do not go deep and thorough, climbing round after round of the ladder of progress, by the slow and painful process, and thus gaining an experience which will enable them to help others to ascend. We want men and women who are more thorough, and who feel it their duty to improve every talent lent them, that they may finally double their entrusted capital.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 35

Every one is accountable to God for these few golden moments of probationary time. God will not require of man a more strict account than how his time has been occupied. Have we done our work with fidelity? Have we wasted and abused our precious time? God has given us the precious boon of life, not to be devoted to selfish gratification. Our work is too solemn, the time to serve God and our fellow men too short, to seek for fame.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 36

We must seek to be spiritual, intellectual Christians. If men would only stop in their aspirations where God has set the bounds, what a different service would the Lord have. The mind that is desirous of obtaining the favor of men will pursue a course that will sacrifice principle. True elevation and fidelity are constantly being sacrificed. Men who have souls to save or lose are in jeopardy in having such examples given them from professed Christians. Dr. Kellogg has greatly desired co-operation in his efforts. He has been anxious for young men and women to receive a medical education, and he has been willing to do anything to bring about the desired end. But his hopes have been disappointed when he has seen that there was not a disposition in the students to commence at the lowest round of the ladder.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 37

The duties and qualifications of a physician are not small. The students need daily to lift responsibilities, that they may become burden-bearers. They may be inclined to prescribe the duties devolving upon them as medical practitioners, when they know nothing of their inability as far as experience is concerned. There is only one power that can make these students what they ought to be and keep them steadfast. It is the grace of God and the power of the truth, exerting a saving influence upon the life and upon the character. These students who intend to deal with suffering humanity will find no graduating place this side of heaven. Every bit of knowledge that is termed science should be acquired, while the seeker daily acknowledges that the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom. Every item of experience and everything that can strengthen the mind should be cultivated to the utmost of their power, while at the same time they should seek God for His wisdom, their consciences illuminated, quick and pure; for unless they are guided by the wisdom from above, they become an easy prey to the deceptive power of Satan; they become inflated, large in their own eyes, pompous, self-sufficient. The policy principle will most assuredly lead into difficulties.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 38

The truth, God's truth, must be cherished in the heart and held in the strength of God, or the powers of Satan will wrench it from you. You need to be self-reliant and yet teachable when you can have strength to be faithful to duty. To trust to your own resources, your own wisdom or strength, is folly. You will be brought to confusion if you do this. You can walk securely only when you follow the counsel of God.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 39

Dr. Kellogg has felt afraid to trust responsibility with some of the physicians, because he saw in them inefficiency in some respects. They were not thorough and caretaking. Men of reasoning powers are greatly to blame if they continually make mistakes. These involve serious consequences. While Dr. Kellogg carries the greatest, heaviest responsibilities, he should have men by his side who will do as he instructs them. He should not do so much himself; for he is only a mortal man, and his powers have been taxed to the utmost limit again and again. He should lay upon others responsibilities which they should carry.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 40

There are some who are ready to undertake the most difficult work, and feel competent to do it justice, who have not shown tact and wise discrimination in the simplest duties devolving upon them. This makes Dr. Kellogg afraid to trust them. They are ready to grasp the highest round of the ladder without beginning at the lowest round and climbing as he has done. Dr. Kellogg has gained his scientific knowledge by agonizing effort, and he has devoted many hours to devising, planning, and making improvements, while others have been sleeping. He has taxed every power in obtaining an experience, while many would have carried out plans to enjoy themselves. He should not have sacrificed health and strength in order to meet the pressing demands. While these improvements have been going forward, talent has not been brought in to correspond with the enlarging of the institution to accommodate larger numbers. While the students should be willing to learn of Dr. Kellogg as children, he should feel the affection of a father for the students. He should not become discouraged because they are so slow to learn and should not discourage them if they make mistakes. We are all mortal and liable to err. He should kindly point out their errors, and they should feel grateful for any instruction he can give them. A haughty spirit should not be countenanced, but all should be willing to learn, and the Doctor willing to teach and educate; so that, should he be called away to recruit his health, or should disease lay him low, there would be those who could work intelligently, and the sanitarium not become demoralized. It will be difficult for Dr. Kellogg to lay off even a portion of the burden he has so long carried, but health and life and the salvation of his soul require a change. He should now save himself before he is a complete wreck.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 41

Similar advice was given to my husband, that he should let others bear the burdens, while he could aid them by his advice, counsel, and experience. But he saw that others made mistakes and were not far-seeing and judicious; that elements of character were wanting in them, which he possessed to a large degree; therefore he waited for somebody fully competent to take his place, and kept on and on in much the same way as he had done, until he finally dropped into the grave; and those men upon whom he did not dare to leave the burdens had to take them, and that without his advice, his words of counsel, and his experience to help them.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 42

His voice might have been heard today if he had heeded the words of warning given. He was disgusted and distressed because there were so few who would be discerning and who would be burden-bearers and thought that in order to save blunders he must do all that he could himself. In his clear foresight he could see what needed to be done, and his brethren were content to let him be brains for them, and execute for them, while instead of becoming more efficient, they were growing less and less self-reliant. The simple, common business matters were brought before him by those connected with him in the work until he became so accustomed to it that he felt it must be so; and if he were not consulted about even minor matters, he felt that it was not just right.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 43

Dr. Kellogg is acting over the same experience, and Brother Murphy, Brother Hall, and others suffer him to do this. They are in many respects machine men. They have powers of mind, but these are becoming weakened because they do not exercise their reasoning faculties, but prefer to use Dr. Kellogg's mind in simple matters. Brother Hall has his position, but the Doctor, as far as thinking and planning are concerned, has the work to do himself. Dr. Kellogg should never have encouraged these men to depend upon him to be mind and brains for them. He has served tables too much. There should be a superintendent who possess breadth of thought and independence of judgment that will use the powers of his own brain and grow in capacity and judgment, becoming every year more and more capable of bearing responsibilities. It is a sin and a shame to call the mind of Dr. Kellogg to so many little matters, and he does these men a wrong in allowing it. He cannot grasp his arms around the entire Institution. He must train his helpers to be self-reliant, independent, wise generals, in place of acting as general over everything himself. These men have important faculties given them of God, to be used and to be strengthened by use. Dr. Kellogg has larger responsibilities to take his time and engage his powers, and every ounce of burden should be lifted from him that can be. There ought to be, today, self-reliant men of enduring energy, thinking and planning and working at all the common matters without bringing one of them to the notice of the Doctor.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 44

I regret that these men have been so dependent upon Dr. Kellogg. I am sorry that, as a wise general, he has not trained them to be self-reliant and has not refused to do their thinking and brain work, that they might have obtained an experience which today would be more valuable to them than gold. God does not demand of Dr. Kellogg such taxing service, even in the most important enterprises. He has been successful in his plans, because he would not be defeated. If the brethren connected with him had faced stubborn difficulties and seen them give way before them because their courage would not be daunted, nor their energy wearied, they might have thus obtained an experience that would be of value to them through all time and through eternity. There is no need that there should be so many helpless souls who will sink before difficulties.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 45

Elder Andrews might have lived had he encouraged and trained others to share the burdens he loaded himself down with. He deprived others of an education they might have had, because he did so much himself and allowed them to rely upon his brain, in place of doing their own thinking. Every man can be a man, a whole man, by patient continuance in well-doing, by resolutely overcoming cowardice and ignorance and inefficiency, with thoughtful energy and zeal. There should be an entirely different order of things. Men should not be shadows of Dr. Kellogg, that, should the substance be removed, there would be nothing to make the shadow. They should never consent to be merely machines run by another man's brain. God has given them ability to think and act. He would have men connected with that institution—strong, firm, whole-souled, well-balanced men—who are diligent in cultivating their own powers of thought, and who do not feel that they must have their minds trained to run in exactly the same channel that Dr. Kellogg's mind runs in, but to think independently and help him in planning. His plans are not always infallible; and a wise counselor might see failure where he would see only success. A good, strong mind to propose and counsel would be the greatest blessing the Doctor could have. No one man's mind and judgment are sufficient to be a controlling power in any of our institutions; therefore, councils need to be held. But there are those who, when they come into council, no sooner hear a proposition than they take it for granted it is infallible and stand ready to say, "Yes," and vote for it, without carefully weighing the matter, probing it, sifting it, testing it, and giving it the benefit of deliberate thought. Such persons are mere ciphers. You should be men of force of character, and depth of thought, seeing the judicious enterprises and laying hold of them, but bringing all your plans to the Divine Counselor.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 46

In order for men to be depended upon, there must be growth of powers, the exercise of every faculty, even in little things; then power is acquired to engage in large responsibilities. Individual responsibility and accountability are essential. Do not shrink from bearing your share of responsibilities because there are risks to run and something must be ventured. Do not leave others to be brains for you. You must train your powers to put forth strength and vigor; then the entrusted talents will grow as a steady, uniform, unyielding energy is exercised in bearing individual responsibility. God would have man add, day by day, little by little, to his stock of ideas, acting as if the moments were jewels, to be carefully gathered and discreetly cherished. He will thus acquire breadth of thought and strength of intellect.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 47

I wish I could set before the medical student the true responsibility which rests upon him in his work. There is not one in one hundred who has a just sense of his position, his work, his accountability to God; and how much God will do for him if he will make Him his trust. The very first lesson that he should learn is dependence upon God. Make God your counselor at every step. The worldly and the nominal Christian may insinuate that in order for you to be successful, you must be a policy man, you must at times depart from the strictest rectitude; but be not deceived, be not deluded. These temptations find a ready welcome in the heart of man; but I speak that which I know. Pamper not self. Throw not open a door for the enemy to take possession of the citadel of the soul. There is danger in the first and slightest departure from the strictest veracity. In your work, be true to yourself. Preserve your God-given dignity in the fear of God. There is in your case the necessity of getting hold and keeping hold of the arm of infinite power.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 48

Like Enoch, the physician should be a man that walks with God. This will be to him a heavenly antidote to all the delusive, pernicious sentiments which make so many infidels or skeptics. The true antidote is truth, the truth of God revealed in His Word, practiced in the life, and constantly guiding in all that concerns the interests of others. Having the soul thus barricaded with heavenly principles, you may humbly yet confidently say: I will not fear the face of man. God is not unmindful of your struggles, of your conflicts to maintain the truth and obtain a personal daily experience in walking in the ways of truth. When you appreciate every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, as revealed in His Word, higher than worldly policy, higher than the assertions of erring, failing man, you will be guided into every good and holy way.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 49

Let the Christian physician remember that he has pledged himself to represent Christ to others in practice, in character. If he does not strictly guard himself, if he allows the barriers to be broken down, Satan will overcome him with his specious temptations. There will be a blemish in his character which will tell in its evil workings upon other minds and leave a molding influence upon other characters. God says, "I know thy works." [Revelation 3:15.] The moral palsy of evil and sin will not only destroy the soul of the one who departs from strict principles, but will have the power to reproduce the same in others. It is not safe to be occasional Christians. We must be Christlike in all our actions always. Then, through grace, we are safe for time and for eternity. The experimental knowledge of the grace received in times of trial is of more value than gold or silver. It confirms the trusting, believing one in faith, in confidence that he has an everpresent helper in Jesus Christ, and gives him a firmness, a boldness in God, that will take Him at His word and trust Him with unwavering faith when brought into most trying positions. The Wonderful Counselor will be his strength. Prevarication for the sake of policy only makes matters worse. Never, never should the physician feel that he may prevaricate. It is not always safe and best to lay before the invalid the full extent of his danger. The truth may not all be spoken on all occasions, but never speak a lie. If it is important for the good of the invalid not to alarm him, lest such a course might prove fatal; do not lie to him, and never say that an honest, truthful physician cannot live. He can live, for he has God and Heaven on his side, and the practice of fraud and deception separates him from the God of truth.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 50

Such statements dishonor the God of truth and righteousness. Let every bribe to dissimulate be sternly refused. Hold fast your integrity in the strength of the grace of Christ, and He will fulfil His promise.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 51

Religious faith and principles have become deteriorated, mingled with worldly customs and practices, and for this reason pure and undefiled religion is rare. The soul, the precious soul, is of value, and it must be made white in the blood of the Lamb. The strength and grace of God was provided at an infinite sacrifice, that you might be victorious over Satan's suggestions and temptations and come forth unsullied and unpolluted as did Joseph and Daniel. Let the life, the character, be the strongest argument for Christianity, for by this will all men be compelled to take knowledge of you that you have been with Jesus and learned of Him. The life, the words, and the deportment are the most forcible argument, the most solemn appeal to the careless, irreverent, and skeptical. Let not medical students be deceived by the wiles of the devil or by any of his cunning pretexts which so many adopt to beguile and ensnare by practices of the ungodly. Cling closely to your Bibles. Inquire, What saith the Lord? He has spoken and told me how to ennoble and purify my life. This light I will follow. The Majesty of truth I will respect and honor.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 52

Tracts show that in the medical profession there are many skeptics and atheists. When they enter the school of science, they exalt the works of God above the God of science, and the grossness of the mind fails to comprehend God. There are but few who enter medical colleges that come out of them pure and unspotted. Their minds become gross in place of being elevated, ennobled, sanctified. Material things eclipse the heavenly, the eternal. It is the privilege of every student to enter college with the same fixed, determined principle that Daniel had when he entered the courts of Babylon, and to preserve his integrity untarnished. You all need a living religion, that you may stand as God's witnesses, proclaiming to the sick that sin is always followed with suffering; and while combating pain and disease, you should plainly lay before them that which you know to be the real cause, and the remedy. Cease to sin, and point them to the sin-pardoning Saviour.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 53

Those who argue for the policy plan will not enlighten the suffering one as to the nature and cause of the disease which has seized upon his body. They should, with tact and wise discrimination, with tenderness and love for his soul, open to him the reason of his sickness and then seek to enlighten his mind, that he may bring his appetite and passions under the control of reason and find a sure remedy for every malady in Jesus Christ. It is a nice work to deal with diseased and unbalanced minds. When the physician comes to the sickbed in a listless, careless attitude, looks at the afflicted one with little real concern, and by words or actions leaves the impression that there is not much the matter, and then leaves the patient to his or her own reflections, he has done that invalid positive harm, has wounded and bruised the spirit. The physician should never do this, but should show an interest in the sick and inquire into the case; and if he knows what is the trouble, he should frankly state it, and with firm and confident words assure them that he will at once do something for their relief, and that they must cooperate with him by doing all in their power to place themselves in right relation to life.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 54

There are those who have entered the medical profession who should have chosen some other calling. They are unsympathetic. They seem to think the proper way to do is to withhold all words of sympathy and gird up their compassion so that not a particle of it shall be drawn out. They are cold and uncommunicative and leave no warm, cheering influence. They seem to think words of tenderness and compassion are an evidence of weakness. If they could once be put in the place of the suffering one whose will and spirit are humbled and weakened by suffering, who longs for tender sympathy, for words of assurance, they would be better prepared to appreciate his feelings. If the physician would state plainly the nature of the disease in words that the patient can understand, and express the belief that he can soon give him relief, this would go far toward putting him in any easy state of mind and incline him to rest his case in the hands of one whom he thinks really knows what to do to relieve him.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 55

There are lessons the practitioners at the sanitarium would do well to learn upon these things. You are not called upon to exaggerate difficulties and express alarm that will do harm; but never turn away from suffering, even if you think it is imaginary. Mind suffering is a reality to the afflicted one. Go to work to do something. Show a tender regard, a human sympathy, for the one afflicted. If this is beyond your power, cease your practice as physician, and take up some other calling, where your stoical spirit and temperament will not have so direct an influence upon others, where you will not come in so close relationship to suffering humanity.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 56

I have been shown for several years that due attention has not been given all the sick at the sanitarium. There has been a strange neglect in this matter by some. It is trying for the sick to leave their homes and come as strangers long distances to the sanitarium, with full confidence that they can be helped, and then be disappointed because they do not receive the attention they deserve. Dr. Kellogg cannot attend to all of his increasing family's suffering needs, and he should lay upon others some of this burden that he has borne himself. Special efforts should be made to educate and train men and women to come up by his side and gain all the knowledge they can as practitioners under his directions, while he can direct them by his presence, his knowledge and superior skill. If he has students who are not competent, careful, painstaking, let him dismiss them and educate men who will follow his directions. It may be best to discourage their entering a college. If so, let them study under him, work under him, share responsibilities, and climb with his help to the topmost round of the ladder in the profession, if they are men and women of worth. But if the students are frivolous, if they are not caretaking, willing and ready to lift the burdens and carry them, and the Doctor is convinced that they will not be reliable, competent for so great responsibilities, let him discourage them, and then see again what can be done. This testing, proving process costs money, care, and labor.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 57

Some students while learning from Dr. Kellogg will give promise of success; but after they have had their education at a medical college, they are not willing to learn. They feel so self-sufficient that they are spoiled. They have not experience, but are willing to do the higher kinds of work and leave the lower rounds of the ladder without climbing. It were better that the sanitarium should be closed up rather than to have it disgraced with inefficient practitioners. One thing is certain, the Doctor must have help; and although that help may not be in every respect as he could wish, he must let a share of the burdens that have rested upon him be laid upon others. He cannot stand under the burdens as he has done.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 58

About three years ago I was shown that as yet there was no one who could supply Dr. Kellogg's place. This state of things should not be. The power and tact and knowledge of the Doctor should be employed in training as far as possible men who will help him, and who could carry on the work he is now doing, should he be obliged to leave, to have needed rest and change. No one should be entrusted with this work who will not obey the light God has given in regard to hygienic principles, hygienic diet. Some practicing physicians do not now sense the necessity of keeping up the standard. It is so much easier to slip back into the old rut of selfish indulgence, gratification of appetite, free, loose manners, showing preference for the society of girls, and introducing a courting spirit. A spirit of reserve in this direction should be constantly encouraged, rather than a free, easy, careless indulgence. It is the spirit of the age to despise restraint, to desire to follow inclination, to jest and joke, and be jolly in amusement with young ladies; and the result has been wrecks of character, encouragement to impurity, licentiousness, immorality, and marriages which have ruined the usefulness and efficiency of men and women who had ability and talents, but who have been unable to rise to any noble heights after their unwise marriages.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 59

Thus the wheels of progress have been blocked, the powers of the mind dwarfed. I utter my earnest warning and protest against the familiar association of young men and women who intend to connect with our sanitarium. If they want to be men of God, let them deny their inclination and devote their God-given powers to doing good and being a blessing to society. Let them consecrate themselves unreservedly to God, to save perishing souls.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 60

Dr. Sprague might have been an efficient and useful physician had he not wrecked his bark in a matrimonial alliance with one who could have no sympathy with his faith and could be no help to him in the Christian life. Dr. Fairfield might have proved a man of usefulness, a man of elevated, noble character, but he married a selfish, heartless, cold, icy-hearted woman. A good, noble Christian woman might have helped him in character building; but Mrs. Fairfield was his evil angel to accomplish his ruin. She was one to tear down, and not to build up. She idolized herself and had no wealth of affection for anyone but herself; and ruin is the result of this connection.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 61

It is not a time when marriage should be regarded in the light of felicity. It is uncertain business. More misery than happiness is the result; and yet marrying and giving in marriage is as it was in the days of Noah. There seems to be no restraint; but passion and impulse have controlling power, and youth seem to be bewitched with love-sick sentimentalism. For this reason rules and regulations are highly essential to guard those connected with the sanitarium, the college, and the office of publication; and any one who regards these restrictions as unnecessary has not spiritual discernment and will prove a hindrance rather than a help.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 62

Many seem to think these precautions are not essential, and their deportment pleads for greater liberty than the laws of God allows them. It is an imperative duty to preserve the soul from impure thoughts and unholy actions. Iniquity abounds, and our Saviour lifted His voice in warning. "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away." [Matthew 24:37-39.]4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 63

Sensuality is the sin of the age. But the religion of Jesus Christ will hold the lines of control over every species of unlawful liberty; the moral powers will hold the lines of control over every thought, word, and action. Guile will not be found in the lips of the true Christian. Not an impure thought will be indulged in, not a word spoken that is approaching to sensuality, not an action that has the least appearance of evil.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 64

The senses will be guarded. The soul that has Jesus abiding in it will develop into true greatness. The intelligent soul who has respect unto all of God's commandments, through the grace of Christ, will say to the passions of the heart as they point to God's great moral standard of righteousness, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed" [Job 38:11], and the grace of Christ shall be as a wall of fire round about the soul.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 65

There are those who will say, "Oh, you need not be so particular. A little harmless flirtation will do no injury." And the carnal heart urges on to temptation and to the practical sanctioning of indulgences which end in sin. This is a low cast of morality, not meeting the high standard of the law of God.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 66

The vileness of the human heart is not understood. There are always individuals connected with our institutions whose characters are cast in an inferior mold, and they need but a word of encouragement from those in higher positions to take liberty to gratify the unholy heart. There are those at the sanitarium that are not open sinners; they hide their sins from human eyes; they have a fair outward morality; but the Lord's eye sees them. They find means to gratify the low sensual propensities; their lives are tarnished, and they are tarnishing others by their example.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 67

These very ones carry a pretense of piety, they offer prayers, bear testimony in meetings, and are apparently serving the Lord; but their hearts are corrupt, their conduct is condemned by the law of Jehovah which they profess to keep. There are those who are not guilty of these gross transgressions, but who do not have spiritual discernment and see not necessity of putting up the bars and of guarding every point lest iniquity should be practiced in our institutions. They cannot see any harm in the young people's being in one another's society, paying attention to each other, flirting, courting, marrying, and giving in marriage. This is the main engrossment of this time with the worldlings, and genuine Christians will not follow their example, but will come out from all these things and be separate.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 68

In our sanitarium, our college, our offices of publication, and in every mission, the strictest rules must be enforced. Nothing can so effectually demoralize these institutions, and our missions, as the want of prudence and watchful reserve in the association of young men and young women. Give them freedom to go and come as they will in each other's company, and they will regard it as a restriction of their rights to be bound about with rules and regulations. Those who plead for the liberty to associate together are soon spoiled with love-sick sentimentalism; the enervating influence of this much-to-be-dreaded disease unfits them for their duties, and they cannot fill any position of trust. The ever-increasing potency of vicious indulgences is so great and so strong that there is little room to hope for the recovery of souls who are thus afflicted, unless they can see the matter as God sees it, and become so thoroughly disgusted, as well as agonized over their course of action, that they will have that repentance that needeth not to be repented of.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 69

Satan is making determined efforts to overcome those who advocate the commandments of God, that their principles shall become tarnished and their lives corrupt. It is a pitiful sight to see young men who are bound by no marriage ties, pursuing a foolish course, exhibiting the disease of lovesick sentimentalism. They are unbalanced in mind and have lost their sense of propriety of conduct so essential for a noble, virtuous character. But that which is the most to be deplored is to see married men who have companions and children, fanning around the girls, and the girls making advances to them or encouraging their attentions. These attentions becloud the mind, benumb the senses, as to the line that distinguished right from wrong. Impure thoughts, indiscreet actions, unholy conduct, and next the seventh commandment transgressed.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 70

Indolence and gratification of unholy passions enslave the soul and hold the victim in chains of steel. There are agonizing struggles after his lost moral freedom, but he seldom is again a free man; he has stepped on Satan's ground and becomes the object of Satan's temptations. The standard must be the holy law of God, and every approach toward familiarity or attention of married men with young girls or with married women should be positively condemned. The plea of these liberty-loving young men and married men is for a little amusement, a hungering of sympathy, a little self-indulgence. They do not think of such a thing as weakening moral character or their power to resist temptation, nor of becoming vicious and impure; but they are tempting the devil to tempt them. The only safe course is to keep free from all these things.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 71

Do not see how close you can walk upon the brink of a precipice and be safe. Avoid the first approach to danger. The soul's interests cannot be trifled with. Your capital is your character. Cherish it as you would a golden treasure. Moral purity, self-respect, a strong power of resistance must be firmly and constantly cherished. There should not be one departure from reserve; one act of familiarity, one indiscretion may jeopardize the soul in opening the door to temptation, and the power of resistance becomes weakened. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 72

The psalmist, when viewing the many snares and temptations to vice, inquires, “Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?” This question is appropriate for every one connected with our missions and every instrumentality of God. At this stage of our work, the answer comes, “By taking heed thereto according to Thy word.” [Psalm 119:9.] It is necessary to maintain a living connection with Heaven, seeking as often as did Daniel—three times a day—for divine grace to resist appetite and passion. Wrestling with appetite and passion unaided by divine power will be unsuccessful; but make Christ your stronghold, and the language of your soul will be, “In all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us.” [Romans 8:37.] Said the apostle Paul, “I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.” [1 Corinthians 9:27.]4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 73

Let no one think he can overcome without the help of God. You must have the energy, the strength, the power of an inner life developed within you. You will then bear fruit unto godliness and will have an intense loathing of vice. You need to constantly strive to work away from earthliness, from cheap conversation, from everything sensual, and aim for nobility of soul and a pure and unspotted character. Your name may be kept so pure that it cannot justly be connected with anything dishonest or unrighteous, but will be respected by all the good and pure; and it may be written in the Lamb’s book of life, to be immortalized among the holy angels.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 74

I have been shown that Satan’s specious temptations will come to the workers in every mission, to the workers in every institution in our land, to encourage familiarity, the men with the women. I write with a distressed heart, that the women in this age, both married and unmarried, too frequently do not maintain the reserve that is necessary. They act like coquettes. They encourage the attentions of single and married men, and those who are weak in moral power will be ensnared. These things, if allowed, deaden the moral senses, and blind the mind, so that crime does not appear sinful. Thoughts are awakened that would not have been if woman had kept her place in all modesty and sobriety. She may have had no unlawful purpose or motive herself, but she has given encouragement to men who are tempted and who need all the help they can get from those associated with them. By being circumspect, reserved, taking no liberties, receiving no unwarrantable attentions, but preserving a high moral tone and becoming dignity, much evil might be avoided. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 75

A woman who will allow an unchaste word or hint to be uttered in her presence is not as God would have her; one that will permit any undue familiarity or impure suggestion does not preserve her godlike womanhood. Some may think these warnings unnecessary; but God has shown me that they are necessary in every mission, in every college, in every institution that we have established. The wise man has said, "Rejoice, O young man in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes; but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment. Therefore, put away evil from thy flesh." [Ecclesiastes 11:9, 10.] We are in a day when iniquity abounds. There are those who have but little moral sense; self-pollution has been practiced, and the moral powers are benumbed. Such have no just sense of holiness or purity. They are corrupt and will corrupt others. Miserable wrecks of humanity are everywhere. Some put on a religious garb; but the soul is defiled, and they corrupt other minds. They call evil good and good evil. They are Satan's most efficient agents, and individuals of this stamp will connect with our institutions and with God's instrumentalities, masking their evil ways under pretension of godliness. Can we then be too particular, too circumspect? Safety lies in close adherence to rules and regulations in harmony with God's great moral standard of righteousness. And then there are those who, if so disposed, will find ways to secretly carry out their own inclinations and pursue a course of deception to avoid the censure of those they deem so particular. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 76

Some who have influence, who are apparently working for the interest of the sanitarium, encourage by their own course of action a disregard of rules and of order; and the influence of such persons goes a long way toward encouraging insubordination, especially in the direction of courtship and marriage. The parties are unfitted for their duties; they live an unreal life, indulge in too high and romantic visions of bliss; and in their desire to please each other, they become unfaithful. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 77

The ideas of courtship have their foundation in erroneous ideas concerning marriage. They follow impulse and blind passion. The courtship is carried on in a spirit of flirtation. The parties frequently violate the rules of modesty and reserve, and are guilty of indiscretion, if they do not break the law of God. The high, noble, lofty design of God in the institution of marriage is not discerned; therefore the purest affections of the heart, the noblest traits of character are not developed. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 78

Not one word should be spoken, not one action performed, that you would not be willing the holy angels should look upon and register in the books above. You should have an eye single to the glory of God. The heart should have only pure, sanctified affection, worthy of the followers of Jesus Christ, exalted in its nature, and more heavenly than earthly. Anything different from this is debasing, degrading in courtship; and marriage cannot be holy and honorable in the sight of a pure and holy God, unless it is after the exalted scriptural principle. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 79

These precautions may be regarded as unnecessary. But those who will plead for greater liberty are not worthy to be connected with these institutions. Mild license is termed liberty and freedom. But those who are professedly sons and daughters of God should elevate the standard and have no fellowship with the unruly who would have rules and regulations made to meet the cases of the disobedient. 4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 80

The sanitarium, unless hedged about with vigilant rules and regulations, would soon become a hotbed of iniquity. There are those who would entrap and mislead souls; they have a spirit to revile, instead of showing respect for, those who carry the burden and seek to keep up the standard. The less of such persons employed, the safer and purer will be the moral atmosphere of the sanitarium. There always will be persons who will find entrance to such an institution, whose influence will be for evil. They are of that class who are continually putting bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter. There are professed Christians who will warp the conscience and becloud the mind, under the pretense of godliness; and those who do not see nor sense the danger are already the dupes or victims of Satan.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 81

Let every youth take heed to his ways. Let every medical student build his foundations on the eternal Rock.4LtMs, Ms 4a, 1885, par. 82

Ms 4b, 1885

Words of Counsel to Young Physicians

NP

July 27, 1895

This manuscript is drawn largely from Ms 4a, 1885. ^{+Note}One or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

We are in need of physicians, but the plan of sending young men <away from our institutions> to a medical college to obtain a knowledge of how to treat the sick is a questionable one. It is similar to that of sending our children to the schools of the world for an education, where they will come in contact with every class of minds, and have the companionship of skeptics, infidels, and profligates, and where <few> escape contamination. They do not come forth uncorrupted as did Joseph and Daniel, because they have not purposed in their hearts to remain undefiled by the habits and customs to which they are exposed. They have not put their will on the side of the Lord's will, to stand firm as a rock to principle. These students may receive their diplomas, but their education has barely commenced. "This is life eternal," Christ said, "that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent." [John 17:3.]⁴*LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 1*

Often those who know the least of what it means to bear individual responsibility, who have not taken upon themselves the burden of thinking, of caretaking, of studying complicated cases, are most willing to buckle on the armor and feel that they are capable of handling any case. It is because they know so little that they think they know so much. If they knew more, they would have a deeper sense of their own inability. The man who knows himself best will walk in all humility of mind. He will make no proud boasts. He will feel a weight of responsibility as he sees the woes of his fellow men. He will not take human life into his hands to experiment upon. He will counsel with experienced physicians, regarding them as fathers and himself as an unlearned child, to be admonished, corrected, and, if in wrong, set right.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 2

This is the light in which our medical students should regard Dr. Kellogg. Even if our young physicians from the medical school have obtained their diplomas, they must not feel that they are on an equal with Dr. Kellogg. They have but just commenced their education. They cannot expect to be lifted to the side of Dr. Kellogg, who for years has devoted the energies of mind and soul to this work, unless in their daily practice they shall give evidence of capability and intelligence. They must be content to come up gradually, proving their ability for the work by showing that they sense the responsibility laid upon them in the smallest matters. They are to work <to gain an> experience, beginning at the lowest round of the ladder, and by careful, earnest, thoughtful exertion climb to the top. Religion, Bible religion, is to be the spring of their action.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 3

There are but few who carry the load that Dr. Kellogg has carried, and there is not one who has from the first carried the heavy burden of care that he has borne. Many do not love the taxing, burden-bearing part. Self-denial and hard application are not agreeable to them. They are willing to deal with the sick, but they refuse to lift the load. They take everything in an easy, matter-of-fact way. When the suffering one approaches the last crisis, the doctor's heart is wrung with intense pain because a human life is going out, and he can devise no means of saving it; but these easygoing ones who are connected with him in the work do not sense the danger. When they should be pressed as a cart beneath sheaves, they are calm as a summer evening and take it all as a matter of course, something that must be. Had they the intensity of feeling which the doctor has, they would not throw off the burden for an instant. By sharp thinking and earnest prayer they would devise means yet untried, and by untiring vigilance seek to save not only the body, but the soul of the sufferer. The Lord will not accept shabby work from any soul. He asks for the heart, that He may mold it after the divine similitude.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 4

Dr. Kellogg is a discerning man, and he can read the characters of his fellow workers. When he sees in them a disposition to be free and easy, a willingness to have the mind drawn off to unimportant things, a readiness to engage in selfish pleasure, a disposition to occupy the precious hours that should be employed in close application to study or business, in matters of no consequence, how can he trust them with grave responsibilities? Everything they do, their deportment, their light and chaffy spirit, their careless attitude show that they are not burden-bearers, that they have no connection with God. Dr. Kellogg has felt afraid to trust responsibilities with these physicians, because he saw them to be inefficient. Men of intelligent minds are greatly to blame when they make the same mistakes over and over again, for by so doing they involve serious consequences. 4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 5

How carefully Dr. Kellogg marks the bearing of the student fresh from the medical college. He reads failure or success in the course that is pursued. If the student is ready to question the rules and regulations, and consider himself exempted from them; if he pursues a course of self-indulgence, and by his example encourages a spirit of rebellion, he will have a demoralizing influence upon the institution, and the sanitarium might far better close its doors than to allow this spirit to leaven the workers and break down the barriers which cost thought, effort, and prayer to erect. If students bring polluting breezes from their college life into the institution, give them no place. The students would be well to heed the words of the apostle Paul to Timothy, his son in the gospel: "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession, that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. ... Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy: that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate: laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." [1 Timothy 6:12-14, 17-19.] 4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 6

If the youth would lay up a good foundation against the time to come, they must build upon the only sure foundation, which is Jesus Christ. Their building can never be reared in strength and symmetry unless Jesus Christ is the chief corner stone. The reliance of every soul must be upon God. Let every student seek for a character that will give to the world a correct influence. Let him like Daniel learn to improve his talents; for this the Lord expects from every soul.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 7

Young men, if you think a certain course will help you ever so much, and there is a possibility that your motives for taking that course will be misjudged, do not venture <to carry out your plans> until you have established yourself in the confidence of those <whom you have reason to respect, and whose confidence you desire.> You may wish for much, but you can only secure that which you labor for wisely, and for which you give evidence that you deserve commendation. All who would become competent physicians must build a good character, diligently laying stone upon stone, until the structure has become a beautiful temple for the Lord. Work and pray and believe, adding to your virtue knowledge. Be learners <even after you suppose> you have gained an experience. If you are too self-sufficient to be instructed by one who has had an experience, one who has made a success, you are in danger.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 8

Dr. Kellogg has been placed in a most trying situation. His adversary has an establishment close by, and here those who are disaffected can obtain sympathy and credence and have his every act magnified and embellished, misconstrued and falsified. The standard of this institution run by Fairfield <will be leveled> with the dust. It is founded on wrong theories and principles, and yet the perverse human heart will crave to be built up in its perversity even by such an influence as this. Can we greatly wonder that Dr. Kellogg is worn? He must feel the grossness of the rival who will use any means, however unfair and iniquitous, to cast a reproach upon him. He must brave the assaults of those who have grown hardened in guilt. He must brace himself to resist those who have trampled upon conscience, and forgotten that there is a God who sees, a God who registers their deeds in the books of heaven. What will give the tempted, tried soul the victory?—A firm reliance upon God, a continual trust in Him. The truth of God must regulate his life. It must be planted in the heart. As Dr. Kellogg places himself on the side of God, God will be his defense. But he must trust continually, firmly grasping the promises by the hand of faith. 4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 9

There are chapters in the experience of Dr. Kellogg that few have read and which have resulted in a surrender to God. If Dr. Kellogg will trust himself wholly with God, He will give him tact and perception and skill as a practitioner that has seldom been excelled. Angels of God will stand by his side when human life is in peril, and wisdom from above will be given him. God designs that Dr. Kellogg shall still advance. He has only begun to climb the ladder. The Lord will give him grace that he is now ignorant of, and he will see as he has never seen before. He will realize that there is to be an intelligent discarding of all drugs. Skill and knowledge is to be given him which he is in no case to keep to himself. He is to educate, educate, educate. 4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 10

Many things will come up to divert Dr. Kellogg's mind from the main thing, but he must hold himself in the place that God has appointed him. He is not to be loaded with burdens which others can carry. Notwithstanding all the difficulties in the way, he is to devote much time and venture much in order to keep his students under his <own watchful> eye, teaching them how to perform operations. Who can better given them this instruction? If he allows them to leave, having obtained their diplomas, and yet has not had them practice under his <superior wisdom, they> cannot do faithful work; for they are not prepared to act in emergencies that may arise. Let him be assured that their education is in every sense a practical one. He should try to lead the students to obtain all the knowledge they can in every department. If he finds that they are deficient in caretaking, in a comprehension of their work, he should lay the matter frankly before them, giving them an opportunity to correct their wrong habits and reach a higher standard. There are many who are in such haste to climb to distinction that they skip some of the rounds of the ladder and in so doing lose an experience which is essential. In their zeal, the knowledge of many things does not seem important to them. They fail to do deep and thorough work. They are to climb, by a slow and painful process, round after round of the ladder of progress. This will teach them how to help others to ascend.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 11

Those who have but a short time in which to study should not be allowed to lose any time. Let the student be carried forward and upward by doing intelligent, practical work in the lines in which he expects to devote his time and tact and skill. Some have become wearied because they have been kept at work in lines of which they had no need. These have no time to be set at cheap, <inferior> things; <time is too short.> Their time must be well employed <in grasping the knowledge of medical science,> that they may obtain the knowledge essential for them in their work as physicians.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 12

Students are generally willing to work under Dr. Kellogg. You should heed his suggestions and follow his advice. Go as far as you possibly can in intelligent enterprise, but never infringe upon one rule, never disregard one principle. A disregard of regulations is natural to the heart inclination to self-gratification. It is much easier to criticize and tear to pieces than it is to build up. One man by lax, careless ideas can do more toward letting down the standard than ten men can accomplish in staying the demoralizing influence. An easygoing religion is not acknowledged by God. It is to Him as a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 13

We want thorough men and thorough women, who feel it their duty to improve every talent lent them, that they may in the end double their entrusted capital. There is nothing of which God will require a more strict account than of our time. Every one is accountable to God for these few golden moments of probation. God has not given us the precious boon of life to be devoted to selfish gratification. Time is too short to seek for fame. O if men would only stop where God has set the bound, what a different service would be rendered to Him!4LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 14

There is only one power that can make these students what they ought to be and keep them steadfast. It is the grace of Christ. The power of the truth exerting a saving influence upon life and character. God's truth must be cherished in the heart, and held in the strength of God, or the power of Satan will wrench it from you. The students who intend to deal with suffering humanity will find no graduating place this side of heaven. Every item of knowledge possible should be acquired, while the seeker daily acknowledges that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Every experience that will strengthen the mind should be brought into the life. Unless they are guided by wisdom from above, they will become an easy prey to the deceptive power of Satan. In their high estimation of themselves and their own wisdom, they will become pompous and self-sufficient. Students, you need to be self-reliant and yet teachable. Then you will have strength to do faithful work. To trust to your own resources and wisdom is folly. You will be brought to confusion if you do this. You can walk securely only when you follow the counsel of God.⁴*LtMs, Ms 4b, 1885, par. 15*

Ms 5, 1885

Sermon/Hearing and Doing

Santa Rosa, California

March 7, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in 1SAT 13-24.

Text: Matthew 7:22-28 LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 1

Here are brought before us two classes, the hearer and the doer. There is one that hears and does not; there is one that hears and does. This is he that not only hears, but is a doer of the Word of the Lord; and this is the class that is building on the rock. We want to be among the class that is riveted to the eternal rock, and not of that class that is building upon the sand. For in these two classes of builders brought to view here, the one is laying his foundation in the sand, the other on the rocks. And the question comes home to us, how are we building? 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 2

It is of great consequence how we are building. We want to know that the foundation is deep, so that the floods shall not move us. Our salvation cost us some thing, it cost us the blood of the Son of God. While every thing has been done that can be, to bring us into right relations with God, we want to think much of every privilege brought to us, and not to be always questioning God's dealings with us, whether this is right or that is right; but pursue a course that will stand the test of His law, a test that shall work out for us an eternal weight of glory. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 3

God demands of us that we build a character that will stand the close test of the judgment. We will not have His protection in the time when the flood comes if at that time it is found that we have wasted the hours of probation granted us now to build characters for eternity. For the character which we now build is not only for time, but for eternity. Those that are set forth in this parable as building on the sand are they that feel that they are all right. They come right up before the Lord and say, I have done this, I have done that. "Many will say unto Me in that day, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name cast out devils, and in Thy name done many wonderful works?" But this goes for nothing to the Lord. "Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you, depart from Me, ye workers of iniquity." [Matthew 7:22, 23.] What is iniquity? Sin. And what is sin? Sin, says the beloved John, is the transgression of the law. [1 John 3:4.] Here is a class that are transgressing the law of God, and at the same time they come to Him, boasting of what they have done, expecting His favor. And it is this class that is here represented as building on the sand. They have erected a standard of their own. What is a perfect standard of character? The only standard ever given to man is the law of God, His holy commandments. If we have been building upon this rock, it will stand the test. If we have been erecting a standard of our own, and claim by that standard that we are perfect and that we have reached perfect righteousness and holiness, we shall know in the day of God. No one will claim that he is perfect and holy, if he trembles before the exalted standard of God. Is it safe to do this, and cast aside the immutable [law] of God, and then to claim to be holy?4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 4

Here is a mirror into which we are to look and search out every defect of character. But suppose that you look into this mirror, and see many defects in your character, and then go away and say, "I am righteous," will you be righteous? In your own eyes you will be righteous and holy. But how will it be at the bar of God? God has given us a rule, and we are to comply with its requirements; and if we dare to do otherwise, to trample this under our feet, and then stand up before God and say, "I am holy, I am holy," we shall be lost in the great day of accounts.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 5

What if we were to go out into the streets and soil our clothes with mud and then come into the house and, beholding our filthy garments as we stand before the glass, we should say to the mirror, "Cleanse me from my filth;" would it cleanse us from our filth? That is not the office of the looking glass. All that it can do is to reveal that our garments are defiled; it cannot take the defilement away.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 6

So it is with the law of God. It points out the defects of character. It condemns us as sinners, but it offers no pardon to the transgressor.

It cannot save him from his sins. But God has made a provision. Says John, "If any man sin we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." [1 John 2:1.] So we come to Him, and there we find the character of Jesus; and the righteousness of His character saves the transgressor, if we have done on our part all that we could. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 7

And yet while He saves the transgressor, He does not do away with the law of God, but He exalts the law. He exalts the law because it is the detector of sin. And it is Christ's cleansing blood that takes away our sins when we come to Him with contrition of soul, seeking His pardon. He imputes His righteousness, He takes the guilt upon Himself. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 8

Now suppose that someone shall say, Jesus has pardoned me, and I have no need of the law any further. I will no longer live in obedience to the law; the question may be asked, "Shall we continue to sin, that grace may abound?" [Romans 6:1.] No. If one should steal the money out of my purse, and then come and, confessing the crime, shall ask me to forgive him, and I shall pardon him, and then he goes and does the same thing again, does not this show that there is no change in his life? So it is with those who have asked God to forgive them and then gone right on transgressing His law. They say, "Lord, Lord," but He says, "Depart from Me." [Matthew 7:22, 23.] While I freely pardoned you, you were doing the same thing again. And your very course was leading others in the way of the transgressor. And for this reason they were called the workers of iniquity. This very course of action was the means of leading others astray. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 9

Christ offers a prayer to the Father, and He uses these words in this prayer; "Sanctify them by Thy truth, Thy Word is truth." [John 17:17.] I have sent them into the [world] as Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world. And for their sakes I sanctify Myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth. Mark these words: I sanctify Myself. Thus He observes a life of perfect obedience, for He is the perfect pattern. Then He goes on and says: That they may be sanctified—by what? Through emotion? through feeling? No.—Through the truth. We cannot trust to feeling; we must know the truth. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 10

Now here is Christ praying to His Father, that He will sanctify His followers through the truth. Then there is a truth that sanctifies, [that] has a sanctifying power upon the believer. And it becomes every one of us in this congregation to inquire what is the truth.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 11

If we are to believe the truth and [be] sanctified by the truth, then we must search the Scriptures, that we may know what is the truth. If we do this, we shall not build upon a false foundation. But if we do not, we shall find at last that we have made a great mistake and laid our foundation in the sand, to be swept away in the time of storm and tempest. I want eternal life if it takes out the right eye and if it takes off the right arm. The question with me is, Am I right with God? Am I serving Him in humility and meekness of soul? We are right amid the trials that shall try every soul of men that dwell upon the face of the earth. We may know what is the truth, and we may know what is error. We may know that we are laying our souls upon the foundation; we may know that we are not leading souls away from the truth. God help us that we may every one of us make sure of eternal life. And here is another Scripture. "Is there a prophet among you?" Deuteronomy 13:1-5. Here the commandments are set before them as a test of character. Said Christ, I have kept My Father's commandments [John 15:10], and He is our pattern in all things. How do we do the commandments from the heart? Are we studying to carry out in our lives the principles of the Sabbath commandment, which God has put right in the bosom of His law?4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 12

We may go to the heathen and say to them that we love the truth and serve the true God, and they will tell you that they worship the true and living God. We have no other way to tell who the true and living God is, only as we turn to this commandment. That God, that made the lofty trees and every thing that is lovely and beautiful under the heavens, He that weighs the hills in the balances, that God is the true and living God; He created the whole universe. And these commandments tell us who the true God is. If Satan can get this fourth commandment out of the Decalogue, then you will not be able to tell who the true and living God is.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par.

13

Well, who is the true God? The God that created everything that is beautiful in nature. We are to look up through nature to nature's God; there we are to see the true God, the Maker of the heavens and the earth. The first four of these commandments show our duty to God, and the last six to our fellow men. We cannot break one of these first four and be in favor with God. Neither can we break one of the last six and be in favor with God. These we must urge upon the people. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 14

Here are the words of David: Lord, it is time for Thee to work, for they have made void Thy law. David refers to the last days, at the very time when we are to know and be sanctified by the truth. We must cling to the truth. We must not let go the truth for friend or foe. There is a time coming when there will be great tribulation, such as never was or ever will be. Men will come claiming to be Christ. And here is a class that says, I am sinless, I am holy. I have never heard one claim that that was not a sinner. They are not doers of the Word. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 15

One man came to Oakland a short time ago, when at his own home where he came from he was known to be a dishonest man. Here he falls into the hands of the holiness people, and now he is holy, he is sinless. He goes on step by step in this delusion until he claims to be a sinless man. Now for this class we have to be prepared; we must know what spirit they are of. There [are] some of these people that are deceived by these workers of iniquity. They accept the Lord, and they accept this holiness doctrine with the Lord; but they are not the people that have power with God. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 16

John saw the temple of God opened in heaven, and in that temple he saw the ark of His testimony. [Revelation 11:19.] And says John, Here are they that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus. [Revelation 14:12.] The path of true obedience is found in the commandments of God. But Satan is going about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. He does not always appear like a lion; he has the power of clothing himself like a lamb, and he has a soft and a tender voice. And how shall we meet him? Shall we let him come in and take the control of our hearts? We cannot afford it. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 17

Now here are those that come to us boasting that they are holy. There was one that claimed this in the city of Oswego; he was holding a revival meeting there. And he worked so hard that he bled at the lungs, and they thought that he would die. Yet while he was thus at work, and boasting of his holiness, the officers of the law were after him for stealing. And while he was preaching, his wife saw the officer coming, and she slipped out, and digging a little hole in the snow, she buried the money and then came in to the house. But she was seen to do this; and while they were protesting their innocence, here comes the officer into the room with the bag of money in his hands. Now we meet this class every where we go.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 18

There was man, perhaps you know him. He claimed to be holy. The idea of repentance, said he, is not in the Bible. If, says he, a man comes to me and says that he believes in Jesus, I take him right into the church, whether he is baptized or not; I have done so with a good many. And, says he, I have not committed a sin in six years. There are some on this boat, says he, that believe that we [are] sanctified by the law. There is a woman on this boat by the name of White that teaches this. I heard this, and I stepped up to him and said: Elder Brown, you hold right on, I cannot permit that statement to go. Mrs. White has never said such a thing in any of her writings, nor has she ever spoken such a thing, for we do not believe that the law sanctifies any one. We believe that we must keep that law, or we will not be saved in the kingdom of heaven. The transgressor cannot be saved in the kingdom of glory. It is not the law that sanctifies any one, nor saves us; that law stands and cries out, Repent that your sins may be blotted out. And then the sinner goes to Jesus; and as the sinner promises that he will obey the requirements of the law, He blots out his guilty stains and sets him free and gives him power with God.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 19

John saw a company standing around the throne of God, and the angel asked him, Who are these in white robes? He answered, Thou knowest. And the angel said, "These are they who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." There is a fountain in which we may wash from every stain of impurity. And says the angel, "He shall lead them to fountains of living waters, and shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

[Revelation 7:9, 13, 14, 17.] This will be the happy privilege of those that have kept the commandments of God in the earth. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 20

Men will arise, saying, Here is Christ, here, here, here; but is He there, while they are trampling the commandments under their feet? Christ says, "Whosoever shall break one of these least commandments, [MacKnight translation] you shall be of no esteem in the reign of heaven. Not as long as the heavens remain shall one jot or one tittle pass." [Matthew 5:19, 18.] And one said to me, Why do you talk so much about the law, why not talk more about Jesus? We honor both the Father and the Son when we talk about the law. The Father gave us the law, and the Son died to magnify it and make it honorable. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 21

But, says John, in speaking of the deceiver that doeth great wonders: He shall make an image to the beast, and shall cause all to receive his mark. [Revelation 13:14.] Will you please consider this matter? Search the Scriptures and see there is a wonder-working power to appear: and it will be when men are claiming sanctification, and holiness, lifting themselves up higher and higher and boasting of themselves. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 22

Look at Moses and the prophets; look at Daniel and Joseph and Elijah. Look at these men, and find me one sentence where they ever claimed to be sinless. The very soul that is in close relation to Christ, beholding His purity and excellency, will fall before Him with shamefacedness. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 23

Daniel was a man to whom God had given great skill and learning, and when he fasted the angel came to him and said, "Thou art greatly beloved." And he fell prostrate before the angel. [Daniel 10:11, 15.] He did not say, "Lord, I have been very faithful to [You], and I have done everything to honor You and defend Your Word and name. Lord, You know how faithful I was at the king's table, and how I maintained my integrity when they cast me into the den of lions." Was that the way Daniel prayed to God? No; he prayed and confessed his sins, and said, "Hear O Lord, and deliver; we have departed from Thy Word and have sinned." [Daniel 9:5, 8, 11, 15-17.] And when he saw the angel, he said, "My comeliness was turned into corruption.” [Daniel 10:8.] He could not look upon the angel’s face, and he had no strength; [it] was all gone. So the angel came to him and set him upon his knees. He could not behold him then; and then the angel came to him with the appearance of a man. Then he could bear the sight. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 24

Why is it that so many claim to be holy and sinless? It is because they are so far from Christ. I have never dared to claim any such a thing. From the time that I was fourteen years old, if I knew what the will of God was, I was willing to do it. You never have heard me say I am sinless. Those that get sight of the loveliness and exalted character of Jesus Christ, who was holy and lifted up and His train fills the temple, will never say it. Yet we are to meet with those that will say such things more and more, every year. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 25

A lady came to me in the city of Oakland and she threw her arms around my neck and said, “You are a child of God, but I am sanctified, I am holy, and we want you to come in with us.” I turned to the Bible and showed her what it said. Then I said to her: Suppose that you should go to your children and say to them, You need not keep the commandments of God, you are holy. All you need do is to say that you love Christ; you need not think that you have got anything to do, but simply say, I love my father and mother, what would be the results? Just as sure as you stand opposed to the law of God, you have no investigation to make. If your character is not in harmony with the law of God, it is not in harmony with heaven; however you may profess to be holy and sinless. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 26

In the days of Martin Luther, there were those that came to him and said, We do not want your Bible, we want the Spirit; Martin Luther said to them, I will rap your spirit on the snout. However great their pretenses, they are not the children of God. 4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 27

I remember thirty-six years ago, I was in New York, in the house of Brother Abbey. A man came in there with an umbrella in his hands, and there he stood and said, I am Christ. I had looked upon Christ, and I said to him, Sir, you have no part with Christ. If you were

Christ you would never have uttered that sentence. He raised his umbrella to strike me, but my husband stepped in between him and me and said to him, What are you going to do, sir? He said, I am Christ and will execute His will upon those that dispute His claims.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 28

I met a man at St. Helena that boasted that he had not committed a sin for six years. And one of his own party said to me, I will not have him in my house again; he is a tyrant. He will come into my house and say, I have just as much right in this house as you; and order my wife around, and demand her to wait upon him. And this is the man that had not committed a sin for six years. I want you to understand that pretenses are not the evidences of true character. Now I speak these words to you, because wherever there is a little company raised up, Satan is constantly trying to annoy and distract them. When one of the people turns away from his sins, do you suppose that he will let him alone? No indeed. We want you to look well to the foundation of your hope. We want you to let your life and your actions testify of you, that you are the children of God.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 29

Let there be that littleness, that humbleness of soul, that they may know that you have been taught in the school of Christ. And when He shall appear in the clouds of heaven, we shall exclaim, Lo, this is our God, we have waited for Him and He will save us. Then it is that the crown of life will be placed upon the brow of the faithful ones. Then will come the voice of the Saviour, saying, Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. What? Faithful in putting their feet upon the law of God? No, no. These have not the mark of the beast upon them. I want that peace that comes through an obedience to all of the commandments of God. Amen.4LtMs, Ms 5, 1885, par. 30

Ms 6, 1885

The Spirit of Service

Basel, Switzerland

1885

Previously unpublished.

I know that the Lord is good. I know that He hears prayer and that He is a present help in every time of need. O that we might have faith to ask Him for strength, according to our great need! God's Word is sure. Why should we not take Him at His Word?4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 1

I believe that the Lord will lay upon us no burden greater than we can bear by His strength and grace.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 2

“Jesus knows our every weakness;
Take it to the Lord in prayer.”4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 3

Will not the Lord be pleased to let the light of His countenance shine upon us? O that His arm of power might be revealed!4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 4

Much work remains to be done in proclaiming the third angel's message. The Master is asking us, “Why stand ye here all the day idle?” [Matthew 20:6.] We should engage in His service, however great a sacrifice this may at first appear to us. Poor, deluded souls must be aroused from the fatal lethargy of sin. The power of sin must be broken, else it will strengthen and result in complete and final ruin.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 5

Faith, hope, and love are, as it were, lying inactive, paralyzed. Faith is the hand by which the human agent grasps the hand of the mighty Helper. Man must become one with Christ. Christ abides in the hearts of those who abide in Him. Rich clusters of fruit are borne by such men. Christ desires to quicken into activity the paralyzed powers of every man, in order that every faculty may be wisely improved.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 6

O what glorious possibilities are set before the fallen race! Through the merits of Christ, man is lifted from his depraved state, purified, and made more precious than the golden wedge of Ophir. It is possible for him to become a companion of the angels in glory, and to reflect the image of Jesus Christ, shining even in the bright splendor of the eternal throne. It is his privilege to have faith that through the power of Christ he shall be made immortal. Yet how seldom he realizes to what heights he could reach if he would allow God to direct his every step!4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 7

How often a worker is satisfied to do but little service for the Master in comparison with what the Master did for him in this world! Why, O why is man willing to remain so inactive, so helpless, when he could be accomplishing a great work in saving souls?4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 8

God invites His workers to call upon Him for help and promises to hear and answer them. Why do they not enlist the help of Omnipotence? In these precious, golden days of probation, let every laborer reach forth the hand in faith for the help and strength that will enable him to be a strong worker in the Lord's vineyard. Let him pray for soundness of judgment and for heavenly wisdom. God is a mighty Helper. He will sustain every laborer who trusts in Him. He is a sure, tried anchor, holding His children fast to Himself amid every storm of opposition, every tempest of trial and adversity. When the heavens seem dark, when the strength seems to fail, He will give light and confidence to all who believe in Him. On every troubled heart He will breathe the Spirit of peace.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 9

Christ Jesus is the Author and the Finisher of our faith. I fear that with many of us, faith does not reach any further than we can see. Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen. Let no one allow his strength to be wasted by vain conflicts, or his heart to be wearied and saddened because of unanswered desires. Even amid the fiercest conflicts of life, there is rest for the weary. Christ gives rest to all who trust in Him. To those who are afflicted with physical and spiritual maladies, He is saying, "Wilt thou be made whole?" [John 5:6.] He is ready and willing to do great things for all who place their dependence on Him.4LtMs, Ms

6, 1885, par. 10

With tenderness and pity the Saviour is looking upon us. He offers help to all who, doing the best they can, plead for capabilities that will enable them to do more for Him. Every truly converted person has the spirit of service. If Christ is indeed formed within, the hope of glory, His Holy Spirit works through the human agent to save other souls for whom He has died. If His followers take up the cross, fully resolved to do what they can, He gives them strength to bear the burden.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 11

What more can we say to impress the members of the church of Christ with the importance of using aright the talents that have been entrusted to them? How shall they be made to realize what a power for good they might become, if they would endeavor to use their talents to God's glory? Satan has great success in preventing men from using their talents. He controls the talents of many who claim to believe the present truth. A very large number of professing Christians are daily robbing God, dwarfing their powers by engaging in frivolous amusements and by gratifying selfish ambition. Constantly they are degrading their God-given powers by allowing their minds to become absorbed in commonplace matters, when the most important themes that can be contemplated by the mind are within their grasp.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 12

God's lessons are presented in such a form that they will not only instruct those who are endowed with the loftiest intellect, but will interest those who have a feeble understanding. Those who, conscious of their weakness, are willing to be learners, becoming as little children, will be instructed in divine things by the Great Teacher. He will impart to them greater wisdom than has ever been imparted in schools of human philosophy.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 13

The greatest work, the noblest effort, in which man can engage is to point his fellow men to the Lamb of God. O let us urge the importance of this work more than we have urged it! Let the laymen begin to work. In manner, thought, word, and action they should give a correct representation of Christ. If they represent Him aright, they will receive the reward of life eternal and a home in heaven.4LtMs, Ms 6, 1885, par. 14

Ms 7, 1885

“Come Out From Among Them, and Be Ye Separate”

NP

July 27, 1885

This manuscript is drawn largely from Ms 4a, 1885.

“Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness, and what concord hath Christ with Belial? Or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.” [2 Corinthians 6:14-18.]⁴*LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 1*

Never was there a time in earth's history when this warning was more appropriate than at the present time. Far too large a number of professed Christians are such only in name. They have no root in themselves. Their heart is filled with pride, impurity, unholy ambition, self-importance, and love of supremacy. These souls have an intelligent knowledge of the theory of the truth. They can prove their doctrines to be sound and scriptural, but they hold the truth in unrighteousness. By their course of action they deny the faith. Their hearts are not sanctified through the truth. They are unholy in heart and unchristlike in deportment. By word and action they testify that they do not possess the truth as it is in Jesus. Unless the Spirit and principles which characterize the life of Christ are planted in the heart, they cannot control the life. Unless the soul temple is cleansed from its defilement, unless there is purity of heart and earnest efforts made to meet the standard of God's Word, these persons will never be purified, they will never be fitted to be the companions of the pure and the holy. They will never wear the white linen which is the righteousness of the saints. The law of God must be written in the heart. The truth of God must illuminate the soul. Holiness, mercy, truth, love must be brought into the life.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 2

There will always be in positions of trust men who have never overcome self. These Satan uses as decoys. They flatter the pleasure lover and court his approval by uniting with him. They determine not to obey the call, Come out, and be separate; and as a consequence, iniquity abounds. Anything is preferable in their sight to putting away the evil thing. They profess to believe the Word of God, but they do it not. With a knowledge of sacred truth before them, they cherish sin in their hearts. When the will of God is known and rejected, the heart becomes more hard, the conscience more unimpressionable, and ruin more sure, than if they had had no knowledge of the truth.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 3

These men are not moved by the messages of warning. The terrors of the Lord have no lasting effect upon their mind. The love of Jesus reflected from the cross of Calvary may be presented vividly before them—His pity, His compassion for fallen man, which led Him to leave the royal courts and lay aside His robes of honor, for our sakes to become poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich. His life of self-denial and self-sacrifice may be brought before them; His entreaties, His invitations, His richest promises may be repeated to them; but the selfish heart is proof against them all. They feel that God's claims are arbitrary, and the truth finds no acceptance. Let there be more license, less constraint, pleads the carnal heart. The truth of the Bible has no power to cause these souls to turn from sin. The temple of the heart is used for idols. The indulgence of self, which keeps them in harmony with the world's customs and practices, has a controlling power upon their lives.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 4

Over the lives of professed Christians, the power of God has but little control. Multitudes embrace the truth who have not its principles incorporated into their lives. Innumerable favors are bestowed upon them by the God of heaven without awakening in them one thought of gratitude in return. The love of Jesus is not a ruling principle in the soul and therefore cannot exercise a constraining power upon the life. These professors are all through our ranks and are connected with the institutions which God has established as instrumentalities through which His name shall be honored on the earth.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 5

A partial surrender to truth gives free access for Satan to work. The heart is the soul temple; and until this is fully on the Lord's side, it is the stronghold of the enemy. His suggestions in the mind become mingled with the truth and are received as truth. This influence is leading souls away from the grand old waymarks into false paths. When the mind becomes thus confused, when right is considered unessential, and error is called truth, it is almost impossible to make these deceived souls see that it is the adversary that has confused their senses and polluted the soul temple. A tissue of lies is planted where truth and truth alone should be. The truth of God is a dead letter to them, and the Saviour's love is unknown. There is no heavenly impulse in their soul. Religion is a dead form. God is not in their thoughts.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 6

“Come out from among them, and be ye separate.” [Verse 17.] Will we hear the voice of God and obey, or shall we make half-way work of the matter and try to serve God and mammon at the same time? Christ has placed before us the conditions of eternal life. “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God,” He says, “with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.” “This do, and thou shalt live.” [Luke 10:27, 28.] The servants who will hear from the lips of Christ, “Well done, good and faithful servants” [Matthew 25:23], will be heroic ministers of righteousness, though they may never preach a discourse from the pulpit. Loyal to a sense of God's claims upon them, and jealous of the honor of their Captain, they will minister to the souls who are the purchase of His blood. They will see the necessity of carrying into their work a willing mind, an earnest spirit, and a hearty, unselfish zeal. They will not study how best they can preserve their own dignity, but by their care and thoughtfulness they win the hearts of those whom they serve. On every hand the agents of Satan will induce us to sin. But the soul who wills to love and fear God will be as firm as a rock to his heaven-inspired purpose. Like Daniel, he will refuse to be moved from his convictions of duty.4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 7

The apostle Paul urges upon us the advantages thus placed within our reach. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved," he says, "let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." [2 Corinthians 7:1.] This is the work before us. We are to separate from the world in spirit and practice if we would become sons and daughters of God. "I pray not," Christ said, "that Thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that Thou shouldest keep them from the evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. Sanctify them through Thy truth; Thy word is truth." [John 17:15-17.] 4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 8

There is earnest work before each one of us. Right thoughts, pure and holy purposes will not come to us naturally. These we must strive for in our institutions, our publishing houses and colleges especially. Pure and holy principles should take root. If our institutions are what God designed they should be, they will not pattern after any other in the land. They will stand as peculiar, governed and controlled by the Bible standard. They will not come into harmony with the principles of the world in order to gain patronage. No motives will have sufficient force to move them from the straight line of duty. Those who are under the control of the Spirit of God will not seek their own pleasure or amusement. If Christ presides in the hearts of the members of His church, they will answer to the call, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing." [2 Corinthians 6:17.] "Partake not of her sin." [Revelation 18:4.] 4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 9

God has a work for His faithful sentinels to do in standing in defense of the truth. They are to warn and entreat, showing their faith by their works. They are to stand as did Noah, in noble, whole-souled fidelity, their characters untarnished by the evil around them. They are to be saviours of men, as was their Master. The worker who thus stands true to his trust will be exposed to hatred and reproach. False accusations will be brought against him to drag him from his high position. But this soul has his foundation upon the Rock, and he remains unmoved, warning, entreating, rebuking sin and pleasure-loving by his own moral rectitude and circumspect life. 4LtMs, Ms 7, 1885, par. 10

Ms 8, 1885

Sermon/Soldiers of Christ

Grythytted, Sweden

October 24, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in OHC 326; 6MR 50-51; CTr 205. †Note One or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

“Rejoice in the Lord alway; and again I say, Rejoice. Let your moderation be know unto all men. The Lord is at hand. Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.” Philippians 4:4-7.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 1

It may seem difficult to rejoice in the Lord when in trouble, but we lose a great deal by giving way to a spirit of complaint. It is our privilege to have in our hearts, at all times, the peace of Christ. We should not allow ourselves to be easily disturbed. It is to test us that God brings us through trials and difficulties; and if we are patient and trustful under His proving, He will purify us from all dross and at last bring us forth with triumph and rejoicing. Great blessings are reserved for those who uncomplainingly submit to the yoke that God wishes them to bear.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 2

Adam and Eve were tested, but they did not endure the test. They fell under temptation, and their fall opened the way for sin to enter our world. Christ saw that in their own strength human beings were unable to overcome Satan, and He came to this world to bring to men and women the power lost through disobedience. He passed over the ground where Adam stumbled and fell. For forty days and nights He fasted in the wilderness of temptation, and there Satan came to Him with great power, hoping to overcome Him in His weakness. The temptations then brought upon Christ were in every way greater than those brought upon Adam, but the Redeemer did not swerve a hairsbreadth from His allegiance to God. Using the weapon that is within the reach of all—the Word of God—He gained the victory, and Satan left the field a beaten foe. This has opened the way for every son and daughter of Adam to gain the victory, in the name of Jesus, over the enemy.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 3

We are soldiers of Christ on the field of battle, and we cannot expect to have an easy time. We must obey the orders of our Captain. He is leading His army on to victory. All that we have to do is to keep close watch of Him, and obey His orders, and we shall be successful in fighting the battles of the Lord.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 4

When we think of our sinfulness and our unworthiness, it seems that we can never perfect a character fit for heaven. And in our own strength we cannot. But Christ has promised to impute to us His righteousness. This righteousness will not be given to us without a determined effort on our part. We are exhorted to fight the good fight of faith, that we may lay hold on eternal life. We are to stand firm in defense of the faith once delivered to the saints.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 5

I thank God that light has come to this place. Although it may seem that you are alone, yet you are not alone; for Christ is with you; you are in blessed company. And you have the words sounding down along the line from the prophets and apostles to encourage you in steadfastness. Many of these holy men lost their lives because of their faithfulness to God. If you suffer for the truth's sake, remember that this is no more than others have done before you. What trials and afflictions Paul endured, and yet he says, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 6

When difficulties arise, as they will, remember that Jesus is by your side, a very present help in time of need. To meet trial bravely is part of the Christian warfare, and in this warfare all heaven is interested. Christ knows what temptations you will meet. He knows that when one accepts the truth, he will have a cross to lift; and He is ready to give the needed help. 4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 7

Let the light of truth shine forth in your life. Do you say, How shall I let it shine? If before you accepted the truth, you were impatient and fretful, let your life now show to those around you that the truth has had a sanctifying influence upon your heart and character, that instead of being fretful and impatient, you are now cheerful and uncomplaining. Thus you reveal Christ to the world. If, after accepting the truth, you are sad and gloomy, cast down by discouragement, you give evidence that you do not enjoy the peace of God; you are misrepresenting Him by giving others a false impression regarding the religion of Christ. How can you rise above this depression and unbelief? "In everything give thanks" [1 Thessalonians 5:18] for the keeping power of God through Jesus Christ, and the peace of God will rest upon you. If you believe that Jesus will do just as He has said He would, the peace that passeth all understanding will rest upon you. At the moment when you are offering your prayer for help, you may not feel all the joy and blessing that you would like to feel; but if you believe that Christ will hear and answer your petition, the peace of Christ will come. If you rely upon His Word, the promise will be fulfilled, as surely as the throne of God exists. 4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 8

Cherish the spirit that filled the heart of Christ, and then you can lift up holy hands to God without wrath and doubting. Remember that there are greater trials you may be called to meet than you have yet met. But if you take hold upon the strength of the mighty Helper, and not reason with your adversary and never complain of God, His promises will be verified. The experience that you gain today in trusting Him will help you in meeting the difficulties of tomorrow. Each day you are to come, trusting as a little child, drawing nearer to Jesus and heaven. In meeting with unwavering trust in God the daily trials and difficulties, you will again and again test the promises of heaven, and each time you will learn a lesson of faith. Thus you will gain strength to resist temptation; and when the harder trials come, you will be able to endure. 4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 9

I wish that I had power to present before you as they are the high privileges that you may enjoy. I wish I could tell you how willing Christ is to impart His blessings to you, to tell it in such a way that you would become sure that He is more willing to give you His Holy Spirit than parents are to give good gifts to their children.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 10

This world is not our home. We are only pilgrims and strangers here. This world is the place in which we are to gain a preparation for the home above. Here all roughness, all unchristlikeness is to be taken out of our characters, and by the discipline of trial we are to be made ready for a place in the temple of God. In God's workshop we are to be hewed and fitted for the place He wants us to occupy in His building. Every man has his work to do to be a representative of Christ to all unbelievers. Our special work is to represent the character of Christ at all times and in all places. Let us carry to our neighbors in kindness and love the precious light of truth. If we are faithful in the discharge of the daily duties that come to us, we shall at last have a place in the mansions that Christ has gone to prepare for those who love Him.4LtMs, Ms 8, 1885, par. 11

Ms 9, 1885

Sermon/God's Purpose For Us

Grythytted, Sweden

October [24], 1885

Previously unpublished. +NoteOne or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

“For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God; strengthened with all might, according to His glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness.” [Colossians 1:9-11.] Thank the Lord for the possibility of obtaining this, through the power and riches of His great salvation.⁴*LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 1*

The apostle here presents the necessity of being filled with a knowledge of God's will. We must have a knowledge of God; but in order to obtain this blessing, we must be earnest in prayer. Is there anything more desirable than this knowledge? We live in a world where iniquity abounds and where the law of Jehovah is made void. Those who have a knowledge of God's will will not separate themselves from Him by disobedience. They will be animated with an earnest desire to fulfil God's purpose for them. Shall we live to please Him who gave His life for us, that all who believe in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life?⁴*LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 2*

In order to be followers of Christ, we must separate from the world's customs and practices. In doing this, we shall have God's blessing. We cannot have the peace of Christ in our hearts, and yet be joined to the world. Then our lives are filled with pride, with the love of the world, and there is no room for Jesus. The soul temple must be cleansed of all worldliness, all self-love, so that Jesus can come in with His abiding presence.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 3

If the mind is filled with thoughts of God and heaven, there will not be room for the things of this world. But if you are seeking for the pleasures of this life, your mind becomes engrossed with transitory things, and heaven is forgotten. Between the children of God and worldlings there is a clear line of demarcation. “Ye cannot serve God and mammon.” [Matthew 6:24.] “Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters.” [2 Corinthians 6:17, 18.]4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 4

Those who give the things of this world the proper place in their life will inquire, “What is truth?” [John 18:38.] As light shines upon the Word of God, they will follow that light. We are not to follow that light only which shone in the days of prophets and apostles. The light is growing brighter and brighter, and additional light is shining upon us. The jewels of truth, which have been buried beneath the rubbish of error, are being dug out and replaced in their original setting. Daily we are to search the Scriptures; and as we do this, light will shine upon its pages.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 5

Jesus left the heavenly courts, and came to this world, that He might leave us a perfect example, that we might “walk worthy of the Lord, unto all pleasing.” [Colossians 1:10.] Light from heaven is constantly shining upon our pathway. If we open our hearts to the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, then the light will be reflected to those around us, and we shall be walking worthily.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 6

God has given us abundant proof of his love for us. The Word of God declares, “Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.” [John 15:13.] But Jesus gave His life for His enemies. The love that shines from Calvary is without a parallel. Christ died in order to place salvation within the reach of all sinful mortals. Will we take hold of the promise? Will we take hold of the divine power? The thought of the infinite sacrifice that He made in our behalf should arouse in us an earnest desire to be like Him. For our sakes He left His Father’s throne and clothed Himself with humanity. In our behalf, He became a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. In order that we might have through obedience to His requirements an eternal weight of glory, He endured shame and mockery. Shall we, then, be indifferent and neglect the salvation placed within our reach at so great a cost? 4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 7

Jesus asks for our love and confidence. He knows that we need Him, that we need the peace which He alone can give, the rest which He alone can bestow. "Come unto Me," He says, "all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light." [Matthew 11:28-30.] 4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 8

The conditions upon which gaining the rest is dependent are wearing Christ's yoke and bearing His burden. In so doing, you will find rest. We need daily to learn of Christ the lesson of humility. The wisdom of Jesus will place us in such a relation to God that we shall feel unbounded confidence in Him. 4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 9

It is impossible for us to save ourselves. We have in us no power to wash away one stain of sin. But a fountain has been opened for us—the blood of Jesus Christ. Into this we may plunge and be cleansed. Satan will tell you that it is impossible for human beings to have freedom from sin. Tell him that Jesus is your Saviour, that He died for you, that He has life in Himself, and that He will give this life to every sincere seeker. When darkness and unbelief press in upon the soul, do not lose your confidence in the Word of God. If you comply with the conditions specified, you may rely upon these promises. 4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 10

The power of the enemy is increasing. He is coming down with great power and is working with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish. But God will not allow those who trust in Him to be overcome by the power of Satan. Let each believer lay his hand in the hand of Jesus, saying, "Lead me and guide me." [Psalm 31:3.] If we commit the keeping of our souls unto Him as unto a faithful Creator, He will keep that which we have committed unto Him "against that day." [2 Timothy 1:12.] He will protect us against Satan's devices. He will shelter us from the storms of temptation.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 11

Religion does not consist in form. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." [James 1:27.] Those who have the religion of Christ will bear fruit to the glory of God. As we listen to the words of the true Christian, we realize that Jesus is formed in him, the hope of glory. He loves the Saviour; he talks of Him; and the more he dwells upon His love, the more he thinks of Him and appreciates the blessed Redeemer, the more earnestly he seeks to uplift Him before others.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 12

Christ has left us a perfect example, and as we follow Him we shall become patient, kind, and forbearing. The religion of Christ does not bring men down to a low level; it elevates and ennobles them. It never makes men coarse and rough. It refines the tastes and sanctifies the judgment, fitting men and women for the society of the heavenly angels.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 13

There are higher attainments for the children of God than they have yet reached. We are to grasp the promises and to show forth the praises of Him who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light. Jesus wants us to show to the world that there is in the gospel power to enable human beings to gain the victory over sin.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 14

The more we have of Christ's love, the more we shall want of this precious gift. He will be in us a well of water, springing up unto everlasting life; and we shall be a blessing to all around us, strengthened by His glorious power, growing up into the full stature of men and women in Christ. There is no limit to His power, and He will lift us up according to our faith in Him.4LtMs, Ms 9, 1885, par. 15

Ms 10, 1885

Sermon/The Price of Eternal Life

Orebro, Sweden

October 27, 1885

Previously unpublished. +NoteOne or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

The Price of Eternal Life

The cross of self-denial lies directly in the path that leads to eternal life. There is in the natural heart that which is opposed to God's rule of government, and those who follow in the path of obedience must even at sacrifice deny self. They must not follow their own inclinations, because in seeking self-gratification, they walk away from Christ, and their influence is with the enemy. Those who do this make worldly gain and worldly pleasure the object of life, and the glories of the eternal world are eclipsed by the fleeting show of the present world. In order for a man rightly to estimate the value of eternal life, he must not allow the things of this world to interpose between him and God.4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 1

Those who follow Christ must lift the cross. When we realize the cost of the sacrifice that Christ made for us, we shall comprehend the meaning of the words, "Whosoever shall save his life shall lose it." [Matthew 16:25.] Christ gave up His own life to provide a way for the ransomed of the Lord to walk in. He says, "Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." [Matthew 7:13, 14.]4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 2

It is natural for man to follow where the multitude is leading. It is hard for him to separate from the world, from worldly associates and worldly customs. Satan is at enmity with God, and he is trying by every device in his power to win man to his side. There are only two parties in the world, and those who are making earthly gain and pleasure their highest aim are walking in the road that leads to eternal destruction.4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 3

How can man be led to estimate aright the value of his soul? How can he be led to turn away from the attractions of the world, and fix his eyes upon heaven? Only by studying and striving to understand the great plan of redemption. Those who realize something of the cost of the sacrifice that Christ made in order to uplift and ennoble the human race will count no sacrifice too great that will help them to fulfil His purpose of love to save them, that they should not perish, but have eternal life. They will lay at the feet of Christ all that they are, all that they possess, and their highest aim will be to be doers of His Word. Luke 18:18-30.4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 4

In order to be a follower of Christ, you need not wait for great occasions; you need not ask for extraordinary powers. Use diligently your powers of mind, soul, and body. Go forward in faith, and let your daily life be a living testimony to the power of divine grace. As you do this, God will be with you; and as long as life shall last, your spiritual experience will widen and deepen and strengthen.4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 5

There are many who see what God requires of them, but they know that in obeying His injunction they will lose the love and praise of the world, and they are unwilling to lift the cross, unwilling to be Christ's disciples. Those who truly love the Saviour will account it a privilege to give up all for the sake of Him who made the great sacrifice to come to our world to seek and save the lost. They will not for a moment think that in order to be a Christian, they must reach downward. They realize that the religion of Christ never degrades the receiver, but uplifts, and ennobles him, refining his tastes, sanctifying his judgment, and giving him a beauty of character that will fit him to live with the angels in the city of God. Christ is the ladder. Round after round, all are to climb heavenward, making every sacrifice.4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 6

“Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters.” [2 Corinthians 6:17, 18.] “Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. ... And it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in Him purifieth himself even as He is pure.” [1 John 3:1-3.] You would think it a great honor to be noticed by an earthly monarch; but these words promise that you may become sons and daughters of the King of heaven. God promises to take into this close relationship those who love and serve Him, if they choose Him above any earthly treasure. We must follow Jesus in obedience. If we are meek and lowly, then we shall here know the comfort of His grace; and at last we shall see Him as He is and be granted a place in the city of God and a life that measures with the life of God. 4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 7

Christ will accept all who come to Him. But there are many who feel no need of coming, and they sell their souls in a very cheap market. Their time, their strength, their abilities they use in gathering together earthly possessions. But at last they die and must part with these. Others will take the wealth for which they have bartered their hope of eternal life. Every soul will be tempted and tried upon this point. Will they have eternal life, at the sacrifice of earthly possessions? 4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 8

Money cannot buy the life that measures with the life of God; intellect cannot obtain it; the highest education cannot grasp it. It is a free gift to all. The rich may have it; the poor may rejoice in it. Christ offers the precious gift to all who will accept it. All that He asks is compliance with certain conditions. Men are to use their earthly possessions to win souls to Christ. The gospel message is to be carried to all parts of our world. But men seek so intently to amass worldly riches that they lose sight of the reward that is promised to those who lift the cross. How much better it would be to be unrecognized and unhonored by the world than to lose an eternity of bliss. All superfluity is to be cut away from the soul and all earthly treasures to be employed to win men to love God and keep His commandments. 4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 9

“What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?” [Mark 8:36, 37.] If I should ask you, “What price do you place upon your soul?" you would look at me in astonishment, and ask, "What good would money be to me if I had sold my soul?" And yet there are thousands who are selling their souls to Satan for worldly gain or worldly pleasure. So engrossed are they with the things of this life that they have no time to think of heaven or heavenly things. 4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 10

All through the ages God's servants have met this question and have refused to barter heaven for the things of this world. "Moses ... refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." [Hebrews 11:24, 25.] Daniel, when told that he must choose between his life and his worship of God, did not hesitate, but three times a day, as had been his wont, offered his petition to Jehovah. [Daniel 6:10.] Death in the lions' den confronted him, but he counted it better to lose this present life than to lose eternal life. The three Hebrew worthies, when told that they must either worship the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up, or be cast into the fiery furnace, declared, "Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and He will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up." Daniel 3:17, 18. They were willing to lose this life, but they could not afford to lose the life to come. 4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 11

"Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matthew 6:24. This does not mean that those who serve God must sever all business connections. It means that all that they do in securing the earthly is to be made secondary to the business of serving God, and that in their business they are to show that they have a sacred connection with heaven. It means that they are to use their entrusted means as the Lord's means to win souls to Christ (and to) shed light on all around them, keeping their lives pure and upright, and bringing the nobility of Christ into all that they do. Never are they to forget that they are living epistles to be known and read of all men. Never are they to allow anything to come between them and obedience to God. Do riches look desirable to you? Christ promises you eternal riches in the kingdom of heaven. Do you desire to prolong your life? Christ promises you immortal life if you will believe on Him and obey His words. Those who suffer with Him in this life will one day be crowned with glory and honor and will be given an abundant entrance into the city of God, to live forever with the redeemed.4LtMs, Ms 10, 1885, par. 12

Ms 11, 1885

Sermon/Waiting and Watching for Christ's Appearing

Orebro, Sweden

October 28, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in HP 42, 233, 355.
+NoteOne or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Waiting and Watching for Christ's Appearing

“Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man.” [Luke 21:34-36.]4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 1

Christ bids us watch, that we may be accounted worthy to escape the things that are coming on the earth. It is of the greatest importance that we heed this warning. The enemy of all righteousness is on our track, seeking to lead us to forget God.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 2

We should be filled with joy at the thought of Christ's soon appearing. To those that love His appearing, He will come without sin unto salvation. But if our minds are filled with thoughts of earthly things, we cannot look forward with joy to His appearing.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 3

“If I knew that Christ were coming in a few years,” one says, “I should live very differently.” But if we believe that He is coming at all, we should live just as faithfully as if we knew that He would appear in a few years. We cannot see the end from the beginning, but Christ has provided sufficient help for every day in the year. All we have to do with is this one day. Today we must be faithful to our trust. Today we must love God with all the heart and our neighbor as ourselves. Today we must resist the temptations of the enemy and through the grace of Christ gain the victory. Thus we shall watch and wait for Christ's coming. Each day we should live as if we knew that this would be our last day on this earth. If we knew that Christ would come tomorrow, would we not crowd into today all the kind words, all the unselfish deeds, that we could? We should be patient and gentle, and intensely in earnest, doing all in our power to win souls to Christ.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 4

If for some crime that you had committed you were incarcerated within prison walls, with the sentence of death passed upon you, and a friend should come to you and say, "I will take your place, and you may go free," would not your heart be filled with gratitude for such unselfish love? Christ has done infinitely more than this for us. We were lost; the sentence of death had been passed upon us; and Christ died for us, and thus set us free. He said, "I will take upon Myself the guilt of the sinner, that he may have another trial. I will put within his reach power that will enable him to overcome in the struggle with evil."4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 5

This is where human beings stand today. Christ has bought us with His life, and we belong to Him. All our powers, physical, mental, and spiritual, belong to Him; and to withhold from Him that which is His own is robbery.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 6

I urge you to turn your attention from worldly things, and center your thoughts on the things of eternity. Christ has placed everlasting life within your reach, and He has promised to give you help in every time of need. When He was on this earth in person, the sick and the afflicted, the poor and needy flocked to Him, and He turned no one away unhelped and uncomforted. There was one man, a paralytic, who for a long time had been helpless. The physicians told him that they could not cure his disease, and the Pharisees told him that his sickness was a result of his own sins and that there was no help for him.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 7

But his friends felt that there was still one chance for his life. They determined to take him to Jesus. When they reached the door of the house in which Christ was at the time, they found such a crowd of people round it that they could not enter. They refused to be hindered by this obstacle, and taking the sick man to the top of the house, they let him down through the roof.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 8

The Saviour knew what the man wanted. He saw the faith of those who had brought him, and He said, “Son, be of good comfort; thy sins be forgiven thee.” [Matthew 9:2.] What comfort and peace and joy filled the heart of the sick man as he heard these words!4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 9

“And behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth. And Jesus, knowing their thoughts, said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? For whether is it easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven; or to say, Arise and walk. But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith He to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. And he arose, and departed to his house.” [Verses 3-7.]4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 10

Today we may come to Christ for help, confiding in Him, and by faith claiming His promises. He will help us just as surely as He helped the paralytic. He wants us to believe that He is able to do all things. He will let His blessing rest upon all who come to Him in faith.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 11

There were many places in which Christ could not do many mighty works, “because of their unbelief.” [Matthew 13:58.] Unbelief is cruel, and we should cast every vestige of it out of our hearts. If God loved us so much that He gave His only begotten Son to die for us, think you that He will withhold from us any needed blessing?4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 12

We are not to live for ourselves. Christ came to this world to live for others—not to be ministered unto, but to minister. If you strive to live as He lived, you are saying to the world, “Behold the Man of Calvary.” By precept and example you are leading others in the way of righteousness.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 13

While in this world, men and women must work. Labor is not a disgrace, but a blessing. Christ Himself worked with His hands, and so did the apostles. Christ does not want us to spend our time in idle contemplation. While we are working with our hands, we can be thinking of God and heaven. We can take the Saviour with us to our work. We can know, if we will, that He is at our right hand, ready to help us in every time of need.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 14

God wants every one of us to have salvation. "I will make a man more precious than gold," He declares, "even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir." [Isaiah 13:12.] As the stones in their rough state are taken from the quarry, and prepared for the building of which they are to form a part, so God's people are taken from the world and prepared for a place in His everlasting kingdom. The truth, received into the heart, exerts upon the character a sanctifying, ennobling influence. Those who have rough, harsh traits of character must be brought into God's workshop, that they may be prepared by polishing for a place in His temple. Those who take part in the life to come will in this life be made white and tried.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 15

We should never rest satisfied with present attainments. If we put mind and heart into the work of reaching God's ideal for us, if we go to Christ, the mighty Helper, for aid, He will give us the very assistance that we need. He will bestow on us the very power that will enable us to be victorious in the struggle against evil.4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 16

We ought to know more of Jesus tomorrow than we do today. We ought to be constantly growing in grace and in the knowledge of Christ, advancing heavenward step by step. When the redeemed hear the words "Well done, good and faithful servant" [Matthew 25:23], do you think that any of them will regret the sacrifice that they have made to gain the victory? Let us keep our eyes fixed upon Jesus. By beholding Him, we shall be changed into His likeness. But if we keep thinking and talking of our trials, we shall lose sight of heaven. Let us say with Paul, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things that are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." [2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.]4LtMs, Ms 11, 1885, par. 17

Ms 12, 1885

Statement Regarding Mr. Garmire

South Lancaster, Massachusetts

August 7, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in PH030 9-12.

Written Statement From Sister White Regarding Mr. Garmire

I am compelled to state that I have not had the least faith in Mr. Garmire or his work. The pamphlet that was issued last fall at the time of our Jackson camp meeting had not the least sanction of our people. They were sent broadcast by stealing the Review and Herald list. The daughter of Mr. Garmire claims, or he claims for her, to have visions; but they bear not the stamp of God. They are of the same character as many such things we have met in our experience—a delusion of Satan. 4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 1

I plainly stated at the Jackson camp meeting to those fanatical parties that they were doing the work of the adversary of souls; they were in darkness. They claimed to have great light that probation would close in October, 1884. 4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 2

I there stated in public that the Lord had been pleased to show me that there would be no definite time in the message given of God since 1844; and that I knew that this message which four or five were engaged in advocating with great zeal was heresy. The visions of this poor child were not of God. This light came not from heaven. Time was short; but the end was not yet. A great work was to be accomplished to prepare a people to be sealed with the seal of the living God. 4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 3

Mr. Garmire, Frank Allen, and Frank Jones were the principal advocates of this heresy. God does not send His light and His truth through impure channels. The record of these men is not clear. They have pursued such a course in their religious life that we have no confidence in them as Christians. 4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 4

We thought that after the time passed they might humble themselves, confess their delusion, and the Lord would pardon the grievous sin of erecting false light. But no; they went further and further into delusion. I wish to warn all in Battle Creek, and all who are liable to be in any way deceived by these men, that they are in a delusion.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 5

Frank Jones is a special agent of Satan. He has had influence to deceive some souls. When his doctrines are so manifestly originated by a mind impure and corrupt, we would think any mind that had been under the influence of the Spirit of God, and that was conversant with the Scriptures in any degree, would turn from his polluting heresy and denounce his vagaries with loathing. But there is that in the human heart which inclines to accept anything new and odd and strange, even of the most inconsistent and revolting character.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 6

This poor, blind man has greater spiritual blindness than that which marks his temporal vision. Satan has manufactured most loathsome vagaries to present as truth. Should the Bible present any such ideas, well might infidels be justified in their unbelief. We warn all who may be brought under the influence of these few deluded ones to not receive them into their houses, or to bid them Godspeed; for they are doing the work of Satan as verily as the archdeceiver himself.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 7

God's standard is His holy, perfect law; elevate that. Let nothing move your feet from the solid Rock. Truth is ever pure, elevating, and ennobling. Truth never leads to unchastity, nor to moral pollution. Truth never degrades the receiver, never leads to any impropriety of conduct. But those who have taken the course these men have will go to great extremes in fanatical errors and wild, unreasonable vagaries. They began to find fault with the church; the church was backslidden, the leaders were backslidden. They had a wonderful message. God had left the church and the leading men [to] one side, and these men were God's messengers, to give the last message of mercy and proclaim the end of time which Mr. Garmire's daughter had professed to see in vision.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 8

These men despised all counsel, all advice, and maintained that they had the truth. They denounced the church as forsaken, fallen. I conversed with Frank Allen and told him of his errors. I presented his inconsistent life, his wicked, immoral course of action, breaking the commandments of God, and showed him the questionable Christian character of Mr. Garmire.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 9

The past record of Frank Jones in the books of heaven testified against him; for he left a spotted record. I warned him to change his course, but he paid no heed. He despised all counsel. We thought after the time they had set passed, then we might be able to do something with these deceived, deluded souls. But they were just as firm and determined as ever. They manifested a stubborn persistence in having their own way.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 10

I regretted that Bro. Shrock should be drawn into this delusion; for I believed him to be the only honest one among them. He sold his home, and these deluded men drew upon his funds to support themselves and their families, until this brother was alarmed at the increasing demands, and withdrew, in a great measure, his support. I hope this brother will wrench himself free from Satan's snares, and make thorough work to confess his errors, and then take his place again, humble and penitent, at the feet of Jesus.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 11

I warn my brethren and sisters to give not one word of sympathy or support to these men who have been holding fast their loathsome errors in the face of evidence and light to the contrary. We would suppose that such a warning was wholly unnecessary; but when there are men and women who are inclined to condemn the church, and those whom God has used to bear His message to the world, they are in danger of following a strange voice, rather than that of the true Shepherd.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 12

Christ says, My sheep hear My voice, and the voice of a stranger will they not follow. Mr. Garmire is trying to make his voice heard; but listen not. God does not select men whose lives and Christian character are questionable wherever they have lived, and give them special light, and pass his true, devoted, self-sacrificing servants by. This is not God's plan. It looks, just as it is, like the work of the great adversary of souls.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 13

Frank Jones and Frank Allen are men of whom you may well beware. God is not with them. They are led by another spirit. Their doctrines are the doctrines of Satan. Beware of these men who lie in wait to deceive unwary souls. But how any one can be deceived by them is a mystery.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 14

May the Lord give wisdom to His people, that they will not so far separate themselves from the true Shepherd, that they can hear the voice of a stranger and follow him rather than the true Shepherd. We do well that we take heed what we hear and what we believe, lest we be found wholly deceived on Satan's ground.4LtMs, Ms 12, 1885, par. 15

Ms 13, 1885

“I have been unable to sleep much...”

Duplicate of Ms 39, 1887.

Ms 14, 1885

Talk/Talk Before the European Council

Basel, Switzerland

September 21, 1885

Edited variant of Ms 19, 1885. Portions of this manuscript are published in 1MR 151-153; 5MR 308-311.

We know best how this cause started. We have studied in every way ways and means in order that we might have something to carry us from place to place in the cause of truth. To reach the very first conference that we ever had in the State of Connecticut, my husband worked at cutting cordwood at twenty-five cents a cord. He was not used to work, and the rheumatism came in his wrists so that night after night he was unable to sleep because of the pain. Our prayers ascended night after night that God would relieve him from pain. He would say, "Wife, we must be sure to keep five dollars by us, and if we come short of means we will not use that five dollars." 4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 1

I have fainted on the floor with a sick child in my arms more than twice for the want of food to eat. Then the word came, "Cannot you come and hold a meeting with us in Connecticut?" When my husband settled with his employer he had ten dollars, and with that we made our way to that conference. 4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 2

It was there that the work began to branch out, and here is where he began to do his first publishing. He was a lame man, caused by cutting the ankle bone in his youth, but he walked nine miles to the printing office to carry his paper. At another time he took his scythe and went into the field to mow grass in order to get means to carry him to the conference in New York. And so the truth of God began to spread in New York, and this is a little sample of the way that we first introduced the truth into different places. 4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 3

For months my husband worked, handling stone until the skin was worn off his fingers and the blood dripped from the ends of his fingers. This was in the very places where he had spoken in the desk before thousands. Even then he did not obtain the money for his hard work. Do you know the remembrance of this is the very best part of my experience? He went through the streets of Brunswick, Maine, with a bag upon his shoulders containing a little rice and meal and beans to keep us from starving, and when he came into the house, singing, I said, "Have we come to this, husband? Has the Lord forsaken us and our work?"4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 4

He lifted up his hand and said, "Hush, hush, the Lord has not forsaken us."4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 5

I was so faint that as he said this I fell from my chair onto the floor. The next day we received a letter entreating us to go to another place to hold a conference, but said he, "I have not a penny. What shall I do?" But he went to the post office and came back with a letter containing five dollars. We felt very grateful for that. We called the family together and bowed down before the Lord and gave thanks. That night we took our passage for Boston. This is the way that we commenced this work.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 6

At one time the light came that we must go to Portsmouth, about ninety miles distant. But we had nothing to go with. I said to my husband, "I shall get ready. I shall put on my dress to go." There we sat in our house, and soon there came a man driving as fast as he could drive. He had come thirteen miles that morning. He dropped his lines and hurried into the house. "There is some one here," he said, "that wants some money. I have come at top speed and could not hold my horse back." My husband said, "We must go to Portsmouth, but we cannot get to the cars unless you take us there." He hurried us into his wagon, and we just reached the cars. He gave us fifteen dollars to get us there and back.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 7

This is the way the Lord has taught us to trust in Him. This is the way the truth has entered many places. And for years we worked constantly day and night in order to carry forward this work. I might stand here and relate instances such as I have given you till tomorrow morning, but I will present only these few. I want to tell you now that we have been working to the utmost of our ability to establish missions in different places.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 8

At the time when the mission was first started here, I had received a present of a nice silk dress. It cost forty-five dollars. I looked at that dress and thought of our friends over here. Brother Andrews had just sent in a letter, stating that there was a certain work that they wanted to do, but they had not the means. Now, I thought, these friends, out of the kindness of their hearts, have made me this present; now it is my privilege to use that gift in such a way that they might lay up treasure in heaven.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 9

I went to one of our merchants, a Sabbath-keeper, and said, "Sell that dress for all you can get for it." He sold it for fifty dollars. Then I sent that money on here to the mission. The very act of my doing that brought in at that very time means from other individuals, and Brother Andrews wrote back to us that the very sum he wanted came at that time.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 10

We are establishing missions and building meetinghouses in America. I have had some property I could not sell; and as I could not sell, I hired money and tried to invest it where it was most needed in the cause. Already we have placed thirty thousand dollars in the treasury of heaven.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 11

Our treasury now is, I might say, about empty. In many places we have had very close financial pressure. A night or two ago I dreamed that I was pleading with God. I awoke myself, pleading with God, presenting before Him our empty treasury, pleading with Him to send means to advance His own cause and work. I propose, brethren and sisters, that we present our empty treasury to God in living faith and ask Him to supply our needs.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 12

In California we wanted so much to build a boarding house for our students. I said to Willie, "All we can do is to pray." All we could do was to send up our earnest petitions to God for that object. With many tears we did it. Then I went into my room and commenced writing. I heard a knock at the door and opened it to Sister Scott. She said, "I have some money that I want to put into the cause. Do you know where it is needed most?"4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 13

“Yes,” said I, “we have just been pleading with God to send us some means.”4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 14

“Well,” said she, “I can let you have $5,000 and help you to find more. I have felt such a burden that I feel it a relief to get rid of it.” The tears ran down her face.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 15

She was thankful that she could discharge this burden. And so we had money to start our boarding house.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 16

Why cannot we come to God with these matters? I think we depend too much upon others. Now let us have living faith in God. I have lain awake night after night until I have gotten into an almost sleepless condition since I have been here, turning over in my mind how we can reach these men, and I am in just as much perplexity as when I commenced. I can see no other way but that we must pray. The Lord has gold and silver, and the cattle upon a thousand hills are His. And while we rely upon Him and do the very best we can, He will send help to advance His cause.4LtMs, Ms 14, 1885, par. 17

Ms 15, 1885

Influence of Unconsecrated Workers

“On the cars,” Winslow, Arizona

July 17, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in TDG 207; OHC 303.

“Ye are the light of the world,” said Christ to His disciples. [Matthew 5:14.] I feel deeply over the inactivity and lack of faith and piety of our workers in our missions. God has entrusted to us great light, and our works do not correspond to that light. Satan is intensely active in these last days, doing his work of destroying souls and making attractive the road that leads to death. He prepares his agents, wheels them into line, and sets them to work to deceive and destroy. Men who are not on the side of God are on the enemy’s side. They are bold and defiant. Many deny the existence of God. There are knots of infidels binding in bundles ready to burn. They strengthen the hands of one another in their wickedness. They take counsel of their own hearts that are impressed by the originator of all evil. They assemble in council to devote their God-given powers to devise means to uproot the knowledge and reverence of God out of the human heart. They are plotting the suppression of the truth and put all their plans to work to increase darkness, disobedience, and error.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 1

But watch them, how earnest they are, all so zealously devoted to doing their master’s work for evil. Where are the zealous Calebs and Joshuas who have another spirit, on the side of truth and right in our missions, to press back moral darkness, to let a steady light be reflected to our world? Shall those who believe sacred, solemn truth be slothful, indolent, inactive?4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 2

Infidels have boasted, “If I believe the things that you profess to believe, I would not take the matter so coolly as you do; I would not cease my efforts. I would take special pains to let everyone know this doctrine. I would not hold my peace night or day. I would devote all my powers, that my works should be in accordance with my faith. I would make it the main purpose of my life to repress sin.”4LtMs,

Ms 15, 1885, par. 3

We are professed Christians, but many are far from being Bible Christians. They do not sanctify themselves as Christ did, that those [with] whom they associate may be sanctified. The truth must be in the soul, transforming the life and character, controlling the life, the thoughts, the words, the deportment. The Spirit of God helpeth our infirmities. The truth in the soul will be seen in the circumspect life. Levity of conduct, undue familiarity will not exist.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 4

If every one who claims to be a child of God would cherish the spirit of kindness and love, without base thoughts and undue attention, and devote his God-given powers to spreading the truth, in seeking to save souls, what a bright, steady light would shine forth to the world! If we believe that Christ alone can save souls by His matchless grace, how earnest would every one be to hold up Christ, to be much in prayer as Christ was, and by living faith ask much in His name, that he may receive and be willing to spend and be spent to win souls to Christ. Let all who profess to be Christians open the door of their hearts to His Spirit and to His grace; then the peace of Christ will so rule in their hearts and be revealed in their characters that there will be no discord, no strife, no emulation, no biting and devouring one another, no seeking for the supremacy. The great and earnest effort will be to live the life of Christ. We are to represent His spirit of mercy and give no occasion for anyone to follow our example in doing evil.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 5

Jesus was courteous, benevolent. He was obedient to all of His Father's commandments implicitly and without questioning convenience or any selfish interest. It is enough [for] us to know that God has spoken; and when we know His will, as revealed in His Word, we are to obey.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 6

The world's Redeemer is speaking to us; let us hear what He says: "Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Revelation 22:14. Then those who see the claims of God in His Word and do not obey, but excuse their negligence or wilful disregard of God's requirements, testify by their course of action that they are not embraced in the blessed promise on condition of obedience. They are not the ones who will have a right to the tree of life, but are with the wilful transgressors of the law of God to whom Jesus says, "Depart, ye workers of iniquity." [Matthew 7:23.] Sin is the transgression of the law, and no sinner shall enter the portals of bliss. No sinner will have a right to the tree of life and enter into the gates of the city.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 7

The conditions of obtaining eternal life are specified so plainly in the Word of God that the real sincere seeker for truth who chooses Christ as his portion need not make a mistake and walk in the course of error and disobedience and think he is in the holy path cast up for the ransomed of the Lord to walk in. His commandments are not grievous, not a yoke of bondage, as Satan tried to make Eve believe they were. The deceptive story which Satan started in Eden—that God's law restricts their liberty and is a yoke of bondage—is repeated again and again by the self-deceived, by the transgressors of God's law. Jesus says, "Blessed are they that do His commandments." [Revelation 22:14.] We have an individual responsibility.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 8

Satan is at work with all his powers to bind into bundles those whom he has deluded, to destroy them. He is represented—by One who knows—as our adversary the devil, walking about seeking whom he may devour. He is represented as working with intensity just prior to the close of probation, working with all deceivableness of unrighteousness. He even works miracles in the sight of men, and the statement is made that if it were possible, he would, through his deceptions and miracle-working power, deceive the very elect. Then is it not of the greatest consequence that we keep awake and, through searching the Scriptures and earnest, constant prayer, take hold of the strength of the Mighty Helper, that in our behalf He shall raise up for us a standard against the enemy?4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 9

We are to move cautiously, yet firmly, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. While the largest number are yielding to the fascinating influences that Satan will throw around them, while his wily deceptions will lead men to think that it shall be well with the sinner—that God is too merciful to be just and to punish iniquity—those whom God has made the repositories of His law should make no compromise with the wily deceiver and his servants who do his will. They should maintain their integrity at any cost to themselves. The world and the true church will never harmonize. They will ever be at variance, for they have two masters. One is opposed in every way to the other; therefore if there is harmony, it must be by the followers of Christ surrendering of principle to meet the world's standard. This many professed Christians have done, but we have yet to learn that there is any concord between Christ and Belial. 4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 10

Every soul who will be saved in Christ's kingdom must comply with the conditions. "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Corinthians 6:17, 18. We have a personal work, an individual responsibility, a personal account to render; and it is our own salvation we must secure, for it is a matter of individual concern. Would we have the crown of life?—then we will receive it as conquerors. None others will have it. Unless we do our individual work, it will remain undone. The piety and obedience of others will not save us or be doing our work. Their efforts will never be registered against our names as ours. Every man, woman, and child will be rewarded as their works have been. 4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 11

God has left to every one of us our work—not the temporal labor as planting, sowing, reaping, and gathering in the harvest, but to build up His kingdom, to bring souls to the knowledge of the truth, and to regard this as our first and highest duty. God has claims upon us. He has endowed us with capabilities and given us opportunities, if we will see them and improve them. These obligations to God none but ourselves individually can meet. The delinquencies of others, the sins of leading men, of those who corrupt their ways before the Lord, will be no excuse for any one to follow their example, because Christ is lifted up as the only true Pattern—faultless, pure, uncorrupted. Those who disregard their obligations to God and live in sin may have an influence over some minds to lower the standard, but this will be no excuse for others. 4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 12

There are transgressors of God's law who are open, who boast of their disregard of the laws of Jehovah. There are others who are hypocritical, who say, "The temple of God are we," yet defile that temple with impurity, unholy desires, worldly ambition, corrupt thoughts. Upon these will Satan exercise his deceptions and succeed. If one man lowers the standard in his own life and influence, others are inclined to do as wickedly as he has done. He will have to meet his work in the judgment, and the one who yielded to temptation will be held responsible for yielding to Satan's suggestion through his agents.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 13

There are those who associate together to do evil and seem to think in this they lose their individual responsibility. But God holds them accountable for every act performed that has the slightest tendency to counteract the work of Christ; whether they are united with many or with the few, the sin is the same. We are individually responsible. We ourselves should be our concern. Are we in all our words and actions building up the kingdom of Christ, or are we tearing down? Christ says to each one of us, "Follow Me." Then let us be found followers of Jesus Christ. Be earnest, be vigilant to seize every opportunity to work for the Master.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 14

Through evil as well as good report, let there be efforts made by every laborer in the vineyard of the Lord to encourage and educate the indolent, those who lift no responsibilities. Teach them they must work to strengthen the church. A working church will be a living church. The do-nothings are those who block the wheels of progress. They are not building up, but their influence is tearing down. Let efforts be made to train up young converts to work with an eye single to the glory of God. Urge those who feel at ease to do something to show earnest, zealous effort in advancing light. Then Jesus will come into our midst and will be to us a tower of strength. The church will grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, and every true, earnest, unselfish worker will hear the "Well done" from the lips of the Master. [Matthew 25:21.] There is no mistake made. To those who have well done will the words be spoken, and to no other.4LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 15

(Marian [Davis], I have written this while the cars are going. God is good. He has given me His grace, His peace and strength. I want you to prepare this for either paper.)⁴*LtMs, Ms 15, 1885, par. 16*

Ms 16, 1885

Diary, July 1885

NP

July 7-13, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in EGWE 25.

My Diary:

Left Healdsburg accompanied by Willie en route for Oakland. We ride in the cars to San Rafael, and there we take the boat for San Francisco, and we then, after landing, go a short distance to the ferry; step on board the large, grand ferry boat and ride about seven miles, and then at landing we enter the new building which is a consistent, grand building, walk through this waiting room, go down a long flight of stairs, and take the local train of cars which stops at different stations to let off passengers. We then step off at Market Street station and walk half a mile to the home of Willie White. The preparation for the journey across the continent is very taxing, for I am in a feeble condition of health. Have been unable to write for some months. I am now alone, as far as proper help is concerned. Sister Ings is matron of the Rural Health Retreat. Addie and May Walling are with me; and in the preparation to go East, perhaps to Europe, it seems like a terrible task. I am too weary to think, even to prepare clothing that needs to be done. If in my time of need one had been with me—think for me—it would have been a great blessing. My mind was on the strain continually, and yet [with] such a manifest inability to think. But I am now at Oakland. Shall go no farther without more strength and greater courage than I now have.⁴*LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 1*

July 8

Some have met together to help Mary White sew, but I cannot even remain in the room. My head becomes weary, and I am obliged to go to my room and lie down. Walked out in the city with Mary. I could scarcely bear my weight in returning. O this weakness is terrible. It is not only a tired mind, but my whole body is tired. I am really fearing my usefulness is at an end. I feel so utterly helpless. I want to answer important letters, but I cannot do this. I cannot write. O for strength to do these things needed to be done for the cause of God. I am so helpless, so worthless. These are days of trial and peculiar temptation. I seem to have no power to labor. I am too weak to even exercise faith. I have no power to think. Memory fails me. I cannot now find any pleasure in the pleasant things of this world. I have a good home, but it pains me to give my thoughts to my own comfort, while souls around me are perishing for the bread of life. I say again and again, "Thy gifts are good, O Lord, only as Thou revealest Thyself in them." The labor my heavenly Father appoints is pleasant and acceptable. The Lord is not dependent upon me. I have need of the Lord every moment; and unless He gives me my work and His presence and grace with it, I am restless, dissatisfied, and complaining. Although I am left to be tempted and tried, yet I will trust in the Lord and I will wait for His salvation. Darkness and uncertainty seem to close me about as a garment, but this very darkness may be to me the means of God of communicating light.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 2

July 9

I have employed Sister McEnterfer to accompany me East if I go. She is giving me treatment. I passed a sleepless night and devoted much of my wakeful hours to prayer. Another of weariness is nearly gone. I cannot even listen to conversation. Have had several calls, but could not see even my friends.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 3

July 11

I am in great perplexity in regard to my duty. It looked so forbidding to venture to cross the plains on my way to Michigan. I have no courage—flesh and heart alike seem to fail.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 4

Elder Jones has been in my chamber to solicit me to speak in the church this afternoon. At first I said, "How can I?" Then the promise, "My grace is sufficient for you," came with force to my mind. [2 Corinthians 12:9.] I said, "I will try to speak." I was taken in a carriage to the church. As I moved out by faith, the Lord helped me. My mind was clear, and tongue and utterance were given me. The peace and blessing from God rested upon me and upon the congregation. This help given me in my time of need was just what I needed. I decided then that I could cross the plains once more, making twenty-four times that I had gone back and forth on this long journey from East to West and West to East.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 5

July 12

I am still weak, but hopeful, and my faith is growing stronger.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 6

We left Healdsburg July 6. I had been suffering with great feebleness. The proposed journey across the plains and the voyage upon the broad waters to the old country were, to me, a matter of dread, but it was the will of the General Conference for me to visit Europe. I was suffering mental weariness and physical debility. I so longed for some one upon whom I could rely in my want of strength—one whom I knew had a firm hold from above, whose firm courage and faith would stimulate me; for it seemed that my courage was gone, and I longed for human help whose faith grasped firmly the arm of Omnipotent power, for I was too weak to even exercise faith. In this condition I left Healdsburg for Oakland. I was requested to speak to the people upon the Sabbath, but it seemed impossible. But these words came to me with power, “My grace is sufficient for you.” [Verse 9.] “Lo, I am with you always.” [Matthew 28:20.] “Go forward in My strength.” I answered, “Yes, I will speak to the people, for God will help me.” I then saw how useless it was for me to lean upon human support in my weakness; for unless they had a firm hold of God by living faith, unless they had a daily experience in confidence and faith in God, when I would need help, they would prove a hindrance. I felt then it was my privilege in my great weakness to lean heavily on the arm of Infinite power. Whatever my perplexity, here was a counsellor; whatever my loneliness, here was a friend that had promised, “I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.” [Hebrews 13:5.] In the comfort and strength of this assurance, I was enabled to speak to the people with clearness. My own soul was greatly strengthened. I was happy.

I learned my lesson in humble faith, in simple trust, that I can never find in human help so wise, so tender, so faithful a guide as Jesus. I then said, "I will trust the Holy One of Israel in the darkest hours and place myself under His guidance in thought, in word, and in deed."4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 7

I think I learned my lesson in this emergency that will ever be of great value to me. I pressed closer to the side of my Redeemer and said, "In Thee will I trust." I have never yet been placed in a position where my leader Jesus Christ has not made provision for me. The lamp of life has always trimmed the lamp of life that lit it.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 8

July 13

We stepped on board the cars en route for Michigan. How earnestly had I prayed that God would make my path so plain that in taking this long, dreaded journey I should know it was His will—the path He indicated for me to travel. But I could say in truth, "God hangs a mist o'er my eyes." But when I had taken my seat in the cars, moving not by sight but by faith, then came the peace which I have experienced so often in the fulfilment of my duty. I felt the sweet blessing of perfect trust. I could say from the heart, "I hang my helpless soul on Thee. I have accepted the invitation, 'Come unto Me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest.'" [Matthew 11:28.] I was in a large degree experiencing that rest. I find there are daily lessons to learn in this holy warfare, or we shall be continually like a reed in the wind. With the grace of God in the soul, we may be strong in the Lord and the power of His might.4LtMs, Ms 16, 1885, par. 9

Ms 16a, 1885

Diary, July to September 1885

NP

July 7 - September 24, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 3MR 179-180; 5MR 268-269; 11MR 148-149; 3Bio 289-293, 297-300; EGWE 27, 88.

The Journey to Europe

[Tuesday,] July 7, 1885

Left Healdsburg in company with Willie for Oakland. The preparation and getting off were very wearisome. I had no one who had been with me heretofore to help me. I had to keep my mind on a strain continually to think of the necessary things for my journey across the plains. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 1

July 11, 1885

[Oakland, Calif.]

I suffered with great weakness. My head was tired, and I was in great perplexity in regard to my duty. It looks from appearance preposterous to undertake so long a journey in my condition of health. I had not courage and but little faith that the Lord required this of me—to cross the plains in the heat of summer and endure all the taxation and weariness necessary to do this. My head is tired all the time. I was invited to speak. Should I venture, in my weakness? I decided to test the matter—to throw my helpless soul upon God—and thus I was taken in a carriage to the church. The Lord helped me. My mind was clear, and the Spirit of the Lord rested upon me and upon the congregation. His grace given me in my time of need was just what I needed. I was no longer uncertain. I would venture to go with the party across the plains. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 2

July 12, 1885

[Oakland]

I am still weak, but more hopeful. There are several sewing [?] below and I cannot endure the conversation. I keep in my room most of the time. Called on Sister Stevens. Had a pleasant visit with her. We have business to attend to—deeds to sign and letters that must be written.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 3

July 13, 1885

[En route East]

We left Oakland. There were twelve in our party. We were well accommodated. About twelve more occupied one end of the car until we reached Mojave. Then we changed cars, Wednesday noon. There were only three men in our car besides our party. The heat was very great, but we had no dust. We passed over heavy sand. We passed over a very large body of sand, which was like a lake, almost as white as snow.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 4

July 14, 1885

We have very good accommodations. The weather is excessively hot—thermometer 125 in the shade. I endure the heat much better than I had any reason to expect I could. I tell our party the very best way to endure the heat is not to think about it or talk about it. As we came to Fresno, Brother Church and son came on the cars, bringing a box of peaches, a large box of grapes, and a very large watermelon.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 5

July 15, 1885

As the rough class are no longer in our car, we commenced religious services, singing and prayer. There was one of the workers on the train that looked as though he did not know whether to laugh or to cry. He afterward told Brother Lunt it was the first prayer he had heard for five years. His father and mother were praying people. He left home and had been in rough company; but the prayer he had listened to touched his heart, and he felt a desire to be better than he was then.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 6

July 16, 1885

The north wind is blowing, and it seems like a blast from a burning furnace. We have two sick ones in our party, and it appears doubtful whether one of them—Sister Byrant—will reach her home. She is very feeble. She must first reach Kansas City, then go to Omaha. There her husband meets her and takes her home to die. One girl, Grace Minenger, is an invalid going to Battle Creek to our sanitarium for treatment. She is in a fair way to break down. She is talking in a loud voice and keeping herself in an excitement without any necessity of it. She felt that she must have tea and coffee to keep her up. She drank a cup of strong coffee, and its influence on her was such that she was afraid she should die. She came to me to prescribe for her. I told her Sarah McEnterfer would give her treatment. We took flannel we had, and she received thorough treatment, fomentations. She was relieved at once. "It acted," she said, "like a charm." If that was the way Dr. Kellogg treated the sick, she should get well, she knew she should. I told her there must be no more tea drinking or coffee drinking while on the train. She said she would not taste it.⁴*LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 7*

Friday, July 17, 1885

We had services in the morning and at the commencement of the Sabbath. I spoke to our people in regard to keeping the Sabbath on the cars. I told them there should be every effort made—yes, extra efforts on our part to keep our minds reflecting upon proper subjects and our words select. There should be a determined purpose to honor the God of the Sabbath by keeping it holy. We did not want to lay aside our religion because we were on the cars. We did not want to backslide on the train, but to be in that spirit of devotion, that we could keep our lips from uttering perverse things, and that we should be pure and holy, not light and jovial and trifling, but have our words seasoned with grace. The conductor seated himself in our little circle and remained until I had ceased speaking.⁴*LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 8*

July 18, 1885

Today is the holy Sabbath. We feel the peace of God in our hearts. We had services in the car. After Brother Lunt prayed and after having a singing exercise, I spoke to our people for about thirty minutes, with freedom. I am feeling the peace of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 9

July 19, 1885

We reached Kansas City at half-past five. There stood a man at the car ready to conduct us to the chair car. Every attention was given to us. Our baggage was quickly transferred, and we were pleasantly located.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 10

July 20, 1885

I could not sleep much during the night for my pain was great in my hip. I was thankful for the light of day. We arrived at Chicago. Took cars at once for Battle Creek, Mich. Arrived at Battle Creek about half-past eight, p.m. Met Brother Sawyer, who urged us to go to sanitarium. Edson was waiting for us, and we took lunch at his house. W. C. White did not come with us on this last stage of the journey. He had business to transact in Chicago. The weather was excessively hot, not favorable for sleeping.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 11

July 21, 1885

[Battle Creek]

It is oppressively warm. I am unable to do anything but rest. Rode out to the cemetery, but it was too warm to enjoy even this. Take treatment at the sanitarium. It does one good. I visited the office and looked over my books. Took such as I wanted.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 12

July 22, 1885

[Battle Creek]

The weather is some cooler because of showers. We rode out with our good carriage.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 13

July 23, 1885

[Battle Creek]

It is a very pleasant day, yet warm. We rode out—Sister Hall, Ella, and I—to Brother Richard Godsmark's. They were glad to see us. We were in season to take dinner with them. We enjoyed our visit very much, but were obliged to leave soon after dinner, about four o'clock. We had an opportunity to visit with Sister Hall.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 14

July 24, 1885

[Battle Creek]

The heat is oppressive, but my time is fully occupied in writing important matter. Brethren Clemons and Jones visited me to consult in reference to matters of the church and George Lay. I spent some time in conversation with them. After they had left, I wrote them several pages in reference to these matters. The question was being agitated [about] a vote passed years ago, in reference to George Lay and certain ones influenced by him, [that they] should either cease the warfare and come in harmony with the church, or be no longer numbered with the church. There were feelings unjustifiable by some of the church in reference to George Lay, and confessions were being made to him by those who had erred, and some thought they should go further than this. The decision could not be taken back. God was at work for the man, but they would not be helped and have stood aloof from the church ever since. Elder Haskell and Brother Fargo were the ministers at work at the time to set things in order.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 15

July 25, 1885

[Battle Creek]

Today is the holy Sabbath. I feel depressed with the heat, but decide to speak to the people assembled in the Tabernacle. The auditorium is crowded, the galleries are full. I spoke with much freedom from the words, "Come out from among them and be ye separate and touch not the unclean and I will receive you," etc. [2 Corinthians 6:17.] Many of the patients from the sanitarium were present. I spoke one hour and a half. In the afternoon we had a good representation at our social meeting. I spoke again about forty minutes. Many excellent testimonies were borne.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 16

July 26, 1885

[Battle Creek]

Sunday we have another warm day. I am solicited to speak on the public square upon temperance, but I have an appointment in the evening at half-past six and declined speaking twice in my condition of weariness. I found about four hundred people assembled. I spoke to them one hour from "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness," etc. [Matthew 6:33.] I had special liberty, and they listened with earnest interest.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 17

July 27, 1885

[Battle Creek]

The oppressive heat continues. I am engaged in writing matter to be read to the faculty at sanitarium. Made some purchases downtown.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 18

Tuesday, July 28, 1885

[Battle Creek]

We had a very busy day writing and preparing for our trip to Europe. Brother Fargo came to Battle Creek. Came to see us and we had a profitable interview in regard to various matters. The matter of Peter Howe came up—his dishonest course with Edson and his not making any effort to set things right. He robbed him, in connection with another young man, of seven hundred dollars, and yet has had no disposition to set this matter right. The decision was to have these matters talked over with parties and have a settlement if possible. Peter begged off and said he would prefer to talk with Edson alone and settle it between them. Edson consented to do this.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 19

Tuesday evening had a meeting at the sanitarium and read to the faculty thirty pages relating to the physicians and workers there. This meeting continued late. Slept with Sister Hall in one of the most beautiful rooms in the new apartment.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 20

Wednesday, July 29, 1885

There is much to be thought of. Had a long talk with Sister Maxson in relation to the institute. We took dinner at the sanitarium. The table was abundantly supplied with good food, wholesomely prepared. Anyone who could not relish such food must have a depraved appetite indeed. We took the cars at half-past two for the East. We had some relief from the oppressive heat after we left Battle Creek. On the train I wrote back letters to A. R. Henry in regard to matters at the sanitarium.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 21

July 30, 1885

We slept well during the night. The motion of the cars was very grateful, for it created a circulation of air. We had abundance of room as the sleeper was not crowded.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 22

At Syracuse, the workers in the mission there came on board the cars and confidently stated that Sister White would be at the camp meeting at Syracuse, that they had been canvassing for Volume 4 and many books had been sold, and they were now anxious to see the one who wrote the book. I told them I was on my way to Europe. They could not believe it. They had their hearts set upon the matter and thought I must be there. We bade them farewell. Their faith was a little fainter in regard to the matter. I would gladly attend their camp meeting, but the conference has said I must go to Europe.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 23

We stopped over at Rome a few hours and then counselled with Elder Wilbur Whitney and wife, Elder Brown, and Elder Miles who is the principal of the school there. We hope this interview will prove a blessing.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 24

July 31, 1885

[Worcester, Mass.]

Friday we arrived at Worcester very weary. We could not obtain berths in sleeper. Changed cars at Utica and Albany. It was a hard night for us all. We were to tarry at the Mission house. This is a very noisy place, with carriages passing continually. The heavy wagons over the stone pavements make my head ache.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 25

Here I met Brother and Sister Canright and Brother and Sister Webber who are holding tent meetings here. They meet with the fiercest opposition from the First-day Adventists. They have quite a number of workers here who go from house to house giving Bible readings, canvassing, etc. I spoke to a tent well filled in the evening upon Matthew 7:24-27. The Lord gave me strength and His grace to speak to the people. One who had been an infidel was all broken down and said he would keep the Sabbath. We had a shower, with thunder and lightning, but it cleared away about the time of meeting and there was a congregation of interested hearers. Many collected about the tent outside, nearly as many as were in the tent.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 26

August 1, 1885

[Worcester, Mass.]

Spoke to the people collected in the tent from Isaiah 58. The Lord gave me liberty and power before the people. I rose early in the morning and commenced writing. Wrote twenty-two pages—discourses for the Review. In the evening we had a very severe thunderstorm. The sharp lightning and thunder were terrific, but I am never alarmed and nervous as I used to be. I feel that God holds the thunder in His hand. He bounds the lightning, controlling it that we need not fear. We are under His divine eye, and He will protect those who trust in Him.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 27

August 2, 1885

[Worcester, Mass.]

Arise at four o'clock and commence my writing. Willie leaves us to go to South Lancaster at 7 o'clock. I remain to speak this evening. Visited Brother C. W. Smith. Rested and took dinner with them.

Elder Canright and wife joined us at the dinner table. I had quite a long talk with Elder Canright upon the best manner of laboring. It is cloudy. We fear there will be but a few out tonight. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 28

A hack came for us to take us to the meeting. The owner of the carriage and horses stated he had heard me speak on the fairground and Friday night here. He seemed very attentive and kind. The tent was packed full, and the Lord gave me His Holy Spirit and power to address the people from (1 John 3:1): "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." The people listened as for their lives. They were as quiet as in a meetinghouse. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 29

August 3, 1885

[South Lancaster, Mass.]

I could not sleep last night. I felt the burden for the people. I am weary this morning because of poor rest. We go to South Lancaster today to see the church there and to rest. The distance from Worcester to Lancaster is seventeen miles. We arrived at South Lancaster at twelve o'clock. Dinner was acceptable, for we were hungry. Made our home at Sister Harris's. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 30

August 4, 1885

[South Lancaster, Mass.]

Last night it rained hard all night. Cleared away in the morning, and we had a very pleasant day. We rode to Clinton and purchased some things. After dinner we rode out several miles in the country. We enjoyed the ride much. I desired much to write, but could not because of great weariness. I am invited to go out to dinner, but refuse because I cannot make these changes and visit without feeling the effects in weariness. I am too much worn to visit now. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 31

August 5, 1885

[South Lancaster]

It is a beautiful day. I devoted all the forenoon to writing. Prepared an article for the paper and wrote several letters. In the afternoon we rode out in the country, and we tarried in the woods and picked blueberries. This was a diversion from my usual work. We all felt pleasure in this exercise. It was a change, and the quiet of the grand old woods was restful. Brother Henry came at night from Battle Creek to see me in regard to some matters at the sanitarium. He arrived about seven o'clock. We conversed until eleven upon important matters connected with our physicians and medical students.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 32

August 6, 1885

[South Lancaster]

We have another beautiful day. I am thankful to my heavenly Father for the privilege of quiet and rest. I have written many pages today to send back to Battle Creek. Oh, that these words penned for the benefit of the medical students may have a good effect, for a reformation is essential. The sanitarium is one of God's instrumentalities and will do much toward bringing those in darkness to the light if a right influence controls. The standard must be kept up. The moral tone of the institution must not become enfeebled. The religious interest should be healthful and will become a power for God if those who profess the truth will by precept and example represent the divine Teacher. We rode out in the afternoon to the woods. Tied the horse; and while Mary prepared an article for the paper, Sister Harris, Sister Sarah, Ella, and I picked blueberries. We had a treat in this. We enjoyed it much. The scenery on the way was delightful. The sisters are copying the article for the sanitarium. It makes about fifty pages.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 33

August 7, 1885

[South Lancaster]

We have another beautiful day. All the forenoon I devote the writing, I felt burdened to say some things to the ministers and to the workers. Elder Robinson accompanied me. We collected the workers together, and I read an article that I had written in regard to the sacred work entrusted to them to let their light shine forth to the world in good works. Their works will have an influence that will lead others to glorify God. When young men and women are engaged in labor together, there is constant danger of their becoming too familiar and showing a disposition to give and receive attention that is not strictly proper. The high and holy standard is lowered. The sacredness of the work is brought on a level with common things. Impure thoughts and earthliness are mingled with sacred things. We could spend only about two hours and then return to Lancaster. There was much to be done. I was very weary, but we went over the buildings—the boarding house and school buildings. I was pleased with the arrangement of the buildings and think Brother Ramsey may do a good work in educating our youth.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 34

August [7], 1885

Arose in the morning quite tired, but wrote several letters before breakfast. Left for Boston about ten a.m. We rode a long distance to the Mission. Met here Sister Stein and Sister Annie Rasmussen and Brother Bourdeau's two sons who are to accompany us. I indulged in a bath. Purchased some things in the city and wrote seventeen pages, three pages to Edson White, two to Dr. Kellogg to accompany an article to be read to the medical students and physicians, fifty-five pages; wrote five pages to Elder Rice in California, eight pages in reference to the Garmire heresy, two pages to Elder Smith. We wished to go on board the steamer Friday afternoon, to get all the labor done before the Sabbath. We accomplished this nearly. We found it very close in our steamer. The rooms are large and commodious. We have two berths and a large sofa, two marble wash basins and bureau of two drawers, a small bureau of two drawers. We are oppressed with heat in the stateroom while the boat is at anchor. There is not much air. We have a season of prayer in our stateroom. All take part. The Lord seems very near, and I feel peaceful and restful.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 35

Sabbath, August [8], 1885

[On board S.S. Cephalonia]

I awoke with a sense of heat and oppression. I wished to write several letters. Took sponge bath and felt somewhat refreshed. Wrote a letter to Sister Huntley of two pages. Wrote five pages to Elder Robinson, and two pages to Professor Ramsey, one page to South Lancaster church. This is all I can do for my American brethren ere we go upon the broad waters.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 36

Brethren Edward Stillman and Elder Robinson came on board Sabbath morning to say good-by. We had several letters for them to take away with them.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 37

We are having a very pleasant day. I feel my heart drawn out in prayer to God for a fitness for the great work before me. I am of good courage; and should accident or harm or death come to me here, I have made my peace with God. All is well. I am not worthy of the precious blessings promised to the faithful; but I am thankful because by faith I can call God my Father, and I am not afraid to commit the keeping of my soul to God as unto a faithful Creator. I want during this ten days' passage to be brought more closely to Jesus. My heart is drawn out for His grace and His salvation.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 38

Sunday, August [9], 1885

It is a beautiful morning. We have no seasickness as yet. Last evening we enjoyed a beautiful sunset. The broad ocean was all that we could see surrounding us, and the sun went out of sight in the broad waters. We went into the dining room to attend services. Under the Episcopalian services, prayers were read, and chapters in the Old and New Testaments that were very appropriate for the occasion. The hymns sung were excellent in sentiment. The chapter read first was in Jeremiah. The second was in the New Testament in regard to the shipwreck of Paul. I wrote eight pages and prepared a reported article for the press. We were on deck most of the time.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 39

August 11, 1885

The sea is boisterous. The waves roll, and the whitecaps are seen upon the turbulent waters as far as the eye can extend. The waves rise high in green and blue and white spray, mingle, and dash with force against the porthole. If the porthole were open, buckets full of water would dash in upon us. We do not have all the air that is desirable because the porthole must be closed; but arrangements are made for ventilation from the top, which leaves us not destitute of air. The boat rocks fearfully, and every timber seems to be strained and shocked. There are but few upon deck. The deck is wet. Chairs are tied with ropes. Ropes are stretched from point to point, that those who walk on deck may take hold of the ropes to keep from falling. There is indeed a heavy roll. I cannot lie on the sofa. Trunks are rolling about in the staterooms. Satchels are dancing hither and thither, and everything that is not secured by ropes is dancing about. I am glad to climb up into my berth and lie still. Can rest but little. I have precious seasons of silent prayer. The Lord Jesus seems very near to me. I am so thankful that I can trust in my Saviour at all times.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 40

August 12, 1885

We all rested well last night. None were seasick. I was glad to see the light of day. Took a moderate breakfast, and W. C. White, Mary, Ella, and I went on deck. The water is much calmer. It is foggy, and the fog whistle is bellowing out its warning signal that vibrates through every nerve of the body. I enjoy the retirement of my berth. Wrote thirteen pages in regard to the duty of church members' working to be a blessing to others.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 41

August 13, 1885

I am feeling very much exhausted this morning. My head is giddy. I managed to go to the table. Can eat but little, scarcely enough to sustain strength. Twice I went on deck, but am glad to get down to my stateroom and lie in my berth. I wrote about seven pages in my berth.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 42

August 14, 1885

This morning is more pleasant. The fog has disappeared. The water is not quite as rough as it was. My head is better. Stronger. I am grateful to God that He has preserved us through another night.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 43

Six o'clock p.m. I have been on deck all day. The boat went through banks of fog, and the spray that fell on us was very damp. Wrote ten pages.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 44

August 15, 1885

We rested well during the night.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 45

August 16, 1885

August 17, 1885

I slept but little last night. The fog whistle kept up its mournful warning all night. I thought of ourselves being on the broad water. A little atom! How easy for us to be swallowed up in the hungry waters. I can only look to God and trust in Him. Tonight we reach Queenstown [?]. There is close application to writing to get letters into the mail. I wrote Edson two pages. Wrote five pages for the Sabbath School Worker. Wrote three pages to my twin sister Lizzie. It is a pleasant day. The fog whistle has ceased its mournful dirge. We make earnest efforts to prepare matter to be read at the camp meeting.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 46

August 18, 1885

[Arrived Liverpool]

It is a beautiful day. We arose from our berths, leaving them, not to enter them again. We have spent many pleasant days and nights in our stateroom. It seems like home. I commenced to write very early to complete an article that should go to New England camp meeting. M. K. White, Sarah McEnterfer, and myself worked diligently to get off important matters. We used the calligraph with good effect. The article was completed, and I wrote six pages to the church at South Lancaster.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 47

August 19, 1885

We have not rested well during the night. We have had an excellent, plain, wholesome breakfast. Brother Drew accompanied us in the cab to the boat. We left the ferry for the cars. We rode in a compartment to ourselves to Grimsby.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 48

August 20, 1885

[Great Grimsby, England]

We awoke in Great Grimsby, England. We have had rain during the night. The sun is shining. Wrote two pages to Elliot Waggoner, three pages of important matter relating to the cause. We went to the beach. It was cold and damp and windy. Was glad to get home.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 49

August 21, 1885

[Great Grimsby]

It is raining today. I have written ten pages of history of our journey, three pages to California, two to Marian Davis, and one to Brother Daniells. In the evening spoke in Temperance Hall upon the subject of temperance. The people gave the best of attention. It was raining, and yet there were about one hundred and seventy out to hear. May the word spoken drop like precious seed into the good soil.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 50

August 22, 1885

[Great Grimsby]

I could not sleep until midnight. It remains cloudy. Rained hard during the night. Brethren and sisters assemble here this morning at half-past ten o'clock. At 9 o'clock the clouds are dispersing.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 51

Twelve o'clock. Our service is ended. The room for meeting was more than filled. There was a precious little company assembled. Many of them were bathed in tears as I addressed them. I had much freedom and power in presenting before them the necessity of closely following the pattern Christ Jesus. There was deep feeling manifested by those who listened to the message of truth. After meeting I was introduced to each one of our brethren and sisters. At three o'clock all were together again for Sabbath school and social meeting. The Sabbath school was an interesting exercise, and the social meeting was good. I spoke about twenty minutes. Nearly all bore testimony, well wet down with tears. The blessing of the Lord was in our midst. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 52

August 23, 1885

[Great Grimsby]

Sunday forenoon we had another meeting in the mission room which was more than full of interested listeners. I spoke from Revelation—"I know thy works," etc. [Revelation 3:15.] All seemed deeply interested. There were several not of our faith present. In the evening I spoke in the large hall [Town Hall], which was crowded full. I spoke of God in nature. "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow," etc. [Matthew 6:28.] This seemed to be a success. The Lord gave me clearness and power, and many seemed to be deeply affected. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 53

August 24, 1885

I awoke with weariness. Slept but little. Wrote through the day and at five o'clock took the cars for Ulceby, ten miles in the country. We stopped a short time at Brother Armstrong's. They have a large family of nine children. This experience was rich. They have root in themselves. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 54

We found about one hundred assembled in a large public building. I spoke to them. "Ye are the light of the world," etc. [Matthew 5:14.] All seemed to be interested. After the meeting closed, several spoke with me. They were desirous of expressing to me their gratification in hearing the words spoken. One woman said she was going to keep the Sabbath. She has been convinced some time. We spent the night with the family of Brother Short. There is quite a large family—nine children. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 55

August 25, 1885

We went from the meeting to Brother Short's. He and his wife and several of their children have embraced the truth. I did not sleep until midnight. We partook of the English style of breakfast—porridge, bread and sauce, and cake. We go back to Grimsby on the 9 o'clock train. I was too weary to do any writing.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 56

August 26, 1885

[Great Grimsby]

The weather continues damp and foggy.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 57

August 27, 1885

Have not had much rest or sleep. Could not sleep until after one o'clock. The burden of souls to whom I had spoken the night before was so heavy upon me I could not rest. I long to see their eyes enlightened, their hearts opened to accept the truth.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 58

It is raining. My throat and lungs are pressed. We took an English breakfast, which is a plate of thin wafer-like slices of bread, four eggs, a cup of hot water, and a little round cake uncut from beginning to end of the meal. I had traveled all the day before, eaten a dry, cold lunch at dinner, spoken one hour and a half, and had a shadow of a meal for my breakfast.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 59

Rode to the cars, four miles. Took the cars for London. Was sick all the way. Met W. C. White and Henry Kellogg in London. I took a restaurant dinner. The first course was fish. I told them it was spoiled. They declared it was fresh, but we saw those at the next table send away the same fish. Afterward they told us they had examined the box and the fish was not good. This spoiled my dinner. We walked out in the great city of London, containing five million inhabitants. I was not well and was glad to get to my room in the hotel. The rest of our party went out in afternoon and evening. I could not go.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 60

August 28, 1885

[London]

It continues to be a drizzling, rainy day. We rested very well through the night. We met Elder Jones in the Mission and became acquainted with him. He is a Seventh-day Baptist preacher. We had only two hours to spend in viewing the ancient relics and curiosities. We could not have viewed much without the guidance and information given us from Elder Jones. It would take more than one week to see the different interesting objects that have been collected together. We were obliged to go to our restaurant dinner. In this place a vegetarian diet alone can be obtained. We enjoyed our dinner, then took the train for Southampton. It rained hard. When we stepped from the train we were obliged to stand fifteen minutes in the rain for a street car to take us to Brother Durland's. I knew I was contracting a cold. We were welcomed to the home of Brother Durland. Both he and his wife did all they could to make us comfortable. I met the church in a house near by their place of meeting and spoke to those assembled for about forty minutes. I felt happy to meet this little company and speak to them words of courage and faith.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 61

August 29, 1885

[Southampton]

I woke in the morning unrefreshed. It is still cloudy. I spoke to the church twice on the Sabbath.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 62

August 30, 1885

[Southampton]

I awoke suffering with severe cold. Was sick in bed most of the day. Rode out in a hack. The ride was very nice. The sun shone and warmed me. The drive took us to interesting points. We passed through the gates of the old Roman walls. These walls are nine hundred years old. Parts of them are firm now. They were built of stone, very thick. Towers extend above these walls for the sentinels or watchers. Homes are built on the top of these walls. Some houses are built up from the walls, the stone walls comprising a part of the building. Brick is joined to the stone. This seems to have been an effort to preserve the stone wall as far as possible so that buildings are made with patches of brick to fill in when the stone has broken away. It looks old, yet interesting.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 63

I was nearly fainting and was glad to return to my room. I thought it impossible to speak that night. Every nerve was throbbing with pain. But I prayed to the Lord for help, and it was given me. I arose by faith. The hack took me to the place of the meeting. The hall was crowded, and I spoke to about a thousand people. They listened with interest. The Lord blessed me, and I spoke without much difficulty. I knew my strength came from God, and His name I will glorify.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 64

August 31, 1885

[London]

We arose early and took the cars for London. We found quiet rooms in the hotel we visited before. I could not go out again in London to see any of the things of interest. The publishers promised to publish a report of the meeting Sunday night if we would prepare the article. Our time was fully occupied in this work. We tarried in London two days and two nights.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 65

September 1, 1885

It is cloudy, but we have a fire, which is a blessing. Our time is occupied in writing. A gentleman called—an Englishman, a vegetarian. He talks well and seems to be honest. He is an intelligent man. We had a profitable conversation. He is keeping the Sabbath.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 66

September 2, 1885

We took the cars for Basel, Switzerland. We rode forty miles, then changed from cars to boat. The channel was rough. Many were seasick, and the washbasins were brought into use quite largely. I was not sick at all. Many were sick. We were glad, after one hour and half's ride, to step off the boat at Calais. Through an interpreter we then talked with the French officials. Here we met Brother Brown, an active missionary, circulating our publications. We were glad to make his acquaintance. He brought us a basket of nice fruit—pears, grapes, and peaches—and nuts. This was a valuable addition to our lunch basket. We were able to secure a compartment to ourselves in the cars. We could get a sleeping compartment for eleven dollars each. We thought we had better spend an uncomfortable night and save the dollars. A bed was made for me between the seats on the top of the satchels and telescope boxes. I rested some, but slept little. The rest took their chances on the seats. We were not sorry to have the night pass. The French would open the door and jabber their French—just keep our rest broken up. We could not understand them, neither could they understand us.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 67

September 3, 1885

Morning came at last. How glad we were to welcome the light. As we are entering Basel, we see old missions and castles on the top of high rocks and mountains. We query whether the Reformers had not visited these places. We met Brethren Whitney, Andrews, Vuilleumier at the depot. We rode up in a hack to the publishing house and were met at the door by Brother Augustin Bourdeau, Mother Andrews, Martha Andrews, a Sister Stein, and Annie Rasmussen, and were introduced to quite a number. We were glad to meet workers in the office. We stepped upon the elevator and were taken up to the third story. We were made at home at Brother Whitney's. We have written twelve pages to Dr. Gibbs.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 68

September 4, 1885

[Basel]

I have written this day six pages to Johnny, my adopted son, six pages to my nephew Reuben Tapley [?], seven pages to Marian Davis, two pages to Brother Lockwood.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 69

September 5, 1885

[Basel]

Wrote this day twelve pages to Elder Canright.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 70

September 6, 1885

[Basel]

September 7, 1885

[Basel]

Have written thirteen pages in regard to our journey.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 71

September 8, 1885

[Basel]

Have written thirteen pages of our journey.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 72

September 9, 1885

Have written to Addie Walling six pages. Wrote letter of eight pages.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 73

September 10, 1885

[Basel]

I have taken a fresh cold. The rooms are not warmed, and we have a strong, harsh wind. Some have come to the meeting. The meeting will commence this evening. I met Brother D. T. Bourdeau's family. Had a pleasant interview with them. I have been introduced to a number of our French brethren and sisters. I am pleased with their appearance. They dress plainly and seem to be a simple, humble people.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 74

Friday morning, September 11, 1885

[Basel]

It is cold and rough. The people are coming into the conference. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 75

This afternoon I was surprised to see so large a number assembled. I spoke to the people, followed by German and French interpreters. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 76

September 12, 1885

[Basel]

It is the holy Sabbath. It is muddy and rough today. May the Lord meet with us is my most earnest prayer. The morning meetings are good and beneficial. Brother Bourdeau spoke in French in the forenoon. I spoke in the afternoon with great clearness. Testimonies were then borne—about one hundred. Brother A. C. Bourdeau gathered the English people together and interpreted the testimonies given in French. All expressed that they were impressed and benefited by the discourse given. Certainly this people seem to be in earnest to be helped, willing to receive my testimony. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 77

September 13, 1885

[Basel]

This is a clear, sunshiny morning. I feel grateful to our heavenly Father for the assurance of His love and His grace to help me today. I spoke about one-half hour upon missionary work. While our brethren were giving their reports in French, Elder A. C. Bourdeau reported to us in English, so we could get a general understanding of what was being done. I spoke in the afternoon. Elder D. T. Bourdeau was my interpreter in French, Elder Ertzenberger interpreted in German, and Elder Oyen in Scandinavian. All three arranged in that manner that they could report at the same time and without disturbing me or one another. The Lord helped me to bear a plain, decided testimony to the people. Then I called for those who wished to be Christians and those who have not an evidence of their connection with God to come forward, and we had a most solemn season. Many wept all the time. We offered up our petitions to heaven for the Spirit of the Lord to work, and He did breathe upon us His Holy Spirit. About one hundred testimonies were borne with deep feeling.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 78

September 14, 1885

We have a beautiful, mild morning. The conference business is to be attended to today. I spoke to those assembled at half-past one o'clock p.m. upon the necessity of cultivating love and Christian courtesy, of being forbearing with one another. Two interpreters, in German and French, followed me, and two reported in Norwegian and English. After the discourse there was a baptism of fifteen. This was an interesting scene. In the evening the publishing work was considered with good results. In the evening brethren from Norway arrived. Brethren Matteson and Brorson and Oyen and wife and a shorthand reporter came Friday. The Swiss conference has ended, and now comes the conference of the delegates—Elder Andrews from Ireland, Brother John from Wales, six from Norway, Elder Lane and three others from England, delegates from France and from Denmark. Wrote seven pages.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 79

September 15, 1885

[Basel]

It is a beautiful morning. Rose at five and commenced writing. Have written four pages before breakfast. Brethren Lane, John, and Wilcox have come, and Sister Lane and Sister Jenny Thayer. Wrote eight pages to Elder Butler, two pages to Sister Lockwood, two pages to May Walling. We rode out for the first time since coming to Basel. We entered Germany. We crossed the Rhine. The bridge across the Rhine was built upon strongly made boats. The Rhine is a swift-running stream. We saw milk cows harnessed up as horses to plow and to draw loads of vegetables and fruits in their wagons. We saw women wheeling heavy wheelbarrows and drawing handwagons. We passed by the hotel of the Three Kings. There are three large, life-size statues. This is the most noted hotel in Basel. The kings and nobles stop at this hotel.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 80

Wrote twelve pages.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 81

September 16, 1885

[Basel]

I awoke with a sense of my unworthiness and the inexpressible goodness of God. I attended the morning meeting in the chapel. The Lord seemed to indite prayer, and His Spirit was in the meeting. Brother Daniel Bourdeau interpreted the testimonies in English for the benefit of the French and the testimonies of French into the English language. Good testimonies were borne. The hearts of the brethren seem softened and subdued by the love of Jesus. I sought to call their attention to the necessity of cultivating love and tenderness for one another.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 82

September 17, 1885

[Basel]

It is a beautiful morning. It is restful to look at the cultivated lands and beautiful green fields and groves of trees, and just beyond this beautiful picture are the higher mountains. We recognize God in His created works. We bow to His authority and love to do His will.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 83

At half-past five o'clock we went into the morning meeting. The prayers were mostly in French. Brother Low spoke, and several testimonies were borne. I made some remarks in regard to the dress question. Many feel it a special burden to make a drive.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 84

Sent off today thirty-two pages to America. Wrote today fifteen pages for French and American papers.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 85

September 18, 1885

[Basel]

Arose at five o'clock to prepare for morning meeting at half-past five. Quite a large number were assembled—Germans, French, Italians, and English. The sweet spirit of Jesus seemed to be in our midst. Several prayed in French and several in English. My heart was drawn out in earnest supplication for heavenly wisdom to be given us at this time of our Council. I felt the assurance that the Lord did hear and answer prayer. Nearly all of our ministering brethren bore a good testimony. They seem to have the blessing of God and are drawing near each other. Several testimonies were given in French. Brother Bourdeau interpreted for our English brethren and interpreted English testimonies to the French. I spoke for about fifteen or twenty minutes upon James 3:13-18. The Lord gave me much freedom in speaking.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 86

Dr. Vincenzo Guerini, a most promising, affable Italian, filled a tooth for me, from which the filling had come out. He is considered a superior workman in Naples, Italy. He is full in the faith. He filled three hundred cavities at the last conference for our people, for which he would receive nothing. Have spoken eighteen times. Sent six pages to Sister Scott at Oakland, Calif.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 87

September 19, 1885

[Basel]

I have had a broken night's rest. My head aches. At half-past six had a consultation with the Brethren Bourdeau, their wives, and Brother Whitney and his wife. We were talking in regard to the best way to help the Italian brethren. We received some light by talking over the matter together. Brother Bourdeau spoke in the morning. There was Sabbath school before the discourse. I felt great weakness before going into the desk. I pled most earnestly with Jesus to help me and help the people—to bless them in a special manner.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 88

I spoke from Colossians [1?]:25-29. The Lord blessed me in speaking and the people in hearing. The power of God rested upon me and upon the people. I was enabled to speak without embarrassment while two interpreters followed me in French and German, and Brother Oyen gave it in Danish to his reporter.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 89

We had a most precious social meeting. The testimonies gave evidence the word was received, and the Lord set it home in quickening power upon the people. The angels of God seemed to be in our midst, and the sweet spirit of Jesus pervaded the meeting. All the testimonies were interpreted. We believe this meeting will have a telling influence. Another Sabbath is in the past. Bible class is now in session. Have written four pages.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 90

September 20, 1885

[Basel]

I rested but little during the night and felt debilitated this morning. There seems to be but little vitality in the atmosphere. Prepared an article for the paper. I had an interview with Brother John and with Brother Whitney. Had conversation with Sister Whitney upon important matters. The condition of Edith Andrews is a grief to us all. She seems to be failing in health. What shall be done in her case?4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 91

Attended the morning session of the Council a short time. Was called out to speak in reference to tent meetings and open-air meetings. I could not recommend the open-air meetings for several reasons. One weighty argument is, it will be too great a tax upon the vital organs and disqualify the speaker to control his voice in small congregations. It will accustom him to disorderly meetings. He will not see the sense of order and maintain order. He will not be able to prove his own work and know what he does do. He will not see the force of becoming a close Bible student and applying himself more and more to bring forth from the storehouse of God things new and old, that new subjects shall engage his attention. Tents are preferable to open-air meetings.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 92

September 21, 1885

[Basel]

I do not feel as debilitated as yesterday. Attended morning meetings. There was quite a good congregation in attendance. Had two seasons of prayer, in French and English. Many testimonies were borne—all good. Brother Malcom [Mallon?] bore an excellent testimony. He is an Italian. His wife was educated in Holland and speaks three languages. She is a women of uncommon ability.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 93

I spoke upon faith and the importance of our workers, in the cause of God, exercising faith, and upon the manner of the ministers' labor—that they shall go two and two. This was Christ's plan and is not carried out as it should be by His representatives.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 94

September 22, 1885

[Basel]

Attended early morning meeting. Many prayers were offered both in French and English. Many excellent testimonies were borne, expressing appreciation of the meeting. The Lord blessed me in speaking on faith. The testimonies borne were of a character to show that the hearers appreciated the light given and were determined to walk in the light while they had the light. It was decided by the Council to continue the meetings just one week longer. All needed a fitting up before engaging in the solemn work of trying to present the truth to others. We thought that now as we are together we should seek for special grace to do a special work.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 95

September 23, 1885

[Basel]

I attended the morning meeting and spoke to those assembled upon faith from (James 1), third verse onward. Many testimonies were borne in response to the testimony borne to them.4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 96

Elders Bourdeau and their companions, Elder Whitney and wife, and Brother Kellogg met to consider important moves which it seemed necessary to make for the more decided advancement of the cause. It was considered advisable that as soon as it could be well brought about, A. C. Bourdeau should go to Torre Pellice in Italy to labor, to hold what the truth has already gained, and to gain still others to the truth. Brother and Sister Mallon live in this place. Brother Mallon is a publisher; has a printing office. It was advised that Charles Andrews go to America, that Mother Andrews go if it is her choice, that Edith go with her mother to Italy for the benefit of her health. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 97

Daniel then presented his plans that France and Italy be not encouraged to unite with Switzerland, but become a separate conference and use their means among themselves to build up their own conference. This I earnestly opposed, for the influence would be bad. It would not lead to union and harmony in the work, but to separate interest; and they would not labor for that oneness that the Lord demands. Daniel exhibited self to a large degree. I left the room, for I will not give sanction to any such spirit. I attended the Council; spoke twice in the meeting. In the afternoon had a long, plain, pointed talk with Edith Andrews. She seemed to have some sense of her condition. We prayed together. I feel deep pity for this child. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 98

September 24, 1885

[Basel]

Attended early morning meeting. "If any man thirst let him come unto Me and drink." [John 7:37.] I had the burden to speak of the different nationalities and the necessity of union and harmonizing in their efforts, that Italians, Germans, French, Swedes, and every tribe and nation have not six paths, but only one model to copy and this one mold to receive—Jesus Christ, the perfect example. Elder Bourdeau vindicated himself, and his remarks were all uncalled for. It is so hard for some minds to be emptied of self. Self is mixed and mingled with all they do and all they say. 4LtMs, Ms 16a, 1885, par. 99

Ms 17, 1885

Shipboard Meditations

S. S. Cephalonia [en route for Europe]

August 14, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in TDG 235, EGWE 28-29.

[Steamer Cephalonia, Cunard Line, en route for Europe.]⁴*LtMs*, Ms 17, 1885, par. 1

“They that were ready went in with Him to the marriage: and the door was shut.” Matthew 25:10. I have been reflecting some upon this text. While obliged to occupy my berth because of the rough waves and the violent motion of the vessel, I have time to meditate and pray. Cannot write much of the time; cannot read and have no appetite. My berth gives me a good sight through the portholes. We see the white-capped waves and watch the motion as far as the eye can extend. Out of sight of land, a mere speck upon the ocean, a few peeks between us and eternity, and I think how many have felt as secure as the passengers on this boat who have, while full of merriment in the midst of feasting or of dancing, closed their probation. The noble bark may strike some hidden rock. We were obliged to move very slowly at times because of the fog, and for hours the fog’s mournful whistle like a voice warning was saying, Beware. At these times I could not sleep, only pray. The boat delayed some hours, fearing driving in collision with the vessels or schooners that sail upon these broad waters.⁴*LtMs*, Ms 17, 1885, par. 2

I thought of those upon the boat who had no faith in God, no hope in Jesus Christ, the world’s Redeemer. In sunshine where no danger threatens all is hilarity and full of amusement. But when the vessel is driven by fierce winds and tossed, when peril comes, when life is hanging in the balance, the appetite for amusement is at [an] end. Folly and hilarity and playing, feasting, drinking, dancing, and joking are turned into sorrow, terror, and despair. The day of doom seems to be opening upon those who have never thought seriously of the words of Christ. "I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: I will shut it, and no man can open it." [Revelation 3:7, 8.]4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 3

How wretched will it be for those who have had no faith, no confidence in God! Amid the rough waters and the storm and the fog, I felt that Jesus was never nearer to me, never more precious. My faith reposed in God, however dark the surroundings. The faith of the believer is like the ship's compass. The ship may be struggling with the waves and by the tempest, tossed by the everrestless sea; yet the compass keeps its position, doing its work, maintaining its level amid plunging and tossing, pointing to the pole. I felt that my soul could stay upon God whatever comes, calm waves or boisterous. We may be driven by fierce winds, the fog like a pillar of cloud may surround us, but my soul had comfort in God. My faith like the compass ever turned steadily to my Redeemer, to Him who can rebuke the stormy waters and say, Peace be still. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee: because he trusteth in Thee." Isaiah 26:3.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 4

I found my mind again and again drawn out to contemplate the case of Noah, who with his family found refuge in the ark. He had faith, he obeyed God. His faith led him to make ready for a refuge from the terrible storm that God had told him would come upon the wicked inhabitants of the old world. Noah obeyed God implicitly. It was a heavy cross for him to move out by faith in preparing that ark, building it on dry land; but he did according to all the Lord commanded him. He did not pick and choose among the precepts and commandments of God those things that were agreeable and for his present comfort and convenience and reject those that required self-denial, that if he obeyed would make him the subject of sport and derision of the godless. This course of Noah will be the course of all who have genuine faith. As soon as he knows the will of God, he will do it. He does not consult his will, his own choice; but although to obey is to sacrifice and to suffer loss of friends, of property, of name and life itself, he will carefully and conscientiously walk in the path which God has indicated.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par.

5

It was Noah's consistent faith and works combined that condemned the world. He not only preached the present truth appropriate for that time, but he acted every sermon. Had he never lifted his voice in warning, his works, his holy character among the corrupt and ungodly would have been condemning sermons to the unbelieving and dissolute of that age. He bore himself with a Christlike patience and meekness under the provoking insults, taunts, and mockery. His voice was often heard in prayer to God for His power and help, that he might do all the commandments of God. This was a condemning power to the unbelieving.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 6

But the time comes when the last appeal of Noah is made to the guilty race. He bids them yet once again heed the message of warning and find refuge in the ark. He stretches out his hands in supplication with voice full of sympathy. With quivering lip and tearful eye, he tells them his work is done, but the loud coarse mocking and scoffs and insults more determined are heaped upon Noah. Enthusiast, fanatic, crazy, falls upon his ear; he bids them all farewell, he and his family enter the ark, and God shuts the door. That door that shut Noah in shut out the world. It was a shut door in Noah's time. And the Lord shut him in. Up to that time, God had opened a door whereby the inhabitants of the old world might find refuge if they believed the message sent to them from God. But that door was now shut, and no man could open it. Probation was ended.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 7

The long forbearance of God had ceased, the figures in the books of God's reckoning had been accumulating, the cup of the unjust was full. Mercy then ceased, and justice took the sword of vengeance. The door shut, hope for the world dead; the last warning rejected, the golden opportunity past, forever past. The last appeal has been made by the man of righteousness, the forbearance of God exhausted, and how terrible now is His wrath. The unbelievers saw the beasts and fowls and animals of all kinds of themselves enter the ark. This was something they could not explain. They saw Noah and his family go in, and a premonition of something they cannot comprehend thrills through them as they see that wondrous door of the ark shut not by human hands.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 8

The rain in a few days began to fall. The waters cover the surface of the earth while the inhabitants leave the groves where there are beautiful things, objects, this wisdom has made for idolatry. They leave their mansions, their works of gold and temples of precious stones, and bemoan the loss of the luxuries. The waters continue to rise higher and higher. They are filled with remorse, but not repentance, filled with hatred and some with sorrow, as convictions bring the sermons of Noah vividly to their minds. The denunciations of God against their practices ring in their ears as they are compelled to flee from one place to another, always seeking a foothold higher for safety. The last refuge is reached. They look abroad upon a world of water. How gladly would they now welcome that voice which invited them to find shelter in the ark. How glad would they be to listen now to the prayers offered in their behalf by faithful Noah—prayers which they mocked at and put far off the evil day. The sweet voice of mercy no longer is heard. This door is shut. But Noah and his family are safe in the ark under the protecting care of the God of the storm and tempest. A divine hand guided the ark in safety amid the roar of the tempest, the thunderous voice, and the sharp lightning's gleam; trees uprooted were thrown into the boiling, seething waters; wrecks of palaces, temples, were tossing about upon the waters; but the ark was safe.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 9

There was a shut door in Noah's time. There was a shut door to the unbelievers in the destruction of Sodom, but an open door to Lot. There was a shut door to the inhabitants of Tyrus, a shut door to the inhabitants of Jerusalem to those who disbelieved, but an open door to the humble, the believing, those who obeyed God. Thus it will be at the end of time. Those that are ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 10

August 15

There are invitations now that come to the youth, to those of mature age, to put on the wedding garment, the robe of Christ's righteousness. My mind is anxious in regard to our youth who have to meet temptations of this age. They have great advantages [in] our Sabbath schools and religious meetings. They have so many rich privileges that they do not appreciate them. The enemies of God and of the truth surround us as they surrounded Noah. Severe tests will come to every soul who is on the side of Christ, and every advantage is opened for the youth to obtain a knowledge of the truth if they desire. You should [be] stored with knowledge of Bible truth, that you may be qualified to give to every man that asketh thee a reason, the hope that is within thee, with meekness and fear.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 11

Stephen was the first Christian martyr. The church believers in Christ had been taught by the wonderful Teacher, the Majesty of heaven. What zeal was in their midst, what faith and devotion to the work. Of these spiritual works it is stated Jesus was not ashamed to call them brethren. [Hebrews 2:11.] There was a constant increase of young members, and the whole city was moved by the divine movings of the Lord among them. Stephen was full of faith and power. The enemies of God and the truth felt stirred with hatred and opposition. Satan impelled them to resist the truth. Stephen had to meet in argument the most artful, deceptive disputants, hoping to confuse and put down his arguments. If Stephen had not searched the Scriptures and himself become fortified with the evidence of God's Word, he could not have borne the test; but he knew the foundation of his faith was firm, and he was ready to answer his opponents. Stephen came off victorious. He spoke with assurance and wisdom and power that astonished and confounded the enemies of truth. When they found themselves baffled and defeated at every attempt, then they were bent on his destruction. Had these professedly honest and wise men been really seeking for the truth, they would have admitted evidence which they could not controvert. They would have acknowledged their error and yielded to the convincing arguments of truth and been on the Lord's side and on the side of truth. But such was not their purpose or character. They hated Christ, they hated all His followers, and they put Stephen to death. If they could not controvert his arguments, they could stop his mouth by stoning him to death, which they did.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 12

Just such things our workers will meet individually. We must be tested and proved; and if we are not pure gold, we shall fail, prove to be dross. The vilest slanders will be set in motion, misrepresentations will be made as were uttered against Stephen, but those who have made God their trust will not swerve one hair from their duty and from the truth. Who of our young workers are fitting themselves with the lips to bear testimony to the truth and stand fast in the faith, willing to seal it with their blood if required? I entreat of our youth to learn at the cross of Calvary; a mere knowledge of the truth is not enough. We must be sanctified through the truth. There must be a living connection with God, a firm hold from above. We may have a deep and earnest piety. By doing good as well as receiving God and the work of character building going forward for time and for eternity, we have on the wedding garment and enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb, that when the door is shut we will be on the right side—shut in, but not shut out.4LtMs, Ms 17, 1885, par. 13

Ms 18, 1885

Remarks/Remarks at the European Council

Basel, Switzerland

September 20, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in 21MR 300.

Open-Air Meetings

I would like to speak a word in regard to open-air meetings. There is no one who can long bear the taxation to the throat and lungs of speaking in the open air. I have spoken thus more or less for the last forty years, and I know how trying it is. And in this country, it must be especially taxing on account of the dampness of the air.4LtMs, Ms 18, 1885, par. 1

Another objection to holding open-air meetings is the fact that the congregation is constantly changing, and one cannot come close to them by personal effort. One might preach in the open air till the Lord comes and then be unable to show definite result. Then, too, this kind of labor has a tendency to make the laborer [deficient] in not obtaining that kind of experience that is fitting him to be a perfect workman, for he becomes negligent in regard to following up his own work and binding it off securely. He does not obtain that experience that will make him an able minister of Christ. He has very little encouragement to grow in the truth, to obtain a thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, and he does not obtain that experience that will make him an able minister for Christ.4LtMs, Ms 18, 1885, par. 2

I do not wish to be understood that open-air meetings never should be held. They may be held at times as a necessity, but this is not the best regular means of presenting the truth. We have a different work to do. We must remove the rubbish of error which is piled about the people. In order to do, this we should be more personal in our labor and should have something fresh like the manna from heaven to present as their wants require. From such meetings the people do not obtain the best ideas of our work. We want them to understand that we have the most sacred truth ever given to mortals.4LtMs, Ms 18, 1885, par. 3

Taken From a Report for Review on English Mission:4LtMs, Ms 18, 1885, par. 4

Open-air meetings are quite common in England. If conducted on right principles, these are good. Jesus placed Himself in the great thoroughfares of travel, where His voice was heard by thousands. The precious words that fell from His lips found a lodgment in many hearts and caused them to search and see if these things were so.4LtMs, Ms 18, 1885, par. 5

Ms 19, 1885

Talk/Talk Before the European General Council

Basel, Switzerland

September 21, 1885

See edited variant Ms 14, 1885. Portions of this manuscript are published in 4MR 408-409; 6MR 130-133.

I was just thinking about the world's Redeemer when the Roman tax collections came to the disciples for the tax money. They had nothing to give them. But they brought the matter before Christ. He said to Simon, "Go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money: that take, and give unto them for Me and thee." Matthew 17:27.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 1

Peter was one of the disciples of Jesus, one who was laboring in His cause, and yet he had not enough money to pay the required tax. Their Master was the Majesty of heaven; He owned the world, and He had no possessions in the world. He took His position among the poor and lowly of earth. 4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 2

We know how our cause started. We know that we have counted pennies and means in every way in order that we might have enough means for the bare necessities of life and to carry us from place to place, to present the truth to others. I well remember the first conference that was ever held by our people. It was in Connecticut. My husband worked at cutting cordwood at twenty-five cents a cord to earn money to take us to this meeting. He was not accustomed to this kind of labor, and the rheumatism came in his wrist. He was unable to sleep nights, and night after night our prayers ascended, that God would relieve him of pain. He said, "Wife, we must keep five dollars on hand, and even if we get short of food we must not use that." I fainted to the floor with a nursing child in my arms more than once for the want of necessary food to eat. But when the call came from a few faithful souls, Cannot you come and hold a meeting with us in Connecticut, we felt the Lord would have us go. When my husband settled with his employer, he had ten dollars. With this we made the journey.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 3

My husband in his youth by the slip of an ax, while [cutting] heavy timber, sliced off a piece of his ankle bone so that he was not able to bear the weight of his body upon the heel of his right foot for several years. When in our great need he engaged to work in the harvest field, there were several hands employed beside himself who were irreligious, rough men. They agreed among themselves to make it hard for the minister; for as he was unaccustomed to such stern, hard work, they would run him down and drive him from the field. He knew at that time nothing of this; but before he went into the field, we sought the Lord most earnestly that He would strengthen and protect him in this manifest duty as He had done in preaching His word. As he entered the field, they put the minister to lead in mowing the swath. He took a wide swath. Those who followed, he saw, took narrow swaths and bent to with all their energies to keep up close to him which led him to quicken his steps. He worked rapidly, but they had gone across the large field but twice when they threw down their scythes and said, "White, do you mean to kill yourself and us? We give up this trial. We thought you were a minister and could not know by experience how to handle a scythe; but we give you the credit of being far ahead of us and the best mower we ever saw, and you have taken no beer or liquor this hot day. When you came into the field as a worker, we were mad. We did not want a minister in our company; and we agreed to give you a hard one, and you have gone steadily on, and we have to give up. We crown you as a leader and captain in the field." My husband thanked them for their compliments, but he felt that he had One to thank whom they did not love, trust, or serve—the God of heaven.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 4

This day's work proved to him a blessing in more ways than one. It broke down the stiff prejudice that existed against him as a minister; and the severe strain of nerve and muscle he was under while enduring the heat of the noonday sun, followed by several men to drive him ahead, the cords in the limbs relaxed, he found himself bringing his wounded foot squarely to the ground. After this he stepped so firmly, no one would imagine he had ever been lame, but he was troubled with pain in his ankle when he attempted to walk long distances, but he walked nine miles from Rocky Hill to Middletown, Connecticut, to the post office to carry the first paper ever published by Seventh-day Adventists. Before these papers were sent, we knelt down before God and with many tears craved His blessing upon them.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 5

Urgent invitations came from New York for us to hold a series of meetings among them. What could we do? We had no means, we were poor. We prayed over the matter, and my husband decided to buy a scythe and go into the harvest field and earn money for to take us to New York. He was an invalid, could not retain food upon his stomach; but we prayed over the matter morning and night, and he was strengthened. He worked thus until he earned forty dollars, which paid our fare to New York.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 6

I was shown at that time that light was shining out from my husband's pen, and these rays of light were penetrating the darkness of error and the beams of light were increasing and growing brighter and more powerful.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 7

It was at this meeting that the truth began to spread in New York. My husband worked at handling stone for months until his fingers were worn through and dropped blood; and this, too, was the very place where he had stood in the desk before thousands of people to proclaim the coming of Christ. Through injustice of his employer he did not receive the money for his labor, and we were in want. He obtained a few things for our absolute necessities.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 8

My husband went through the streets of Brunswick, Maine, with a bag upon his shoulder in which were a few beans and a little meal and rice and flour to keep us from starvation. When he entered the house singing, "I am a pilgrim and I am a stranger," I said, Has it come to this? Has God forgotten us? Are we reduced to this? He lifted his hand and said, "Hush, the Lord has not forsaken us. He gives us enough for our present wants. Jesus fared no better." I was so worn that as he said this, I fainted from the chair. The next day a letter came asking us to go to another conference. We had no money. When my husband went to the post office for his mail, he found a letter containing five dollars. When he returned he gathered the family together and offered a prayer of thanksgiving. This is the way the work began.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 9

At one time light came that we should go to Portsmouth. But we had no money. We got all ready and were waiting when a man came riding very fast to our door. Jumping from his wagon, he said, There is some body here that wants money. I have come fourteen miles at the highest speed my horse would go. Said my husband, We are all ready to start to attend an important meeting, but were waiting for money. We shall not have time to catch the cars now unless you take us. He did so, and we had just time to reach the cars, step upon the platform without purchasing tickets when the car started. This was the way the Lord educated us to trust in Him. In this way the truth has entered many places. Our faith and trust in God have been tested and tried again and again. For years we labored constantly to carry forward the work under the pressure of feebleness and great poverty. We have tried to the best of our ability to save means in every way possible, that the work of God might go forward. I had about the time of Bro. Ertzenberger's visit to America a present of a nice silk dress which cost forty-five dollars. Brother Andrews had just sent word that there was a great need of money to carry forward the work. I thought it was my privilege to so use the gift I had received that those who generously presented it to me would receive a reward and lay up treasure in heaven. I went to a merchant and told him to sell it for me for all he could get. He sold it for fifty dollars, and I sent the money to this mission. When others knew what I had done, they donated much larger sums. Thus the act of my doing this little brought in means from other individuals, so that Brother Andrews wrote us that the very sum needed came at the right time, and he expressed gratitude to God for this timely response.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 10

We are establishing missions and building churches all through America. Already we have $23,000 laid up in the bank of heaven. As I could not sell property that I wished to sell, I have hired money and, paying eight per cent interest, invested it in the cause. Our foreign mission treasury is now empty. In many places in America they have been having very close times. A night before last, I dreamed that I was pleading with God and presenting to Him our empty treasury. I awoke, myself pleading that He would send means to advance His work. Now I propose that we have living faith to ask God to supply our needs. The Lord has money that He has entrusted to His stewards for to do this needed work. Are these men, are these women where God can impress them with His Spirit?4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 11

A short time ago we wanted so much to build a boarding house in Healdsburg, California, to be connected with the school there. But we had no means to do it with. I said to my son, All we can do is to pray. We did pray. Our supplication went up to heaven with many tears for the Lord [to] send us means. In about three hours' time, I heard a knock at my door. Upon opening it, I found a sister there. Said she, I do not wish to disturb you while writing, but I have some money that I want to invest in the cause. Can you tell me where this money is most needed? Where shall it be placed? My heart was filled with gratitude to God. Yes, indeed, we had a place for it. She gave us (to the college) $5,000, enough to supply our present great needs, and said she felt thankful that she could help the cause of God in any way. And the tears ran down her face to think that she had now found a safe deposit for what had so long been only a source of care and anxiety. There are others who should see and feel the needs of God's cause and do likewise. Why cannot we carry these things to God in prayer? We depend too much upon one another and too little upon God.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 12

I have lain awake night after night, turning over in my mind how we could help the different missions in the best way, and I am in just as much perplexity now as before. I can see no other way but to pray, believe, and act as God gives us wisdom. The Lord has gold and silver. The earth and all its treasures belong to Him. The cattle upon a thousand hills are His also. If we trust in Him, exercising living faith, He will send help to advance His work. He has always proved Himself a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God.4LtMs, Ms 19, 1885, par. 13

Ms 20, 1885

Diary, September 25-27, 1885

Basel, Switzerland

September 25 - 27, 1885

Drawn from Ms 24, 1885. Portions of this manuscript are published in 3Bio 310-313; EGWE 83.

September 25, 1885

I attended the early morning meeting. Several prayers were offered in French and in English. My heart was drawn out after God in earnest prayer for the Lord to help and strengthen and bless us and impress our hearts with the sacredness and importance of His work.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 1

At an early stage of this meeting, the burden came upon me to say some plain things. I told those present that God has given us great and solemn truths to proclaim to the world. I told them that we should certainly fail if we did not walk in the light. Our success in this great work depends on daily seeking help from God. With the aid of divine power, His servants can do what He has given them to do, without fear of failure. However strong the powers of darkness, one can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 2

I was impressed by the Spirit of God to tell those present that as a people we are far behind our opportunities and privileges. No other people has been so greatly favored with the measure of grace that has been bestowed upon those living in these last days. If those who have received such great light do not improve this light, their condemnation will be in accordance with the privileges granted them.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 3

At the close of my talk, many testimonies were borne, giving evidence that some were determined to consecrate themselves wholly to the Lord.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 4

During the forenoon I had a conversation with Brother Daniel Bourdeau. Elder Bourdeau's wife, Elder Whitney, Elder Lane, and W. C. White were present. I was compelled to bear to Brother Bourdeau a testimony of reproof very grievous for me to bear. May the Lord send home this testimony. I believe that Satan has been repulsed and that the Lord will give Brother Bourdeau the victory. We sought the Lord in earnest prayer and presented the whole matter before Him. We believe that He heard us, and that He will take this case into His own hands.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 5

We rejoice to see that some of our brethren are coming to the light. We rejoice to find Elder Matteson in an excellent state of mind. His testimonies are to the point. He seems to be in perfect harmony with the meeting and helps us much in all the efforts made.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 6

We had arranged for a meeting in the evening of the ministers alone. This was carried out, and there were present about seventeen ministers and their wives. Brother Daniel Bourdeau was present. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon me, and I prayed for light and grace from heaven. My faith laid hold upon the promises of the Lord, and His Spirit came into our meeting in large measure. Hearts were broken before Him. Brother Daniel Bourdeau wrenched himself from the shackles of Satan and surrendered his will to the Lord. Satan had thought to gain the victory over this brother, but he was signally defeated. Angels of God were in the meeting, and the power of God was felt. Brother Albert Vuilleumier prayed in French, but we understood the Spirit that inspired it. Brother Matteson's petition was indited by the Lord and was offered in brokenness of heart. I felt the peace of Jesus in my soul. I had carried a heavy load, and now I rolled that load upon the great Burden-bearer. I could do nothing; Jesus could do everything; and I felt the peace of Christ in my heart. Oh, what could we do without Jesus? How dark and lonely would be our lives. He is our only helper.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 7

September 26, 1885

The early morning meeting was held at six o'clock. I was so burdened that before the meeting I spent some time in prayer. I did not feel able to go, but felt that I should lose a blessing if I remained away.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 8

We found twenty-three assembled in a small room. I opened the meeting with prayer, and the Lord did indeed come near to me and to those assembled. Brother Daniel Bourdeau then prayed and confessed his weakness in yielding to the temptations of the enemy. He made a more full surrender to God, and light from God shone into his heart. Fervent, heart-broken prayers were offered with weeping, and the blessing of the Lord came upon us.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 9

The Spirit of the Lord helped and strengthened me to speak to my brethren and to present before them the holy character of our work and the necessity of our improving the talents God has given us. The night before, a book had been opened before me with the record of the past year's labor of the workers, just as God viewed it. As I traced down the record, there stood revealed all the defects. The record of some showed many hours spent in idleness or occupied by unimportant matters, when they should have been devoted to the service of God. Every time these laborers associated with their fellow men, they were offered opportunities—could they have realized it—to draw minds to the Saviour, to sow the seeds of truth. But these opportunities passed by without being seen or improved. Words of no consequence were spoken, and evidence was given that the message of warning was not uppermost in their minds, not resting as a burden on these souls, so that whenever their lips opened it would flow out in the reflecting of the light given them to bless others.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 10

This registered account showed unfulfilled duties, days spent without prayer, and night coming with nothing to show for the day's labor. There were recorded large expenses and little results. The record showed that other laborers had done their work with less expenditures of means, but better results.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 11

Instruction was given by the One who held the records. He said, You cannot trust in your own ability or wisdom. There must be union of effort, union of faith. You must pray and counsel together.4LtMs,

Ms 20, 1885, par. 12

God will work for His people if they will yield their lives to Him. You are not working for men merely to receive wages. An eternal reward will be given to him who faithfully labors for God.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 13

At half-past two I spoke to a goodly number of people from the words of Zechariah: "And he showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him." Zechariah 3:1. The Lord led my mind into a channel unexpected to myself; but from the testimonies borne after the meeting, I think it was just what the people needed.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 14

I had a testimony of encouragement for Sister Oyen. I exhorted her to take Christ as her Saviour. I told her that if she would come to Him, believing that He is a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him, she would find comfort and encouragement and hope. In looking to herself, she would find nothing to inspire her with faith. She must come to Jesus with her imperfections, believing that He alone would remove these defects. Christ alone could remove from her the stain of sin and blot out her transgressions and give her His righteousness.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 15

I said, "Jesus stands at the door of your heart, my sister, knocking for entrance, inviting you to let Him in. Will you hear His voice? Will you open the door? Will you renounce self and welcome Jesus?" "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, ... and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord of hosts." 2 Corinthians 6:17, 18. Jesus came to save sinners, not to destroy them. He declares, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Mark 2:17. You who are sin-sick need the aid of the great, all-powerful Physician. Let Him do His work for you. "Wilt thou be made whole?" [John 5:6.] He is saying to you. What answer have you to give?4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 16

Sister Martha Bourdeau, Jesus loves you. Why gather about your soul the clouds of darkness? Why walk in a fog of unbelief? Come into the clear light, where there is no darkness, no shadows. Come just as you are, helpless and hopeless. He says that He is more willing to give the Holy Spirit to those that ask Him than parents are to give good gifts to their children. [Luke 11:13.] When the promise is so ample, why do you stand in the shadow? Christ says, "I am the resurrection and the life." "I am the way, the truth, and the life." John 11:25; 14:6. "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye ask anything in My name, I will do it. If ye love Me, keep My commandments. And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him; but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." John 14:13-18.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 17

My sister, have you not every encouragement to gather up your confidence? Have you endeavored not only to believe in Christ, but to live in your daily life as His disciple? Actions speak louder than words. There are those who conceal their lack of spiritual power by loud assertions. The truth that sanctifies the heart and life is always expressed in simple language.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 18

Basel, Switzerland, September 27, 1885. I attended the morning meeting for ministers. There was a room full of ministers and their wives. I opened the meeting with prayer. Many earnest, heartfelt prayers were offered. There seemed to be a desire for more thorough consecration to God. The prayers went up as the prayer of one man.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 19

I then made some remarks in regard to the workers for God, being of one mind, of one judgment, ready to receive advice and counsel. The Lord can do nothing for us unless we submit to His molding hand. We must be molded as clay is molded in the hands of the potter. You may have thought it strange that I should say so much in regard to children's being trained and disciplined and taught to obey and respect their parents. But it is essential for them to learn to obey their parents before they can learn to obey and reverence God. Neglected, undisciplined children, allowed in the home to have their own way, carry their unsubmitive, untameable spirit into their religious experience. There is many a church trial that is the result of a defective training in childhood.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 20

Our work is made exceedingly hard. We meet with those whose will is strong and untameable, those who know nothing of submission. They will argue their way and plead for their way in the face of the testimonies of the Spirit of God; and if at last they yield, it is not with a good grace. They have received their will as an inheritance, and it has grown with their growth and strengthened with their strength; and when their way is crossed, they rise up like a lion.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 21

A strong determined will is essential, but it should be under submission. It should not bear the mold of selfishness, but the grace of Christ should be seen in all the words and ways. When our way is crossed, we must not lose self-control. We must not push Christ from the soul temple, and enthrone Satan there, but we must be meek and lowly, willing to learn in Christ's school. We must study carefully the perfect Model, as revealed in the life and character of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 22

The testimonies of the Lord have followed some for many years. While they profess to believe them, they have not made the changes in their character that are essential. To those who do not walk in the light as it comes to them, the light becomes darkness.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 23

The Lord calls upon us to set our mark higher, to be content with no low and common standard, but to reach the Bible standard. He desires us to exercise living faith. He wants Sister Martha Bourdeau to walk out of the darkness that has enshrouded her into the light. It is her privilege to be free in Jesus, to make His promises her own. And Sister Oyen. These souls have been doubting, distrusting, disbelieving. But Jesus has not left them. His mercies are free, but they do not accept Jesus as their Saviour.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 24

Christ says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man ... open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me." Revelation 3:20. Do not keep the door of the heart closed and then mourn because Jesus is not your guest. He is knocking at the door of your heart. Let Him in. He will give you peace and happiness and joy, and His power. Will you accept the precious boon? Or will you turn your face from Him and say, He loves me not; I cannot see Him.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 25

Many precious testimonies were borne. Sister Oyen spoke more hopefully. She said that she could see that the reason for her unhappiness for these years was that she had not exercised faith. Her unbelief had shut the Saviour out of her heart. She was now determined to commit herself fully to Christ, and that every step should be a step of faith heavenward.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 26

Brother Oyen bore an excellent testimony. He said that he had felt that he was too unworthy to have any part in the work of God, and that he had better return to America. But they had received much light, and he believed that it was the purpose of God that they should come to Europe to save his own soul and his wife's soul. He said he believed that the Lord would work for him if he did the best that he could.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 27

Brother Matteson's testimonies tell on the right side every time. He has been a blessing all through these meetings.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 28

Many humble confessions have been made and many tears shed. A blessed work is being done for Brother Daniel Bourdeau. He seems to be clothed in his right mind.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 29

Sister Martha Bourdeau bore a good testimony. She says that she will trust in God, that she will dismiss her doubts, that she will no longer deplore her darkness, but will talk of the light, of Jesus and His love and mercy.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 30

After reading this matter, I said some plain things; and for the first time since our meetings began, Brother John surrendered his ideas and his set notions of laboring in large watering places. He had gone to Wales, but in the place of working with the Welsh, and getting a knowledge of the language, he has situated himself in a large watering place, hired a house for over one hundred dollars a year, a portion of it to be used for a meetinghouse, just as if he were to raise up at once a large company that would demand any such facilities. The matter that I read them had the effect of changing their views, and leading them to sow the seeds of truth in places near by, to enter families, to hold Bible readings, sitting down as one with the family. Have them read the texts; arouse their interest; pray with them. This will be of far greater account than sermonizing. Men love to preach, but they find it harder to do individual work, to instruct in meekness those who are in perplexity and darkness. This work must be taken up more fully by our ministering brethren.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 31

All through this meeting we have striven for harmony and unity, and I think that there is now a better state of things. All accept the words I speak, although at times they are very close and pointed.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 32

Those who teach the Word must not work away from Christ's manner of laboring. The great Physician, who ministered to the souls and bodies of men, was always simple in His instruction. He approached the needy and suffering in the simplest way. He used the ordinary speech of the people as a means of communicating the truth of heaven, clothing these truths in language that the common people could understand.4LtMs, Ms 20, 1885, par. 33

Ms 21, 1885

Diary, October 15, 1885

On the Steamer for Malmo, Sweden. (Nearing the island.)

October 15, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 3Bio 318.

We left Copenhagen this morning. We are not yet wholly out of sight of Copenhagen. It is one of the most beautiful mornings. The sun shines in its glory. Brother Matteson accompanies us to Stockholm and to Christiania.4LtMs, Ms 21, 1885, par. 1

Went to the dentist. He filled my tooth from which I have suffered so great pain for three weeks.4LtMs, Ms 21, 1885, par. 2

There was a lady visited us last night who had been out every time to hear me speak. She is a Dane. Through Brother Brorson, she became interested in the truth. She has professed religion only for a short time, I think one year. She was engaged in teaching young men and ladies German. She is a good German scholar. She speaks some English, but can understand more than she can talk. Her countenance arrested my attention from the first time. She came into meeting, and she listened with the deepest interest. We hope she will come out fully from the world and be separate and be wholly the Lord's. She sees what kind of religion is prevailing in Copenhagen, and she is entirely dissatisfied. She wants to see the heart work, whereas all is display and pleasure loving, dancing, card playing, gambling, and every species of selfish indulgence right among the clergy. This she says does not look to her like Bible religion. May the Lord show her by experimental knowledge the Bible religion and that the religion of Christ has no relation whatever to the religion of outward forms and display.4LtMs, Ms 21, 1885, par. 3

O that a voice might be heard arousing the people in this wicked city. It is a Christless city. Infidelity prevails, skepticism is the order of the day. Where are the missionaries to work in Copenhagen? Where are those who have that love for souls, that they will not be turned away from the purpose of bringing souls to Jesus?⁴*LtMs, Ms 21, 1885, par. 4*

Ms 22, 1885

Regarding Miles Grant

[Italy]

November 30, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 5MR 269.

We decided while at Torre Pellice to hire a hall where we could worship God in peace. There was no assurance that we could hold meetings in the hall which we had then hired without being interrupted and broken up by the spirit of opposition. We succeeded in hiring a small hall and had notices posted that we would hold meetings for several days. Next morning we were surprised to see notices placed above our hand notices that Elder Miles Grant and Concorder would commence a series of meetings in the hall directly above us which Concorder had occupied for his meetings. Elder Grant put in his notices that he would expose the pretended visions of Mrs. E. G. White. 4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 1

I did not attend his meetings. Elder A. C. Bourdeau and Mrs. M. K. White and some others of our people attended. Mrs. White took notes in shorthand of his words. We did not want any controversy. I had no hold upon the people, neither had Elder Grant. I came to Torre Pellice to rest and, if there was an opportunity, to do the people good. 4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 2

Elder Grant made the statement that it was rather a singular circumstance that he had arrived in Torre Pellice the same time that Mrs. White arrived. It had been one week since he came to the valleys, and yet he had made no move for meetings until the notice appeared of our meetings. 4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 3

Mr. Miles had threatened to publish a pamphlet against the Sabbath, showing up Adventists, as he termed it. This pamphlet came out during this week. They were the same old arguments that have been repeated by Elder Grant and the First Day Adventists hundreds of times, which our opponents have used for the last forty years against the Sabbath. Every objection has been met and answered by discussions by the pen and voice.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 4

My work has not been to enter into discussion and have a controversy with any one. My ministering brethren could take care of these matters; neither was it my work to vindicate myself, but to go about my work which the Lord had given me to do and keep at this work irrespective of censure, false statements, base falsehoods, [and] misrepresentation. Some have from time to time attacked my character, framing falsehoods against my early life, but this has been taken up by those who know my life and those who were fully acquainted with my early history, and although not of our faith, having no sympathy with our views, have stood in defense of me and freely given of their names, contradicting the evil reports that Elder Grant has picked up from false witnesses. He loves the lies that others have made, and this is one of the main features and burden of his work—parade statements manufactured forty years ago that have not even the shade of truth or evidence for their foundation.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 5

This man claims sanctification, but what kind? What is the nature of his sanctification? He has no moral standard, for he claims that God's law is abolished. He has a standard of human origin; and by one of his own creating, he claims to be sanctified. But Jesus warns against just such men. Beware of false prophets which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. The apostle tells us, "By the law is the knowledge of sin." [Romans 3:20.] Paul says, "I had not known sin but by the law." [Romans 7:7.] This law of Jehovah, the great moral standard of righteousness does not suit the ways and practices of Elder Grant, and he has trampled it under his feet and erected a standard to suit himself.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 6

I have ever taken the position that I would have no controversy with any one. This is not the work God has given me; neither would I be drawn from the work in speaking or writing to contradict the falsehoods made and loved by those men claiming sanctification. We can expect nothing better of those who have no respect for God's moral government who make a raid against the law of God. If they would tear down God's great moral standard of righteousness, they have no means of detecting sin, for by the law is the knowledge of sin. They would hesitate at any ways and means to falsify, to pervert and cast stigma upon those who are standing in defense of the law of God.4Lts, Ms 22, 1885, par. 7

These picked-up reports that Elder Grant repeats everywhere he goes have been answered again and again, but what cares he for this? He loves too well the falsehood to give it up. I had the answers with me and could have notified the people and called them together to state my purpose of refuting these charges, but I would not depart from the principles I have maintained to not vindicate myself, but go right on with my work. If my writings and my efforts made in advocating Bible truth did not sufficiently testify of the character of my mission for the last forty years, then anything that I might say would be useless for convincing these men who claim that the law of God is abolished, who have only the standard they have erected of justice and righteousness. We may produce the plain statements of fact; we may bring evidence, clear and conclusive of many witnesses; but will this weigh anything with these men? Nothing will change their minds while they occupy the position they do in regard to God's great moral standard of righteousness. Their enmity is against God's law, and hence all who advocate it must be uprooted by them in some way.4Lts, Ms 22, 1885, par. 8

They are acting over the course which was pursued by the chief priests and scribes and rulers in the days of Christ. They have set their feet in the path of stubborn resistance to the truth as did the Jews in Christ's day. Human nature is controlled by the powers of darkness; Satan pursued that course in the days of Christ. Nothing that Christ could do or did do removed the prejudice of those who did not want to believe. When He wrought miracles in their midst, they would not believe. The chief priests and rulers were constantly educating and training the people to reject Christ by their falsehoods, their misstatements of His work, their misrepresentation of His doctrines, so that when these miracles were wrought before them, the teachers had a device ready for the occasion. This fellow hath "Beelzebub," and it is only by the power of the devils He casteth out devils. [Matthew 12:24.] On a similar charge against Him in Jerusalem, the words came from the lips of those who witnessed this good work, These are not the words of Him that hath a devil. [John 10:21.]4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 9

We were in the Piedmont Valleys where the people religiously were in the depths of superstition, ignorance in regard to Bible truth. Remarks were made by those who claimed to be Protestants, but who were ignorant of the Scriptures and the power of God. Several of the Vaudois had heard Elder Grant preach, and they told their friends he had come to quarrel with a woman who was an Adventist. Two Adventists quarreling, he says, with one another was enough for them; but this man made a mistake. The raid was made all on one side. I would not become a party to this contention so much as to make a reference to Elder Grant. I would not have any contradiction with him or even vindicate myself. I placed my case and work in the hands of Him who had given me my commission and bore my testimony just the same as though Elder Grant were in his own native state. He claimed before the people to be well acquainted with Mrs. White and she was well acquainted with him. All the acquaintance I have had with Elder Grant is on one occasion. My husband and I met him on the cars, and we spoke a few words together once after that.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 10

We attended the great national camp meeting; and then as I attempted to speak in a social meeting a few words in harmony with that which we all believed as Adventists, he and Elder Himes came rushing out of a business meeting they were holding in one of the tents and interrupted me, although I spoke but a few moments. And although professing to gain great liberty for all, we were commanded to leave the ground, although we had not disturbed their meetings at all. But they agreed among themselves to send a man of their number to our tent. We had a few publications on the Sabbath, and this man professed to be anxious for some of these little tracts and they were given to him. Then he went back to those who had sent him and reported that we had publications that were being given to those who wanted them. Elders Himes and Grant and others ordered us to take down the tent and to leave the ground, which we did.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 11

We could but see that the very same spirit was working in the same manner as when Christ was upon the earth. The Pharisees and the scribes and rulers were constantly devising some plan against Him that they might catch Him in His words. They set spies upon His track. Satan has different deceptions prepared for different minds. God has given us a test whereby we may not be deceived. "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isaiah 8:20.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 12

On one occasion I shook hands with him in San Francisco, California, and exchanged a few words with him. He has had all the opportunity he wanted to ask me if these statements were true or false. I could have shown him the impossibility of their being true, but he has loved the lies that have been presented to him and repeated them so many times he believes them to be truth, and he feels as zealous as Saul did when he was persecuting the saints of God at Jerusalem, believing he is doing God service.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 13

This is all the personal acquaintance I have had with Elder Grant. I present this that my brethren shall understand just how I treat this matter. Not one of our ministers should engage in discussion with him because he will, under a cloak of sanctification, pursue a course of great crookedness. He will resort to any ways and any means that are unfair to make of none effect the truth of God. And with such an opponent who will wrest the Scriptures, who will misinterpret and falsify the words that may be spoken, as did the chief priests and rulers in Christ's day, it is not for the good of the people or for the glory of God to enter into controversies, even upon the truth. Keep about your work just as though such a man as Miles Grant did not exist. Let him make all the falsehoods and love all that others make and make a raid against the holy law of God and against those who stand in defense of the truth. The truth can handle only one set of weapons—truth and righteousness. The opposers of truth can use artifice, crookedness, deception, falsehood, because they have nothing better to use. Satan used just such a set of weapons, and he will use them.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 14

This raid made against those who keep the commandments of God will not cease until probation closes. John saw this warfare going forward in the last days. He says, "And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." Revelation 12:17.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 15

So it has been in every age. Men will be tested upon the truth, and two influences are brought to bear upon the human mind. Satan will not let one go from his ranks without he makes a desperate resistance. He will contest inch by inch the advance of one to the light and truth. He will bring every power to bear to hold them on his side, that Christ shall not have these souls he claims as his subjects; but if these souls will flee to Jesus and make earnest prayer to God to know the truth, if they will go to God and their Bibles, they will ascertain the truth as it is in Jesus. But if they through policy, like the chief priests and rulers, will not obey God, like them they will go to any lengths in deception. The light that is in them becomes darkness, and how great is that darkness. They are given up to 2 Thessalonians 2:7-11 cited. 4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 16

The testimony of Jesus is the Spirit of prophecy. To whom does this apply? Satan was the first great rebel in heaven. On account of his power to deceive, he carried many of the holy angels on his side. God was truth and justice. God moved in a straightforward course to vindicate His law. Satan must yield or evade God's arguments. He came where the two roads branched. It was submission or open rebellion. He took the latter position. He had misconstrued, perverted, wrested the words of God until he carried with him a large number of the angels; a large number, true, but for his deception. He practiced the work of accusing, of fraud, of deception until he himself was his own dupe. He believed his own lies; his darkness was to him light, and light was darkness. To Satan this was his ruin. He really had the advantage. Lucifer could lie, deceive, accuse. God cannot lie. God moved in a straightforward course. Lucifer moved in a crooked, wriggly, twisting course, serpent-like. Lucifer could be warned at the beginning of this course of sin as only God can warn, but his stubborn resistance and unbelief construed every merciful interposition of God into a pressure and restriction of his rights. He fancied himself for a time, because he gained some of the angels to his side as superior to

God. The Lord allowed Satan to go on until he should reveal himself in his true character. Christ alone, by giving Himself a sacrifice, could destroy the works of Satan.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 17

To meet all of Lucifer's methods and guile was not an easy task. But it was and will be revealed that pure truth is a match for falsehood; and when Christ was willing to give even life itself to maintain the honor of God's law, the truth which was truth when the world was made will remain truth when the earth is purified and made the abode for the saints. The law of God was the great subject of controversy in heaven. It is the great subject of controversy ever since the fall of Satan and will continue to be the great test question, showing the loyal and the transgressors in two parties. Now it seems a marvel that men will be so blinded as to pursue the warfare and continue it so persistently against God's law that Satan began in heaven.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 18

After Elder Grant had presented me as he had done before the people, in my next meeting on the Sabbath there were quite a number out, expecting that I would answer the charges he had made against me. One Baptist minister sat with notebook and pencil to take notes, but the discourse will appear. M. K. White took notes in shorthand, and the character of my labors can be seen in the ten times I spoke in the valleys. One Baptist minister visited me in the house of Brother Bourdeau, and we had a very profitable conversation together and a season of prayer.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 19

This occasion to me was one of trial and anxiety. I wished to know my duty. I did not want to present to this people who know nothing of our faith the idea that those who were Adventists were at war one with another. This would leave an impression on minds that all the good that we might try to do them would be of no effect. I believe my course was right—to keep silent. I would not wish to meet the matter in the judgment that because of the contention of the two parties—First-day Adventists and Seventh-day Adventists—souls were fastened in unbelief and error. When the grand truths of the near coming of the Son of man would make no impression upon them, night and day my burden of prayer was, Lord, help me to be low at the cross; help me in this land of strangers to remember

Jesus. All I ask is that Thy name may be glorified, the honor of Thy law be maintained. I had a most precious experience at this time in hiding self in Jesus. I said over and over in my wakeful hours at night, "Jesus, simply to Thy cross I cling." I was comforted with these reflections.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 20

God is a party in all our transactions. We are either serving Him in obedience to all His commandments, or we are sinning against Him by doing just as Satan did, questioning and finding fault with God's rule, His great moral standard of right. But I felt an assurance that the God of justice is a party to all men's unjust proceedings. God of truth is a witness to every falsehood uttered. It is all written in the books of heaven. He who had declared that all sin is a transgression of His law, cannot look upon sin with allowance, is present as He was at the feast of Belshazzar, and an unseen hand is tracing in the books of heaven every word uttered against the rule of His government. And those who claim to be holy, without sin, are tempters to others. They make the Holy One serve with their sins. They practice fraud upon their fellow men with using the powers of the mind God has given them to deceive souls to their ruin.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 21

No man can swerve from truth and violate justice and depart from integrity and transgress thereby the law of God only as they depart from Jesus. Men cannot have success who violate the eternal principles of light and who trample on God's law. They may come with the robes of righteousness as did Satan to Christ and as he now comes to men.4LtMs, Ms 22, 1885, par. 22

Ms 23, 1885

Regarding Miles Grant

[Italy]

1885

Previously unpublished.

About Miles Grant

May God give us wisdom to know how to move in these evil times, for we are in the midst of hungry wolves and tigers who are seeking whom to devour. We are so desirous to know just how to move. We do not want to enter into controversy, which often tends to evil. Neither do I want to vindicate myself, unless it is positively necessary for the good of the cause of God. We want now and ever the wisdom of the serpent and the harmless character of the dove. O God, give us Thy Spirit in these times of trial!⁴*LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 1*

I feel my spirit stirring within me to utter the truth in regard to these two men Miles Grant and Concorde, but I will restrain my zeal, rest all in the hands of my righteous Judge, and control my tongue while my feelings urge me to utterance. God will help me to hold silence. He knows all about this work, and He will give power and dignity to His own pure truth so that the honest in heart shall not be deceived.⁴*LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 2*

I call to mind that Christ, when contending with the devil, durst not bring against him a railing accusation. While those men, with ruthless, sacrilegious hands, would tear down God's moral standard of righteousness and blacken the character of all who vindicate the truth, God sees it. God knows all about it. It is written in His books—the malice, the hatred of the adversaries of God's holy law. He can bring to confusion their malice; He can make of none effect their pride. The men who want to have it so that God's law is done away, that they may continue in sin, will exult. But although we sigh and cry for the abominations done in the land, we dare not take the burden on ourselves. We desire greatly to have peace, to have an opportunity to present truth to the people who are in darkness of error. But the cause is Thine, O God, and the truth is mighty and will prevail!4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 3

God's law is as unchangeable as His throne. He has power to preserve its honor. The Lord lives and reigns and will be the helper of His truth-loving people, through Jesus Christ who is my defense and my shield and my strong tower. I will go forward. I have borne a plain and decided testimony against sin in professed Christians whose lives, whose tongues are given to working evil, speaking evil, and co-operating with the first great rebel who have been a snare to God's people by their false doctrines and their corrupt examples. I have not covered iniquity when the Lord has shown me the sins of His people.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 4

The Bible is now and ever has been a cause of dissension. This ever will be the effect of God's Word. Jesus says, I came not to send peace on the earth but a sword. See Matthew 10:34. God is wonderful in counsel, and He can bring to naught men who exalt themselves and who dare to trample His holy law under their unholy feet. Although my work and mission are made the subject of ridicule and sneers of men who claim to be wholly sanctified to God, although the subject of sanctification is the one theme on which I am called by them a pretender, a hypocrite, yet I am not angry, neither am I terrified by my adversaries.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 5

My offense is that I stand in defense of God's holy law, given in Eden after He created our world, when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy. And the Lord Jesus proclaimed the law of Jehovah in awful grandeur from Sinai's Mount. Assertions have been made in abundance, the traditions of the fathers have been brought forth, but the people who have accepted unpopular truth counted the cost of so doing before they stepped upon the platform of the Bible and the Bible alone as the foundation of their faith. Unless they have something more substantial than the bold assertions and testimony of the fathers who were erring men like themselves, and something more weighty than the word of a man who can carry slander and who is at enmity with the law of God, those who love the truth will remain firm and decided on the platform of God's Word, the foundation of the prophets and the apostles, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 6

We must have clear, convincing arguments from the Scriptures, not assertions, to determine what is truth. These assertions only blind the eyes of those who are ignorant of the Scriptures and of the power of God. Ridicule and sneers are a low kind of argument against those who stand on the platform of God's Word. Misstatements of your making, cunning hearsays go as far as they possibly can to destroy confidence in those who believe, for strong arguments answer in some minds; but in the minds of reasonable, God-fearing, honest inquirers after truth, deep-thinking and reasoning men who want their faith founded upon the Bible and the Bible alone, such reasoning and arguments will appear as they really are—weakness itself, a subterfuge to conceal their weakness.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 7

I am not in the slightest degree surprised or disappointed, for this man, professing to be sanctified to God, has been doing the very work a large number of this class claiming sanctification are doing—warring against God's law. But it has not affected my work itself at all. While he may deceive the minds of those who do not know him and his course, and who have no knowledge of me or my work, he cannot hinder the message God has given me from being spoken when and where God may choose.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 8

I cast no slur upon genuine sanctification, but as Christ has given us the responsibility, in a degree, of distinguishing the true sanctification from the false, saying, "By their fruits ye shall know them" [Matthew 7:20], we will not be unjust in calling your attention to the fruits borne. Although I may be followed from place to place by this man with his malicious falsehoods, his malice, I shall do my part of the work as God opens the way. If he turns away the people by his deceptions and falsehoods and perverting of the Scriptures, that is not my sin. Every day the record is passing up to heaven of the bold, blasphemous words this man has presumed to utter against the law of God, the foundation of His government in all heaven and earth. Every utterance is registered in the books of heaven, and the result of these words he will meet again just as surely as the chief priests, scribes, and Pharisees will meet all the words uttered against Jesus Christ. They will look upon Him whom they have pierced. He died to save sinners and yet at the same time preserve the honor and majesty of the law of Jehovah.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 9

The very men who took secret counsel against Christ did not know that they had a witness in their assemblies, the same unerring witness that was present at Belshazzar's feast and registered with unerring accuracy the blasphemous words uttered and the profaning of the holy vessels. That bloodless hand was revealed to the king, tracing characters over against the walls of his palace. He who reads the very intents and purposes of the heart was present in the judgment hall, making the records which the very men would meet—records of the words and acts in the judgment hall and that cry that awful cry, "Crucify Him, crucify Him! His blood be on us, and on our children" [Luke 23:21; Matthew 27:25] reached unto heaven and stands on record, that men may see to what lengths religious prejudice, envy, and malice will lead humanity. It shows what enmity and hatred can develop in minds who have turned from the light. That scene at the trial and crucifixion of Christ shows the power of deception upon the human mind, and to what great lengths this deception will lead men to go.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 10

Men who have been deceived to take their position on the wrong side—Satan's side—have no respect for God's holy law. We cannot wonder that they have no respect for any man or woman, however conscientiously they may be working to save souls, if they differ with them. In the Jewish age, Jesus was crucified between two thieves; and the law of God, in the testimony of the disobedient, has likewise been nailed to the cross in the Christian age. As those who crucified my Lord will wail because of Him when they shall behold in His glory Him whom they have pierced, they will surely have for their companions all those who have crucified that law that Christ came to magnify and make honorable. If these men who are now making void the law of God could view their work as it will appear when the judgment shall sit and the books shall be opened and every man shall be judged according to the things written in the books, as their works have been, then would a terror seize these professedly wise and holy men.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 11

I am not allowed to be silent in regard to truth. I must stand in defense of God's holy law. I have been sneered at because my work is of the character it is. I cannot prevent this sneer, but I can declare and will declare what the Lord has been pleased to show me. Men who hold error for truth, who proclaim that God's law is done away, will please a certain class. The one who has idols and worships them will be highly pleased to have his conscience eased by the thought that no such commandment has any claims upon him. The Bible shows the validity of the law of God. Those who make and worship graven images will be pleased to learn from the lips of men who claim to be ministers of righteousness that the law which forbids image worship is no longer in force. The profane man who has blasphemed the holy name of God will be relieved to learn that there is no law forbidding him to do this wicked work.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 12

The fourth commandment says, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it." Exodus 20:8-11.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 13

Those who do not want to lift the cross and obey God's holy Sabbath according to the commandment will be greatly relieved to have the whole law swept out of existence, and the Sabbath in particular; for keeping God's specified day makes it inconvenient if they are engaged in business. Frequently there is loss in bringing one's business into such a shape that he will not violate the Sabbath; and to have his conscience lightened by ministers, assuring him that God's law is abolished, makes it convenient for him in every way. This is a doctrine that is pleasant to receive. There is no cross in it, no self-denial, no self-sacrifice. A man may work all days of the week if he pleases, and give no day to the service of God or to devotion. The human heart not subject to the law of God looks upon this as an admirable arrangement.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 14

The fifth commandment reads: "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." Exodus 20:12. Children have had this oftentimes repeated to them when they were headstrong, disobedient, unthankful, disrespectful, selfish; but what a relief it is to be told by one who claims to be sanctified, a teacher of Bible truth, that they need not keep the commandment any longer; for if they do keep it, it is an evidence that they have fallen from grace. This commandment is gone by the board with the other nine commandments. Now children are no longer under the law, but under grace. What freedom they feel, to know that this commandment will no longer be a yoke of bondage, binding them to rules in regard to the fulfilment of their duty towards their parents and that they may steal their property and leave them in need.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 15

The sixth commandment reads, "Thou shalt not kill." Exodus 20:13. What a weight is lifted from the conscience of the murderer, that this commandment is to no longer be a restriction to him! He has long wished that no such commandment had been given, and now a teacher of Bible doctrine, who claims he has not committed a sin for years, has brought him his portion of meat in due season, for he has told him the law was abolished; now he can breathe more freely even if he has stained his hands in his neighbor's blood. It is not so dreadful a matter to kill when he knows there is no command forbidding murder.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 16

The seventh commandment reads, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Exodus 20:14. The vile man, who would steal his neighbor's wife, who has not the restraining influence upon his licentious passions, is much relieved when men who say they are holy ministers, who have been preaching for years, tell him this law has been abolished. That is such an agreeable doctrine to his carnal, polluted soul. He hails it with great joy and is happy. All the compunctions of conscience are gone; for when there is no law there is no transgression, and he pursues his course of uncleanness, although he may claim to be a minister of the gospel.

He is “turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.” Jude 4. These deny the Lord Jesus in life and in character. They are servants of sin while claiming to be teaching the Bible to the people. 4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 17

Jude mentions this class and presents before us that even “the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.” Jude 6, 7. Who will desire to rank in that company? 4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 18

The eighth commandment reads, “Thou shalt not steal.” Exodus 20:15. The thief has felt restricted by this commandment. It was a yoke of bondage to him. He wanted to appropriate his neighbor’s goods, and being bound about with the fetters of the eighth commandment was very grievous to him. But he has had a pleasant repast, meat in due season. The ministers, who understand the matter better than he does, tell him there is no commandment to this effect—it has not been binding for more than eighteen hundred years—so that all his scruples were unnecessary. He could now be free to steal without that hated eighth commandment condemning his course. 4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 19

The ninth commandment reads, “Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.” Exodus 20:16. This commandment is exceedingly offensive to the man who has educated and trained himself in this kind of work. He loves it, and it has become a part of his nature to seek spot and stain in his neighbor. He has become an expert in misrepresentations, in falsifying. He has learned his trade. He is an expert in this business, and when hearsay brings to his ears a bit of scandal it is as a sweet morsel. He will use it to hurt and injure his neighbor, and in this work he claims to be doing God service. He may even claim to be sanctified while doing this special work of Satan. Satan was an accuser of the brethren. He accused them before God day and night, and there are those who love this favorite business of their master and will do it zealously for him and exult in their adeptness at the work. Master and servant will unite, and the reward they will receive is in accordance with their deeds. Root and branch bear the same kind of fruit, and it is very convenient that the ninth commandment is no more in force, for it would hem him about with its restrictions. Now he can falsify and misrepresent and make good appear evil and evil good, and without fear of condemnation. How convenient to make a raid against the commandments of God, saint and sinners working in the same line!4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 20

The tenth commandment reads, “Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor’s house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor’s wife, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor’s.” Exodus 20:17. How inconvenient is such a principle! This commandment is a wonderful restriction of liberty. It is a terrible yoke of bondage, and the dishonest man, the covetous man could not follow out his inclination with any peace while this law was standing against him. It is such a relief to be free from this condemnation and rejoice in the liberty of the gospel, that men cannot be so terribly fettered. And now that the ministers declare this commandment null and void, they feel so great freedom in the gospel. All they have to do is to believe, believe! The keeping of the commandments is altogether unnecessary, and if they keep them they are under a yoke of bondage—they have fallen from grace.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 21

What a blessed freedom to the sinner this no-law system is! Its benefits cannot be really estimated by those who keep God’s commandments. They are yoked up under restrictions.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 22

Can we wonder that under the ministry of those who make void the law of God and trample it under their feet the world is corrupted, that religion is defiled, that sin runs riot? Can we not see that where there is no law there is no sin, for sin is the transgression of the law? First (John 3:4) gives the only definition in the Bible of sin —“Sin is the transgression of the law.”4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 23

Jude writes to his brethren to be consistent in the profession of their faith. “Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called: Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." [Jude 1-3.]4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 24

Jesus says, "I have kept My Father's commandments." [John 15:10.] Then what should we do but keep the commandments of God. Jesus did not break one of the ten commandments. He taught all who came unto Him their duty in this respect.4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 25

"And, behold, one came and said unto Him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And He said unto him, Why callest Thou Me good? There is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto Him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man saith unto Him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?" Jesus now points to the plague spot of his heart, showing him he had not kept the commandments as he thought he had done. "Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow Me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful; for he had great possessions." *Matthew 19:16-22.*4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 26

We can here see clearly that Christ was referring to the moral law. "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." [Verse 17.] But Elder Grant answers the questioner in altogether a different manner. He would say, "If you would enter into life, believe, believe. If you keep the law you are in bondage and have fallen from grace. The law is not binding on men. It is a yoke of bondage."4LtMs, Ms 23, 1885, par. 27

Ms 24, 1885

Diary, September 25 to October 5, 1885

Basel, Switzerland

September 25 - October 5, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 2MR 112-116; 3Bio 313; EGWE 83, 86.

Labors in Switzerland

September 25, 1885

Basel

I went into the early morning meeting. Several prayers were offered in French and English. My heart was drawn out after God in earnest prayer for the Lord to help and strengthen and bless us and to impress our hearts with the sacredness and importance of His work. 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 1

I had the burden upon me at the early stage of this meeting to say some plain things. I presented the great and solemn truths that had been given to us from God to be proclaimed to the world. We should certainly fail if we did not walk in the light. Our success and prosperity in this great and good work depend on our seeking daily counsel and help from God. With divine aid His servants can do what ought to be done and never fail. However strong the powers of darkness may press upon us, one can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight. 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 2

I was wrought upon by the Spirit of God to tell them that as a people and also as God's ambassadors we are far behind our opportunities and privileges. We stand condemned by the Word and especially by the law of God according to our delinquencies. God looks upon the heart. No people have been favored with the measure of grace which has been manifest to us living in these last days; and if the people having so great light and superior privileges have not improved them, our condemnation must be in accordance with the nonimprovement of the talents given us. Many testimonies were borne evidencing that some were determined to consecrate themselves wholly to God.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 3

We had in the forenoon a conversation with Brother Daniel Bourdeau. Elder Whitney, Elder Lane, W. C. White, and Daniel Bourdeau's wife were present. I was compelled to bear a testimony of reproof, not pleasant for me, but very grievous. May the Lord set home this testimony. I believe that Satan has been repulsed and that the Lord will give Brother Daniel Bourdeau the victory—the conviction through His Holy Spirit of his mistakes. We sought the Lord in earnest prayer. We presented the whole matter of our difficulties before Him who cannot err. He knoweth all our perplexities, and we believe He did hear us and will take this case of painful difficulties in His own hands.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 4

We see that some of our brethren are coming to the light. We are rejoiced to find Elder Matteson in an excellent state of mind. His testimonies are to the point. He seems to be in perfect harmony with the meeting and helps us much in all the efforts we have made. Thank the Lord.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 5

We had arranged for a meeting of the ministers alone in the evening. This was carried out, and we had about seventeen assembled—ministers and their companions. Brother Daniel was present. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon me as I prayed for light and grace from heaven. My faith laid hold upon the promises of God. His Spirit came into our meeting in large measure. Hearts were broken and contrite before Him. Brother Daniel was wrenching himself from the shackles of Satan. He was surrendering his will to God. Satan had thought to gain the victory over our brother whom we love in the Lord, but he was signally defeated. All but one prayed most earnestly, and many tears were shed. Brother Albert Vuilleumier's prayer was in French, but we understood the spirit. The angels of God were in our midst. Light and power from God were there. Brother Matteson's prayer was indited by the Lord and was most fervent, offered in great brokenness. I felt the peace of Jesus. I had carried a heavy load, and now I rolled that load upon the great Burden-bearer. I could do nothing. Jesus could do all things, and I felt the peace of Christ in my heart. Oh, what can we do without Jesus? How dark and lonely would be our lives! He is our only helper.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 6

Sabbath day was set apart by fasting and prayer. A becoming solemnity rested upon all assembled. We are assured we shall have the victory. "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." Matthew 7:7.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 7

September 26, 1885

Basel

Rainy morning. The early morning meeting was appointed at six o'clock. I had been so burdened I spent some time in prayer. I could not sleep much. I felt unable to attend the morning ministers' meeting, but felt that I should lose a blessing if I remained away. We found twenty-three assembled in a small room. I opened the meeting with prayer, and the Lord indeed came preciously near unto me and apparently to all those assembled. Brother Daniel Bourdeau then prayed and confessed his weakness in yielding to the temptations of the devil. He made a more full surrender to God and was coming to the light, and light from God was coming into his heart. The prayers offered were fervent and in brokenness of heart, with weeping, and the blessing of the Lord was in our midst.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 8

I was helped and strengthened by the Spirit of the Lord to speak to my brethren with many tears and present before them the pure, holy character of our work and the necessity of the improvement of all the talents God had given us. In the night previous a book was opened before me with the record of the past year's labor of the workmen, just as God viewed it. As I traced down the record, there stood every defect. With some, many hours spent in visiting and talking, occupied with unimportant matters, were registered as idle—time which should have been devoted to intense, interested work in the cause of God. How different than their report appeared the record of some of the laborers! How unsatisfactory to themselves! Every time that they associated with their fellow men opportunities were open, could they have seen them, to draw minds to the Saviour and to drop seeds of truth. But opportunities came and passed and were not seen or improved. Words of no consequence were spoken, and the evidence was given that the message of warning was not uppermost in their minds. It was not resting as a burden on their souls, that whenever their lips opened it would flow out, in reflecting the light of Christ given them to bless others. This is the profitable, true education for all ministers who labor in word and doctrine.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 9

This register recounted unfulfilled duties—days spent without prayer, and night comes with nothing to show for the day's labor. There were recorded large expenses and but little results. Other reports showed that the laborers had done their work with less expenditure of means, but better results. There was instruction given by the One whose hands held the records and whose eyes were tracing every feature of the records. His words were, You cannot trust in your own human ability or wisdom. You must have union of effort, union of faith; and you must counsel together. Not one of you is sufficient to be a leader. God will work for His people if they will give Him a chance—give Him their hearts and minds.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 10

You are not working for men, that men may receive your wages. In one sense, but shall we call this your wages? Oh no! The eternal reward is to be given the faithful workers. Jesus will give you your wages. All our faculties must be cultivated for eternity, doing better and still better work.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 11

At half-past two I spoke to a goodly number of people from Zechariah 3:1-7. The Lord led my mind in a channel unexpected to myself, but from the testimonies borne I think it was just what the people needed.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 12

I had a testimony of encouragement for Sister Oyen, and I exhorted her to take Christ as her Saviour. He had thoughts of mercy upon her; and if she came to Him believing that He is and that He is a rewarder of all who diligently seek Him, she would find comfort and encouragement and hope. She would find nothing to inspire her with faith in looking to herself for recommendation. She must come to Jesus with her imperfections, believing that He alone could remove these defects. Christ alone could remove from her the stains of sin, blot out her past mistakes and transgressions, and give her His own righteousness which is the white linen of the saints.⁴*LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 13*

I said, Jesus stands at the door of your heart, knocking, my sister, inviting you to let Him in. Will you hear His voice? Will you open the door? Will you welcome Jesus? Will you renounce self? Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean, and I will receive you. I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My child, saith the Lord of hosts. [2 Corinthians 6:17, 18.] Jesus came to save sinners, not to destroy them. He says, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." [Luke 5:32.] You who are sick need a physician, and Jesus, the great and all-successful Physician, has come to heal the sinsick soul. Let Him do His soul-saving work for your soul. "Wilt thou be made whole?" He is saying to you. [John 5:6.] What answer have you to give?⁴*LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 14*

Sister Martha Bourdeau, my dear sister, Jesus loves you. Why gather about your soul the clouds of darkness? Why walk in the fog of unbelief? You cannot glorify Christ while doing this. Come to the clear light where there is no darkness, no shadows. Come just as you are, all helpless and hopeless, unless He shall undertake your case. Will you let Him help you? He says He is more willing to give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him than parents are to give good gifts to their children. When the promise is so ample, why do you stand in the shadow?⁴*LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 15*

"I am the resurrection and the life," says Christ. [John 11:25.] "I am the way, the truth, and the life." [John 14:6.] "And whatsoever ye shall ask in My name that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in My name I will do it." "If ye love Me, keep My commandments." "And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you." [Verses 13-18.]⁴*LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 16*

Have you not, my sister, every encouragement? Gather up your confidence. Have you not endeavored not only to receive, but to believe in Christ in your daily life as His professed disciple?4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 17

Actions speak louder with Christ than words. There are those who conceal their want of true spiritual power by loud talk and assertions of large things. Truth that sanctifies the mind and heart is always simple and expressed in simple language. Loud noise and shouting that are destitute of the love of Christ pass as assumption without the signature of the divine—that heavenly grace which comes from genuine simplicity and bears the fruit of genuine heavenly origin. Jesus Christ, the great Teacher, worked in the most natural simplicity to meet the people where they were and to distinguish before them the real from the false.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 18

September 27, 1885

Basel

Rainy morning. Attended the morning meeting for the ministers. We had a room full of ministers and their wives. I opened the meeting with prayer. Many earnest, heartfelt prayers were made. There seemed to be a desire for more thorough consecration to God. The prayers went up as the heart of one man.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 19

When the prayers were ended, I made some remarks in regard to the workers in the vineyard of the Lord's being of one mind, of one judgment, ready to receive advice and to be counseled. We were of such material that the Lord could do nothing for us unless we submitted to His molding hand. We must be molded and worked as clay is molded in the hands of the potter.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 20

You may have thought it strange that I should say so much in regard to children being educated and disciplined, and taught submission and perfect obedience and respect to their parents. These lessons are essential for them in order that they may learn submission and obedience and reverence for God. These uneducated, neglected children, left to have their will and their way, carry the unsubmissive, untameable spirit into their religious experience, and the numerous church difficulties grow out of this deficient training in their childhood.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 21

We have our work made exceedingly hard. We meet strong wills, untameable wills, that know nothing of submission. They will argue their way and plead for their wills in the very face of the testimonies of the Spirit of God, and if they yield it is not with a good grace. We meet these lion wills that have been received as an inheritance and continually cultivated until they have grown with their growth and strengthened with their strength and when their way is crossed they rise like a lion in his strength.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 22

The will, the strong, set, determined will is essential for every one who embraces the truth: but this will must be sanctified through the truth and submerged in God's will. It must not bear the selfish mold, to wrestle for the supremacy, but the grace of Christ must be seen in the will, in the words, and in ways of every one of us. When our human way is crossed, we must not lose self-control. We must not push Christ from the soul temple and enthrone Satan there, but we must become meek and lowly of heart, be willing learners in Christ's school, and study carefully the perfect model in the life and character of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 23

Our will must be exercised to ever advance in the right way and never to be on the wrong side. Some consider it is a virtue ever to claim they are right. The testimonies of the Lord have followed some for many years. While they profess to believe them, they have not made essential changes in their character. If light is neglected, if you do not walk in the light, it becomes darkness to you.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 24

The Lord calls upon every one of us to set our mark higher; to reach no low and common standard, but to reach the Bible standard. The Lord would have us to exercise living faith. He would have Sister Martha Bourdeau to walk out of the darkness into the light and not to think so much of her imperfections that have enshrouded her soul. It is her privilege—and Sister Oyen's—to be free in Jesus, to make His promises her own. These souls have been doubting, distrusting, disbelieving. Jesus has not left them. Jesus has not dropped them. His mercies are free and full to them, but they do not accept Jesus as their own Saviour. He says, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man ... open the door I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me." [Revelation 3:20.] 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 25

Now do not keep the door of the heart closed and then mourn because Jesus is not your guest. He is knocking at the door of your hearts. Will you open the door? He invites His presence. Let Him in. Oh, let the dear Saviour in! He wants to give to you peace, happiness, joy, and His power. Will you accept the precious boon? Will you turn your face from Him and say, "He loves me not; I cannot see Him; I want to find Him." He is standing at the door of your heart. Open unto Him. 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 26

There were many precious testimonies borne. Sister Oyen spoke more hopefully. Said she could now see that her unhappiness for these years had been because she had not exercised faith. Her unbelief had shut the Saviour out of her heart. She was now determined to commit herself fully to Jesus Christ, and that every step should be a step heavenward by faith. Brother Oyen bore an excellent testimony that he had felt he was too unworthy to have any part in the work of God and he had better return to America; but he had received much light and believed it was the purpose of God that they should come to Europe to save his soul and his wife's soul, and he believed the Lord would work for them if they did the best they could. The meetings were of great value to them, both himself and his wife. 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 27

Brother Matteson's testimonies tell on the right side every time. He has been a blessing all through these meetings. Many humble confessions were made, many tears shed. Brother Daniel is having a blessed work done for him. He seems clothed and in his right mind. Sister Martha Bourdeau gave a good testimony. The power of darkness is broken—we know it is broken. She says she will trust in God. The Lord Jesus is her Saviour. She will dismiss her doubts. She will not any more deplore her darkness, but talk light—of Jesus and His love and His mercy and His willingness to save. 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 28

We do not see Brother R. F. Andrews coming to the light as we desire. Every one has given marked evidences of a great and precious work being done for them except Elder Andrews and Brother A. A. John, but we will not let the matter rest until they show that God is at work for them. Elder Andrews seems to be as cold as an iron wedge, and although he speaks in meeting it seems very formal. When the Lord is passing by to bless and enrich His people with His full salvation, why does not the man break through where the living waters flow freely and be refreshed?4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 29

I went to my room and wrote ten pages of important matter for the laborers in Europe.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 30

I think a cloud is over Brother Durland. He is not the man for Europe. He has not wisdom in expending money. He makes large expenditures. He needs to exercise economy else he will drain the treasury. Brother John's manner of labor will be after the same order—flourishing himself as a remarkable man to do a big work, neglecting, not seeing fruit, neglecting the work next him. The humble ways and means of reaching the people are what we all need.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 31

After reading this matter I talked some plain things, and for the first time since our meetings commenced Brother John surrendered his ideas and his set notions of laboring in large watering places. He has gone to Wales; but in the place of working with the Welsh and getting a knowledge of the language, he has situated himself in a large watering place and hired a house for above one hundred dollars a year, a portion of it to be used for a meetinghouse—just as though he were to raise up a large company at once that would demand any such facilities.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 32

The matter I read to them was such as to have the effect to change their notions and lead them in the place of sowing upon all waters, as Brother John, with his mistaken notions, has often repeated to them, to begin earnestly the sowing in the Lord's way—to sow the precious seeds of truth near by, to do the work in humility, to enter families, to have Bible readings. Sitting down as with the family, have them read the text, get them interested, pray with them. This will be of far greater account than so much sermonizing. Some men love to preach, but not to come to the few and in meekness instruct those who are in perplexity and darkness. This work must be taken up more fully by our ministering brethren. Come close in sympathy with needy souls.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 33

We had some precious talk over this matter. We have worked for love and union all through the meeting, and I think there is now better harmony. All accept the words I speak to them, although they are very close and pointed sometimes. In the name of Jesus Christ we are working to produce unity. Ministers who teach the Word must not work away from Christ's manner of teaching. The Great Physician of our souls and bodies was always simple in His instruction and approached the suffering and needy in the most simple way. In His lessons of instruction He met the people understandingly, speaking the heavenly, soul-saving truths in ordinary words which were understood. They were not set forms of speech, but in language to be understood.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 34

September 28, 1885

Basel

Rainy morning. There is snow all around us upon the mountains. I have had a precious night's rest. The burden seems to be dropping off from me as I speak in simple language. Attended the early morning meeting. After nearly all in the house had borne their testimony, I spoke for thirty minutes (this is reported). Good testimonies were borne, especially by our French brethren, of the blessings received.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 35

At eight o'clock we attended the ministers' meeting. I made some remarks. I told them I regretted very much that while others of our brethren seemed to be coming to the light, that I could not discern that Brother R. F. Andrews was making any advancement. His position had been for several years to be very well satisfied without the workings of God's Spirit in his heart. He had a hard, dark field of labor and in his testimonies alone could not burn his way to hearts full of prejudice and bound about with customs and commandments of men. I entreat of you, Elder Andrews, do not leave this place till you shall have the light and love of God to go with you. He can make your work successful, so that you will bring sheaves to the master. You want to humble your heart before God. You need His converting power of grace every day. You want to get away from thinking and talking of yourself and making your family a center.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 36

There is, my brethren, a disposition to make a great deal of ourselves as though me and my relations were special treasures before God above every one else. Oh, many precious opportunities we have let slip because we had not interest enough in souls and enough of the love of Jesus in our hearts to make the most of every opportunity to bring souls to the knowledge of the truth! Much of the preaching has had no saving salt in it. The words were good enough, but it needed the blood—the saving blood of sacrifice, the holy fire, the divine unction. We must present the truth as it is in Jesus.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 37

Missionaries for God, how sacred is your work! “Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord.” [Isaiah 52:11.] How many are preaching the truth who need to learn the first principles—their A B C’s—in the Christian life. Mercy and the love of God lie at the very foundation of Christianity, and the iron will needs to be melted over and we have Christ’s will. Brethren, we all need less of building up self and more of the saving grace of Jesus. The light reflected from the cross of Christ needs to flash in our pathway, that we may see what it cost the Son of God to redeem us from sin; see Jesus all bruised upon the accursed tree, and for us, that we might be saved from sin and perdition. Then shall we talk of trials? Shall we grieve over the sacrifice we have to make? God forbid.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 38

Brethren, you need to move in wisdom and not arrange things at home or around you in such a way that you will have to be double minded, serving self, serving tables while the work of saving souls is miserably done. Earthliness marks the lives of many. They do not act like God’s missionaries. They fill their houses with children and bring burdens upon the wife by adding to the family, when the end of all things is at hand. God requires that His servants, giving the last note of warning to the world, shall be serving Him with devotion, having their eyes single to the glory of God. Nothing is to come in between them and the work of God. Selfish interest must be laid aside. They are God's employed servants and must give themselves as did the apostles of old to searching the Scriptures and to prayer. Thus they come in close connection with God.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 39

Brother Andrews arose and made more thorough confessions. He seems to be broken for the first time, and I hope the work will go forward in his heart, for he needs it. He seemed to have no more of the missionary spirit than a man with no responsibility of the work upon him; but the crust is broken, and may the softening, subduing influence of God's Spirit lead him to humility and meekness.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 40

Elder Ertzenberger has come nobly to the work, humbling himself and confessing his backslidings. Elder Matteson is a transformed man. The peace of Christ is revealed in his countenance. He speaks of gaining precious victories over self, and there has not been a word or action on his part that we could take exceptions to. He is indeed in a good place. His testimonies are apt, meek, humble, with tears, and so sensible. Brother Daniel Bourdeau is a converted man.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 41

The Lord has wrought for him. He talks well and he has gained a precious victory. Brother Albert Vuilleumier spoke with deep feeling. He said this early morning meeting was the best he ever attended. Sister White's remarks went home to his heart and his wife also was greatly blessed. He said she wanted to embrace her and thank her and kiss her as she went by, for she had received such precious light.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 42

Well, all the testimonies were good. A. C. Bourdeau's testimonies have been good. There is a spirit of harmony and love. I know that we were needed here, for there were untameable spirits that needed the testimony and control of the Spirit of God to bring them into line. Brethren John and some others have at last yielded their plans, no longer to spread themselves in the largest places, but to work in a more humble way from house to house, giving Bible readings, seeking the Lord in humble, sincere prayer, and in this way reach hearts; and then they are prepared to engage in a larger effort as light is diffused with Bible readings they call in small companies and preach to these in a simple manner to reach the understanding of those entirely ignorant of our truth. But with his present manner of labor he would soon become wholly incapacitated to labor at all and would return as a martyr to America, having worn out his physical strength in this missionary field. God has not given Brother John any such work. He is not a man of remarkable abilities, and he cannot reach the outdoor crowd by open-air preaching.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 43

Mailed letters to Elder E. P. Daniels, eight pages; Sister Lockwood, four pages; May Walling, two pages; Sister Ings, four pages; Reuben Tapley, three pages.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 44

September 29, 1885

Basel

Last evening I spoke to the people upon the plan of labor—not branching out so wide, but taking the work close by their own door, laboring for those next to them, taking their Bibles and sitting down with families in a humble heart and opening to them the Scriptures. This work will be less expensive, require less outlay of means, and in the end there will be much more fruit to show for their labors if they will humble themselves.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 45

Brother Matteson gave an appropriate discourse. After the discourse Brother Albert Vuilleumier was ordained. Elder Lowe first prayed in English and then Brother D. T. Bourdeau in French, and then the ministers united in laying on of hands. Brother Whitney gave the charge: “I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at His appearing and kingdom: Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season.” [2 Timothy 4:1, 2.]4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 46

Attended the morning meeting—the closing meeting of our council. I made a few remarks at the close of the meeting, exhorting those present to fight the good fight of faith, to keep their hearts in the love of God, not to dishonor God with their unbelief. If doubts come into the mind, do not gratify Satan by expressing them. Talk faith, walk out by faith. Let all your actions testify that you believe and trust in God; and as the humble servants of God go forth into the great harvest field, pray for them that God would prepare their way and give them fruits of their labor. Our hearts have been drawn together at this meeting by the love of Christ. Let that love be cherished.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 47

Made a visit to the dentist. Had a lengthy talk with Sister Whitney. Mailed 24 pages to Elder Daniels; the same to Elder Butler.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 48

September 30, 1885

Basel

Our meetings are ended. Our brethren are returning to their homes. We part with tender feelings. In the forenoon about ten o'clock I call a select company together and read to them some things that were applicable to those present.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 49

October 1, 1885

Basel

It is cloudy. The weather is unsettled. At nine o'clock go to the dentist's.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 50

On returning we saw two girls about seventeen years old, one on either side of the tongue of a heavy cart like two horses. A large, broad belt was upon the shoulders of one; the other had a strap about her waist. The cart was loaded, and they were dragging it up hill. A stout man and a boy about ten years old were behind pushing. This would be a singular sight in America, but nothing unusual here. Women draw hand-wagons loaded with fruit or vegetables. We purchased a chair in the city. A woman delivered it, carrying it on her head. Women of the medium class go bareheaded in cold weather as well as in warm. We said good-bye to Brother Albert Vuilleumier and his good wife. We prepared matter of importance for publication. It rained very hard all the afternoon. Had a beautiful sunset.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 51

October 2, 1885

Basel

Slept none since three o'clock. I feel thankful to God for the good health I enjoy. It is a cloudy morning, but the clouds are passing away and we hope to have sunshine today. 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 52

At 9 o'clock visited the dentist. Had a severe and painful operation upon my teeth. Through the day devoted much time to writing. Visited with Brother Drew. Plans were discussed in regard to putting forth labor in London. After much prayer it is thought best to have select colporteurs to commence labor in that field in a quiet way and see what can be done with our publications. Still have interest through much prayer; move intelligently; no pompous spirit is to come into design or practice. If the chosen and accepted will pattern after Christ's example to instruct the people in all humility and kindly interest, the blessing of the Lord will be given them and will work with them. Be sure and seek the Lord for His wisdom, not exalting yourself. The large cities can be entered if you will watch unto prayer. When rough speeches are made, be not offended. Consider that you have a soul-saving message and that you can only obtain victories by walking humbly with the Lord Jesus. If the cities are entered, you must have the sure evidence that the heavenly angels must be your front guard and you rearward. It is the souls for whom Christ gave His precious blood that are perishing, and you must devise and plan to present Bible truths in simplicity to mothers and fathers, and to work as Christ worked. 4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 53

October 3, 1885

Basel

Slept well during the night, but my teeth are quite painful from yesterday's operation. We received this morning letters from Sister Lockwood, Brother Ramsey, Brother Ballou [?], May Walling. W. C. White received letters from Elders Butler and Whitney and Ramsey. We find much that is interesting and encouraging in these letters. We wish to answer them in a way to prove a blessing. Edith

Andrews came in; engaged in a long conversation with her in regard to her religious standing.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 54

October 4, 1885

Basel

Sick with severe pain in my head and teeth. Receive treatment of fomentation over my face. Obtain some relief. Converse with Sister Whitney. Edith Andrews has sent for a physician and had her lungs examined. Physician counsels her to leave Basel as soon as possible and go into the mountains where it is not warm, but steady cold air. The physician says she must not be surprised if she has a hemorrhage at any time. She need not be frightened.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 55

October 5, 1885

Basel

I am sick, suffering with fever on account of so much suffering with toothache. Visit the dentist. He gives me no relief. Edith Andrews, I learn, bled at the lungs this morning. We prepare to leave for Norway. Visit Edith; converse and pray with her. She has had another attack, spitting blood. Her case is critical. I prayed with her earnestly. We feel deeply over her case. We long to see her in a decidedly better state spiritually.4LtMs, Ms 24, 1885, par. 56

Ms 25, 1885

Diary, October 6 to October 14, 1885

[Copenhagen, Denmark]

October 6 - 14, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 5MR 157-160, 6MR 143, 295; EGWE 99-100.

First Visit to Denmark

October 6, 1885

We left Basel at half-past 9 P.M. We were taken by hack to little Basel which was over the Rhine. We were favored with a compartment to ourselves and could arrange the seats so that we rested tolerably well through the night. My teeth continue to trouble me. It is rainy.⁴*LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 1*

We make no change of cars until six in the morning [Oct. 6]. We stopped at the depot at Frankfort two hours. Here we found the depot arranged for the convenience of travelers. We spread our lunch upon the tables, obtained warm milk from restaurant, and enjoyed our breakfast. Then we took the train for Hamburg. Then we changed cars. Walked about one mile from one depot to another. Waited two hours for train. We found the small waiting room filled with tobacco smokers. We could not endure this. It was cold and rainy. We took our position in the only chair of the room where passengers entered to reach the ticket office to purchase their tickets and then waited. Others of our party had the privilege of standing. We rode three hours, and at twelve o'clock P.M. we came to Kiel depot and took the boat. We were furnished a stateroom, and past one o'clock we found rest in sleep.⁴*LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 2*

Through Germany we saw much that interested us. There were the ancient castles of history, built upon high ledges of rocks and almost inaccessible mountains. We felt some curiosity to learn the history of these now deserted castles. The houses of the farmers are built as are villages in America, but are crowded nearly as close together as in the most populated large cities. Then every man owns his farm which is not divided by fences. Hedges are planted in many places, which give a very pleasant appearance to the farms. The lands are in the highest state of cultivation. We were interested as we frequently came through the German forests. The houses are indescribable. They are composed of brick or stone plastered upon the outside, with joist frames in sight. They have small panes of glass for windows and steep roofs. These houses are very cold in winter. I wonder why the more comfortable and fully as convenient styles of building are not adopted here. These improvements would add much to their beauty, and to the comfort of the inhabitants, but it looks as if they had studiously kept out improvements and chosen to be uncomfortable.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 3

October 7 [8], 1885

We have still the suffering teeth, but it is a beautiful day. We reached Corsor and there changed from the six-hours' ride on the boat to cars again and ride until half-past ten A.M. when we reach Copenhagen.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 4

October 8, 1885

Copenhagen, Denmark

Brother Matteson and Brother Brorson and a Danish brother, a jeweler, met us on the arrival of the train, and we were gratified to see them. We took a hack to the house of Brother Matteson. They are comfortably situated, but up in the sixth story. They have no elevators in Denmark, so we were obliged to climb flight after flight of stairs. Went to the dentist in afternoon to have my troublesome tooth treated, which seemed inclined to cause me considerable suffering. The dentist was a man who drank beer, and his breath was very offensive to me. The treatment gave me more pain for a time, but some relief afterward.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 5

We look from our sky parlor down upon an extensive burying ground just across the way or road. It is very finely arranged with trees, shrubs, and flowers, showing much taste and labor. The graves are not raised in mounds. All is as level as the floor, and the walks are made of concrete. Close by this is a floral nursery and botanical garden with an abundance of choice flowers. There are flowers rich and rare in many of the windows of the stores. From our sleeping room we see a clear lake—artificial. We look down upon the roofs of houses, for we are far up in the world.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 6

A short distance from this is a hospital where the sick, wounded, and diseased are taken and provided with everything—room, food, bedding—for thirty cents per day. This is one of Copenhagen's great blessings, especially for the poorer class, who must suffer with want of proper care and conveniences if it were not for this merciful provision for rich and poor and suffering humanity in general. We see here the hand organs and strolling musicians seeking to gain a few pence by their music. If a child takes a fancy to them, then their efforts are rewarded with a mere pittance.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 7

October 8 [9], 1885

Copenhagen

It is rainy and windy. I walk to the dentist, which is a full mile. It ceased raining for a while. We returned by the lake. It is an extensive body of water. There are many swans in this lake. It is very clear and beautiful. There are many large, grand blocks which resemble Oakland and San Francisco and are altogether in advance of any place we have visited in Europe. There are finely constructed buildings, broad and high. Copenhagen has three hundred and twenty thousand inhabitants. Copenhagen is the city where the king of Denmark makes his home. At the present time the king of Russia is visiting the king of Denmark. These kingdoms are united through the marriage of their children.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 8

October 9, 1885

Copenhagen

There is an appointment out for me tonight. We descend the many steps, turn the corner of the block, then pass under an arch into a court and begin to ascend until we mount four pairs of stairs into the hall. No fire has been built in this hall through the season until that afternoon; and as the plastering is upon the brick, all that the fire could do was to draw out the dampness and make more lurid and objectionable the atmosphere. I felt that I was inhaling cold, damp air that made my lungs smart and caused them to be painful for some hours afterward. There was a little company assembled of intelligent, noble-looking men and women—Danes. They had accepted the truth through Brother Brorson's and Matteson's labors, and many of them had received the truth under difficulties that our American brethren know nothing of. I think that these who thus take hold of the truth will receive a greater reward according as their faith is tested. I spoke upon the barren fig tree. Luke 13:6-9.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 9

October 10, 1885

Copenhagen

I am sick through the cold that I have contracted. May the Lord help me, is my prayer. I venture into the hall again. Find the hall well filled. Spoke to the people from (John 15), first eight verses. The Lord did help me. His Holy Spirit rested upon me and upon the people. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 10

We had a social meeting after the discourse. Testimonies were borne, intelligent and interesting, that made my heart rejoice. These testimonies evidenced that the testimonies of the Spirit of God that had been translated from English into Danish were doing the very work the Lord designed they should do—making the Word of God more plain to their understanding, presenting before them the high standard they must reach, leading them to heart searching, to repentance, to putting away of sin, and to pray more, to read their Bibles more, and to love Jesus with the whole heart. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 11

One brother stated that when he listened to Sister White's impressing upon them that they must be holy and pure or they could never enter heaven, he felt that his case was almost hopeless; but when she stated that sanctification was not an instantaneous work, not an emotion, but the work of a lifetime, then he was encouraged and decided that day by day he would pray, he would put away sin, he would be an overcomer and gain an experience daily until the warfare should close. All expressed their gratitude to God that He had sent Sister White away from America to this country. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 12

All stated they had read my books and articles in the paper and it had been to them great light and blessing. With many tears they expressed their gratitude. It is an encouragement to me to see that the light given through the testimonies reaches hearts that never saw the instrument that the Lord has employed. The Lord speaks to these souls by His Spirit. They find comfort and encouragement and hope. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 13

October 11, 1885

Copenhagen

It is raining this morning. Brother Matteson preached this forenoon and left an appointment for me at five o'clock this afternoon in the city. We are now out from the hustle and confusion of the city. Wrote eighteen pages. I had not been well all day and felt that unless the Lord helped me I could not speak. I cast myself wholly upon my Saviour. The hall was in a basement in the place of being up high. It was practically a cellar. The room was full. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 14

I spoke from the first epistle of John, third chapter: "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God," etc. The Lord gave me much of His Spirit and power. I seemed to be taken away from myself, and the Lord spoke through me. The people listened with deepest interest. Appointments were given me for Monday evening. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 15

I felt as deeply in earnest for the small congregation before me as if ten thousand were present. I have felt in doing the work of God I must do my best on every occasion, if there are no more than two hearers. Their souls are precious in the sight of God, and they need to receive the very best instruction we can give them because they have manifested interest enough to come to hear. God wants us to do our very best on all occasions and under all circumstances. “He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much.” [Luke 16:10.] The Lord will not accept of careless, indolent work at any time, for the few or for the many. We are His employed servants to bear His message to all who will hear it.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 16

For nearly all my speeches I have my interpreters, often two, who speak to the hearers. I have to keep close attention, and my interpreters—reporting in two languages, and sometimes three—are at work before the different nationalities.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 17

October 12, 1885

Copenhagen

Wrote fifteen pages today. It is raining, then clears away a little.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 18

We bid farewell to some of our Danish brethren who are obliged to leave for their homes. One Brother C. C. Hansen had been convicted upon the Sabbath by reading his Bible alone. But about this time Brother Brorson came to the place and gave “New Testament Sabbath” to the Methodist preacher. He read it and gave it to Brother Hansen, whose mind had been exercised on baptism. The object was to quiet his mind, for here is this little tract the Seventh-day Sabbath was enjoined by the Word of God; and the Baptists, while they made so much of baptism, did not obey the institution of the Sabbath. He would impress Brother Hansen that as the seventh day was binding from the Scriptures and was not kept, so baptism, even if enjoined, might be neglected, for the Sabbath was certainly as important as baptism. Here, then, the tract was in Brother Hansen’s possession, and he read it; but it had altogether a different effect on him than the Methodist preacher designed. He read it again and again. He wept over it, prayed over it, attempted to keep the Sabbath but to keep Sunday just the same. He had rather a remarkable experience. He was wrought upon by the Spirit of God. He left keeping the Sabbath two or three times, but Brother Brorson gave him help at this time. The Tidende came to him, containing the view I had of some who received tracts, read and prayed over them, and came out on the Sabbath. This was exactly his case. And then the testimonies came to him and he read them and they were a great blessing to him. He believed they were as the voice of God to him, and now he is firm in the Sabbath and I am rejoiced. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 19

Brother and Sister Matteson and Willie and myself rode ten miles on the cars into the country. We saw much that was interesting—very fine houses, large fisheries, many nets that were hung to dry. We walked out upon the pier, looking into the ocean. The water for a long distance was as clear as crystal. The bottom was pure white sand, with some mounds of moss, which made the sight very beautiful. We walked to the park. It is a forest of beech trees principally, but there are some evergreens also interspersed. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 20

These pleasure resorts are for rich and poor, high or low. Every pains is taken to make them attractive, convenient with seats, and beautiful with flowers. This forest is four miles through. There are the most beautiful graveled roads, smooth as a floor, and the forest is kept like a very fine cultivated garden. No underbrush, nothing offensive or that will litter in any way. We had not time to go far in the forest, as I had an appointment to speak in the hall in the evening. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 21

I have not been well through the day, but walked about one mile to the meeting. The room was crowded. There were many not of our faith present, and they looked like intelligent men and women. I spoke from Titus 2:10-14. They listened with the greatest attention. I sought to impress upon them our duty to God and His high claims upon us. Several strangers came to shake hands with me. We rode home in the hack. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 22

The cold made me hoarse, but I am glad I did not disappoint the people. There were several who I afterwards learned were convicted of the truth, understood it all, but have not faith and confidence in God to come out and be separate from the world and lift the cross in obeying the commandments of God. Pleasure loving, dancing, and amusement are that which the people in Copenhagen are living for. From this city missionaries have been sent out to heathen lands to preach the gospel. But they are in far greater need of missionaries here in Copenhagen. It is a city full of skeptics and infidels and socialists. This large and beautiful city needs missionaries to preach Christ and Him crucified. What is to arouse the people? What can arrest their attention to have a care for their souls?4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 23

October 13, 1885

Copenhagen

It is a beautiful morning. I am thankful to God I am as well as I am this morning. We visit the dentist, and he advises the filling of the tooth that has had the nerve destroyed. I am not prepared to do this yet. It feels very uncomfortable, and it may have to be taken out.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 24

Brother Matteson, Willie, Sarah, and I walk to the large and beautiful building of the Panopticon. Here are the great men of the kingdom in wax, life-like figures. They appear exactly as if alive. We saw the king of Denmark and his wife, the princes, the king of Wales and his wife. She is a very beautiful woman, the daughter of the king of Denmark. The king of Norway and his wife both are noble looking, especially the king. The view was much better than to have seen them in life. All the historic men were dressed exactly as was the custom of their day and time. It seemed difficult to think that these were not living, breathing human beings before us. The expression of the eye and the countenance seemed so perfectly natural.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 25

We passed through a beautiful park decorated with flowers and shrubs of a great variety and fine trees. In this park great pains and skill had been exercised to make it attractive as a place to please the senses. There was an artificial lake with swans to make it seem homelike and attractive. This lake is in winter supplied with warm water so that there will be no freezing or discomfort to the swans in winter. We walked through the park, which is in the very center of the city. It is large and very beautiful. Flowers, shrubs, and trees beautify the place and make it very attractive. There were seats all through the park and an artificial lake.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 26

The city is extensive. It has broad streets which give plenty of room without crowding, large open spaces, ample grounds around large buildings. It is a curious sight to see ships standing in the inlet of water, crowded as thick as possible—many loaded with produce, vegetables, and fruit—and on either side of this water crowded with ships are large mercantile buildings in solid blocks. I never saw anything to resemble Copenhagen. To all intents and purposes the ships look as though they compose a part of the city.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 27

If the worship and devotion to God were as great even as the devotion to selfish pleasure and above the worship of the creature, it would be a most remarkable place. But as I look upon these beautiful things in nature and art, I call to mind beautiful Eden which was Adam's home. Their yielding to temptation, their transgression of the law of God lost for them beautiful Eden.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 28

Oh, sin! How it blights and mars everything! The beautiful groves and forests and rich and varied scenery of the world, before it was deluged with the flood, made it surpassingly lovely, but there was a blight because of sin. Men transgressed the law of God; and the Lord said He would destroy man, for the thoughts and imaginations of his heart were evil and only evil continually. [Genesis 6:5-7.] They put God out of their thoughts. All their mind was engrossed in selfish enjoyment to gratify their own desires and leave the God of heaven out of their thoughts. They corrupted their ways before God, and their evil works defiled the beautiful earth. They worshiped the things their own hands had made, and violence and crime became almost universal, and the Lord washed the earth of the moral pollution with a flood. The beauties which delight the senses, both natural and artificial, will be of value and a blessing as men treat them. If they recognize God's goodness, His greatness and His power, in His created works, look up through nature to nature's God and worship the Creator of the heavens and of the earth and make Him first and supreme, then the enjoyment of all these things will be of that character as not to detract from the glory of God.4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 29

October 14, 1885

Copenhagen

It is foggy this morning, but think it will clear away. Last night I spoke in the hall to all that it would seat. They listened with interest. My text was Psalms 16:8, 9. I had much freedom in speaking. I felt like saying something to arouse them from their lethargy and stupor. It seems to be a difficult matter to create an interest in religious things in these large cities; and yet this field, hard as it is, must be more promising than India or China; and why should not those who have a desire for missionary work come to this irreligious, Christless city and make some efforts here? How strange Copenhagen is sending missionaries to far-off places to convert the heathen, when there are just as great heathen—as far as the knowledge of God and His Word are concerned—right in their midst; but pleasure, amusement, dancing and card playing, gambling, beer drinking, and deplorable ignorance which always follow in the train of Christless indulgence are flooding the city. In passing men and women upon the street, you are compelled to have your senses regaled with the strong scent of beer mingled with tobacco. But as far as this is concerned, the tobacco habit is as generally followed in America as in Denmark, and there is less regard to real politeness that is due to one another than I have seen in Denmark. 4LtMs, Ms 25, 1885, par. 30

Ms 26, 1885

Diary, October 15 to October 30, 1885

Sweden

October 15-30, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in TDG 299, 3SM 313-316; 2MR 153; 3MR 373, 383-389; 6MR 94; 9MR 99-100; 3Bio 320; EGWE 100, 105, 108-109.

First Visit to Sweden

October 15, 1885 On the steamer which takes us to Malmo, which means "island."4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 1

We take the cars for Stockholm where we remain over the Sabbath. It is a beautiful morning. The sun is shining in its glory. We have just visited the dentist, who filled my tooth that I have suffered with for the last three weeks. It was improperly treated. Yesterday was a day of great pain to me. I am much reduced. I have labored steadily in writing and in speaking every day for five days in succession.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 2

Last night a lady visited us at six o'clock to have an interview with us. She has recently professed religion, and Brother Brorson became acquainted with her. She heard him speak and embraced the Sabbath, but she had no experience; and when all went to the conference at Basel, the priests had many talks with her and told her the Sabbath was not the day, that Sunday was the Sabbath. Her friends are all worldly, and they lead her to the world to concerts, theaters, and into parties of pleasure. She went to a pleasure resort while Brorson was in Basel and became confused, and the truth had but a feeble hold on her.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 3

Since we came, and she hears me speak, her conscience is again aroused. She feels she is very wicked, has been a sinner so long, she did not feel that she was worthy to sit by my side or converse with me. She says she has an engagement with the family of a duke, with good wages, to instruct their children in the German language. She will have to go for a time, she says, because of her engagement. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 4

I presented before her the engagement or claim of God upon her which she should respect. She says her life has been one of pleasure, living in gay company, and she has been with those whose only thoughts are in eating, drinking, frolicking, and amusement. I asked her if her past life in this respect had satisfied her mind. She said, "No." I asked her if she was really happy. She said she was not; and since she had heard the discourses upon the Bible Sabbath, she felt a great want inwardly. Her inner life was very miserable. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 5

The mother was a worldly-enjoying woman, loving pleasure parties and theaters. She has spent very much money upon her own pleasure; and should she become one of us, they would call her a fool and crazy. I told her that Paul said the preaching of the cross of Christ is to them that perish foolishness, but to them which are saved it is the wisdom of God and the power of God. [1 Corinthians 1:18, 24.] She said she could take no pleasure now in hearing the high church preach. It was all form and display, but no living godliness. They mingled pleasure and amusement, card playing, drinking, dancing all up together. All was right and blameless in their eyes. The doctrines of the Bible and the character of the life of the Christian there described were entirely unlike these pleasure-loving, theater-going, dancing professors. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 6

I talked with her very earnestly, telling her that the Lord Jesus expected her to use her talents to His glory. She said she had so little talent. "And that little talent," I said, "you will wrap in a napkin and hide it in the world. If you can be acceptable with your education and influence to become a member of the titled of earth, could you not take that talent and employ it in the service of Jesus Christ? Could you not use all the ability God has given you to do work in connection with His cause? Your talents, your health, your strength, your intellect, your time belong to God. He has bought you with an infinite price. If you use what talents you have to the glory of God, you will have more and increased talents to use, and thus your sphere of influence will widen and increase. If you do all you can on your part, the Lord will do abundantly on His part and bring divine power to combine with human effort so that you may be a victor day by day and obtain increased ability to use to His name's glory." 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 7

I was thankful for the privilege of this interview, and I have great desire that special labor shall be given to this unsatisfied, perplexed soul. This soul in darkness must have the Light of life. I felt so thankful that in my home life an altogether higher standard had been given me, that I had not so many discouragements and erroneous theories and continual examples of erroneous, dangerous, cheap religious instruction to overcome. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 8

October 16, 1885

Stockholm

We rode all night in the cars. Made us beds as best we could on the seats. Slept considerable in this little compartment. Brother Matteson and Willie went into another compartment. At eight o'clock we reached Stockholm. Found Brother Norlin was waiting for us at the cars. We took a hack to his house. Went up four long pairs of stairs. This was a new house. Only a few rooms were finished. This brother occupied one good-sized room, and the kitchen, which was used as well by another family. His wife is doing any kind of work she can get, and he is doing missionary or colporteur work. They are poor, but very excellent people. We passed through the halls up four pair of stone stairs, past many workmen who were carrying on their plastering and carpentering. We felt that we were surrounded by ice; and when we reached the room designed for us learned it had been plastered only two weeks, and that directly on the brick walls, as is the fashion in this country. It was chilly and damp. We feared we should have to go to a hotel and secure a room, and then neither of us could talk Swedish and we could not make our wants known. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 9

While we were contemplating the situation, Sister Johanson came in. We made her acquaintance. She said she had come to invite us to her home. She had made all provision for us and wished Sarah and me to be guests at her house. She is a very excellent Swedish sister. Can speak some English, whereas the brother and his wife we were then with could not speak English at all. We left our good brother and sister and came quite a distance in a new part of the city. Their house is four-story, built on a hill on a rock. We can look over one part of the city. Her husband has not accepted the truth. Says it is truth but his business stands in the way. He is a salesman. He is very kind and attentive to us. We are up in the world. We climb three long flights of stairs. This climbing stairs so much is not good for me. We have their parlor. A very nice bed lounge is prepared for us. We slept very well last night.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 10

I spoke to the people—a hall full—Friday night [October 16] from John 15. “I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman.” [Verse 1.] The people listened with good interest. After meeting closed a young man introduced himself as an interpreter and offered to interpret for me. Brother Matteson is much better interpreting English into Danish than into Swedish. This young man is not of our faith; says he was converted two years ago in Australia. Has studied the English language in America. There are many who wish he would interpret, for he has so much better knowledge of the Swedish language than Brother Matteson; but I shall say nothing to bring this about, for it might not make the best impression of Brother Matteson. We rode to our temporary home in a hack. We could come in street cars, but we have to change cars to make the journey.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 11

October 17, 1885

Stockholm

I feel nearly sick. The hall and stairway reeking with water we passed through to reach our first stopping place were so damp and cold I became chilled through, and I could not get warm for several hours. My lungs and spine were cold, as if cold water were poured upon them. This family are willing to do all they can for us, but I am not in a condition of health to be traveling this time of year where there is fog and cold, chilling atmosphere nearly the whole time. I pray for the Lord to help me, to strengthen and relieve me of my infirmities, that I may magnify His name in bearing the message He gives me to the people.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 12

Brother Matteson suggests that it would please the people if I speak less about duty and more in regard to the love of Jesus. But I wish to speak as the Spirit of the Lord shall impress me. The Lord knows best what this people needs. I spoke in the forenoon [Sabbath, October 17] from Isaiah 58. I did not round the corners at all. If this is Brother Matteson's work, let him do it; but it is not my work. My work is to elevate the standard of piety and true Christian life and urge the people to put away their sins and be sanctified through the truth. I tried to impress them with the necessity of strictly observing the Sabbath according to the commandment.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 13

We had a precious social meeting. Many intelligent testimonies were borne, which Brother Matteson interpreted. These testimonies expressed their thankfulness that the Lord sent them help from America and expressed their gratitude to God for the truth and for the increased light Sister White had given them. They could see, they said, as they had not done before, the necessity of greater strictness in keeping the Sabbath and could sense the offensive character of sin, and they would make earnest efforts to put sin away. Some expressed with tears their regret that they could not communicate with us, but were thankful that when we reach heaven we can all have one language and enjoy each other's society. They spoke of receiving great light from the writings of God's servant, but they never expected she would visit them. The testimonies were all given in a tender, melting spirit, and it was evident that these precious souls had indeed a love for the truth, and the very similar experience to all our brethren in America.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 14

We call this a good day. The Lord strengthened me to speak to His people with clearness and power. Some can understand English well, and they will be more benefited than those who cannot understand English.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 15

There is a spurious experience that is prevailing now everywhere in regard to the love of Jesus—that we must dwell on the love of Jesus, that faith in Jesus is all we need—but these souls must be instructed that the love of Jesus in the heart will lead to humility of life and obedience to all His commandments. He that saith, I know Him and keepeth not His commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him. The love of Jesus that goes no further than the lips will not save any soul, but be a great delusion.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 16

Those who reject the truth of the Bible do it under a pretense of loving Jesus. Those who love Jesus will reveal that love by being obedient children. They will be doers of the Word and not hearers only. They will not be continually pleading, “All that we have to do is to believe in Jesus.” This is true in the fullest sense, but they do not comprehend, they do not take it in its fullest sense. To believe in Jesus is to take Him as your Redeemer, as your Pattern. All who love Jesus must follow His example. They must connect themselves with Jesus as closely as the branch is connected with the living vine. They are abiding in Jesus, and Jesus is abiding in them, and they are doers of His Word, partakers of His divine nature.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 17

Some who claim to love Jesus are deceivers, and all their religion is lip service. It does not transform the character. It does not reveal the inward working of grace. They do not show that they have ever learned in Christ’s school the lessons of meekness and lowliness of heart. They do not show by life or character that they are wearing Christ’s yoke or lifting Christ’s burdens. They are not reaching the standard given them in God’s Word, but a human standard. Their life is not pure like Christ’s life. They are not being refined and ennobled by His Spirit. The way of truth they have not known, and they are of that number who will say, “Lord, Lord, open unto us. We have taught in the streets. We have done many wonderful works.” [Matthew 7:21, 22; Luke 13:25, 26.] But Christ will say of them, “I never knew you. Depart from Me, ye workers of iniquity. You were on the side of My great adversary, who transgressed My law. You worked with him to make void the law of God. While you professed to love Me you practiced this deception and led souls away from obedience into the path of transgression. Your claims to love Me were the putting on of the livery of heaven to serve My worst enemy. You identified yourself as among those who were making void My law, and your portion is with the hypocrites and unbelievers.” [Matthew 7:23; Luke 13:27.]4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 18

October 18, 1885

Stockholm

I rested well during the night. Have written twelve pages to be sent to Sister Ings and Reuben Tapley [?]. Wrote six pages to my twin sister Lizzie.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 19

I attended meeting. Spoke from Jeremiah: “Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches; but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord which exercise loving kindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the Lord.” *Jeremiah 9:23, 24.*4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 20

The hall was crowded to the fullest extent. There could not be found standing room for all who would come in. The ladies were most of them seated, but a crowd filled the aisle and around the door. They listened with the deepest interest. The hall was so densely packed one woman fainted. If the seed sown fell into goodly soil then we are satisfied. But accommodations for places of meetings are not healthy or safe for me. I have fears of permanent lung difficulty. My prayer day by day is, Keep me, my Saviour, and permit not that I shall leave this country before my work is done.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 21

October 19, 1885

Stockholm

Sent letter, four pages, to Brother Lockwood. We rested well last night and feel very thankful to God for His mercy and kindness to us. We praise the Lord that we have been able to speak to the people in such freedom and power. The Lord has helped me, for I have suffered much pain and feebleness. I praise the Lord for His goodness. I will not fail or be discouraged. We attended evening meeting. I spoke to the congregation upon the coming of the Lord. "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be when the Son of Man shall be revealed." [Luke 17:26, 30.] I think it will prove a benefit to me to have to speak through an interpreter. I rest my lungs, but my mind has to keep a close connection with my subject.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 22

October 20, 1885

Stockholm

We are having a snowstorm. The children and getting out their sleds and are full of joy at the prospect. Snowed throughout the day, with considerable wind. We have had about two inches of snow. We designed to look about the city; but this cannot be, for it is very bad out of the house. Wrote twenty-two pages of important matter.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 23

I explained some things to Sister Johanson. She inquired why [Dr. Charles] Lee left us. I told her he went away from us himself. When he embraced the truth he was a spiritualist, and he said he healed many sick by spiritualism and he stated that he had a terrible battle all the time. He could not come in where any one was sick and converse with them, but his arms would begin to jerk and he would be compelled by a power he could not control to lay his hands upon him. He had some very singular ideas which are contrary to our faith. We could not sanction his teaching. He always maintained great independence and great self-confidence. He would not harmonize with anyone, but made himself very disagreeable. He stated in his book that he was discarded because he would not bow down and worship Mrs. White, but this is all false for we believe in worshiping no living man nor praising human beings. This statement is without the semblance of truth.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 24

October 21, 1885

Stockholm

We left Stockholm at eight o'clock. Brother and Sister Johanson rode with us in the hack to the depot, and there were quite a number of brethren and sisters who came to the depot to speak a parting word with us as we stepped on the cars. I felt my heart knit with these dear friends in love, and I was so very sorry that most of them could not understand me; neither could I understand them, except through an interpreter.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 25

We rode in the cars until two o'clock. At one we spread out our lunch and ate heartily of our simple fare. I read over and corrected an important article while the train was in motion. We changed cars at two, remained two hours in depot. W. C. White and I took a long walk. The air was cool and bracing and it is doing me good. We stepped on board the train and rode until seven o'clock. We came to the station called Kopparberg, meaning copper mines. The train went no farther, and we found rooms in a hotel. We had good rooms and good beds. The sky tonight is without a cloud. The stars are shining. The moon is bright, and everything out of doors looks lovely.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 26

The people are now preparing for cold weather—double windows are in all the rooms. The cracks are papered. Between the two sashes there are from four to six inches. In this space is laid a roll of cotton or batting, prepared for just such a purpose, to keep out the cold air. One pane of glass in both sashes is left to open on hinges, and thus have unobstructed ventilation. There are large copper mines and iron mines in this place and towns near by. The dwelling houses are small and painted red. Many of the small dwelling houses are green as the grass in the fields. They prepare them by putting birch bark on the roof and then turf over that, which makes the house warm and free from dampness. The grass grows on this turf, keeping it fresh and alive, and sometimes flowers are planted in the turf. The appearance is rather nice, but very singular to say the least.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 27

October 22, 1885

Kopparberg, Sweden

It is a beautiful day. Clear and cold. We learned we could not leave this place until twelve o'clock P.M. Thursday. We called for breakfast. The custom in Sweden is to keep in houses and good-sized hotels a table whereon is placed bread, butter, cold meat, canned fish, and several other articles of food. It is the custom for all who are entertained to go to this table and help themselves, always cutting the bread and butter first at this large table. There are several smaller tables. If you call for food and specify the articles you want, they are brought to you; and when anything on the large table is desired, the guests arise, walk to the table and help themselves, and take it to the small table; but at the large general table, you remain standing to cut bread and butter. It looked so odd to see men, one after another, come in, go to the long table, eat their bread and butter—walking about, talking and eating—then sit at the small tables for a special dish, but eat and walk and talk from the long table until the dish they called for is brought in, and they take it to the small table and eat it, but always first eat the “butter goose”—which is bread and butter—at the large table. There is no stinginess manifested. There is a most liberal supply placed before you, and you can eat plentifully of any and every dish for 40 cents each.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 28

From this place I wrote six pages and sent a letter of this written matter yesterday and today to Brother E. P. Daniels at Healdsburg, California. Wrote three pages concerning our travels. I had some conversation with Elder Matteson in regard to whether children of unbelieving parents would be saved. I related that a sister had with great anxiety asked me this question, stating that some had told her that the little children of unbelieving parents would not be saved. This we should consider as one of the questions we are not at liberty to express a position or an opinion upon, for the simple reason that God has not told us definitely about this matter in His Word. If He thought it were essential for us to know, He would have told us plainly. The things He has revealed are for us and for our children. There are things we do not now understand. We are ignorant of many things that are plainly revealed. When these subjects which have close relation to our eternal welfare are exhausted, then it will be ample time to consider some of these points that some are unnecessarily perplexing their minds about.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 29

I know that some questioned whether the little children of even believing parents would be saved, because they have had no test of character and all must be tested and their character determined by trial. The question is asked, "How can little children have this test and trial?" I answer that the faith of the believing parents covers the children, as when God sent His judgments upon the first-born of the Egyptians.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 30

The word of God came to the Israelites in bondage to gather their children into their houses and to mark the doorposts of their houses with blood from lamb, slain. This prefigured the slaying of the Son of God and the efficacy of His blood, which was shed for the salvation of the sinner. It was a sign that the household accepted Christ as the promised Redeemer. It was shielded from the destroyer's power. The parents evidenced their faith in implicitly obeying the directions given them, and the faith of the parents covered themselves and their children. They showed their faith in Jesus, the great Sacrifice, whose blood was prefigured in the slain lamb. The destroying angel passed over every house that had this mark upon it. This is a symbol to show that the faith of the parents extends to their children and covers them from the destroying angel.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 31

God sent a word of comfort to the bereaved mothers of Bethlehem that the weeping Rachels should see their children coming from the land of the enemy. Christ took little children in His arms and blessed them and rebuked the disciples who would send away the mothers, saying, "Suffer little children and forbid them not, to come unto Me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 16:14. Christ blessed the children brought to Him by the faithful mothers. He will do this now, if mothers will do their duty to their children and teach their children and educate them in obedience and submission. Then they will bear the test and will be obedient to the will of God, for parents stand in the place of God to their children.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 32

Some parents allow Satan to control their children, and their children are not restrained, but are allowed to have wicked tempers, to be passionate, selfish, and disobedient. Should they die, these children would not be taken to heaven. The parents' course of action is determining the future welfare of their children. If they allow them to be disobedient and passionate, they are allowing Satan to take them in charge and work through them as shall please his satanic majesty; and these children, never educated to obedience and to lovely traits of character, will not be taken to heaven, for the same temper and disposition would be revealed in them.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 33

I said to Brother Matteson. Whether all the children of unbelieving parents will be saved we cannot tell, because God has not made known His purpose in regard to this matter, and we had better leave it where God has left it and dwell upon subjects made plain in His Word. This is a most delicate subject. Many unbelieving parents manage their children with greater wisdom than many of those who claim to be children of God. They take much pains with their children, to make them kind, courteous, unselfish, and to teach them to obey; and in this the unbelieving show greater wisdom than those parents who have the great light of truth, but whose works do not in any wise correspond with their faith.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 34

Another question upon which we had some conversation was in regard to the elect of God—that the Lord would have a certain number, and when that number was made up, then probation would cease. These are questions you or I have no right to talk about. The Lord Jesus will receive all who come unto Him. He died for the ungodly, and every man who will come may come. Certain conditions are to be complied with on the part of man, and if he refuses to comply with the conditions he cannot become the elect of God. If he will comply, he is a child of God; and Christ says if he will continue in faithfulness, steadfast and immovable in his obedience, He will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but will confess his name before His Father and before His angels. [Revelation 3:5.] God would have us think and talk and present to others those truths which are plainly revealed; and all have naught to do with these subjects of speculation, for they have no special reference to the salvation of our souls.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 35

At twelve A.M. we stepped on board the train to make one more change before we reached Grythytted. We rode about thirty minutes, then changed cars. After one hour's delay we again took the cars. There was no second-class, so we decided to take third-class, although we might be subjected to tobacco smoke. We could save two dollars and seventy-five cents by doing this, riding on uncushioned seats. We were favored in having the compartment to ourselves.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 36

October 23, 1885

Grythyttched, Sweden

We reached this place about four o'clock. At the depot we met Brother Hedin and wife who led the way to their house. We were welcomed heartily by these dear friends. We regretted we could not speak to them in their own tongue. We were accommodated with two good rooms, well warmed, and good beds. The sky is cloudless. Stars and moon are shining in the heavens. I was unable to sleep for some hours after retiring.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 37

In the morning a fire is kindled in the stove, which is built in the house of manufactured material. The surface looks like porcelain, white as milk and highly polished. These reach to the top of the room, and a fire is made in them as in a fire place. The draft at the top is opened. The doors are opened and we have a bright, cheerful fire which throws out its heat into the room. When the wood is burned down to a coal, then the draft is closed, the doors are closed, and this whole structure becomes warm and remains warm all through the day. At seven o'clock we were brought a cup of hot water and milk and bread.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 38

At eight o'clock we were called to breakfast. There was a round table with a cloth upon it and a flower pot in the center, and bread, a quarter of uncut cheese, hot milk, and fried cakes, which constituted our breakfast. There were no plates at first, two knives and two forks. We were invited to come to the table, all standing. A blessing was asked and then we stood around the table, took something in our hands, and walked about, talking and eating. Plates were then brought in, and we put our food upon the plates, and I was offered a chair. Some seated themselves on the lounge, others walked about, eating with the plate in their hands. All the while when we wished anything, we would take it from any part of the table. This was a new style to us, but we shall get used to it, I think. After the meal is finished, the guests shake hands with the landlord and landlady, thanking them for the food.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 39

We walked out through the town and had the opportunity of looking into the old State Church. The first room we entered was the priest's study. There was rather of a priestly chair by a table, two small libraries of the priest's books, two windows. A more miserable, dismal place I would not want to be in. We then entered the auditorium. There was a circular altar with a cushioned seat for the communicants to kneel upon when taking the holy wafer and a place within the circle for the priest, for him to wait upon the people. Then in another corner of the house was an hourglass to measure the hours, and there were many steps which led up to the pulpit. It was very high. The seats were most uncomfortable—torturing to occupy. The backs had a piece of wood running the whole length of the seats, pressing you forward. The seats were very narrow, the backs high, and everything was cold and uncomfortable and seemed like a product of the Dark Ages. Everything looked as though it had been asleep for many hundreds of years—at least since Luther's day.⁴*LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 40*

As I looked at this building, very large and roomy, constructed with logs and shingled upon the outside with tile-like shingles, I thought of the worshipers. They had been standing in positions generations back without making any advance. Old arbitrary laws made long ago, the most cruel and heartless, they had not life or light enough to change. They were retaining barbaric practices in their laws, not discerning the unreasonableness of their proceedings in this enlightened age. God had said to His people, "Go forward" [Exodus 14:15]; but this old State Church said, "No, I will stand still; I will do as my fathers have done before me." If they had only lived up to the light and been as conscientious as their fathers were, then they would have been better men. But they did not even have the piety their fathers had, and they will not walk in the increased light which shines from God's Word upon their pathway. They do not do as their fathers would have done had they been in their place.⁴*LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 41*

The order of God in relation to His people is progress or continual advancement heavenward in the way of truth and righteousness. The necessary result of continuance in well-doing is increased knowledge and love of God till the warfare is over. But the worshipers in this church have the same spirit that the popes and priests had against those who embrace and walk in the light. The claims of the gospel are far in advance of their faith or obedience. They do not feel inclined to comply with the conditions on which hang the fulfilment of the promise. They jealously claim honor from men and the world, but they are unacquainted with the wisdom and power from above. They cannot reckon themselves dead unto sin or alive unto God.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 42

This church cannot present the divine credentials that her doctrines and authority are of God. She does not say, "The works that I do bear witness of me" (John 5:36); and "If I do not the works of My Father, believe Me not." John 10:37. Taking the name of Lutheran, she refers back to Luther, his works, his testimony; and while she has not cherished his spirit as a reformer, she reckons herself as the only lawful inheritor of the blessings God has promised to His church, as did the Jews. But she has turned away from the holy commandment, refused to walk in the brighter path of truth that would have renewed her knowledge and true holiness and given her the victory over the world. She is sitting in darkness, and her condemnation is great in proportion as the grace and truth proffered her were abundant and powerful.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 43

October 24, 1885

Grythyttehed, Sweden

It is a beautiful morning. I rode to the meeting hall, a distance of one mile. The house was crowded. Many could scarcely find standing room. I spoke from Colossians 1:9-11. I had some freedom in speaking to the people.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 44

Walked about one mile to the meeting. Found a house full and spoke to them from Philippians 4:4-7. The Lord gave me freedom in speaking. He strengthened me, for in the morning I felt considerable weakness and trembling. Many were affected to tears and manifested eager attention as I addressed them. After I had ceased speaking we had a social meeting, and Elder Matteson interpreted the testimonies borne into English. There were many good, intelligent testimonies, showing genuine experience in the truth of God. I then shook hands with all and walked back to my home.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 45

October 25, 1885

Grythyttehed, Sweden

We rise at six. Passed many hours restless and feverish. We had good ventilation. It is snowing this morning. Shall attend meeting in a snow storm in Sweden. Brother Matteson is in meeting this morning for the benefit of those who have taken great pains to come from all the region round about to this meeting. I am weak this morning and feel unable to speak to the people.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 46

I attended meeting, and the house where they were assembled was full to overflowing. They listened with the deepest attention while I spoke from Daniel 12, first verse. I felt unable to speak, but the Lord gave me strength and lifted me up above my infirmities, and I felt that I could speak at much greater length than one hour and ten minutes; but when I returned to our home, I was not able to sit up and could not take refreshments. I continued to be feeble through the day. Sister Ekman sent me a plate of apples and kind greetings with regret for my sickness. I am sorry to cause any one anxiety.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 47

October 26, 1885

Grythyttehed, Sweden

We rise this morning weak, but feeling better than yesterday. I have no appetite for food. Took a cup of milk and a couple of toasted crackers. We cannot leave this place before past three this afternoon. I feel deeply grateful that the Lord has sustained me in speaking to this dear people who have taken their position on the commandments of God. I feel so anxious for them that they may be overcomers and saved with the redeemed at last.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 48

We had an interview with a Swedish sister who can speak English. She spent two years in Chicago. She was keeping the Sabbath when she went there. The family she worked for was kind to her and permitted her to keep the Sabbath. She says she had a place when she first went to Chicago where there was but little work; but the mistress for whom she worked scolded her for everything, and she was sad all the time; but her mistress was not willing she should leave her, but she felt so full of sorrow she could not stay. She found a place where the work was much harder, but everything was pleasant. Her heart was light all the time, because she was not fretted at and scolded. This seems to be a woman of good judgment. She came back from America with the purpose of taking care of her father; but if the work had not been as hard, she would have remained longer. The dresses to wash and the ruffles and white shirts to do up in warm weather, with all the rest of the work for a family of seven, was hard for her. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 49

We had an invitation to take dinner with a merchant's wife. He does not keep the Sabbath. She is fully with us in the faith. Her name is Ekman. They have a large, commodious house, but built on the same plan as all houses are here, of logs. After the logs have settled, they then board them up on the outside and have a very respectable looking building. We were taken first into a room where we laid off our outer garments; then she gave me her arm and waited upon me, taking me into a large dining hall which was very nicely and thoroughly furnished. Here I was seated on a sofa, and the next thing in order was the dinner. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 50

A round table stood in the center of the room, with bread, butter, cheese, and cold sliced meat. We all stood around this table while Elder Matteson asked a blessing in Swedish. We then took bread and butter—if we eat the articles—and either stood and walked about and ate, or sat in chairs or sofas, of which there were several. Before these sofas and chairs were small tables covered with linen cloths. Next came the plates of plum soup and meat soup. The first soup was made of prunes, raisins, apples, and I know not how many kinds [of fruit]. These [plates of soup] were placed on the small tables. After this dish was brought wild meat and fish prepared in a very nice manner. After this was the dessert of cooked, peeled pears with cream. Then all stand and ask a silent blessing; then each guest shakes hands with the host and hostess and thanks them for the dinner, and the ceremony is ended. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 51

The lady of the house gave me her arm and conducted me into a room precisely like the one we first entered. Here we conversed through an interpreter. Elder Matteson read and explained the Scriptures. We had a season of prayer, and now a table is placed before us with hot water and cream and white biscuit and two kinds of cakes. The custom is to have tea or coffee, but they knew it was not our practice to take either tea or coffee. We only drank the hot drink out of their tiny china cups. We had no occasion to eat anything. We bade them farewell. They took the horse and carriage and drove to where we had made our home, and the parting with these dear friends was more ceremonious than our arrival. Thus it is in Sweden.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 52

October 27, 1885

Kopparberg, Sweden

I am feeling somewhat relieved of congestion of the lungs. Awake quarter before five. Was refreshed by a cool sponge bath. We took the cars for Kopparberg. There was no second class, only first and third. We were seated in third, for by so doing we could save nearly three dollars while riding about three hours; but we saw that this arrangement was partitioned only half way, and three compartments were thus arranged. The smoking of those who rode in this third class would be dangerous to us all. Brother Matteson found one compartment enclosed for ladies.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 53

This cheap-rate car was furnished with bare seats, with no conveniences. One lamp served us and the next compartment, but soon we found that where the lamp hung the tobacco fumes penetrated, filling our compartment. We finally arranged this by taking a shawl and wedging it into the opening, so we were relieved in this respect and very thankful for freedom from tobacco.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 54

It was a very disagreeable day. The air was raw and damp, and my lungs were congested. I coughed hard most of the way. We changed cars, and then it was arranged we should take the first class, which cost just double the third, but there was no protection against the tobacco in any other way. Brother Matteson and Willie, to save a little expense, rode in with the smokers.4LtMs, Ms 26,

1885, par. 55

We were glad when Kopparberg was reached. We were given the same rooms we occupied October 22 on our way from Stockholm to Grythytted. We have had a good night's rest; and if it were not for this congestion of the lungs which afflicts me, I should think I was enduring the journey well. We had a breakfast, not very acceptable, but I have no appetite and only eat because I must. We arrived at about three o'clock. Found Brother Johnson waiting for us. It was raining and no carriage was waiting for us and we walked in the rain three quarters of a mile to our stopping place. I should have been left to walk one mile to the meeting had I not told Brother Matteson I could not and should not dare to attempt it. After walking from the depot my heart beat violently. My pulse increased to one hundred, and I felt quite ill. I would not venture this experience again. A carriage was obtained to take me to and from the meeting. The small hall was crowded to its utmost capacity. I spoke from (Mark 8:31) to close of chapter. I had freedom in speaking. Was depressed as I saw the narrow calculations made to obtain a suitable hall to accommodate the people. I will do my part; and if my brethren fail to do their part, then it will be their error, not mine. In Copenhagen and Stockholm I am convinced I could have had a good hearing if our brethren had planned for it, but they did not expect much and did not get much. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 56

October 28, 1885

Orebro, Sweden

Spoke from Luke 21:31-36. The house was filled with earnest listeners, but the seats were only benches without backs and not half enough of this kind. We cannot expect people to come out to hear unpopular truth when the meetings are advertised to be in a small hall, that cannot hold over one hundred people, or in a cellar. The importance and character of our work are judged by the preparations the people make to get it before the people. I spoke twice in this large city to a small company. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 57

At night I dreamed that we asked Brother Matteson, "How far would a light reflect its rays under a bushel?" He answered, "No farther than the compass of the bushel." The question was asked, "How far would the light shine forth placed under a bed?" He thought its rays could not lighten the room. It would be a low and inexpressive light. Then said the questioner, "Place your light on a candlestick, and it will give light to all that are in the house. Your ideas need to be enlarged and elevated. The people have lost an opportunity that God wanted they should have, to obtain light and impressions of the truth that they had not yet received." We have to make the same labor and effort to speak to one hundred that we do to speak to twenty hundred. And if there are not special arrangements made more than there have been on this journey, the people whom God wills should be enlightened will not be, for our own planers and workers are so limited in their faith and in their calculations that the people receive the impression that the message of warning that the Lord sends to the world is not worth their notice. They make the work very hard for themselves. When the Lord sends help, they do not show that they value it. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 58

October 29, 1885

Orebro, Sweden

It is raining, and the weather is very disagreeable. We have comfortable lodgings, but the meals and manner of eating are not at all like our American style; but they try to make it as pleasant for us as they can. We try to talk and cannot be understood. Then we laugh at one another for our blunders and make the best of the situation. 4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 59

I do not ask notoriety; but if God sees fit to send a message to the people, He wants those to whom it is sent to make suitable preparations, that the object may be attained. I am sorry and sad to see that no greater exertions were made to obtain a suitable place to accommodate the people. Oh, that the Lord would elevate and broaden the minds of those who are standing at the head of the work in these countries, that they shall not belittle the work and leave a mold upon the work that is no honor to the most solemn, important message that God has ever entrusted to man! How much we, the workers, need less of self and more of Jesus, that we may seize every God-given privilege and opportunity and show in every place where the truth has found an entrance that the work is a sacred, holy, exalted work. Just as we treat the work and the message of truth, so will be the impression that will be left on the minds of the ones left to keep up the interest. I hope the Lord will teach His people that they do not make enough of the sacred truth that He has entrusted to them. They are in need of power and grace that they will not place the work so low in their management that only the cheaper, poorer classes will be reached.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 60

We saw in this place the old castle, nearly a thousand years old. There are interesting facts connected with this old building with its four towers that history has handed down to us.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 61

October 30, 1885

We left Orebro. On our way to the depot, the hack driver took us around by the jail. Here is where Brother Rosquist was imprisoned because he preached the truth in Grythytted. The priest of the State Church made complaints against him.4LtMs, Ms 26, 1885, par. 62

Ms 27, 1885

Diary, October 31 to November 19, 1885

Norway

October 31 - November 19, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 2MR 116-121; 3Bio 328-329; EGWE 124-126.

First Visit to Norway

October 31, 1885

We have a clear day, but it is sharp and cold. Healthy weather for traveling. We tarried a night at the hotel in [blank]. We took our breakfast out of our lunch baskets. We ordered a pitcher of hot milk and made a very good breakfast. At about 12 o'clock noon, we reached Christiania and were welcomed by Brother Oyen at the depot. We were taken in a hack to the pleasant rooms occupied by Brother and Sister Oyen and family. We were once more among our English-speaking friends; and although we were welcomed and treated with every attention by our Danish and Swedish brethren and sisters, we felt all the time crippled because we could not converse together, and it was thus made impossible to do them all the good we much desired to do. But we are again in America, as it were!⁴*LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 1*

November 1, 1885

Christiania, Norway

Sabbath was a pleasant day. I spoke to the people in the hall where the church met to worship from 1 Peter 1:13-17. I had freedom in presenting to the people the importance of practical godliness. All listened with great attention. The hall was full. In the afternoon the ordinances were administered, and the washing of feet. In the evening a discourse was given by Elder Matteson.⁴*LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 2*

November 2, 1885

Christiania

Sunday forenoon spoke in a hall to a crowded assembly. It was estimated fourteen hundred were present. The text was 1 John 3:1-3. The Lord gave me much freedom and clearness in presenting the infinite love of God in giving His Son to die for the world. Although the aisles were crowded and every seat filled, and even standing place occupied, large numbers were obliged to go away because they could obtain no entrance. The crowd held perfect attention to the close of the discourse. We hope this effort will not be in vain, but that through Christ's help much good may be the result.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 3

November 3, 1885

We went on the cars twenty miles to fill an appointment at Drammen. The fog settled down so thick we could not obtain a sight of the country through which we were passing. We were two hours on the cars. We found a hall full of people at the appointed hour. The hall could only accommodate seven hundred people. The passageway was filled. All the standing room was crowded, and respectful attention was given as I addressed them from John 3:16.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 4

November 4, 1885

We left Drammen at eight o'clock for Christiania. It was raining, but the fog had cleared away so that we could see the country through which the cars were passing. The scenery is very fine. The country is broken. There are high bluffs and rocky mountains, lakes and islands. In summer this would be a very pleasant place to live in. Spoke Wednesday night in the hall, which was well filled. I spoke from Luke 10:25-29.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 5

November 5, 1885

Christiania

It is rainy, disagreeable weather. We have done much writing today.

Visited at Brother Hansen's. We had a very pleasant, profitable visit. I conversed some through an interpreter, relating some incidents in our earlier experience. We conversed some upon the habits of the people in regard to eating so frequently. Brother Hansen said he had made considerable reform in eating since he had embraced the truth. I related to them a little of my experience upon health reform and the manner of my eating since receiving the light from heaven. I also related to them the experience we had passed through in the first rise of this work.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 6

November 6, 1885

Christiania

It is rainy, disagreeable weather. I spoke in a hired hall to a large audience from 2 Peter 1:1-13. All listened with respectful attention.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 7

November 7, 1885

Christiania

It is a foggy, rainy day. I long for the pleasant sunshine, but we will seek to make all the sunshine we can by cheerful, pleasant conversation and in opening our hearts to let the Sun of righteousness in, that we may, amid clouds and disagreeable surroundings, be ourselves sunbeams of happiness to others because Christ abides in our hearts by living faith.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 8

Colossians 1:24-29. The Lord gave me freedom and power in addressing the people. There is indeed a work to be done for them; and if the Lord will use me as an instrument to arouse them from the irreligious state they are in, I will praise His holy name. I presented before them the great need of those who teach in word and in doctrine to take heed to themselves to be very circumspect in their course of action and in word and example seek to elevate the people to correct views and correct practices by their own habits and customs and to be sure that in no way they belittle the requirements of God—especially the fourth commandment, which enjoins the observance of the Sabbath.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 9

There is in the Sabbath of the fourth commandment a test. It is God's test. It is no manmade test. This is to be the separating line to distinguish the loyal and the true—him that serveth God from him that serveth Him not. Some professing to be keeping all the commandments of God were sending their children to school upon the Sabbath. They were not compelled to do this, but because the schools objected to taking in their children unless they should attend the six days in the week, they sent them to the school to study and also learn to work. If they could not, by wise and judicious means, make some special contract with the authorities of the school, reserving the privilege to keep the Sabbath of the fourth commandment, then there is but one way—to keep the Sabbath of the fourth commandment strictly.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 10

Special pains should be taken to establish schools among ourselves. Elder Matteson has not given to our people a correct example. He has sent his children to school upon the Sabbath and to justify his course has used the words of Christ, "It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days." [Matthew 12:12.] He may urge the same reason why men should work on the Sabbath, because they must earn bread to feed their children; and there is no boundary line to tell what should and should not be done upon the Sabbath. And while holding the claims of the fourth commandment so loosely, these leaders were, by their example, encouraging the false tests which man has manufactured. The matter of dress was the subject to test character.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 11

Thus the commandments of God were made of little account by their traditions, while their own ideas and notions were binding heavy burdens and grievous to be borne. They were separating themselves such a great distance from the people that their influence could not reach them. They were giving altogether a wrong impression of the truth. There would be just such impressions given as would please Satan, that the Sabbathkeeping Adventists be regarded as a set of fanatics and extremists. The Lord's precious cause is not exalted, but the impression given to unbelievers is that it is the doctrine that makes them unkind, uncourteous, and really unchristian in their character.4LtMs, Ms 27,

1885, par. 12

The Lord would have the subjects of His kingdom represent the character of their sovereign. His commandments are not left for man to trim down to suit his ideas or his convenience. God's great moral standard is His ten precepts, the foundation of the faith of prophets and apostles. The Sabbath is the great test question, and He has made precious promises to those who keep His Sabbath from polluting it. His infinite wisdom and power and love are engaged in our behalf. The heavenly host are registering our names as among the loyal and the true. It is safe always to be on the Lord's side, and by faith to commit our whole interest, temporal and eternal, into the hands of Him who reigns over all in heaven and on earth.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 13

God is not pleased with His people in this place, for they have belittled His holy requirement, striving to bring His law into subjection to themselves, rather than bring themselves in subjection to His law. There has been a spirit prevailing of contention, of faultfinding, of making little items a test of Christian fellowship, while they have at the same time been lax and loose in keeping the Sabbath.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 14

After speaking with great plainness, I invited those to come forward who felt they were sinners, not in harmony with God, and who needed His converting power. About fifty came forward. We then knelt before the pulpit with the congregation, and by request I prayed while Elder Matteson interpreted. There was some of the melting Spirit of the Lord in our midst, but some remained hard and unimpressed. Their hearts are rebellious. Opportunity was given for testimonies to be borne, and quite a number confessed they had about given up the truth and separated from God and now wished to repent and come back with God's people. We tried to find a place to close the meeting, but it seemed impossible. Three were on their feet at once, and our meeting lasted about three hours. The work must go deeper yet.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 15

November 8, 1885

Christiania

The weather continues foggy and sunless. I write many pages today.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 16

At five o'clock by appointment I spoke in the large [gymnasium]. There were about seventeen hundred people assembled to hear the woman from America speak. The secretary of the temperance association introduced Mrs. White to the audience. As a canopy above the pulpit was the stars and stripes, which I highly appreciated, for I consider it an honor to be born in America, the land of the brave and the free.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 17

I spoke for one hour and twenty minutes, Brother Oyen acting as my interpreter. The people listened with deep interest. I showed them that the Bible was full of history upon temperance. I showed them the part Christ had taken in temperance. It was all due to Christ that man was given a second trial after Adam's fall. Christ redeemed Adam's disgraceful failure and fall by withstanding every temptation of the wily foe. I mingled Christ in this temperance lecture from beginning to end. The Bishop of the state church was present. There were a number of the clergy present. The higher class of society were my hearers. After I had ceased speaking and stepped from the desk, Dr. Nyson took the stand and endorsed every word that had been spoken and that Brother Oyen had interpreted for me. He was very liberal in his thanks to the speaker for giving them the discourse. He then introduced me to some of their leading temperance men and women. Not a few came to greet me by shaking hands and saying, "I am so thankful to have heard you tonight. I never listened to a temperance discourse like this before." Indeed when I was speaking, the congregation looked as solemn as if attending a funeral. No smiles were seen and no stamping of feet was heard, for it was too solemn a subject to excite laughter or merriment. Dr. Nyson expressed the ardent desire that I should address them again; but I feel that our people here need my help, and I must do all for them that is in my power.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 18

November 9, 1885

Christiania

The same foggy, drizzly weather that we have had for about one week continues. I feel wearied and am unable to write much today.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 19

I attend meeting in the evening and the house is well filled, but how can I come to the hearts of this people? I speak from these words found in Hebrews 12:12-17. The Lord gave me freedom. Brother Olsen made request that those who especially desired prayers in their behalf should arise. Quite a number stood upon their feet. I was requested to pray while Brother Oyen translated. The Spirit of the Lord came in, and hearts were softened and subdued by the Holy Spirit. Then many testimonies were borne. Some had backslidden from God, and they were unhappy and troubled and wished to return to the truth. And some expressed in their testimony great gratitude for the light they were receiving and that they were greatly blessed. It was quite late when we retired to rest. These meetings of labor are exceedingly taxing; but if the Lord gives me strength, I shall be very grateful to Him.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 20

November 10, 1885

Christiania

It is still dark and cloudy, but the sun will shine, and we will keep up good courage. This has been a day of great weariness to me. I was unable to write. I am aware I am taxing my strength in doing so much, but I want to see this people greatly helped and strengthened.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 21

We had some talk with Sister Anna Rasmussen. I fear she is not happy and is somewhat discouraged.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 22

I had my foot measured for shoes to be made for me by a Norwegian. My cloak was brought home today. It will protect me from colds. I am very grateful that I can have so comfortable a garment.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 23

Although I feel nearly sick, I attend the meeting in the evening. The house is well filled. I spoke to the people from Colossians 3:12-17. I sought to impress the people with the necessity of exercising living faith in the promises of God. It was for them to seek to reach the Bible standard and then claim the precious promises of

Jehovah.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 24

After speaking to the people, I again requested those who especially desired to be prayed for to come forward. Quite a number immediately responded, and we stepped down in their midst and prayed for them and the Spirit of the Lord came in and His sweet blessing rested upon us. I again prayed and was interpreted by Brother Oyen. Brother Olsen also prayed. Then there were many good testimonies borne. Some said they had been blessed all day in trying to talk upon the truth and in being much in prayer. Some confessed their backslidings and a good work is begun, but it is not universal. Some stand back as if in doubt and questioning. May the Spirit of God reach their hearts and bring them into the work is my prayer.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 25

November 11, 1885

Christiania

Wednesday. I attended evening meeting and spoke to the people with a deep and solemn sense of the shortness of time and the great need we have of greater spirituality, more zeal, and reaching a higher standard.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 26

This day have had conversation with Brother Hansen. Brother Oyen was present. I talked with him very plainly, showing him just how he was standing and the influence he was exerting in the church. I had felt so burdened I had arisen at three o'clock and written some things that I wished to come before the people.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 27

November 12, 1885

Christiania

Thursday night again spoke to the people. We had good congregations, but some of our brethren do not seem to feel that interest which they should feel to arise, put away their sins, and come into favor with God. I spoke with great plainness. During the day I wrote many pages to be translated for the benefit of the church. Brother Oyen translated the matter. W. C. White is feeling it to be duty to have laborers come to Norway, and it looks certain that they must have help.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 28

Last night W. C. White suggested that he was almost decided to attend the General Conference. At first I was surprised and said it could not be his duty to leave the work here to do this; but careful, calm consideration of the subject changed my mind. I thought he could serve the cause of God and especially His work in these mission fields better by going to America, so that from his own lips the Conference could hear of the necessities of the case for laborers and for money, rather than to read the same arguments in letter form. I now think it is right that W. C. White should go, although I shall miss him very much, and his counsel and advice seem to be almost a necessity at this time here.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 29

Friday

I feel worn and scarcely able to sit up. Last night W. C. White suggested he thought it might be his duty to go to America and attend the General Conference. At first I could not consent to this; but after thoughtful, prayerful consideration I felt that God had put this into his mind, and I would not stay him or hinder his going. I have written many pages today. W. C. White left us about three o'clock to cross the North Sea on his way to Liverpool and to take the steamer from there to New York. He will return, if it be the will of God, in about two months.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 30

November 14, 1885

Christiania

Sabbath I spoke to the people from [blank in original]. I felt very solemn. The hall was filled, and we hope that deep impressions were made upon the minds of the people.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 31

November 15, 1885

Christiania

This is the last day we will be in Christiania. Brother Hansen sent an invitation for us to ride out in his carriage to see the city. I had talked so plainly the day before, I feared he was offended at my plainness of speech. This day was pleasant. We had sunshine, but it was clear and cold.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 32

November 16, 1885

Christiania

Arise early, for we must leave for the depot at quarter before six. My labors close in this place, and I know not when I shall be here again; perhaps never. Brother Hansen sent his carriage to take us to the depot. Brother Oyen accompanied us. At the depot we met several of our sisters who came to say good-by to us.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 33

Brother and Sister Olsen and Brother and Sister Hansen also came to say farewell. They remained until the cars started. Shall we meet again in this life, or shall we meet no more until the judgment? It is a solemn thing to die and a far more solemn thing to live.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 34

The scenery was interesting. Very many places resembled Colorado in its high and rocky summits, its towering mountains and rocky fields. We passed large forests of pine. The trees do not grow large. They are thick, straight, and small. This is a poor country for people to obtain a living in. Every little available spot of land is improved. The houses generally are small and cheap. There are some houses that show more wealth and prosperity. This would have been a wearisome day to us all were it not for the romantic scenery. The sun sets at this season of the year at half past three and rises about nine o'clock.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 35

November 17, 1885

Gothenburg

I arose at three o'clock and used my pen until we were obliged to take breakfast at eight o'clock. Wrote eight pages. Took breakfast, and then we were taken in a hack to the boat. The steamer was small, but for the first hour we enjoyed our steamboat ride; then the captain advised us to go below, that we were getting into rough water. We did as directed and soon were made to realize the wisdom of this movement. We became very sick. Seasickness is very distressing to me. I vomited most earnestly. Sarah was also sick, severely. She said she was afraid several times that I was dead. My face was like a corpse and my eyes closed. This was a very severe experience to me, because of heart difficulty. 4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 36

In such a time I feel unable to carry the burden and trust myself in my weakness to my Saviour. He will take care of me. I have chosen Him as my helper, and I feel that I may safely commit the keeping of my soul and body to Him as to a faithful Creator. He will not leave His children who love and trust and serve Him to the will and power of Satan. It is so great a comfort to have such a friend. When the sea is tempestuous, how we long for something solid to set our feet upon. I tried to walk a short distance with the help of the stewardess. We were thrown to one side and the other, forward, backward, clinging with all our remaining powers to something that would not give way. 4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 37

While the boat is rolling, pitching, and tumbling about like a cork upon the water, I thought of the perils to which we are exposed by sea and by land. How much more dreadful it must be for one to feel the land like an ocean heave beneath their feet, the solid earth, hitherto firm and secure, rocking beneath them. I thought of the earth rolling like the waves of the great deep. I thought of the necessity of our refuge which cannot be moved, the sure mercies of God. In God we may trust. The mountains may depart and the hills be removed, but the kindness of God does not depart, nor His covenant of peace be removed from us. God never forsakes His trusting ones. 4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 38

November 18, 1885

We were on the cars from four o'clock the 17th until nine o'clock the 18th. I was too weak to sit up much through the day. We had a convenient compartment through the night. The seats were opened so we could lie down. At three o'clock we were all commanded to get out of the car, to have not only our baggage, but ourselves inspected. It was a bitterly cold night, and all insisted I should not go out into the cold. When the officials found the girls ready to get out, then they said, "You can go back and not go into the custom house." But they were not exactly satisfied about that reported sick woman, so two officials with their regimentals came to the car with bright lanterns flashing into the car to see if a bundle of goods was not being transported into Germany and was being passed off as a sick woman. I sat upright and pleasantly said, "Here I am, gentlemen; please look at me, for I am a living woman." I do not know whether they understood me or not. They burst into a good-natured, hearty laugh and said, "All right," and we were left to sleep again if we could or lie awake after this untimely disturbance. We changed cars. Rode all day until seven o'clock, then the cars went no farther, and we stopped at Cologne. (Give description from guide book.) We had the privilege of seeing the cathedral which had been many, many years in building. It had been finished only in recent years [1880]. 4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 39

November 19, 1885

We arose early and walked a few steps to the train and traveled over a country abounding with remarkable places—high mountain heights. Land—or rather—rocks were cultivated to their very mountainous tops. There were some yards up terrace after terrace to the crest of the rocky heights. 4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 40

The cars stopped at this place, where we had to change for another car. Our baggage, which was no small amount, was all transferred to the waiting room. After seeing it nicely stacked, we walked out a short distance. When we returned it was about time to take the cars, and our baggage was gone we knew not where. Search was at once begun. We had paid the porters for bringing in our baggage, and after much diligent search, no one being able to talk to these sharp porters and officials, we found our baggage loaded onto a truck wagon. One man who had transferred it stood by, while another stood watch over the truck. Both must be paid a franc each, then an extra franc to put it in the car. You are not left to seek your porter, for the moment the guard opens the door then will one or two seize your satchels and walk off with them to the station or to transfer to another car. Sometimes this is an accommodation, sometimes an annoyance. It is quite convenient when a woman travels alone for the porter, for a franc—or less than twenty cents—will see you seated in the car with your baggage all safe.4LtMs, Ms 27, 1885, par. 41

Ms 28, 1885

Diary, November 20 to November 25, 1885

Basel, Switzerland

November 20-25, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in 17MR 329-335.

Labors in Switzerland

November 20

Basel, Switzerland,

It seems pleasant to be once more in our own temporary home. We find M. K. White much improved in health. She has gained ten pounds. Ella May White is not looking well. I am some anxious about her. She is troubled with catarrhal difficulty. We find the rooms pleasantly furnished with articles lent and picked up, so that we think it looks very homelike. But the [stoves] are insufficient to warm the rooms. I am cold all the time.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 1

I have a conversation with Elder Whitney. He presents before me the necessity of our speedily visiting Italy. They need help at this time. I would have been gratified to have had a week's rest, but I must not consult my own wishes or my pleasure. Jesus did not live to please Himself. He lived to do others good, and He is our example in all things. A stove is placed in my room so that I may kindle a fire when I arise early in the morning. If I had only had this one day earlier I should have escaped this cold which I have contracted.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 2

November 21, 1885

Basel

Sabbath. At the close of Sabbath I open my diary again. Today has been a day of weariness to me. Sabbath School was held in the forenoon. Brother Aufranc spoke to the people in French. In the afternoon I spoke to those assembled from John 3:14, 15. The Lord gave me strength and grace to address the people. Brother John Vuilleumier and an educated German translated into both languages for the benefit of the French and of the Germans. The Spirit of the Lord seemed to be in our midst. We then had social meeting. Many good testimonies were borne. These testimonies were translated to us. 4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 3

A converted Jew spoke well. This Jew was attending the theological college in Basel. He came to our Swiss conference and seemed to be interested. He understands Hebrew. He was desirous that our people should give him employment; but as long as he did not esteem the truth of that value to step out upon it from real conviction of duty, we felt he should not be hired to obey the truth. If the truth were not of that value to him that he could make any and every sacrifice for the truth's sake—moving from principle and not be bribed or bought—the work is between God and his own soul. The question is, What does God say? What does He require? If he has a heart to be obedient to that which he knows to be truth, then his works will be acceptable to God. If he is not conscientious, but would wait to see if he can find a convenient position where it will be no cross to obey the truth, then his obedience is not acceptable to God. He will have a religion of convenience—serve God when it is for his interest to do so, and let it alone and be disobedient when the truth stands in his way of ease or prosperity. 4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 4

We dared not take up this converted Jew. We must pray for him. We must watch with interest to help him if we can, but leave him as much as possible to his conscience and to his God. 4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 5

The transgression of the law is sin, and the true believer in Christ will cease to sin. He will abhor sin, which caused so great sufferings to his Redeemer. He will not continue in sin that grace may abound, but he will cast away his sin—will war against the inclinations of the natural heart. This faith is not abstract, but attaches itself to actions. He shows the result of faith, which is obedience. He is learning to walk by faith, not by sight. He lives, yet not he, but Christ lives in him, by faith. He eats, drinks, and does all things to the glory of

God. Christ is to him first and last and best in everything.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 6

We left this young man, with all his natural and acquired ability, to think, believe, and act before God conscientiously. We now see that this was the best course. He has continued to attend our meetings and has been turned out from the college. Now will be the time to help him to help himself. This move of the officials in the college has affected other youth. Two young men of the same college have come to our meetings on the Sabbath. They became interested through reading the papers. They have been looking into the reasons of our faith, and although in a school called the theological college, having a name to fit men to engage in the holy office of opening the Word of God to the people, our brethren state that they were astonished at such gross ignorance of Bible subjects, both in doctrines and the practical lessons of Christ. These young men have requested repeated interviews which have been granted to them. Last Sabbath two other intelligent young men came to the meeting and listened with deepest interest. After the meeting the two who have been interested had an interview with our youthful workers in the office, inquiring the meaning of certain Scriptures. In the evening I had a long interview with Brother and Sister Whitney in relation to some important matters connected with the workers in the office. We talked until a late hour. I carried the burden on my soul and slept only three hours during the night.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 7

November 22, 1885

Basel

I attended the morning meeting of the workers in the office, prayed with them and spoke to them about thirty minutes upon the necessity of faithfulness. I think many felt deeply upon this matter, for I know there have been influences that have drawn their minds from devotion and heart service to God to having their affection and their interest divided, placing human objects where the Lord alone should rule and reign. A request was made for all who would from this time make most earnest efforts to reach a higher standard to arise. All arose. We hope this now will have the effect to win them to God and to heavenly reflections and make earnest efforts to be all that God has given them power to be—faithful and true, devoted soldiers of the cross of Christ. How my heart is drawn out for these young men.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 8

I called together the girls from the office and talked with them seriously and affectionately, trying to have them see that they had enshrined Edith Andrews in their heart as an idol. The worship due to God they had given to a human, erring creature, one who was herself in need of mercy and the pardoning love of God or she would not be saved. May the Lord set the words that I have spoken to them home to their hearts.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 9

Again one of the young men mentioned—whose name, I learn, is Gree—came to Brother Whitney much troubled. He knows not what to do. He sees the truth and he sees the cross which he must lift if he accepts it. He can bear, he says, all that he will be called to pass through for the truth's sake; but his parents—who have high hopes of him, and who have sent him at considerable expense to the college! Here comes in the question, Will he forsake all? He sees that the crisis has come. May the Lord give him grace to decide to obey the truth, to forsake all if need be—father, mother, sisters, and brothers—for the truth's sake. This is a trying point in this young man's experience. May he have strength from above.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 10

November 23, 1885

Basel

Devote some time to writing. Have conversation with Elder Whitney. He read letters from Brethren D. and A. C. Bourdeau, urging our going to Italy, and Daniel urges we come around through Geneva. But this will cost time and money; and as our tickets take us on that route in returning, we decide to go direct to Italy, leaving Basel next Thursday morning, which will bring us into Torre Pellice about noon.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 11

Walked down to the city and made some purchases. Rode down in the afternoon to look at the stoves. Purchased one at a cost of twenty dollars. This has advantages over the iron stoves. The head is not heated, the air is not burned. I must have every advantage if I must use my head so continually as I do in writing. Sent to America four pages to Marian Davis and six pages to W. C. White. Review and Herald comes today, and we eagerly devour its contents. 4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 12

November 24, 1885

Basel

I thank my heavenly Father for a precious night's rest. I am still suffering with cold. Write to Elder Bourdeau at Geneva four large sheets of writing paper, in regard to his work and the best manner of taking hold of it. He has gathered up notices in papers as far back as when he was in Cal. and wishes these put into his circulars or notices to go before the public. It is just such things as these that hurt Brother Daniel's influence. The appearance is that he is extolling himself. He wishes to make it very prominent that he is an American sent to Europe as a missionary. This is every word truth, but such notices put before the people are not the best way to reach them, for all notices of this character will arouse national prejudice and close doors to him that might otherwise be opened. 4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 13

The greatest prejudice of the Jewish nation of priests and rulers was stirred up against Christ because the people preferred to listen to Jesus rather than to them. The very same feelings of prejudice will be manifest in the priests and rulers of this time. We can do nothing that would close up the way before us in this country like taking a position of superiority and putting before the people that we consider them heathen. In truth they are worse than heathen, but this we are not to tell them. The clergy consider themselves as teachers, highly religious, and their churches send out missionaries to the work of converting the savages; but to have the implication that a similar work must be done for them they would consider the worst kind of insult. 4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 14

We wrote to Brother Daniel to guard his notices, just humbly to go to work in the fear and love of Jesus, and work temperately, keeping self out of sight, and let Jesus and the truth work their way to man's hearts; that it is not best to hire the largest halls, but go to work in a less expensive way and then if the way opens come up higher, but test the interest first and see what that interest will warrant.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 15

November 25, 1885

Basel

I have rested well during the night. We have been blessed with a couple of days of partial sunshine. It now looks like rain. We hoped to have pleasant weather to cross the Alps to Italy, but we must take these things as they come and not be in the least discontented or unhappy.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 16

I had a talk with Brother and Sister Whitney. They bring good reports from the sisters with whom I conversed last Sunday in reference to their exalting any one too highly and thus making them idols. We must inquire what is the influence of the one I am adoring. Does she reveal in life and in character superior love to Jesus, devotion to the truth? Is it her work to lead minds to the contemplation of heavenly themes? Is Jesus the theme of conversation? Is her life such that it bears the heavenly credentials? I urged upon them the necessity of their loving God with all their heart. This effort has been blessed to these sisters.4LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 17

I had a conversation with Brother John Vuilleumier and presented before him the necessity of having his heart free from every idol, that he should honor and adore Jesus, that no human object should come between him and his God. If he made clay his idol, if he thought it was a paragon of perfection, he was deceived. Where he saw gold it was truly only tinsel. I sought to impress upon him the necessity of his loving and serving God as the One supreme. God was working in His providence to bring in close relationship to Him young men that He could mold and fashion as clay is molded in the hands of the potter, that He would make them vessels unto honor. He had a work for them to do which others who were older could not do as well. He wanted their whole heart, their affections, and He claimed them as His right. With those who were older, habits were formed and ideas were not always such that God could use them; but He wanted young men to reach the highest standard of holiness, as did Daniel. I devoted more than one hour in conversation with this young man, who is a youth of great promise. I believe that the Lord has a special work for him to do, and after talking with him we could only commit the case to God for Him to impress the heart.⁴*LtMs, Ms 28, 1885, par. 18*

Ms 29, 1885

Diary, November 26 to December 15, 1885

Italy

November 26 - December 15, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 3Bio 333-336; 3MR 214-216; 4MR 41; 5MR 270; 10MR 379-380.

First Visit to Italy

November 26

We left Basel. I am fifty-eight years old today, the twenty-sixth of November, 1885. We took the cars bound for Torre Pellice, Italy. We were much favored. The sun partially dispelled the clouds. There was no fog, and we could get a view of the country through which we passed.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 1

November 27

This morning is clear and the air cool and bracing. We passed the night in Turin, Italy. We walked only a short distance from the cars to a hotel. We were conducted up three flights of stairs into a large room fifteen by fifteen feet which opened into another room of the same size.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 2

It is a beautiful sunshiny morning. The atmosphere is mild and soft, not as harsh as in Switzerland. We sit in full view of the mountain peaks. The door is open, and the sun shines in bright and warm.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 3

Nov. 28, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

We rise at half-past five o'clock. I have been awake since half-past four. I have slept well, and I feel very grateful to my heavenly Father for this precious rest and His peace which I feel in my heart. At two

P.M. I went to the meeting in the hall. There were but few assembled for the reason that we were disappointed in getting the notices of our appointments in the paper. The manager of the paper, a man by the name of Mallon, was one who had been keeping the Sabbath. He is an educated man. His wife also is an educated woman. She can speak English and interpret or translate into German and French.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 4

Brother and Sister Mallon were both at our conference in Basel and seemed to be interested and took part with us. But for years his business has been perplexing. Temptations came. Those who were our enemies proposed to relieve his embarrassment by going into partnership with him. This would enable him to carry on his printing business. Our people have loaned him sixteen hundred dollars to enable him to save his place from mortgage sale. This poor man was deluded, and he began to think that he could enter into this partnership with our bitterest opponents and observe the Sabbath in spirit—keep it in his heart, but not in the letter. This has troubled his mind so that he acts very singular. He began to write against the Sabbath and against us and our faith. His wife has as yet hindered his getting out a book in violent opposition to us. Sabbath, while I was speaking, he came into the hall and began to take notes of what I was saying.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 5

While the Spirit of the Lord was upon me and I was speaking with great freedom and power, he jumped up and said he wished to speak and ask some questions. Should he lose his soul if he did not keep the Sabbath, or was it necessary for him to keep the Sabbath to be saved—answer “Yes or no.”4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 6

I said, “This is an important question which could not be answered with ‘yes or no.’” Those who had clear light upon the binding claims of the law of God and rejected that light and would not keep the Sabbath would be judged according to the light given. Those who had not had the light to refuse and reject, but lived up to all the light God had given them would not be made accountable for the light that they never had.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 7

Brother Mallon was greatly excited. He gesticulated frantically. He had in the first of his speech spoken in praise of me and what I had said. But when he demanded the yes or no, and I refused to say this, he seemed almost raving. He read an article he had written of the same character as others from opposers of our faith as though he had new and unanswerable arguments in it. But it was the same ground that others have been over.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 8

He wanted me to answer some questions; and then as I would say a word or two out of harmony with his ideas in the published article, he would break in upon me in the most violent manner. I saw that I could not be permitted to answer a question, and his violence was so great that the congregation began to disperse as though afraid. It seems that this poor soul is under the power of Satan. I was enabled to keep firm and quiet, without confusion, and I felt that all would work for the advancement of the truth. But we felt sad for Sister Mallon. She begged me to excuse her husband. Poor woman, she is in a trying place. After the Sabbath Brn. went to the office to get notices printed of our meeting. But Bro. Mallon would not allow them to get these notices out, so we had no means to give out our appointments.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 9

Nov. 29, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

We are having a beautiful day. The atmosphere here is very healthful. We walked out into the market place, for the market days are Sunday forenoon and Friday. Here we saw a strange sight for Sunday—men and women with their wares of all descriptions and buying and selling going on with energy. Men and women were crying their wares like an auctioneer. What a scene this was in the very shadow of the Catholic monastery and church. I was disgusted with the appearance of squalor and poverty, with the degraded appearance of men, women, and children. Women and children had inflamed eyes and coarse, smoked skins. There is much decrepitude and deformity in Italy. I am informed that children commence to work in the factories quite young, and they obtain a mere pittance, standing upon their feet so long they become lame and are dwarfed in growth. The women are the burden-bearers, while the men generally are accustomed to let the women work out in the fields like men.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 10

At two P.M. I went to the hall to find only a very few assembled. I spoke. While speaking, Bro. Mallon came into the hall. He was very much excited; and if one word was uttered that he agreed with, he would nod his head as in approval. If on the contrary a word was spoken he did not approve of, he would gesticulate and shake his head, talk to others around him, and make violent denunciations. I kept right on as though I did not see this and did not hear his words of disapproval. As I read the words of Christ in his memorable sermon on the mount, "If any man shall break one of these least commandments and shall teach men so, etc." [Matthew 5:19] he jumped up and flourished his arms and screamed out to Eld. Bourdeau, my interpreter, "Do you keep all the commandments any better than did the Pharisees? answer me!" We kept right on with our work as calmly as if an angry, half-frantic man was not acting before us as if possessed of the devil. He grasped his hat and flew out of the hall in a rage and gathered around himself several and talked to them like a mad man. This was not a very encouraging beginning, but we will remain and see if the Lord has anything further for me to do. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 11

Monday, Nov. 30, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

We have a most glorious morning. The sun shines so warm and mild, the doors are open, and it seems like spring. We walked out to look at an easy chair for me to sit in. We purchased a few things, but decided the chair cost too much and I did not purchase it. My hip is very troublesome. It is now paining me severely, so that I can walk only a very little. We have now decided to change the place of meeting, and not to occupy the hall belonging to Bro. Mallon, but obtain a new place where he will not feel at liberty to break in just when he pleases. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 12

Bro. A. C. Bourdeau ordered a carriage to take us for a ride. We have to pay fifty cents for two hours' ride. Eld. Whitney accompanied us. He can talk enough French to make the driver understand and explain some things. We passed St. Johns, a village composed mostly of Protestants. Bro. Bourdeau has spoken there. The weather seems like summer. We rode to another village in the valley, where all were Catholics. We saw beautiful residences located on a high eminence. We saw many men engaged in working on granite rocks. One of the slabs measured eighteen feet. These they bring from the mountain quarries in large, thick stones, then the workmen split them or slice off a large flat, thin slab. I saw quite small boys working very energetically with the men. We enjoyed our ride very much. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 13

Tuesday, Dec. 1, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

It is a beautiful morning. We decided to go to Bobbio about five miles distant to see a place noted in history. Two carriages were obtained to take us to the place. Eld. Whitney, Mary K. White, and I rode in the first carriage. Bro. Bourdeau, Bro. Geymet, Sister Martha Bourdeau, and Sarah Andrews were in the second carriage. The scenery on the route was delightful. We went as far as the carriage would take us, then we began to ascend the side of the mountain on foot. We come to the place of interest where there was a battle fought—the Piedmont Catholics against the Vaudois. Those who would not yield their faith had made their refuge in a house on the mountains, now about eight hundred years old. They held their position against great numbers until they were overcome, then they tried to flee, but nearly all were massacred. A few escaped. Some were wounded and made efforts to escape. They went into a cave, but they were not safe there. There was a farther entrance between three rocks, leaving a small aperture. These wounded, terror-stricken men pressed and squeezed themselves through this small space into a cave thirty feet in length, but the men with satanic hatred devised a way to put these to death who were beyond their reach. They built a fire and smothered them to death. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 14

This cave was a few rods from there. We spread our lunch under chestnut trees. We then examined the cave and afterwards united in a season of prayer on the rocks on the top of the cave and then descended again to the carriage road and were seated in the carriages for our journey home. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 15

Wednesday, Dec. 2, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

Bro. Whitney left us this morning at five A.M. I wrote letters to my children and decided in the afternoon to go up the steep ascent to the fortification, a place noted in history for the cruel, mysterious work of the Roman power against those they called heretics.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 16

Thursday, Dec. 3, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

We have another beautiful day. Wrote in the forenoon eight pages of letter paper to Willie and Edson. We ordered the carriage and rode out five miles. Bro. A. C. Bourdeau and his wife and I filled the carriage. We had a very pleasant ride. We saw a woman driving a cow team, while three large, stout men were in the wagon, but this is the custom here. There is a rope attached to the horns of the animals and a rope attached to this rope, and the women or men lead the oxen or cows drawing the load. I saw no lines with the loaded teams. Sometimes four horses are hitched one before the other, and they obey the word and whip. The carriage horses are driven more after the American style. Our driver took us to a Catholic village—all Catholics, and all live in stables and sleep in stables in the winter. They looked haggard and degraded. The driver told Eld. A. C. Bourdeau that they were very low in morals and very wicked and mean. It was no pleasure to us to think that their ancestors persecuted the dwellers in this valley who did not hold the same doctrines as the Romans. There are some fine houses where Counts have made, and still make, their residence.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 17

Friday, Dec. [4], 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

It is a beautiful morning, cooler than it was yesterday. Finished my letter to Willie. Corrected the discourse I gave on Sabbath. News is brought that Eld. Grant is in the place. He came the same time that I came and has been all this time keeping it secret. Mallon has been in communication with him, and this is why I think he attacked me, interrupting me while speaking. He felt safe to do as Eld. Grant has done. Sabbath he pretended he wanted to ask questions—that his soul’s salvation was at stake, and then went on with his objections to the Sabbath, as Grant has done for many years. As soon as our notices were out for meetings, then Grant’s notices appeared that he was going to expose the pretended visions of Mrs. E. G. White.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 18

We rode out for two hours. At seven o’clock we went to our hired hall to meeting, and there I spoke upon (Matthew 11:28-30), “Come unto me all ye that labor, etc.” We did not have a large congregation. I spoke about thirty minutes, making no reference whatever to Eld. Grant. I felt now was the time to trust God, when it seemed that the powers of darkness were combined against us. The Lord has not forsaken the earth, neither has He forsaken His people. Satan has exercised his power in these valleys for a long time. He is not ready to let go his hold upon the people here who have maintained the warfare against him. Eld. Grant spoke in the room above the hall where we were, and he made some reference to Mrs. White, professing to know me when he knows nothing of me. M. K. White took notes in shorthand. He thought I was present and therefore made his remarks, saying that Mrs. White was present, but I cared not to be present. He has followed me with falsehood and with his misrepresentations for so many years that I expect he will do anything and everything he can against us, and me in particular, but the Pharisees did the same to Jesus.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 19

Saturday, Dec. 5, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

We have another clear day today. I spoke to the few assembled together on the Sabbath from Matthew, “Whoso heareth My words and doeth them.” [Matthew 7:24.] I had liberty to present the subject before the people in clearness and power. The Baptist minister was present and a telegraph operator. I felt as anxious to declare the counsel of God to these few as to the many. The Baptist minister took notes while I was talking.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 20

In the evening Eld. Grant presented his slander he had gathered up —what this disaffected one had said and those who had been reproved for their wrongs and iniquity and presented them to the people as condemning evidence that the visions of Mrs. White were not of God.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 21

The very same course has Robert Ingersoll pursued against the Bible. Grant has taken some expressions that he could turn and misrepresent and distort. These he has made the most of, and the people who are ignorant of me and my work accept these garbled statements as truth. But as I am a stranger in Italy and unacquainted with the people and the people unacquainted with me and my work, it would be of no use to try to undeceive them. This man claims to be sanctified, and his fruits testify the kind of sanctification that he has. Satan was an accuser of the brethren, so is this man. Satan's work was to tear down, so is this man's work, but I have laid my burden upon God. He knows all about it. He alone can bring help. He can lay his hand upon this wicked man.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 22

Sunday, Dec. 6, 1885

I slept poorly during the night. I spoke to the people in the hall from John 17:14. There were some interested hearers, and I felt the calm peace of Christ abiding in my heart. Sister Mallon visited me. We talked freely together and prayed together. She is in deep trial because her husband has given up the truth and opposes her violently. She says all she can do is to pray for him that the Lord will open his eyes to see where he is. She is hoping that he will yet see the truth.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 23

In the evening I spoke from Matthew [13?]:52. A young man consented to serve as my interpreter. His father encouraged him to do this. We hope this effort will help him. He says it is the first time he has interpreted for anyone. He has a good education, and we hope he will have moral courage to take his stand on the true platform. His father seems interested to hear me speak.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 24

Monday, Dec. 7, 1885

Torre Pellice, Italy

I am thankful to my heavenly Father for precious rest in sleep. Wrote eight pages to W. C. White and six pages to Reuben Taply. I feel very much worried with my constant labor. It is foggy so that I cannot ride out. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 25

I am tempted to think at times, since I have come to Italy, that the enemy has so hedged up my way that it will be no purpose. First Mr. Mallon made great disturbance in the meeting, and it frightened some and they left and the meeting broke up in confusion. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 26

Sunday he attempted to do the same. In wrath and excitement he kept up his gesticulations and vehement protests, talking aloud. Then he arose and said, "Eld. Bourdeau, do you keep the law? I know you don't, you are an apostate." We went right on calmly and took no notice of him. He snatched his hat and went out. Then comes Grant, connecting himself with a man who is an adulterer. Both attack and sweep away the law of God. But will it be swept away? No, they place me in good company. They sweep me away with the law. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 27

I might answer him and vindicate myself, but I will not even mention his name. I will keep right on seeking to speak the truth in love to those who will hear. I know I ought never to despair when engaged in the work for my Master. I have felt great grief to see the people deceived, and wicked men, claiming to be teachers of the Bible, misrepresent and misinterpret the plain utterances of God's Word and call this truth. They tear down God's great moral standard of righteousness and trample it under their unholy feet. I long to have the people see the truth as it is in Jesus, but all I can do is to pray and work the very best I can, having my will in submission to God's will and feel continually the work is the Lord's—the cause is His. He can cause the wrath of men to praise Him. I must patiently wait God's time. I know that He can make of none effect the efforts of wicked men. I am to do my duty. I am only an instrument in the hands of God, to do my part of the work in His love and fear. This truth will triumph; but when, where, and how is for the Lord to decide. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 28

These thoughts bring peace and trust and confidence to my soul. I will not be discouraged, for the Captain of our salvation stands at the helm. I cannot see all of God's purposes. His will shall be my will. We feel disappointed because our best efforts make so little impression on the people. I have felt sorely tempted to depart from my usual custom and vindicate my cause. I know I could do this and leave a different impression on minds than Eld. Grant has left of me and my work. He has gathered up falsehoods and stigma from different ones and told it for truth. If he did not make the lie, he loved it, cherished it, reported it, because he wanted it to be truth. He has all the opportunity to ask me if these things were correct, but he does not want the truth. I feel sure that Jesus knows all about these things, and He will work that His truth shall not suffer.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 29

I see the dear Saviour weeping over Jerusalem. Listen to His lamentation: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen gathered her brood under her wings, and ye would not." He declares, "Thy house is left unto thee desolate." [Matthew 23:37-38.] The grief of Christ was very great, that hearts would turn from light and life, and shall we complain of neglect?4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 30

Tuesday morning, Dec. 8, 1885

I am in affliction today with rheumatism. Sister Revel wishes us to visit her. Bro. A. C. Bourdeau and wife, Mary, Bro. Geymet, and Arthur Bourdeau all start on the journey of about three miles—half of this is up the mountain. We had a little donkey and a small carriage, but he could scarcely draw it much of the way. We made a curious picture, but with Arthur leading and pulling the horse, we got up the mountain at last.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 31

Wednesday, Dec. 9, 1885

Bro. and Sr. Bourdeau with Sarah started for Turin today. Sister Martha is on her way to Basel to attend her sick and dying child. I wrote out many pages today on the law and the gospel. In the afternoon we rode out about two hours, which was a great rest to both Mary and me, for our time is occupied principally in writing. The sun shone warmly, although the air was quite cool and bracing.

We passed through several settlements.⁴*LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 32*

We saw how the people dry their corn. They fasten the ears upon the broad front of their piazzas and some are entirely covered with the yellow ears of corn, excluding light and sun from the houses. But the people live now almost entirely in their stables, both rich and poor, and they have in some places just a window, two or four small panes of glass, while the larger number of the people have only a white cloth or a board which they move to let in light. The cows and animals are in the same apartment. The breath from the cows and the heat and steam from the manure heat the stable. How little knowledge these people have of the laws of life and health! But should you try to enlighten them, they would take it as an offense. We can only hope that the truth will take hold upon the hearts of some, and then they will be elevated and sanctified through the truth. "The entrance of Thy word giveth light, it giveth understanding to the simple." [Psalm 119:130.] From what we see with our eyes, we think the cattle generally are well cared for—much better than the women. We see cows with burdens on them, but they are used as beasts of burden to draw heavy loads. How the milk from such cows can be good is a question. They milk them three or four times a day. We see but few American horses. Mules and Sardinian ponies and donkeys are plentiful here, and we see some good and valuable horses, but they are rare.⁴*LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 33*

Thursday, Dec. 10, 1885

We have another beautiful morning. Bro. Geymet rode out with us today and explained places of interest. We went on a new road and saw new places of interest. He showed us the house where a Protestant and his family lived and secreted the persecuted Protestants. When the house was full, the landlord made a signal on the roof of his house to the Catholics and betrayed those who had sought his house as an asylum. These were tortured by the inquisition and imprisoned. A neighboring Protestant felt so indignant that they took the man in charge and made him dig his own grave and then buried him alive. This fact is not in history, but is tradition. They say it is proverbial that none of that family have prospered. Disaster and loss and affliction seem to follow them.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 34

The scenery seems to resemble Colorado scenery. There are rough mountains and then little plats of grassy land. Away up on the mountain steeps are churches and school houses. Houses and cultivated land reach to the very summit of these mountains. Beyond this mountain is a village, but we did not have time to go to it. There are many towns and villages all through the mountain gorges and through the valleys. One valley opens into another. We see banks of cloud—white as the whitest snow—looming up in the mountain clefts and increasing in dimensions. It is a beautiful sight. It looks like the billows of the sea, but perfectly white.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 35

These white clouds are advancing, rolling first down the mountain sides and then rising higher and spreading over the snow-capped mountains. They appear like mountains of snow in the noon-day sun. It was a picture of loveliness upon which I delighted to gaze. Some took the shape of thrones. I thought of Christ's coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. I can never give in language a description of this sublime scene. Was it not such a cloud as this that was sometimes the refuge of God's people, that they might escape in its friendly shelter from the sight of their persecutors?4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 36

Friday, Dec. 11, 1885

We have another beautiful day, but clear and sharp. We do not get the sunshine here this time of the year before nine o'clock. At eight o'clock you cannot see to read or write without lamplight. The sun passes behind the mountains at half-past two, but it remains light until four o'clock. This day I have written about twenty pages.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 37

Our hearts are sad today. We learn that the man who has rented us the hall in which to hold our meetings has been influenced by Concorde and Grant against us, and he told us we could not have his hall. He was smooth as only an Italian can be, but none the less determined. So another hall must be obtained where the little few can assemble. Where shall it be? The Lord must have a place for His people to worship Him in this place.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 38

I spoke to a few assembled Friday night. We hope these efforts are not lost. May it be the sowing of seed that will spring up and bear fruit to the glory of God after a while. Sister Revel and her daughter came from the mountain into the valley to attend the evening meeting and returned by the lonely mountain road after nine o'clock P.M. We keep asking the Lord to open the way for the truth to find access to hearts in these valleys. Eld. Grant has left, and we hear that he had but little influence with the people. They did not like his spirit. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 39

Saturday, Dec. 12, 1885

It is a clear, cold day. The arrangement for warming the rooms is meager, and it is difficult to keep warm. I decided not to attend meetings today. Bro. Bourdeau has not spoken to the people once since I have been in the place. After Bro. Bourdeau had spoken in the afternoon, he visited a gentleman who has been out to hear me speak. He is a man of influence named Mallon. He had a very pleasant conversation and then they prayed together. He can understand English. Sister Revel and her daughter walked three miles down from the mountain and returned after 9 o'clock. They took dinner with Bro. Bourdeau's family. We had a very pleasant visit with them, talking upon the truth and the best way of reaching the people. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 40

Sunday, Dec. 13, 1885

We rested well last night. We have a pleasant, sunshiny day, but it is cold here now as any time they have in winter. I spoke Sunday at two P.M. to a small but attentive audience from Hebrews: "By faith Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." [Hebrews 11:24, 25.] 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 41

I had great freedom in speaking. The Lord blessed me while presenting before the people the examples of faith which are recorded for our strength and courage. These things are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the world are come. Nearly all present thanked me for the good words they had heard. Two brothers and a son of one translated for me. One is a minister.

These three understood English. In the evening I spoke again from John, "Let not your hearts be troubled, ye believe in God believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions, etc." [John 14:1, 2.] The Lord gave me His Spirit, and at the close of the meeting nearly all present shook hands with me. One man understood English and said, "The Lord has been here tonight. You have spoken by the inspiration of His Spirit." Several expressed an earnest wish for us to remain longer. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 42

Monday, Dec. 14, 1885

Torre Pellice

It is pleasant but cold. It is most difficult to keep warm by the little stove we have. We purchased baskets made by the Italians. We went to see halls for meetings, but there are hindrances to our obtaining them. If we take one hall we must take four rooms with it. Another hall we must buy. Brother Bourdeau decided to devote one of his rooms to a hall. Sister Mallon came to see me, and we had a conversation together. We then had a praying season and parted, not knowing when we should meet again. It is with some anxiety we regard the future for our sister. Will she have strength to stand under the opposition of her husband? 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 43

Tuesday, Dec. 15, 1885

We arose at half-past three and prepared to take the train. We could not see, as it was half-past four when we made our way to the depot. We took a third-class compartment, and there was no way to warm the car. We were all troubled some with chilliness, especially our feet. We feel it to be our duty to save means, even in small sums, for every penny is of value to make someone comfortable and to help to advance the cause of God. We had our breakfast at about half-past six. 4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 44

We reached Turin about eight o'clock and changed cars. We find rules and regulations that put the travelers to much trouble and weariness. In the place of crossing the track we are ordered to go a long distance around; but as Mary and I do not understand the French, we do not try hard to become intelligent in regard to their gesticulations and to us senseless orders. We press right on, our hands full of luggage, and are safely on the other side at the opposite depot, prepared to be seated in the cars. The officials look upon us with comical expressions as much as to say, "These are Americans." "They are ignorant of European ways." We could not make them understand anything, but we understood much more of their directions than we desired. We felt greatly relieved when we were once more seated in the cars with our large amount of baggage.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 45

There were three others in the car with us—an elderly, white-haired gentleman and a boy and a middle-aged lady. I was so very weary I lay down on the seat and slept for two hours, and in doing this lost some interesting part of the scenery, but we made as much as possible of the rest of the journey. It was grand and magnificent. There were lakes and gorges and canyons and towering rocks, some of remarkable appearance; the mountain peaks, rising above mountain peaks—some adorned with trees, some cultivated to the very top. The trail to them went zigzag, and how they could build their houses, and make their gardens, and live up so high was a mystery to us. Chapels were built on the mountain heights, and villages were nestled in the mountain gorges.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 46

These mountains of rocks, towering up so high, of every shape and of immense magnitude, led us, as we looked upon them, to have deep and solemn thoughts of God. These are His works, evidences of the greatness of His power. He has set fast the mountains, girding them with His power, and the arm of God alone can move them out of their place. Rising before us in their grandeur, they point us heavenward to God's majesty, saying, "He changeth not." With Him there is no variableness nor shadow of turning. [James 1:17.] His law was spoken from Mt. Sinai amid thunder and flame and smoke, concealing His awful majesty and glory. He spoke His holy law with a voice like a trumpet. The lightnings flashed, the thunders rolled, shaking the grand old mountain from the top to its very base. We are filled with awe. We love to gaze upon the grandeur of God's works and are never weary. Here is a range of mountains, extending the whole length of a continent, piled up one above another like a massive, irregular wall, reaching even above the clouds. That God who keeps the mountain in position has given us promises that are more immutable than these grand old mountains. God's Word will stand forever, from generation to generation.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 47

If man complies with the conditions, then God will fulfil His part, though the foundations of the earth should be broken up and the heavens should pass away. God's Word, God's will in His law, remains unchangeable, eternal. The God of the mountains is our defense, our strong tower. We will find in Him help and strength ever to do His will. We see the perpetual hills and the glory that is flooded upon them from the heavens, and we want to pray and adore the living God who created all these wonders. We see hills, mountains, and valleys bathed in the noontide sun, reflecting its glories in the lakes, and we want to pray and worship the Lord God of hosts. We want faith. We want praise in our hearts that God ever lives. His words of promise are as unchangeable as His mountains.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 48

God's Word, the blessed guide, given to man declares, concerning these great and grand rocky mountains that have stood the storm and tempest, the torrent and the roar of the winds, "The mountains shall depart, and the hills shall be removed, but His kindness shall not depart, neither shall the covenant of peace be removed from the heart that trusts in Him with perfect faith." [Isaiah 54:10.] The range of the mountains which cover so much space with barren rocks and eternal snows is a storehouse of fertility to the plains. The precious things of the valley are nourished from these everlasting mountains. The Alps of Europe are its glory. The treasures of the hills send their blessings to millions. We see numerous cataracts rushing from the tops of the mountains into the valleys beneath.4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 49

These mountains to me are significant. Subterranean fires, although concealed in them, are burning. When the wicked shall have filled their cup of iniquity, then the Lord will rise out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth. He will show the greatness of His power. The supreme Governor of the universe will reveal to men who have made void His law that His authority will be maintained. Not all the waters of the ocean shall fail, nor the fires which the Lord shall kindle. The earthquake makes the earth tremble, the rocks heave from the place, the hills and solid ground shake beneath the tread of Omnipotence, yet once more He will shake, not the earth only, but also the heavens. There is a sea of fire beneath our feet. There is a furnace of fire in these old, rocky mountains. The mountain belching forth its fires tell us the mighty furnace is kindled, waiting for God's word to wrap the earth in flames. Shall we not fear and tremble before him?4LtMs, Ms 29, 1885, par. 50

Ms 29a, 1885

Report of a Meeting in Torre Pellice

[Torre Pellice, Italy]

November 28, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Report of a Meeting in Torre Pellice on November 28, 1885⁴*LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 1*

Mr. Mallon says: "In a meeting held in the afternoon of the 28th of November, 1885, at Torre Pellice, at the end of a discourse in favor of the Sabbath, given in English by Mrs. White of America, and translated by Mr. A. C. Bourdeau, a Sabbatarian pastor, [we] arose in the assembly composed of thirty persons, to ask of the speaker, Is the Sabbath necessary to my salvation? The response was at first evasive; but as we insisted, she became affirmative, then negative, as follows: 'If the Christian is persuaded that he ought to keep the Sabbath, the Sabbath is necessary to his salvation.'⁴*LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 2*

"The evasive response made a bad impression upon us, because the person interrogated, having grown old in Sabbatarianism, should have known positively and promptly what she held, touching the subject of our question. The negative response compels us to believe that it is useless to take so much trouble to preach the Sabbath to those who do not know it, if they can be saved just the same."⁴*LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 3*

We do not say that Mr. Mallon wilfully misrepresents my words, but he has certainly done this.⁴*LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 4*

While at Torre Pellice, November 28th, I spoke in the hall where our people assembled for worship. It was Sabbath forenoon. I had spoken some little time when Mr. Mallon came in. After sitting quietly and listening a while, he arose in the midst of my discourse and broke in upon me with the remark, "Is it necessary for me to keep the Sabbath in order to be saved? Answer yes or no." I answered promptly that this was an important question which demanded something more full than yes or no; that everyone will be judged according to the measure of light which he received. If God gave them light upon the Sabbath and they refused to accept it, they would not be saved in rejecting light given them from His Word. I then quoted the words of Christ to the Pharisees: "If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloke for their sin." John 15:22.4LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 5

Mr. Mallon broke in upon me and in a very excited manner talked very rapidly, giving no opportunity for his remarks to be interpreted. I attempted several times to speak, as he placed before me questions to answer, but he gave me no chance to speak. He stated that Christ broke the Sabbath. I said, "I hope our brother will not place himself with the Pharisees in their accusations against Christ; for if they could have sustained the charge of Sabbath-breaking against Jesus, they would not have been under the necessity of hiring false witnesses to testify against Him." 4LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 6

He became very excited at my words, charging me with calling him a Pharisee, but our Brethren Whitney and Bourdeau were present and corrected his statement, and he said, "I beg pardon." Mr. Mallon repeated this statement very much as he has it published in his pamphlet, but Brother Bourdeau corrected him and told him I made no such remark, but he urged that I did. Then Brother Bourdeau repeated the words I have here stated in regard to being judged according to the light given to every individual of God. Sister Mallon was present and stated that my words were not as he had stated them. I asked her after the meeting if I had given any occasion for my words to be thus misconstrued. She stated that my words were plain and clear, and there was no occasion for misconstruing them. But they appear in print as he wanted them to appear. 4LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 7

When I saw that I could not have any opportunity to finish my discourse or to answer the questions as I would be pleased to do, I told him, "You have asked me questions, and when I attempt to answer them, you arise in a most excited manner and begin to talk and give me no chance." That since it was not possible for him to listen calmly and know anything I said, I would answer his question in writing. I did so.⁴*LtMs, Ms 29a, 1885, par. 8*

Ms 30, 1885

Diary, December 16 to December 31, 1885

Switzerland

December 16-31, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in 5MR 183, 270-271; 3Bio 337; EGWE 89-90, 145-146.

Labors in Switzerland

December 16, 1885

Geneva, Switzerland

We reached Geneva last evening at half-past seven o'clock. Met Brother and Sister Bourdeau, Marian, and Augusta at depot. We walked only a short distance to the hired house of Brother Bourdeau. We were very weary and retired early. This morning it is quite foggy. We have some visiting to do. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 1

Elder Bourdeau hired a team, and we rode out and viewed many places of interest. We walked some distance upon a very high eminence and looked down where the two waters meet—the Rhone and the Geneva. One is dark blue, the other a greenish color; and although the streams meet, they do not lose their distinct colors and blend in one for a long distance. We looked upon part of a tower which was in the wall when Julius Caesar lived. It is over two thousand years old. Geneva is a beautiful place, and it seems more like an American city than any we have yet visited. We enjoyed our two-hour ride very much. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 2

We wrote several pages to a brother and put it into Brother Bourdeau's hands to translate and send to him. He is crazed on the subject of marriage and is not in a condition to marry. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 3

Brother Bourdeau is comfortably situated. He is holding meetings in Geneva, but few attend. But we hope that the Lord stirs up hearts to examine for themselves. The clergy are determined the people shall not go to hear, and they are warning them not to attend, but God can break these barriers down. That He will give success to this effort is our prayer.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 4

December 17, 1885

Basel

We left Geneva at twelve o'clock. We had a good car, more after the American style. We had no trouble in getting our baggage into the car. The scenery was very beautiful and attractive. We rode beside the lake for forty miles.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 5

We came through Lausanne, where Brother Vuilleumier lives, and where a hall is secured for meetings. There are meetings being held at three different points now. May the Lord give success to His truth. We came without change of cars to Basel. Arrived about eight o'clock. Found Elder Whitney and Brother Kellogg waiting for us. We were soon in a hack and were borne to our home in the mission house. We found our friends rejoiced to see us. We were glad to get home, and we slept but little that night.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 6

Edith is near the close of her probation. She is in much better spiritual condition than when we left for Italy. She no longer wants to be amused, and the company she desired to have in her room no longer is desirable. She seems to be reflecting and seeking the Lord. She manifests love for her mother now that she has not done before during her life; and although her attachments have seemed so ardent for others, they have not centered upon her who should have them above every one else. Her mother is much comforted with this affection and interest manifested toward her by her daughter. It seems a solemn and fearful thing to stand upon the very threshold of eternity.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 7

December 18, 1885

Basel

Friday. It is a foggy day today. We would be pleased to see the sun again. Today is a very busy day. Look over letters and papers that we have not seen. There are many things that demand attention. Many letters to answer.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 8

December 19, 1885

Basel

Sabbath. It is a beautiful day. I visit Edith's room. Talk and pray with her. She is seeking to do what she can to prepare for her last change.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 9

I spoke to the people assembled through two interpreters—French and German. My French translator was not accustomed to the work and seemed embarrassed. On this account I cut short my discourse. In the afternoon they held another meeting, and many good testimonies were borne. The singing exercise was good.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 10

I am impressed that this is the last Sabbath Edith will ever see; but if she rests in hope, we cannot mourn that her pain and suffering and distress are at an end.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 11

Sunday, December 20, 1885

Basel

It is a beautiful day. I was called into Edith's room. She was in great pain. We had a season of prayer for her, and she was relieved and rested afterward. In the evening she had a very distressing time—pressure for breath. We prayed for her again, and the Lord heard and answered our prayers. She was relieved again and rested.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 12

December 21, 1885

Basel

I am not feeling well this morning. We walked down to the city and took a train to Little Basel. It seems to be a large place. We then took a carriage home. The exercise of walking in the bracing air and the ride home were a benefit to me. We saw women sitting in the market place with their provisions—vegetables and fruits—shivering with cold. We felt pity for them, but this is practiced all winter. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 13

We are now having the coldest weather we shall have. The days are now the shortest. They will begin to lengthen very soon. I have written several pages upon the position that should be taken relative to courtship and marriage. There are cases that are now difficult to manage. A brother is seeking to obtain the consent of a daughter of Brother Vuilleumier's, to marry him against the judgment of her parents. The daughter is young, and her lover is a man who has never shown respect to his parents and has caused his mother pain and grief because he would follow his own inclination irrespective of the wishes of his mother. Such a man will not understand the wants and wishes of a wife. He will be dictatorial, arbitrary, severe, and consider that the wife's wishes and plans must be after his mind. Her independence will be taken away, and she cannot preserve her individual judgment to follow the dictates of her own conscience. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 14

Brother Vuilleumier's son next to John broke his arm and injured his head. He is not as careful as he ought to be, and he has been often cautioned in regard to his careless ways. This is a severe lesson to the poor boy. He is taken to the hospital. This is the custom of all who are sick. They find excellent physicians and good care and pay for board only 32 cents per day. It is a great blessing in this country. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 15

Tuesday, December 22, 1885

Basel

It is a beautiful morning. The air is cool and bracing. The sun shines in its glory. We enjoy sitting in the sunshine. I have prepared several talks given during our conference here. I read pages I had written on courtship and marriage to Brother Whitney. He wants it put into French and published. I had a talk with Sister Bourdeau in reference to Edith's condition and in reference to her home matters. She was grateful for the conversation, as it would be a help to her when she goes home to Italy. Received a large bundle of letters from Brother Daniel [Bourdeau]. He writes tenderly. May the Lord guide His servant in judgment is my prayer and spare his life until his work is done. He does too much, and we know not how to hinder him. He has an active brain that cannot find repose and rest. Brother Albert Vuilleumier came this evening, accompanied by his daughter Eloise (?). (A copy of a letter sent him, which I wrote from Geneva to Brother [Vaucher], brought him great relief.) He thought best to bring his daughter here to help her brother John. She will have something to take up her mind and be where the persistent efforts of the young man will not call forth her sympathy and lead her to wrong decisions.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 16

Wednesday, December 23, 1885

Basel

Today it is cloudy and looks like a storm. My rest was not good last night. Visited the sick room. I scarcely think Edith will last another night. She does not now have consciousness of what is said or what is done.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 17

I had a long talk with Brother Albert Vuilleumier in regard to the question which has vexed his soul—the disposal of his daughter in marriage when he is convinced it would not be for her good. As her father and guardian he feels he could not consent to this union. We agree perfectly in the matter.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 18

Send to Daniel Bourdeau at Geneva four pages of letter paper with words of comfort to him. Received from him today the present of a watch as a memorial of his kind regards to me whom he says he loves as a mother. Send to W. C. White eight pages of letter paper.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 19

December 24, 1885

Basel

I awake about five o'clock, later by one or two hours than usual. I feel so thankful to my heavenly Father for this precious rest I have had during the night.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 20

We hear the news from Brother Whitney that Edith fell asleep in Jesus half-past five this morning. Her life passed away without a struggle. She is at rest. Praise the Lord that she did not suffer much. But strange news comes to us that a sister named Keller, but a short distance from us, is dead. Her son is a worker in the cause—a colporteur. Her daughter works in the office. She has one son besides. She was well, apparently, last Sabbath, but died with a sudden attack last night. Have not learned the particulars. Its suddenness surprises us all.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 21

We see an unusual sight for Basel. The earth is covered with a snowy mantle. How pure and beautiful everything looks. I think there is spread out before us the most beautiful picture I have ever seen in winter. The park, so level, is covered with its beautiful white mantle. The trees that border the park are crystallized with mingled snow and ice. Everything is covered with its winter foliage. The iron bridge for foot passengers, above the railway track, is completely white—painted by the frost and icy breeze of winter. Everything, as far as the eye can reach, presents a picture which God has painted for us which is beyond the power of any earthly master artist to copy. It is grand, beautiful, beyond the powers of pen or human lips to describe.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 22

December 25, 1885

Basel

This is Christmas day. There is a great solemnity upon my mind. Edith is dead in the house. Her record is in the books of heaven, unchangeable. What a solemn thought is life, and how we live that life! We have evidence that Edith's life is not what it might have been, but her last days were days of penitence, repentance, and confession. We have reason to believe that the pitying Redeemer accepted Edith and that she sleeps in Jesus. Several of us went to a chapel to a religious service. My heart was made sad to see that this service was mostly composed of forms.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 23

December 26, 1885

Basel

Sabbath. I am sorry that I feel unable to take part in the funeral services today. I am much exhausted—cannot command strength to write or to speak. My mind is active. Past scenes of suffering and death of my loved ones in the family circle urge themselves upon me and I live it all over again. The hearse is at the door, and the carriages for the mourners. There are two funerals today. Sister Kelly and Sister Edith Andrews.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 24

December 27, 1885

Basel

I devote some time to writing today. Call on Sister Whitney. Visit with Brother and Sister Bourdeau. Walk out and feel much refreshed. It is not clear, but the sun is trying to struggle through the mist and fog.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 25

Ella has a fine time trying to snowball her mother and grandmother. She has taken cold—we think from eating snow, creating inflammation, chilling her lungs and stomach. We hope with treatment she will be well again soon.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 26

December 28, 1885

Basel

Monday. I have prepared an article today—a discourse given at the time of the conference in Basel. Walked out before dinner. Bid Brother Bourdeau and wife farewell. They return to Italy. They were disappointed their baggage did not get to the depot in season. We ride out with them one hour and a half. We see some interesting places in the city. It is a clear, cool, sunshiny day.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 27

December 29, 1885

Basel

Tuesday. I awake at three o'clock. The slamming of the blinds woke me. Cannot sleep again. Examine my writing. Write seventeen pages.4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 28

December 30, 1885

Basel

Write today eighteen pages in regard to Sabbathkeeping. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 29

December 31, 1885

Basel

It is cloudy today. Devote the day to writing. I had rather a singular dream in the night, and to me very comforting. 4LtMs, Ms 30, 1885, par. 30

Ms 30a, 1885

Record of Writing — (November 16 — December 24, 1885)

Europe

Nov. 16 - Dec. 24, 1885

Previously unpublished.

Left Christiania November 16, arrived in Basel, Switzerland, 19th of November.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 1

November 20, sent to W. C. W. 12 pages.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 2

November 22, wrote 6 pages.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 3

November 23, mailed 4 pages to Marian Davis, 6 pages to Willie White.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 4

December 3, sent to Brother Harmon's address 4 pages to May Walling; 6 pages to Brother and Sister Harmon; Addie Walling 6 pages.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 5

December 4, sent to W. C. White 12 pages of letter paper.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 6

December 5, wrote 4 pages to Brother Oyen.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 7

December 6, 7 pages.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 8

December 7, wrote 8 pages to W. C. White; to Reuben Tapley 6 pages.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 9

December 8, wrote 4 pages to Brother and Sister Lockwood and 2 pages to my adopted son, Johnny.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 10

December 16, wrote 8 pages to Brother Vaucher.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 11

December 23, send to D. T. Bourdeau 4 pages letter paper; W. C. W. 8 pages of letter paper.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 12

December 24, wrote 8 pages to Brother and Sister Oyen; sent letter to Brother Lane of 5 pages; sent letter to W. C. W. of 6 pages; to Eliza Burnham of 4 pages; to Addie Walling 4 pages.4LtMs, Ms 30a, 1885, par. 13

Ms 31, 1885

Purity

NP

1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in TSB 92.

Many of ancient Israel fell just in sight of the promised land. What was their sin? Licentiousness. And these unholy passions of the heart are controlling with masterly power many of those who claim to be following Christ. The words and works of many who know the truth are corrupt. They have reasoning power, they comprehend the truth, but have not been thoroughly converted; have not felt the saving power of the truth upon their souls. They do not entertain Christ as an honored guest in their house. Sensual gratification is corroding the entire man, tainting and corrupting the entire household. 4LtMs, Ms 31, 1885, par. 1

The truth is refining, purifying, sanctifying in its influence, having control of the conscience, the understanding, and the heart. "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." [1 Corinthians 10:31.] This is the injunction of our Lord. Is this the ruling principle in the home? Is Jesus Christ presiding over the home? Have its members become corrupted because iniquity abounds in thought, word, and deed? Their religion is of a character to deny Christ, and the home is unsanctified. Commonness in low, earthly, sensual conversation creates an irreligious, tainted atmosphere in their home. Their children are keen observers. The boisterous ways of the parents, the cheap conversation, are not to these children of that nature that would be a savor unto life eternal, but are a savor of death unto death. The truth is like a new patch put on an old garment. The character is not transformed. It cannot be testified of them, "In their mouth was found no guile." [Revelation 14:5.] The guile in their heart finds expression from their lips. 4LtMs, Ms 31, 1885, par. 2

Oh, they are unconverted, unsanctified, unholy. The very truth as it is in Jesus has not been made a blessing unto them. Death has come upon some. They had a false religion, a false faith. The purity and sanctity of the marriage relation instituted in Eden to be kept sacred, elevated, is brought down to administer to lust. The wife is little less than a slave in her home, her life robbed of its greatest happiness.4LtMs, Ms 31, 1885, par. 3

Ms 32, 1885

God's Purpose for Israel

NP

1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in CTr 111.

[First part missing.] ... "I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the Lord that healeth thee." [Exodus 15:26.] 4LtMs, Ms 32, 1885, par. 1

God designed to bestow great blessings upon His people. He purposed to bring them to a good land, which for its richness and fertility was called a land flowing with milk and honey. God designed to establish them there as a healthful, strong, and mighty people, if they would submit to His requirements. The people of Israel had lived upon rich and luxurious food in Egypt, not the most healthful for them, and God would bring them through the wilderness to the good land He had promised them. In their travels [He] would remove from them flesh meats and give them a simple yet healthful quality of food and establish them in the good land of Canaan, a powerful people with not a feeble man, woman, or child in all their tribes. 4LtMs, Ms 32, 1885, par. 2

God did not bring them through by the nearest and most direct route to Canaan, for they would meet opposition in their passage, and a merciful and good God directed their route in the course where they would receive the least opposition from opposing armies. The Israelites, while in Egypt, had not been permitted to learn the art of warfare. The Egyptians would not allow them to go out with their armies to battle, for they were jealous of them and in constant fear lest they would turn against the Egyptians to the side of their enemies, and thus deliver themselves out of their hands. The Egyptians knew that they had no right to thus keep this powerful people as slaves. They knew that there was no justice in it, hence they were in continual fear of insurrection and revolt, and they therefore kept them guarded and strove by oppression to crush them into submission. They hated the people who were of so much profit to them and shamefully entreated them. The course of Southern slave-masters has been marked with the same spirit, and they have acted over the same cruel oppression and have acted out the same hatred which the Egyptians manifested to the Hebrew, which savors not of the divine, but of the satanic.4LtMs, Ms 32, 1885, par. 3

Since the fall of Eve in Eden through intemperate desire to gratify the taste, this has been the prevailing sin of the human family. Eve, after her transgression, prevailed upon her husband to eat also. Adam was not deceived as was Eve, but he was influenced by her to do as she had done—eat and risk the consequences, as no harm, she said, had come to her. Adam yielded to the temptations of his wife. He could not endure to be separated from her. He ate and fell from his integrity. Since this lamentable occurrence, which has introduced sin into our world, intemperate, lustful appetite and the power of influence which one in wrong exerts over another have brought an accumulation of misery which it is not possible for language to describe. In no other way has Satan come to fallen man with his temptations as successfully as through the appetite.4LtMs, Ms 32, 1885, par. 4

Rebellion and insurrection were continually arising in the armies of Israel in their journeyings through the wilderness because their depraved appetites could not be indulged. Moses was brought into the greatest perplexity and his heart made sad through the continual murmurings of the children of Israel because God for their own good withheld from them flesh meats.4LtMs, Ms 32, 1885, par. 5

They were continually imagining trouble and anticipating evil. They were jealous of Moses, thinking that he might have selfish motives in leading them from Egypt, that it might be his desire to lead them into the wilderness that they might perish there, and he enrich himself with their possessions. They had witnessed the miraculous power of God in their deliverance. They had seen the Red Sea parted and the waters standing as walls on either side. They passed through on dry land, while their enemies daring to venture in ... [The remainder of the manuscript is missing.]4LtMs, Ms 32, 1885, par. 6

Ms 33, 1885

Sermon/Sermon at Christiania, Norway

Christiania, Norway

November 10, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in HP 289; 5MR 435.

Colossians 3:12-17. “Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him.”⁴*LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 1*

We have here presented before us the genuine fruit of righteousness. Christ has said, “By their fruits ye shall know them.” [Matthew 7:20.] Let every one present closely examine his own heart to see if these graces are cultivated. Do you cherish kind thoughts and feelings for one another? Have you cultivated a meek and lowly spirit? Are you long-suffering, forbearing one another and forgiving one another? If you possess these graces, you are indeed holy and beloved. All who have a living connection with Christ will manifest the spirit of Christ. We possess varied traits of character, and when we are brought together in church capacity, as children of God, we have a work given us of God—to seek to harmonize, to be of one mind, of one judgment, to speak the same things, that there be no division among us. Not one can be excused from a part in this practical work. We have, individually, an experience to obtain for ourselves. One cannot obtain an experience for another, but we must have an individual experience, for which we will require constant watchfulness and unceasing prayer.⁴*LtMs, Ms 33, 1885,*

par. 2

We cannot save our own souls, but Christ has died to redeem us. He gave His life a ransom for us. Christ alone can cleanse us from all sin; and when we are in right relation to God, when we feel our weakness, our great need of the grace of Christ, we are brought into that place where we can have an influence over one another for good, and, in the exercise of simple faith and unlimited trust, become as little children. We are made partakers of the divine nature. We will be like Jesus—pure, holy, harmless, and undefiled. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 3

We are instructed in this lesson to have bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering. Let the soul be united by faith and love to God, and then we shall enjoy this precious experience. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 4

“Great peace have they who love Thy law, and nothing shall offend them.” [Psalm 119:165.] Can this be the feeling of many here today? Are you not easily offended, nervous, irritable, passionate? If the truth dwells in the heart, it will sanctify your life. We are not placed here in this world to please ourselves. Christ lived not to please Himself. He was constantly working to bless and save others, and not one of us should feel satisfied unless we can have a good influence over each other. We are in a world where we can see faults in the characters of others, while we do not see our own faults or realize our own dangers. We should be like Christ. He was true in every purpose, feeling, and thought. This we must individually be if we are followers of Christ. Jesus despises all pretense, falsehood, unreality. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 5

We have no right to judge one another. God has not placed any one of you on the judgment seat. You have souls to save or souls to lose. We have before us a work to do for our own souls. If we neglect this work, it is to our ruin. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 6

[Left side of page torn away in this paragraph:] We should have an ... united with us in church capacity, and I will tell you how you can. If you see one who is becoming weak in ... errors to others and place them in the worst light. ... in loving kindness and try to help him. It ... for you to spread through the church that such ... the sayings and doings of your brother that you consider objectionable.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 7

But you must go to your brother or sister in love and show them that you have an interest for their souls. Those who are really the most erring are in greatest need of your help. Do not gossip about them and make remarks about their character, but go to them in the love of Jesus and the love of the truth and try to help them. Then you will be doers of the Word, acting the spirit of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 8

When you are troubled with doubts, and darkness compasses your own soul, the very best course you can pursue to get out of this darkness is to help someone else who is discouraged. As you try to lift others up, behold, you lift up yourself into close connection with God. As you show kindness to others, you will help yourself, for the same will be reflected back upon you. The man who has the most of Christ in the soul will manifest the tenderest sympathy for the souls who need help. If he believes and loves and obeys the truth, he will be the most genuine man on the face of the earth.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 9

We want to present to the world the purity and holiness of our faith; and in order to show the truth of God to those who are in darkness of error, we must have it in our own hearts.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 10

“And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.” [Colossians 3:15.] Do we consider how little gratitude we bring into our lives, how few thoughts we give to our heavenly Father, how readily the words of fretful repining and complaining fall from our lips? How many of my hearers love to dwell upon and to tell of their trials! And how little we offer praise to God! We do not take into consideration all the blessings He bestows upon us from day to day. If we should take this view of the matter and recount our blessings, many of our supposed trials would disappear. We have every reason to be thankful, to praise God. We should not complain, but we should show our gratitude. “Rejoice in the Lord.” [Philippians 4:4.]4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 11

You know the trouble with the children of Israel was murmuring, and when Moses told them of their murmurings, they were displeased and said, Has God spoken only by Moses and not by us? You can see what desperation came upon them. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram gathered together two hundred fifty princes, men of renown, and came against Moses and Aaron and said to them, "Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the Lord? And when Moses heard it, he fell upon his face." Numbers 16:3, 4. He told Korah and his company that tomorrow the Lord would show who were His and who were holy. [Verse 5.] Then he said, "If these men die the common death of all men, ... then the Lord hath not sent me. But if the Lord make a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them and they go down quickly into the pit; then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the Lord." Verses 29, 30. The earth did open and swallowed up these men and all that appertained to them. Why were they angry with Moses? He was giving them just what God had given him. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 12

Notwithstanding the judgment of God upon these men, the next morning some of the people came to Moses and Aaron and charged them with destroying the people of the Lord. God had sent His message to the people that they should put away their sins from them; but the very same sins were manifest in these people, and God brought plagues upon those who murmured. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 13

Now, my brethren and sisters, I beg of you to let gratitude spring up in your hearts for all the blessings God has bestowed upon you. You will always have erring ones among you, and here is where you can show a Christian character. Do not push them away from you; but if you have light, seek to let it shine upon them, and in this way you can help them toward heaven. Every soul that has the spirit of Christ will work the works of Christ. And if any sees one wandering away from Christ, he will feel as Christ did about the lost sheep. There were ninety and nine in the fold, but He went out after the one that had strayed away. This is the spirit we should manifest. As children of God, we should walk in the light; and as we follow in the light, we shall lighten the path for others. Let us cultivate gratitude to God, and then we shall not get our eyes upon little difficulties. And although our brethren and sisters may err, shall we err? We have faults, as well as they, and we want compassion as well as they; we should have compassion for one another. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 14

“Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.” [Colossians 3:16.] Here is the privilege of the Christian. We want to be drawing nearer and nearer to Jesus Christ. We want to look away from the things of this life to the future immortal life. Says Paul, “Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.” 2 Corinthians 4:17.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 15

I wish we could have a pledge in our hearts that we would not utter one word against a brother or a sister. Remember that they also are tempted, it may be more strongly than you; and if you will keep your tongue as with a bridle, then you show that you love God. The very best thing for us all is to have more of the love of God in our hearts, and this we can have if we will study our Bibles. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 16

Elder Andrews, when he was driving his oxen, had his Bible with him, and he would take it out and read a few words and then think of these while he went on with his work. Thus he obtained a knowledge of the Scriptures and of the love of God to man. We can all have our Bibles with us; and when we have a spare moment, we can read a verse and thus keep our minds fixed upon God. If you have your hearts filled with Bible truths, there will not be room for those idle thoughts; and when the enemy comes with his temptations, you can meet him as Christ met him with, “It is written;” you can throw the Word of God in his face. But you do not all see the importance of strengthening your mind with the Word of God. There is more time spent in eating and drinking than in studying the Word of God, and we want you to reform in this. If an angel of God should come right into your midst to help you, you would not be conscious of his presence, because your minds are so taken up with the little things of this life, and in criticizing one another's actions.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 17

Now it is your privilege to keep your minds in a right channel, and let your hearts be in a condition to receive God's Word. Then you can be a light to those around you. We must remember that the end of all things is at hand, and there are important events to transpire in the near future. It is now that we must gain an experience in order to stand the test of the trials that will be brought upon us.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 18

Although you may see your sins, do not be discouraged. We want to encourage in you a living faith in Jesus Christ; when discouragements come, exercise this faith. But you cannot do this unless you have a knowledge of the promises of God and walk out upon these promises. Remember that feeling is not faith; if you follow your feelings, you will be led astray.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 19

I know what it is to be tempted of the devil. Sometimes when sickness comes upon me I begin to feel that I cannot go before the people in my weakness. Then come the promises of God, and I venture out upon His promises. I would not dare to venture out without the help of God; but I go to Him and say, I will walk out by faith; and I find that God always sustains me when I follow by living faith.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 20

There are many who do not understand what faith is. It is to take God at His word and do just as He says. I do not know a friend of my acquaintance who, if I should send a letter, asking him—or her—to do a certain thing for me, and tell him what I would do for him, but that he would do it. Now our heavenly Father has sent us a letter from heaven, telling us what we must do and what He proposes to do for us. But we must follow out the conditions. One is, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." [Matthew 11:28.] Then we are to comply with the condition and say, "Here, Lord, I come to Thee with all my cares and burdens."4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 21

If you imagine your brother or sister has slighted you, do not go and tell someone else, but go to Jesus and tell it to Him, and take His yoke upon you. If you take His yoke, He says, Ye shall find rest to your souls. [Verse 29.] It is not the yoke of Christ that makes the way so hard; it is the yoke you have manufactured for yourselves. You bring burdens upon yourselves, and these are grievous to be borne. God wants you to take your mind off from these things. You will see defects all around you, but you must remember that we are all liable to fail in some things. It will do no good to think of the defects of others; but when you are tempted to speak evil of one another, think of the love of God to you, and you will find that the peace of heaven will come into your souls. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 22

I want you to learn that you must come to God just as a child comes to a kind father and ask your heavenly Father for just what you want. He says He is more willing to bestow His blessing upon you than an earthly parent is to give good gifts to his children. [Matthew 7:11.] I have found great comfort in taking God at His word. He never has failed me in any instance. Now open your hearts, and as children of God speak to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, and make melody in your hearts to the Lord. You cannot do this unless you cultivate love one for another, and you must have it in your mind to speak in psalms. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 23

You remember when you first accepted Jesus, how happy you were in your first love, and how you loved to meet with your brethren and sisters and speak of Jesus. Well, now you want more of this love in your midst today. Heaven is at your hand if you will only follow Christ. Do not, I beg of you, manufacture yokes for yourselves. 4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 24

Listen to the testimony: "The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad." Psalms 126:3. You are to give this testimony to the world. He will do great things for us if we will let Him. But if we allow our minds to take a low channel, the angels of God cannot impress our minds. We must labor constantly to have our minds upon heaven, then we can make melody in our hearts to the Lord, and through Jesus we can be more than conquerors because we have taken hold of His power. "And let him take hold of My strength, that he may make peace with Me, and he shall make peace."

[Isaiah 27:5.] How can we doubt His word for one moment?⁴*LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 25*

You cannot expect help from Christ unless you have faith in His promises. He is my Saviour, should be the language of every heart. He died for me, and He will give me rich blessings, that I may overcome. He does not want any one of us to perish, but that all may have life. And God has laid help upon One that is mighty. I love Him because He first loved me. And I see in Him matchless charms. I want to talk of His love. I do not want to grieve His Spirit. I would not in my heart crucify Him anew and put Him to an open shame. He has done everything for me that He could do. What could a God do more than He has done to awaken love in our hearts?⁴*LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 26*

He wants to do great things for you, if you will only come to Him and give Him a chance. He wants you to lay all your burdens at the foot of the cross. I testify to you tonight that His yoke is easy and His burdens light. Separate sin from you, come and wash in the fountain, that you may stand in that company around the throne at last. "And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." *Revelation 7:13, 14.*⁴*LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 27*

Now as you have faults and sins, separate them from you. Christ says, "If thine hand offend thee, cut it off and cast it from thee! It is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands to be cast into everlasting fire." [Matthew 18:8.] If you have darling sins, separate them from you, that you may have a right relation to God. Let every one cleanse the soul temple and invite Jesus in to take possession, and then we shall have strength to follow after Christ. He is the light, and we can make melody in our hearts to the Lord. Jesus wants to be entertained in our hearts, and will we let Him in? We want, every one of us, to fix our eyes upon the Author and Finisher of our faith, and may God help you.⁴*LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 28*

We want to inquire if there are any here who feel that they are backslidden and are sinners? If we can have these two front seats cleared, we will give such a chance to come forward. We want to see a break here. The God of heaven has spoken with His own voice, and all who would seek God must repair to the temple; therefore we take this step. We want the Spirit of God to come into our midst with power, and now we invite our friends to come; and let the children come forward.4LtMs, Ms 33, 1885, par. 29

Ms 34, 1885

Regarding Ministers' Families

Healdsburg, California

February 15, 1885

See variant Ms 34a, 1885. Previously unpublished.

[This manuscript consists of unverified extracts copied from a document that is not known to be extant. The ellipses are found in the extracts. See also variant Ms 34a, 1885 and Ms 34b, 1885.] 4LtMs, Ms 34, 1885, par. 1

[To Elder and Mrs. C. L. Boyd:] I have some matters I wish to present before you. I thought you were acquainted with the testimony born to Elder [Van Horn] and his wife. If I did not think you knew in regard to this testimony, I would send it to you; but this was the burden of the message: that in accordance with our faith we are required to make any and every sacrifice for the truth's sake; that at this time, when amid the perils of the last days, it was not in accordance with our faith or God's will that our missionaries should fill their hands with cares and burdens which were not essential to the work, but which would eventually greatly lessen the ability to work. The message we have to bear requires much sacrifice; and if they make no change in their habits and in their practices than worldlings in general, they are not letting their works correspond with their faith. 4LtMs, Ms 34, 1885, par. 2

I was shown that Brother and Sister [Van Horn] have departed from God's counsel in bringing into the world children. God required all there was of them in His work, and both could have done a good work for the Master; but the enemy came in and his counsels were followed and the cause of God was robbed of the attention it should have; and instead of raising up many sons and daughters to God, they were doing a work which would bring upon them cares and burdens and retard the work God had given them to do. God will say to them, "Who required this at your hands?" [isaiah 1:12.] ...4LtMs, Ms 34, 1885, par. 3

You are following the very same course as Elder _____. Had you both done that which God would have been pleased to have had you do, giving all your thoughts, all your interests to the work, you both unitedly might have done a good work; but when I learned that you are soon to have an addition to your family, I know that you are not doing the will of God, but following your own inclinations to please yourselves. I have special light in regard to these things, but hardly know how to present it before our people. The missionaries had better set an example to the people in these things that correspond with our faith.4LtMs, Ms 34, 1885, par. 4

Ms 34a, 1885

Regarding Ministers' Families

Healdsburg, California

February 15, 1885

Variant of Ms 34, 1885. See also Ms 34b, 1885. Previously unpublished.

[This manuscript, a variant of Ms 34, 1885, consists of unverified extracts copied from a document that is not known to be extant. The ellipses are found in the extracts. See also Ms 34b, 1885.] 4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 1

Extracts From a Testimony [to Elder and Mrs. C. L. Boyd] 4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 2

This is the burden of the message, that in accordance with our faith we are required to make any and every sacrifice for the truth's sake; that at this time, when amid the trials of the last days, it was not in accordance with our faith or God's will that our missionaries should fill their hands with cares and burdens which were not essential to the work, but which would eventually greatly lessen the ability to work. The message we have to bear requires much self-sacrifice; and if the workers make no change in their habits and in their practices than worldlings in general, they are not letting their works correspond with their faith. 4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 3

I was shown that Brother and Sister Van Horn had departed from God's counsel in bringing into the world children. God required all there was of them in His work, and both could have done a good work for the Master; but the enemy came in, and his counsel was followed, and the cause of God was robbed of the attention it should have had; and in the place of raising up many sons and daughters to God, they were doing a work which was bringing upon them cares and burdens and retarding the work that God had given them to do. God will say to them, "Who required this at your hands?" [Isaiah 1:12.] ... 4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 4

When I learned that you were to soon have an increase in your family, I knew that you were not doing the will of God, but following your own inclination to please yourselves. I have special light in regard to these things, but hardly know how to present it before our people. The missionaries had better set the people an example in these things that correspond with our faith. God did not send Elder Van Horn here to engage in the work of raising up a family; neither has He sent you here to follow his example.4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 5

I am called to write testimonies to different ones in regard to the inconsistency of their going out into distant fields and at the same time bringing children into the world that will increase their cares and burdens in a large degree. I am distressed as I see the state of things among our workers.4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 6

Brother and Sister Enoch professedly gave themselves to the missionary work, but all the time have labored as faithfully as if the salvation of their souls depended upon how large a number of children they could bring into the world. ... How much better would have been their influence if they had not married, but both devoted their interests to God's cause; and after they were married, how much better for them if they had thoughtfully considered the situation and decided that God should have all the powers He had given them in the work of saving precious souls.4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 7

Brother Cudney could have done a very good work for the Master, had he devoted himself to this work as the Lord's servant. When married, his work has not been more than one half what it might have been. Then he must bring a child into the world, and now he can do one third what he might have done had he studied how he could best serve God who called him to be a soldier of the cross of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 8

These cases will illustrate all. The expenses are increased largely, and without the real managing ability there will not be more than one third to the cause of God that might have been. And the time is, and has been for years, that the bringing of children into the world is more an occasion of grief than joy. The very atmosphere is polluted.

Satan controls these children, and the Lord has but little to do with them. ...4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 9

If our workers were walking close with God, they would see the situation and would feel that it is no matter of rejoicing to bring a child into the world. A blessing is pronounced upon the eunuchs who keep the Sabbath, etc. Isaiah 56:3-5.4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 10

The time has come when, in one sense, they that have wives be as though they had none. God wants us to be consistent people, our works corresponding with our faith. ...4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 11

I am thoroughly disgusted with the course of our preachers and workers. They seem to think one of the important branches of the work is first to get as many children into the world as possible; then if they can give the remnant of their thoughts and ability to the work, they are doing all God required of them. We shall need a voice like John the Baptist, to show my people their transgressions and the house of Israel their sins.4LtMs, Ms 34a, 1885, par. 12

Ms 34b, 1885

Regarding Ministers' Families

Kopparberg, Sweden

[October 22, 1885]

See Ms 34, 1885 and Ms 34a, 1885. Previously unpublished.

[This manuscript consists of unverified extracts copied from a document that is not known to be extant. The ellipses are found in the extracts.]4LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 1

Your case has been troubling me as I am called to write out testimonies to different ones in regard to the inconsistency of their going out into distant fields as missionaries and at the same time bringing children into the world that will increase the cares and burdens in a large degree. The enclosed I should have sent you from Healdsburg, but it was overlooked, and with some additional words will send it now.4LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 2

I am distressed as I see the state of things among our workers. Brother and Sister [Enoch] professedly gave themselves to the missionary work, but all the time have labored as faithfully as if the salvation of their souls depended on how large a number of children they could bring into the world. They have not been married many years, but they have five or six little children. Sister [Enoch] was one who could do a good work, if she could have time to improve her powers, but she has been kept carrying or nursing babies nearly all the time, and her personal appearance is neglected. Her habits are not tidy as they should be, and her strength is exhausted, so it would be better for them both to leave the field and take a piece of land and do their duty to their children they have brought into the world. As the case now stands, they have to leave their children here and there for others to take care of. This is not after God's order. ... How much better would have been the influence of both if they had not married, but both have devoted their interests to God's cause, and after they were married how much better for them to have thoroughly considered the situation and decided that God should have all the powers He had given them in the work of saving precious souls. Now their greatest care must be their family, or ought to be, now [that] they have brought them into the world.4LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 3

Brother [Cudney] could have done a good work for the Master had he devoted himself to this work as the Lord's servant. When married, his work has not been more than one half that which it might have been. Then he must bring a child into the family, and now he can do but one third what he might have done had he studied how he might best serve God who had called him to be a soldier of the cross of Christ. These cases will illustrate all.4LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 4

The time is and has been for years that the bringing of children into the world is more an occasion of grief than of joy. The very atmosphere seems polluted. Satan controls these children, and the Lord has but little to do with them. Parents give but little attention to them, and in the near future they will be removed by death. "Woe unto them that be with child and give suck" [Luke 21:23] even in these days, and if our workers were walking closely with God, they would see the situation and would feel that it is no matter of rejoicing to bring a child into the world. A blessing is pronounced upon the eunuchs who keep the Lord's Sabbath. He says He will give them a name, and a place better than of sons and daughters. [Isaiah 56:4, 5.]4LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 5

The time has come when in all [one?] sense they that have wives be as they that have none. God wants us to be consistent people, our works corresponding with our faith. Since your going to _____, and your course in relation to these things, I have less confidence in your judgment and wise management and foresight than before. Because I know that in some things God has not been made your Counselor. ... I write these things because you need them. I shall write to Elder _____.4LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 6

The Lord wants your physical, mental, and moral powers; and if you think it the best work you can do to bring babies into your family, God help you to have wisdom enough to place yourself in different relation to His cause and do the work that seems so important to you at this time.4LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 7

Our preachers and our workers seem to think one of the important branches of the work [is] first to get as many children into the world as possible, then, if they can give the remnant of their thoughts and ability to the work, they are doing all God requires of them. We shall need a voice like John the Baptist lifted up to show my people their transgressions and the house of Israel their sins.⁴*LtMs, Ms 34b, 1885, par. 8*

Ms 35, 1885

Sermon/The Use of Means

Stockholm, Sweden

October 19, 1885

This manuscript is published in entirety in 19MR 133-140. +^{NoteOne} or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

[First portion missing.]

... [Even though] lofty trees that know nothing should be destroyed, and this beautiful earth should be broken up, they would not believe that message. But if they had, it would have been for their salvation. They had separated so far from God that they did not hear His voice.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 1

The ark was built upon dry land; Noah walked by faith; and when the time came and they saw the beasts, two by two, going into the ark, and the heavens darkened by the fowls that were going two by two into the ark, these were they that were obedient to God; but man was not obedient, but the beasts and fowls were finding a place of refuge; yet notwithstanding this wonderful sight, still the people were unbelieving, and at last God bade Noah and his family to go into the ark, and He shut them in.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 2

There they remained one week enclosed in the ark before it began to rain. How then did these wicked men mock and deride those in the ark. Was it not a trial of their faith to be shut in there for one week and yet have no rain? But after seven days it began to rain. Up to this time there had been no rain, there had a mist arisen to water the earth; but as the rain began to fall slowly at first, then more came, they began to inquire, What shall this come to? And at last the heavens were opened and the rain poured down in torrents, and then every one began to be swept away; but the ark floats upon the troubled waters. What would the inhabitants of the world have given then could they have had a place within the ark. As the heavy clouds were over them pouring down their torrents of rain, the inhabitants of the old world began to climb to the tops of the mountains, but the water reached to the tops of the highest trees, and they were swept into the boiling deep.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par.

3

Then we read, "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be when the Son of man shall be revealed." [Luke 17:26, 30.] The wicked will be destroyed, not by water, but by fire. But before the Son of God shall come, He sends the warning that He is soon to come to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood and shall no more cover her slain. Now Christ says that just before His coming such a state of things will exist as existed in the old world. They did not repent before God, but went right on eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not till the flood came and took them all away. Well, is it a sin to eat or drink? When we carry it to excess it is a sin. When we carry the marrying and giving in marriage to excess this is also a sin.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 4

God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son to save mankind from perishing. He has placed heaven within their reach, and thus He has claims upon every man. He has given them His commandments to observe; and although they may ignore His claims, yet they cannot throw them off; it is His law that is to govern heaven and earth. And when they forget God and serve themselves, the fear of God is not before them, and sin to them is not sin. Iniquity prevails, and just before the appearing of the Son of man in heaven Satan will appear to attract men, and if it were possible he would deceive the very elect. Here are the transgressors of God's law, and Satan who was the first transgressor, leading them on. Can you wonder that iniquity prevails everywhere? And just prior to the coming of the Son of man, their minds are employed in eating and drinking, and marrying and giving in marriage, and heaven is put out from their minds.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 5

Look at the state of things as they exist today. How little thought of God or heaven there is among the people. Entire families are brought up with no knowledge of God. And your children, that God has given you, what are you doing for them? Are you bringing them up in the fear of the Lord? These little children can be educated from their very babyhood to love and honor God; and if you train them in this way, then you will see that God is helping you in your feebleness. In the morning you want to teach your children that God is your trust. Teach them that they are living for the future immortal life, and not for this world. You want to bring God into your house and family. You want to feel that not one impatient word will be uttered in your family. You want to carry an influence that is heavenly and act as though you believed that Christ is coming. Many act as though riches were indispensable. Why riches cannot save your soul. Looks cannot save your soul. It is a humble confession of all your sins that will bring you into favor with your heavenly Father.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 6

Are you using [what] God has given you to advance His work? Oh, how ungrateful are the children of men! They act just as the inhabitants of the old world. They allow the blessings that God has given them to separate them from Him; and the more He entrusts to them, the more they forget Him. He has put means into your hands to advance His cause, and you use it to your own glory? Jesus came into the world and became poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich. Listen to His words, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal; for where your treasure is there will your heart be also." Matthew 6:19-21.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 7

We have had an opportunity in California of seeing the result of men's making riches their hope. One day a man would be a millionaire and the next day a beggar. They were trading in stocks; and when they would fail, they had not courage to live and would put an end to their lives. How much better it would have been had they laid up treasures in heaven. Now God wants men who have riches to appropriate them to His cause. They are not theirs, they are only lent them by trust.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 8

And this is the way we have felt with the means that God has placed in our hands. We believed the message. We believed the warning that Christ was soon to come, and we felt such an earnest longing for those in sin that we were willing to make almost any sacrifice. We have known what poverty is, and it was the best experience of our lives. I have fainted more than once or twice with my children in my arms, for want of bread.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 9

As we went from place to place to proclaim the Word of God, we suffered with heat and with cold; but God sustained us in the work, and at last He began to bring the means in for the work. When this means came in we found many places for it. But affliction came into our house. My husband became a paralytic, but our prayers went up to God, and He raised him to health again. This long affliction brought us to want again. But the Lord told us what to do.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 10

We had a home; and as we found those who were in affliction and had no home, we would open our home to them and let them share our comforts. One widow came to me and said, "I don't know what to do with my children, I cannot make them obey me." There was a wealthy man living by her side, and at one time he took me out to show me his buildings and he said, "I have not room for all my goods." Then he said, "I do not know what will become of that poor widow across the way, another winter she will have to suffer." I turned to him and said, "What about your granaries, has not God given you this to help the widow and the fatherless?" Well how many are just as thoughtless as that?4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 11

I went to the widow and told her that I would take the girl. I did so, and afterwards here came the boy, walking forty miles to our home. Well this is how we got our means; as God saw the use we made of the means He gave us, He intrusted us with more. My husband was a financier. I made the statement last night that we had invested $30,000 in the cause, and this is the way we have done it; when we saw a place where the cause needed means, we would hand it out. When we went over to the Pacific Coast, many were raised up to obey God, and then we wanted means to build a meetinghouse; but the people were poor, so we sent over to Michigan, telling them to sell all that we had; and there we invested our means, and a meetinghouse was built in San Francisco and [another in] Oakland. Often when returning from a long journey, we would look to see if our house had burned down in our absence. And my husband would say, "Never mind if the house does burn, we have a treasure laid up in heaven."4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 12

Now I cannot afford to use my means for my own glory; I want it invested to God's glory. When the mission started in Basel, the word came we must have means. I had received from a sister a silk dress. This I sold and sent $50.00 to help the mission. And when my good sisters knew what I had done, they followed my example, and the sum was made up. Instead of putting my means on my own body, I would rather it would go to the widow and fatherless to clothe them. And now the reason we have been able to deposit this in God's treasure: it is because of the benevolence of God, and yet we have some little property left. And since I have seen the missions in such great need, my letters have gone to Healdsburg, California, telling them to sell my house and furniture and send the means over, that I can dispose of it to help these missions.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 13

This is the way we have been working ever since we have had a part in this work. I want you to understand that because God has given us means, we have tried to use it to His glory. I do not feel that anything I have is my own; and when I go to the store to buy anything, I question, Cannot I do without this and put the money into the cause? I repeat it again and again to myself, "Jesus for my sake became poor. He had not where to lay His head, and then shall I who am the subject of His grace have a better time than He?" [2 Corinthians 8:9; Matthew 8:20.]4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 14

We should not be like the people of the Noachian world to have our minds all engrossed in eating and drinking, and marrying and giving in marriage. Christ is soon to come, and who is ready to meet Him? Have you felt for the young around you? Have you given your means to send the truth to the far-off heathen? and overlooked the very ones right by your door? Here are souls right around us that we might save if we would give them our help. We want to watch our opportunities to give help to souls. How many of us while gossiping might take the Bible and give a knowledge to precious souls? We must meet the record of our lives in the judgment. Christ says, "Love one another as I have loved you." [John 13:34.] Do we manifest that love for souls in darkness that Christ manifested for us? Will we take the bread of life and eat it in silence when souls are perishing around us?4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 15

Christ is coming; prepare for His coming, if you would be without spot or blemish; then take up the work, and Jesus will help you. He is the propitiation for our sins. He is shedding His blood for us tonight. When I see the youth, my heart goes out after them. They want some one to lead them. I am astonished at the churches of today. We want home missionaries. We want those who are willing to deny themselves for Christ's sake. We want those who are wide-awake for Jesus, that will labor for souls as those that must give an account. We are responsible for the great light that shines upon our pathway, and we inquire, What are you doing with this light? It is your duty to place yourself in right relation to God, that He can give you more light.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 16

The end of all things is at hand; are we ready to meet Christ when He shall appear? Will He say to us, "Come ye blessed of My Father, enter into the city"? [Matthew 25:34; Revelation 22:14.] When we see the great reward that is in store for the faithful, how our hearts should reach out after others, that they may receive the light. You know not how many hearts are really thirsting for the waters of life, but here is the Bible to open before them. Will you do it? Will you act like men and women that expect the Lord to come? Will you have living faith and pray as never before? Will you wrestle with God as Jacob wrestled with Him? "I will not let You go except Thou bless me." [Genesis 32:26.] And when His blessing rests upon you, you will be anxious to have others receive it.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 17

Well, the day will come when God will come to take vengeance upon those who know Him not, and we want you to be ready. We want eternal things to have some weight upon your minds. We want you to have on the robes of righteousness, that Christ will bestow His blessing upon you. And He says, I will lead you unto living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from your eyes. [Revelation 7:17.] Now my brethren and sisters, if you do have that living faith in Christ, He will give you a faith and hope that the world cannot give or take away.4LtMs, Ms 35, 1885, par. 18

Ms 36, 1885

Sermon/Lessons From the Training and Character of Moses

Torre Pellice, Italy

December 13, 1885

Portions of this manuscript are published in CTr 100, 116, 135; YI 01/29/1903. †NoteOne or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Lessons From the Training and Character of Moses⁴*LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 1*

“By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh’s daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.” [Hebrews 11:24-26].⁴*LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 2*

Moses was a child of God, chosen for a special work. Having been adopted by Pharaoh’s daughter, he was greatly honored by those in the king’s court. As the king’s intended grandson, everyone was intensely desirous of exalting him. They looked upon him as the successor to the throne.⁴*LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 3*

Moses was a man of intelligence, and God in His providence placed him where he could acquire knowledge and fitness for a great work. He was thoroughly educated as a general. When he went out to meet the enemy, he was successful; and on his return from the battle, his praises were sung by the whole army.⁴*LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 4*

Notwithstanding this, Moses constantly kept in mind the fact that by his hand God would deliver the children of Israel. But although learned among the Egyptians, he received in the service of Pharaoh a certain mold which disqualified him for the wonderful work he was to do. This weakness was manifested when he visited his brethren and “spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew.” Moses took the case in hand and privately “slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.” [Exodus 2:11, 12.] He would not have done this had he not, during his training in the Egyptian army, received the impression that the Israelites were to be delivered by the sword rather than by the mighty arm of God.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 5

In order that Moses might be fitted for his appointed work, the God of heaven separated him from his former surroundings. He was to enter another school—the school of Providence. What a change here took place in the life and employment of Moses! He went away into the mountains and cared for a flock of sheep placed in his charge.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 6

Looking at this experience from a human standpoint, men would pronounce it a splendid failure on the part of Moses. Instead of allowing this learned general, who was regarded as fully prepared to do his appointed work, to go ahead and accomplish that which it had been foretold he should do, the Lord sent him into the mountains to obtain an education which would fit him to stand as the general of Israel. There he had opportunities for study, prayer, and meditation. From the pages of the great book of nature open before him, he drew useful lessons. Forty years he lived in the wilderness. Surrounded by the mountains, he learned how to have faith in God and to seek Him most earnestly. While caring for the sheep, he met with conflicts, hardships, and discouragements, and was taught precious lessons of patience and long-suffering.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 7

God designed that Moses should stand out alone, leaning upon His strong arm, that he should learn to pray and to believe. That he might know how to be kind and tender toward his erring brethren, he was, in the care of his sheep, taught lessons of kindness and tenderness. Moses was given a deep and thorough experience for the work before him.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 8

Every one should have an individual experience. We should ever be learning the lessons that Providence designs us to learn. But we allow altogether too many things to engross the mind. Too often we do as others do and think as others think. The habits of others have an influence upon us. If we place ourselves where we look to others to brace us and support us, if we depend on finite help, we do not really know our own strength because we do not stand alone, making God our helper. When thrust out where we have to stand alone, the taproot of our faith fastens upon the only sure support—the infinite God.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 9

This was brought forcibly to my mind when attending a tent meeting in Portland, Oregon. There I saw the results of a tempest which had just passed through the forest, sweeping down everything before it. Those trees standing close together were uprooted and leveled like grass before the scythe. But the wind had not overturned a few isolated trees which stood out separate from the others. I inquired the reason of this and was told that the roots of the trees unmoved by the hurricane were firmly fastened to something underneath. Their taproots had struck down deep, and they had withstood the storm while those which had stood close together were swept down by the tempest.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 10

When God finally asked Moses to go to Pharaoh, Moses had reached the place where he had a humble view of himself. He felt that he was not capable of doing the work, and he pled earnestly that this responsibility might not be laid upon him. Not until after the Lord had convinced him that he was the chosen instrument of God to deliver Israel did he consent to go. He cherished no self-exaltation. On the contrary, among the rugged mountains, with the sheep, he had learned humility—that precious, precious lesson, so important for us all to learn.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 11

When in their flight from Egypt the Israelites came to the Red Sea and learned that the Egyptians were following in their track, it seemed to them as if they had been brought out there to perish. Although the Lord had wrought so wondrously in their behalf, they had not the faith they should have had. They were in a position of great peril—the Red Sea before them and the impassable mountains shutting them in on either side—and they murmured against Moses, saying, “Why did you not leave us in Egypt?” [Exodus 14:11, 12.]4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 12

But Moses had learned his lesson. The waywardness of the children of Israel often tempted him to become stirred, but at such times we find him pleading with God to work for them. In this emergency he could not go away and kneel down to pray. He looked in faith to the invisible Leader, and his cry came into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. The command was given by God, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." [Verse 15.] 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 13

As by faith the people stepped into the sea, the waters rolled back, a path was made, and they walked through on dry land. As they started upon the path which Providence had marked out for them, the pillar of cloud rose and moved grandly over their heads, taking its position between the two armies, following them instead of going before, thus shielding them from the sight of the Egyptians. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 14

The Egyptian host, attempting to follow, were troubled by angels of God; and when they had passed into the midst of the sea, at the word of the Lord, the waters came tumbling down upon them. Moses was now thoroughly convinced that it was the Captain of their salvation, the Lord of hosts, who was leading His people. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 15

This is the very faith Jesus wants us to have. When difficulties arise, let us have faith. When it seems that we must meet impossibilities, let us pray. Like Moses, we must learn to commune with God and to trust in Him to work for us. If we are obedient to all of God's commandments, we must, like Moses, learn to talk with Him as with a friend. On the steamboat, in the railroad car, among the multitude, or wherever we are, our silent petitions are to ascend to the God of heaven. His ear is ever open to hear the cry of His needy saints. Man's necessity is God's opportunity. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 16

After the children of Israel had listened at Sinai to the giving of the ten commandments, they fell into idolatry, and the Lord was angry with them. He said to Moses, "Let Me alone, ... that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation." [Exodus 32:10.] But no; the man who had learned to seek after the lost sheep in the wilderness, who had endured cold and storm rather than leave one sheep to perish, could not give up the people placed in his care. He pled with God not to give them up, but to forgive their transgression. He prayed, "If Thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, blot me, I pray Thee, out of Thy book which Thou hast written." [Verse 32.] His earnest intercessions prevailed with God. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 17

Moses declared, "If Thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence." [Exodus 33:15.] He no longer had any confidence in himself. His watchword was, The God of Israel is my Strength and my Leader. He received no adoration as did the kings of other nations. Repeatedly he told the children of Israel that he was only what the God of Israel had made him. In all the battles in which they obtained the victory, he told them that they were not to claim the honor, for it was the God of Israel who gained the victory in their behalf. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 18

When the Lord told Moses, "My presence shall go with thee" [Verse 14], we might think that this mighty man of God would have been satisfied. But he was not. He still urged his petition. "He said, I beseech Thee, show me Thy glory." [Verse 18.] Was Moses rebuked for his presumption? The Lord told him that no man could see Him face to face and live; but He took that mighty man of faith, and put him into a cleft in the rock, and there revealed to him His glory. God passed by him, and Moses looked upon his Lord. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 19

When Moses returned to the people, they could not look upon his countenance; for he had been talking with God, and his face reflected the glory of God which had been revealed to him. "The skin of his face shone." [Exodus 34:29, 30.] When talking with the people, he was obliged to cover his face with a veil. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 20

Not the pompous, boastful, unbelieving man, but the humble, faithful man is mighty in the sight of God. In order that he may answer their prayers, the Lord desires His people to obtain an individual experience. The nearer they come to Jesus Christ, the closer their view of His loveliness and life, the more humble will be their opinion of themselves. The lower their estimate of self, the more distinct will be their views of the glory and majesty of God. When individuals claim that they are sanctified and holy, no clearer evidence is needed to show that they are not holy. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 21

The apostle who was exalted to the third heaven, who heard unspeakable words, not lawful for man to utter—he it was who said that he had not already attained, neither was already perfect, but that he pressed “toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.” [Philippians 3:14.] Bible sanctification is the work of a lifetime. Throughout life we will have our conflicts with the powers of darkness and will be obtaining precious victories. Our eyes must be kept fixed upon the mark of the prize. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 22

When Joshua went up from the Jordan to take Jericho, he met a majestic Being, and at once challenged Him: “Art Thou for us, or for our adversaries?” [Joshua 5:13.] The answer was, “As captain of the host of the Lord am I now come. ... Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy.” [Verses 14, 15.] Not Joshua, the leader of Israel, but Christ Himself, accomplished the work of taking Jericho. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 23

These were the lessons continually given the children of Israel. By directing their attention to the God of heaven, Christ taught them not to take the glory to themselves. Let us not cherish self-exaltation. When we begin to think we are something, let us remember that we have nothing different from or better than our fellow men, except what God has given us. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 24

When in need, bear in mind our relation to the children of Israel. Their history is clearly traced by the pen of inspiration. We are not to imitate their example of murmuring and repining. God placed upon the lips of Moses no words of condemnation. In this respect they were separate and distinct from other nations. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 25

In accepting the religion of Jesus Christ, many seem to think that they are taking a downward step. These are in need of stepping down from their self-esteem and self-righteousness, and humbling themselves before God. But those who place themselves in connection with the living God, as His sons and daughters, are taking steps upward. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 26

“Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.” [2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.] We are to talk of heaven and heavenly things, keeping ourselves in a position of supplication before God. It is not safe for any of us to feel that we are where our feet cannot slip, but we should feel that the ground whereon we stand is holy. Cleanse the soul temple of its defilement, that Christ may come in and reign supreme. By beholding Jesus Christ, we shall grow up into His likeness. The more closely we are connected with Him, the more clearly we shall see our imperfections. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 27

Christ says, “Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.” [Matthew 11:28.] And then He says, “Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me.” [Verse 29.] What are the conditions?—We have to bear the cross. Every morning we are to inquire, “Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?” [Acts 9:6.] Wherever we are, our prayers should each day ascend to God for light. We are to go to Him for our orders. Thus we learn daily precious lessons in the school of Christ. 4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 28

When we are receiving a training, as did Moses in the school of Christ, what shall we learn?—to become puffed up?—to have an exalted opinion of ourselves?—No, indeed. The more we learn in this school, the more we shall advance in meekness and lowliness of mind. We are not to feel that we have learned everything worth knowing. We should put to the best use the talents God has given us, that when we are changed from mortality to immortality, we shall not leave behind that which we have attained, but may take it with us to the other side. Throughout the ceaseless ages of eternity, Christ and His work of redemption will be the theme of our study. Let none of us think that we are ready to graduate. There are new lessons for us to learn every day. As did Moses, we may say, “Show us Thy glory” [Exodus 33:18], and by living faith grasp the arm of power.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 29

Our lack of simplicity is the great cause of our weakness today. We think we can do something great. We seem to think that God could not carry on His work without the assistance of finite men. True, God can use men when they yield themselves to Him; but there are few who are willing to place all their talents into His service. Because they love the praise of the world and desire honor and exaltation from others, they will not lie at the feet of Jesus. The Pharisees would not believe on Christ, but sought for and gained worldly honor. Those who keep their eye single to the glory of God will receive their reward by and by.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 30

In order to know the power and strength of true godliness, we must hide in Jesus, dedicating ourselves to Him without reserve. When we make an entire surrender to Christ, laying ourselves upon the altar as a living, consuming sacrifice, He will accept us. Fully dedicate your strength, your mind, all your abilities, to God. Wherever He places you, however humble may be your position, work with fidelity.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 31

Every soul is precious; for the blood of a crucified and risen Savior has purchased every one. All the gold and silver in the earth could not redeem one soul. Neither intellect nor education can pay the price of redemption. Only through an entire surrender to God can we gain the free gift of the Saviour—eternal life.4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 32

Wealth or position will not avail when we come to the Father. The name of Jesus is our password, and as we plead in the name of our mighty Advocate, for His sake our sins are washed away. In this world there is neither comfort nor happiness without Jesus. We must acknowledge Him as our Friend and our Saviour. How can we fail to love Him, when He has first loved us? In Him are matchless charms. Oh, that we may all be with Him through the ceaseless ages of eternity!4LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 33

“Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt,” Moses kept his eye fixed upon “the recompence of the reward.” [Hebrews 11:26.] Let us likewise keep our eyes fixed upon the reward which God has promised, and walk in great humility before Him, for He who says, "Them that honor Me I will honor" [Samuel 2:30], will crown His faithful children with eternal glory and honor.⁴*LtMs, Ms 36, 1885, par. 34*

Ms 37, 1885

Sermon/Address to Ministers

NP

1885

Previously unpublished.

The older laborers are doing too much, the younger laborers too little. More earnest labor can be put into the cause by younger men. The reason why many do not grow into men who can be depended upon for wisdom, tact, and keen foresight, is not that God has not given them capabilities, but that they do not use the powers they have. They are content with reaching a low standard. Many who consider themselves missionaries, come every way short of the reality. When the truth from the lips of God's experienced servants comes home to the soul, they are affected, they have convictions that their life is not as God would have it. They feel themselves greatly deficient. They have cherished sins that they wish they had not, and they purpose to reform; but these reforms are fitful. Many are slothful, and do not, like Daniel, put forth determined effort to carry out their purposes in daily life.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 1

There are men among us who go through life shorn of half, and some two-thirds, of their strength for want of firm determination to put away all evil. They do not see and realize that God claims from them symmetrical, decided mental and moral development. Many go crippled all through life, with defects that in the strength of Jesus they might overcome if they would make earnest effort to be perfect in their sphere as God is perfect in His sphere—missionaries and workers in the Lord's cause, and yet carrying along blemishes as too precious to be given up. They are not transformed, but they engraft the truth upon the natural stock and never outgrow their defects, never reach for higher, holier attainments. Elevated, refined tastes and sentiments are not brought into their daily experiences.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 2

Their language, both spoken and written, is very defective. Their accounts are so imperfectly kept that it is difficult to settle them. An unnatural manner of speaking destroys the melody of the voice. Uncouth attitudes and gestures detract from the force of the truth they present to the people. These persons might through the grace given them, become entirely different, both in manner and character. A few weeks or months of vigilant self-culture—of close, critical inspection of self, with earnest effort to correct every fault and supply every deficiency, to purify the soul and meet the perfect Pattern—would separate gross elements from them. Defects have been fostered by careless training. Let these workers read the Lord's directions concerning His work in connection with the sanctuary; what care was manifested that it should be done with precision!4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 3

How careful every youth should be in his habits when he enters the army of the Lord. He is under drill that he may become a well-disciplined soldier. Precision and perfection of discipline are essential to success. In the army, no irregularities are allowed. If they were, on important occasions some men would be found out of place, and defeat and disaster would be the result. An ill-trained soldier would be likely to make some fatal blunder just at the moment when the greatest promptness and precision would be imperative. A discipline as perfect is no less necessary for the soldiers of Christ. Brethren, if you make blunders, let it not be in connection with the salvation of souls; let it not be in connection with God's holy work. The mold you put upon this work will be far-reaching as eternity. Always consider that every error makes its impression on [page torn here] ... upon yourself.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 4

Those who have low habits must overcome them. God has no use in His cause for men who have defects, and think it will not pay to seek for perfection of character and refinement of manners. If your life is disfigured with blemishes, and you do not want to be corrected; if you make little effort to overcome defects and reach a high moral standard, engage in some other work, I beseech you. The work of battling with objectionable traits of character, inherited and cultivated, is far from pleasant. It is the warring of the spirit against the flesh. But this must be a daily and hourly work, else our offerings will not be acceptable to a pure and holy God. He will not approve our course in accepting the responsibilities of preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 5

My brethren in the ministry, I address you with a heart that feels and is burdened daily because the efforts of those who preach the truth are so feeble. In order to be men after God's own heart, to use your powers to the very extent of your ability, you must make improvement every day. This is the only way in which you can give full proof of your ministry. Show a continual advancement; never entertain the idea that it will not be worthwhile to strictly guard your habits. Practice neatness and order in everything you do. While you should not depend upon forms and a set routine, you should study to be orderly and consistent, making the Bible your highest standard. Schools do not make men, but they help them, in many ways, in acquiring correct speech, and refined habits. If you are really anxious to be men in the fullest sense of the term, "strong men," "having the Word of God abiding in you," you may indeed overcome the wicked one. [1 John 2:14.] Here is the highest kind of education that young men may attain.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 6

I have a message to our ministering brethren, some who have been preaching the truth for years; you are not reaching the high standard as representatives of Christ. You need a more thorough knowledge of the Scriptures. You are too well satisfied with superficial attainments and are falling into habits of mental lethargy. Instead of growing in grace and the knowledge of the truth, some are growing away from both. Many have entertained the idea that Seventh-day Adventists must necessarily be a peculiar people, and some dwell with much satisfaction on the peculiarities that distinguish them from the world; but these peculiarities do not consist in oddities and eccentricities, sharp, blunt speeches, and rough, uncourteous ways. The peculiarity the apostle dwelt upon was the purity of God's chosen amid a crooked and perverse nation, among whom they are to shine as lights in the world. Let no preacher plead for his own way, the indulgence of his own uncultivated taste, because the people of God must be peculiar.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 7

God would have you peculiar so far as all approach to iniquity is concerned. He would have you peculiar in the grace of truthfulness and strict honesty in deal. He would have you peculiar in being patient under every provocation, for this is unlike the world. He would have you peculiar in chaste and holy thoughts, and then from the treasure of the heart will come pure and holy words. He would have you peculiar in that your words are select, well-chosen, your conversation in heaven, from whence you look for the Saviour. He would have you peculiar in your freedom from pride of opinion, not considering that you are of great account, and that your ideas are to be followed, for this is the way the world regard themselves. God would have you peculiar in not thinking more highly of yourselves than you ought to think, but esteeming others better than yourself. 4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 8

“What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?” [Micah 6:8.] This spirit will be unlike the world in every respect. But do not seek to make crosses for the people of God; do not set yourselves up to adopt odd ways, coarse manners, and eccentricities, because you want to show your separation from the world. Said Christ, “The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light.” [Luke 16:8.] They seek to be attractive in their manners, so as to have an influence. There is no sin in cultivating courteous, kindly ways. This is the custom of heaven. But when you sacrifice principle, truthfulness, to put on a worldly politeness, you are conforming to the world instead of being transformed by the grace of Christ. Christ would have every one of His followers like Himself—pure, holy, kind, courteous, refined, and ennobled; and this is the only way we can live unrebukable, without spot and blameless in this crooked and perverse generation, among whom we are to shine as lights in the world. 4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 9

We have a truth that is unpopular because it leads us to depart from the customs and practices of the world. It separates us from the world. The Sabbath of the fourth commandment is enjoined upon us by the law of God, and that law must be obeyed; but the world has not courage to break away from the customs and commandments of men, to be so singular as to obey God rather than men. It is not required of any one of us to make duties and crosses to test the people. God’s Word has given the test, His moral law, and this is so objectionable to the carnal heart that few will accept it. When by their undisciplined habits the defenders of the faith make themselves repulsive to unbelievers, they lay a stumbling block in the way of sinners.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 10

Every teacher of the truth is to be an example of piety. God's word is pledged; in answer to the prayer of the contrite heart, He will pour out His Holy Spirit more and more upon the youthful laborers. But while you may rely upon God wholly, remember that in God you are to seek to become able ministers of the gospel of Christ. Train all your powers to do the very best service for the Master.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 11

The mind becomes accustomed to negligent investigation. You take things for granted because they are advanced by others, and do not search the Scriptures yourselves and know for yourselves what is truth. The mind is satisfied with skimming the surface. There is no real depth and breadth in its reach. It is content with very meager attainments, and it becomes conceited. As Christ's ambassadors, I exhort our ministering brethren to wake up their powers and put to task their mental capabilities. The Lord requires every one of us to make the most of the talents entrusted to him.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 12

Every worker should cultivate the habit of doing his best. Even though he speak to but few, the preacher should not fail to do his best, so long as he claims to be Christ's ambassador, speaking the words from the lips of Jesus. God requires that the highest energies be enlisted in His service. Make an effort to go to the bottom of every subject under investigation. Have a thorough knowledge of that which you are to present to the people. The truth should be made as clear and attractive as possible.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 13

You need to make earnest, vigorous effort, and it will soon become easier than the superficial, because the mind is forced to rally its powers. And the very ambition and determination to sustain the mental tax, the satisfaction of obtaining real elevation of thought, is worth all the effort put forth.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 14

God is not pleased with superficial attainments. He is not glorified when workers in the cause aim so low that their example is a positive injury wherever they go. The gospel standard is lowered.

Religion is degraded. Empty pretension cannot supply the place of ability and intelligence. There has been too little said and done by our responsible men to impress upon the minds of all who enter the field as workers that they must have a dignity that savors of heaven, not of the earth. Will you impress upon every worker the dignity and importance of his work?4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 15

Brethren, angels of God are watching you. They read your every purpose. They sound the depths of your attainments. If your efforts were made before men whom you regard highly, whose good opinion you wish to retain, you would be ashamed of your superficial attainments, and would arouse from your careless inattention. Remember that angels of heaven are lookers-on; that you are a spectacle to angels and men. And it is not only heavenly angels that are watching your course of action, but evil angels, and they taunt the angels of God with your weakness, your defects, and your selfishness; they claim you as on their side, and urge that you shall not have the protection of heavenly angels, but be left subject to Satan's devices. Will you consider how grieved the angels of God must be that they cannot carry to your heavenly Advocate a better report of those who claim to be His representatives?4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 16

Some are in sin, holding the truth in unrighteousness, defiled in heart, and handling sacred things with unclean hands. Shall this continue longer? Shall men engage in the work who are wholly unfitted for its responsibilities, who have no real devotion, no depth of character?4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 17

The worker must meet his work again. The impressions that have been made upon minds are ineffaceable; they will be a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death. The work will tell in eternity. No man can correct the mistakes or supply the deficiencies of another. God calls you to come in close connection with Him, else your work will show the neglects of your life. I beg of you to put away your errors and your sins, and correct your careless manners.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 18

There should be a sense of constant dependence upon God. It is not the smart sermon, the power of oratory, that reaches the hearts of the people; but it is the heart warmed with the love of Jesus. That man who preaches as though he were giving the last warning to his fellow-beings, not to meet them again till the cases of all shall be decided for life or death, will be thoroughly in earnest. He will not think of what others may say of his efforts, but he will have on his heart the burden for precious souls. They must not be lost; they must be saved.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 19

What a work is before us! How sacred! How awfully solemn! I would say to every worker in this cause, "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet for the ground whereon thou standest is holy." [Exodus 3:5.] Opening the Scriptures to others is a sacred work, cooperating with heavenly angels to exalt men to intelligence and purity. You cannot honor God with lower views than those which I present before you.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 20

The churches that have had so great privileges, such precious opportunities, are without excuse before God if they do not use their influence to obtain more efficient workers, His men who will keep up every branch of the work, devoted men who know how to intercede with God. There must be a higher type of piety. There must be gospel simplicity. A chaste, intellectual, sound ministry is essential for this time.4LtMs, Ms 37, 1885, par. 21

1886

Letters

Lt 1, 1886

Bourdeau, D. T.

Refiled as Lt 25, 1886.

Lt 2, 1886

White, J. E.; White, Emma

Orebro, Sweden

June 24, 1886

Portions of this letter are published in TDG 184; 3MR 393-399.

Dear Children Edson and Emma:

We left Basel June 15 and came to Hamburg in company with Sarah and Kristine Dahl. W. C. White preceded us. He started the morning of the fourteenth in company with Elders Whitney and Conradi. These visited Leipsic on business and were quite successful. We met W. C. on the evening of the sixteenth. We took the boat at Kiel at midnight. We were accommodated with a stateroom and had an opportunity to sleep from two until five o'clock. After the boat arrived, we had to go through the preliminaries of the customhouse. That over, we made our way to the waiting room, placed our numerous satchels and bundles together, and took some refreshments—hot milk and bread. We then took up our baggage and stepped into the cars.⁴*LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 1*

Upon examination, one satchel was missing. W. C. White rushed back to the boat and to the waiting room, but it was not found. We thought we would have to stop over a train, which was bad for us, as it would bring us into Orebro on the Sabbath. There we stood with our luggage piled on the platform, undecided what to do. It came happily into our mind that the satchel must have been taken by mistake and was on the very train we intended to take. In a moment or two all our luggage was again placed into the car which was occupied by two gentlemen. One talked imperfect English, and we were glad that he could speak as well, as Kristine had left us the night before for Norway. This gentleman helped us much in every way he could, as we were making every arrangement to secure the missing satchel.⁴*LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 2*

After we had gone on our way, at the first station out, a gentlemen was seen swinging the missing satchel from the car window. The cars tarried a few moments, and we met the gentleman and his party, who were Americans taking a trip through Europe. The gentlemen said the daughter had discovered that the satchel was not theirs. They were as pleased to get rid of it as we were to receive it. He said he had such a stack of baggage that they did not discover the satchel at once.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 3

We arrived at Copenhagen at eleven o'clock, and hired a hack to take us directly to the boat, which was to leave in half an hour. So we made close connections. The boat landed us at Malmo. We had no trouble here to make ourselves understood, as there stands a man dressed in uniform with a broad, silver-looking sash across his chest, passing under the right arm, which signifies his office. Here those of all languages may make themselves understood.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 4

We took our lunch and then stepped on the cars and were favored with a compartment to ourselves. We had been riding two nights and nearly two days, and there was some sleeping done, although the seats were very hard. They were not spring seats, but cushion. They have no regular sleeping-cars attached to the trains as in America. We were told that we would have to change at midnight, but all of a sudden the door of our compartment was thrown open, and a dignified official bristling with regimentals talked away in Swedish, which we could not understand but one word, and that was s-t-r-a-x, which meant "immediately." We were half asleep, but we grasped satchels, blankets, and bundles, and stood in sleepy surprise on the platform. Everything in a pile; but it did not turn out as bad as we expected. We were appointed to another compartment in another car on the same train and made to understand that this would save us the disagreeable changing at midnight, so we found they had made a special arrangement in our favor.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 5

At two in the morning it was daylight. The sun arose at three. At four a.m. we were again aroused by "strax, strax." We learned that we must leave immediately. Again we grasped our scattered belongings, and hurried from the car, and stood on the platform, waiting further orders. We were shown into another compartment on the train. Here we rode one hour, and then changed again, waiting one hour at the depot. Then stepped on board the train, and arrived at Orebro at ten minutes after seven.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 6

We found no one waiting for us. One Swedish coachman seemed determined to take our satchels right out of our hands, but we held to them valiantly. Although he talked eloquently in Swedish, we knew not a word he said. We found a place to leave our baggage, and walked about one mile to the place where we had made it our home when we were here in the fall. We were pleased to meet our Brethren Olsen and Oyen here, and they felt outgeneraled in their calculations. They thought we could not possibly come until noon. They had been at every train the day before, expecting to meet us, and they said they gave the coachman special directions to bring us to the house, and this explained the earnest persistency of the man who wanted to take our satchels. We had been riding three nights and two days, and were very weary.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 7

We found excellent accommodations. Three furnished rooms were prepared for us that had been occupied by girls attending school, but who had gone home on vacation. We are very pleasantly situated with kitchen and two good rooms to do our own cooking. We have a girl to do our housework under Sarah's directions and with her help.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 8

I have now spoken six times. Sabbath we had a good meeting, and I had freedom in speaking. Sunday at six o'clock the hall which holds four hundred people was densely packed. I could scarcely press my way through to get to the stand. It was thought that more than a hundred had to go away because they could not get in. I had much freedom in speaking. The crowd listened with the greatest attention, and I hope and pray that they will take heed to the word spoken. I have spoken four times in the morning meeting, and from the testimonies borne in the morning meetings which Brother Matteson has interpreted to us, they appreciate the words spoken as much as in America.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 9

I spoke yesterday in the business meeting about thirty minutes. I tried to impress upon them the necessity of their broadening their ideas and enlarging their plans. There is very much that needs to be done in educating and in molding the work in these kingdoms.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 10

This is quite an old place, and the inhabitants are of the most intelligent class of people. The country around here is a good farming community, and this seems to be an enterprising place. There are twelve thousand inhabitants. They have here a rapid running river from which are taken many fish. There are most beautiful parks, roads nicely laid out, and seats to accommodate all classes.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 11

It is the practice of W. C. White and myself to walk in the parks about nine o'clock. The sun sets about half-after nine, and at half-past ten we can write by daylight. It is now midsummer. Yesterday there were standards beautifully decorated and all kinds of trees and branches of trees, flowers, and shrubs borne by our window in preparation for the morrow, which is a holiday. This midsummer day they observe day and night in the groves with entertainments and amusements and decorations, as the fourth of July is celebrated in America. No business is done today.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 12

Well, our meetings are going forward well. There are advancements being made. I spoke to them yesterday in regard to there being regular organized efforts to carry forward the work more thoroughly and taking advantage of all the ability possible to push it. There has been a great want of well-organized efforts. Elder Matteson has worked hard both in writing and speaking. He has a great deal to do in translating and to keep the papers going. He has not physical force to do all that is required. He is a feeble man, and as he is so weak in physical strength, he dreads to take the responsibility to introduce anything new and seek to bring the people up to it.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 13

I set before them how we had done the work in America. And I could not see but that they would have to work in the same manner in these kingdoms as we had worked in America. The cry is constantly urged that this people must have a different kind of labor than in America, but I told them that human nature was the same, and the hearts would be reached with the same kind of labor put forth in much the same manner as we had worked in America.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 14

I could not see but that systematic benevolence must be enjoined upon the people here as well as in America, even if their donations were small. The Lord would bless them in conscientiously doing what they could. God has revealed in His Word His appointed way that His work should be carried forward. Those who have small talents must do according to their ability, but [all] must feel that they have a part to act to sustain the work. They must organize tract societies and act as though they expected the Lord to do something for them. The Israelites had to obey the command, "Go forward" [Exodus 14:15], when the Red Sea barred their way; and when they did advance, their feet were in the very waters when the Lord opened the path before them. We want to exercise much more faith than we have hitherto done.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 15

A Dream Concerning J. E. White

I dreamed some things in regard to you, Edson, some parts of which are clear and others not so clear. There was a large meeting in the open air, and you were speaking in this meeting, and the blessing of the Lord was upon you. Your countenance seemed to be lighted up when a number came to you to question some things in regard to yourself, and your mind was being diverted from the work. I said to them, "Let Edson alone, keep your hands off. God has given him a work to do, and he has been hindered by the enemy's devices long enough. As he is placing his feet in the right path, God has not told you to divert his feet from that path." The next that I remember, we were in a meeting in a room. You were answering questions of criticism. I rebuked them in the name of the Lord, and told them that God had not given them any such work to do.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 16

Now, my son, I want you to give yourself wholly to the Lord. I have not been ignorant of the feelings that have existed toward you; in some things you have given occasion for them to misjudge you. But I have no sympathy with the jealousies and envies that have been developed. But I hope that you will take so discreet a course that these things will no longer exist. I hope you will not show weakness in being beaten off from the work God would have you to do, by unjust suspicions and envious feelings of some who ought to know that all such revealings are not of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 17

Now you must allow that I am better acquainted with your duty than some of your brethren are who judge hastily, and from appearances and from hearsay make incorrect decisions. Come just as near to your brethren as you can. I charge you before God and the Lord Jesus Christ to walk in the light which the Lord has given you in regard to your work, and do it manfully. Put on the armor, and work wherever you can. If you are treated coldly and with suspicion, do not be discouraged. Christ is your Master; you are His servant; you must expect that these things will occur; for Satan wants to hurt you and he wants to make my heart ache. God has given you a work to do and I will not consent for you to leave it. Your work has been pointed out to you again and again, and you must not be beaten off from it by prejudice or suspicion. Take the advice and counsel of your brethren in whom we repose confidence. But those poor souls who do not know their own heart, do not let their words or deportment discourage you. Do all you can to free yourself from burdens of business which are not connected especially with the work of God. But keep your souls in the love of God. The Lord will not excuse you in neglect of your duty because you meet with feelings of suspicion and jealousy.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 18

If Captain Eldridge is not to work in the interest of the Review and Herald, be sure and obtain him to do your work, rather than to have his talent employed by those out of our faith. This I have advised you before. You say you tremble to make such a move, thinking it will excite against you great suspicion and that there will be alienation of feelings. But I do not think that this should be regarded so that your interests will be in peril. I want that you should be free as possible to do the very work God would have you do. I would have you unload all that is possible; take a noble, straightforward course; be kind; be courteous to even those who think ill of you. But you must not disregard the voice of God in order to turn aside the shafts of Satan through those who had better be engaged in setting their own souls right with God. But give heed to my words, which are from God, to walk in great humility. Hide yourself in Jesus; be meek and lowly of heart. You are God's property. God has made your mind fruitful in the truth. You are adapted to do a certain work for the Master, if heart and mind are sanctified to God. If you walk with Jesus by your side, you will have His grace to come forth from every trial purified, refined, ennobled to better work for God.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 19

Oh, my son, I do not want that you should make a failure. The time for us to work will soon be ended. I want you to cling to Jesus. Hang your helpless soul upon Him. You must depend on God for your light, for your encouragement, and for His strength. While you should respect counsel, you must look to God for yourself; for finite men may not always see as God sees the way He would have you walk and the responsibilities you should assume.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 20

You need a counselor that will not err; one whom hearsay will not prejudice; one whom narrow ideas will not unbalance his judgment. A path opens on one side, but whether it is the path for you to walk in or to shun is that which you do not discern, and no mortal man can tell you. Another path closes before you, and whether it is the turning aside in another direction or to try your steadfast purpose, none are wise enough to determine. You need a Guide, a Power unseen by mortal eyes, who can judge your motives and the purposes and intents of your heart to guide your ways. The Star in the East will guide your ways if you will only follow it. You are never alone. You are never in a place where you have no one to have interest in you. Our heavenly Father has given His Son to die for you. The cross of Calvary testified that He takes a deep interest in your welfare, for you are the purchase of the Son of God. And you are the subject of many prayers. If you but feel right and do right, all will be well. If you ask the help of God, you will not ask in vain. The Lord is at work in many ways to win your hearty confidence. In nothing does He take more delight than to have you unburden, come to Him for light and strength, and He has promised that you shall find rest to your soul. If you will find heart and voice to pray, He will be sure to hear, and an arm will be reached down to save you. There is a God that hears prayer; and when all other resources fail, He is your refuge, a very present help in time of trouble.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 21

The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenant. My son, I point you in every difficulty to the Saviour. The promise is positive, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." [James 1:5.] What greater assurance could you ask? Such promises are to your Mother of more value than choicest gold. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 22

If you go to God with a humble, believing heart, to seek for guidance in your perplexity, then it is your privilege to rest your case with Him. Heaven and earth may pass before the promise would fail. Then take God at His Word. You did believe His promises when you were only three years old. Have the simplicity of a child now, and come to Jesus in clinging faith. Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and your confidence will never be betrayed, never be turned against you. Look at Jacob pleading with God on the plains of Pennel. His prayer was heard and answered, and he obtained a mighty victory. Consider the case of Moses pleading with God, "Show me Thy glory." [Exodus 33:18.] And the Lord heard him. Refresh your mind with the many cases that have come to God and been heard and answered. It is better to trust in the Lord, than to put confidence in princes. Bring your case to the great Intercessor who is standing before the mercy seat, pleading in behalf of sinful man. I love Jesus; for He has never disappointed me. If you allow the speeches of even your brethren to take away your heart and faith, and turn your feet out of the path of duty, God will neither excuse nor bless you. If you allow cold and unsympathizing ones to discourage you, you will never enter the city of God as a conqueror. Learn to depend implicitly on the Lord Jesus. Study your Bible; for this is the voice of God speaking to you. Ask counsel of God, and you shall receive it. Counsel you will have from some source, and if those in whom you put confidence are not in the counsel of God themselves, they will not be safe advisers. Take counsel of God. "Learn of Me," says Jesus; "for I am meek and lowly of heart: and ye shall find rest to your souls." [Matthew 11:29.]4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 23

You need light; seek it every day from the Sun of righteousness. I am your mother, and I say to you in the name of the Lord, Put on the whole armor of righteousness. God has given you ability and tact, and enlightened your mind in the Scriptures, and He wants you to use every ability that He has given you to His glory. You will ever meet with things calculated to discourage you; but you have a living Saviour, Jesus is the Captain of your salvation. Obey His orders.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 24

Now, Edson, I commit you to God. Take no step, form no plan, enter into no business arrangements, engage in no new pursuits, and in your present business turn often aside by yourself to implore the blessing of the mighty God of Jacob. You had better meet with the loss of all things than to lose your soul. If you seek Him, the Lord will guide you in counsel and afterwards receive you to glory. But do not neglect to do good wherever you can use your talents entrusted to you of God. Do not be extremely sensitive. You are never to lose self-control. Cultivate calm forethought. Be patient. You will show yourself a strong man if you will keep all excitable feelings under command of reason. Be courteous to all, pleasing in disposition, kind and condescending in deportment to the very ones whom you may think may be working against you, falsifying your motives, misstating your actions, over which you frequently become provoked and lose your self-command. This only hurts you and does not help the case at all. If others do you wrong, they wound themselves a great deal more than they wound you. No one doubts the sincerity of the religion of some who greatly lack courtesy, forbearance, and a pleasing disposition. There seems to be a great want of kindness in their make-up. They need the softening, subduing influence of the Spirit of God.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 25

Now, Edson, my son, it will not pay for you to indulge in wrong feelings because others do this. Bring all the compassion and tenderness and beauty of Christian meekness into your life, and your usefulness will be increased fourfold. You will have heaven's approval and the confidence of those who love and fear God. Cultivate the habit of thinking before you shall speak. Meditate and pray before you make a decision, and never allow the opinions of any man or woman to discourage you from doing God's will. And learn to put the very best construction you can upon the conduct of others. Do not regard every man your enemy because they do not meet you with a smile; and it is best not to suspect evil. One of the special graces which is given us in the Word of God is "Thinketh no evil.” [1 Corinthians 13:5.] The very fact that we may be continually suspecting evil will so affect our attitude as to create the very evil which is suspected. Go calmly and fearlessly on, trusting in God; and keep down all feelings of resentment. Commit your case to God, and He will take care of you, my son. You will find it impossible to live in this world without having your feelings sometimes, and your temper, tried; but pray then the more earnestly. Pursue this course, and see if sweet peace will not take possession of your soul. Let them say what they will in regard to your course; if it is wrongfully, God knows all about it. And may the God of peace sanctify you wholly, soul and spirit, is the prayer of your mother. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 26

Since writing the foregoing, I have spoken twice; yesterday at four o'clock the Lord helped me to speak to a hall full. I did not expect a congregation on this holiday, but there was a company of noble-looking people, and they seemed interested. Many shed tears. I spoke from Daniel. “They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.” [Daniel 12:3.] I think there was a good impression made upon the hearers. I tried to set before them the importance of their working with Jesus to reflect light to others. This morning I spoke again in morning meeting, about 70 present, from these words, “Go forward.” [Exodus 14:15.] The Lord blessed me, and I think He blessed others. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 27

W. C. White just came in [at] quarter-past two. They have organized a tract society, and this is an advanced step from what has been in the past. We now go to Christiania after this meeting closes, which will be Sunday. Then, after remaining there two weeks, we commence our homeward journey, stopping in Copenhagen two weeks, where there will be meetings held and an institute to give a drill to those who think to give themselves to the work. 4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 28

So, you see we have yet four weeks' work before us, and we do want to be baptized with the Holy Spirit and be preparing to do the work of God intelligently. I am of good courage, but I would like so much to get home to California when my work here is done. I did not choose this kind of labor, to speak through an interpreter, but I am quite accustomed to it now.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 29

Now, my dear children, do, I beseech of you, walk humbly with God. Remember that the end is near, and whosoever has a part in the city of God will be victors. Love, I beseech of you, my children, to walk in such a manner that you will, by your influence, lead other minds heavenward.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 30

Yours with love, Mother.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 31

Send your letters to us at Basel as usual.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 32

P. S. My son, you must not let pass from your mind the letters I have written to you in regard to your own defects of character. You need, and Emma needs, constantly to gather up the warnings and the reproofs God has given you. Neglecting to heed these warnings is one cause of your present financial embarrassment, and you should gird up your mind and not invent ways to expend means. Keep near the shore, and do not lay out money on any new primary enterprises and then feel the financial pressure. You need to take advice of those you know want to help you. Your temptation is to enter into new projects. God help you to keep clear. It is your duty, for you are the Lord's.4LtMs, Lt 2, 1886, par. 33

Lt 3, 1886

Vaucher, Brother

NP

1886

This letter is published in entirety in 18MR 303-320.

Brother Vaucher:

Some of your letters to Brother Whitney have been read to me by himself, and I am more than ever convinced that you are not aware of your real state of feeling before God. You are in great need of divine enlightenment.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 1

The question is asked, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his ways? By taking heed thereto according to Thy word." [Psalm 119:9.] In these days of peril and corruption, the young are exposed to many trials and temptations. They need an infallible guide, an unerring counsellor. This they will find in the Word of God. Unless they are diligent students of that Word, they will make grave mistakes which will mar their own happiness and that of others, not only in the present, but in the future life.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 2

There is a disposition with many to be impetuous, headstrong, wilful. They have not heeded the unerring counsel of the Word of God. They have not battled with self and obtained precious victories. Their proud, unbending will has driven them from the path of duty and obedience to wander about in the wilderness of disappointment.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 3

My brother, you are sailing in a dangerous harbor. You need a pilot. Will you scorn to accept the much-needed help, feeling that you are competent to guide your own vessel? Are you not afraid that it will strike some hidden rock, and that you will make shipwreck of faith? The present I regard as the most important period of your life. If you are indeed the young man that was shown me, your picture flatters you. Your features are sharper than the picture represents, but in other respects it correctly represents the young man presented before me, who was with other youth infatuated with the subject of courtship and marriage and whose principal burden was to have his own way.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 4

Please look back over your past life and faithfully consider your course in the light of God's Word. Have you made your past wrongs right? You have not cherished that strict conscientiousness in regard to your obligations to your parents that the Bible enjoins. The mother that gave you birth and cared for you in your infancy, you have treated with neglect. You have not regarded her wishes, but have brought pain and sadness to her heart by carrying out your own desires and plans. You have been far from happy. Has the truth you profess sanctified your heart, and softened and subdued your soul? I was shown that the young man of whom I write has a close work to do for himself before he will be fitted to teach the truth to others.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 5

The Bible presents a perfect standard of human character. This sacred book, inspired by God and written by holy men, is a perfect guide for man under all circumstances of life. It lays out with great distinctness the duties and obligations of both old and young. If made the guide of life, its teachings will lead the soul upward. It will elevate the mind, improve the character, and give peace and joy to the heart. But you, my brother, have in many respects been your own counsellor and guide and have taken your case in your own hands. As you have not respected and honored the mother who bore you, you have not respected and honored the judgment of men of experience.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 6

You need to study more closely the teachings of the Bible. You will find revealed in its pages your duty to your kindred and to your brethren in the faith. The fifth commandment reads, "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." [Exodus 20:12.] Again we read, "Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right." [Ephesians 6:1.]4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 7

One of the signs that we are living in the last days is that children are disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy. The Word of God abounds in precepts and counsels, enjoining respect for our aged parents who have guided us through infancy, childhood, and youth up to manhood and womanhood. It impresses upon us a sacred duty to love and cherish those who are in a great degree dependent upon us for happiness, peace, and health. The Bible gives no uncertain sound on this subject; nevertheless its teachings have been greatly disregarded.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 8

My brother, had you had that high regard for the Bible that you should have had, you would have acted altogether differently toward your own relatives and toward those with whom you are connected in church relationship. I was shown a man like yourself who had many lessons to learn, and the most important one was to learn to know himself. If you have anything to do with the cause and work of God, you should have correct ideas of the obligations and duties of children to their parents, and should yourself be constantly learning in the school of Christ to be meek and lowly of heart. While you have been exacting and critical with others, you have not been acting a noble, Christian part toward Brother and Sister Vuilleumier. You have done many things in secret which have had a controlling influence over their daughter. She was not your property, although you have acted as though she were. If having secret communications and meetings is the example you are to give to others, the Lord has no use for you in His work. You have not loved and guarded the interest of your brother, neither have you shown that nobility and integrity of soul that every one who is a child of God will possess.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 9

This is true of many of the youth of today. In order to compass their ends, they will work in secrecy, acting a part that is not frank and open, and according to the Bible standard. By this course they educate themselves to be untrue to those who love them most, and who are trying to be faithful guardians over them. The marriages contracted under such influences are not according to the order of God. Any young man who would lead a daughter away from duty, who would confuse her ideas of God's plain and positive commands to obey and honor her parents, is not one who would be true to the marriage obligations. Ingratitude is one of the greatest sins of the age.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 10

The young man who makes the Bible his guide need not mistake

the path of duty and safety. That blessed book will teach him to preserve his integrity of character, to be truthful, and to practice no deception. "Thou shalt not steal" [Exodus 20:15], was written by the finger of God upon the tables of stone, yet how much underhanded stealing of affections is done and excused by finite beings. A deceptive courtship is maintained, private communications are kept up, until the affections of the daughter, who is inexperienced and knows not whereunto these things may grow, are fastened upon the one who shows by the very course he pursues that he is unworthy of her love.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 11

The Bible condemns every species of dishonesty and demands right doing in all things. He who makes the Bible the guide of his youth, the light of his path, will obey its teachings in all things. He will not transgress one jot or tittle of the law in order to carry out his will or accomplish his object, even if he has to make any and every sacrifice in consequence. If he believes the Bible, he knows the blessing of God will not rest upon him if he departs from the strict path of rectitude. Although he appears for a time to prosper, he will surely reap the fruit of his doings.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 12

The curse of God rests upon many of the ill-timed, inappropriate connections that are made in this age of the world. If the Bible left these questions in a vague, uncertain light, then the course that many of the youth of today are pursuing in their attachments for one another would be more excusable. But the requirements of the Bible are not half-way injunctions. They demand perfect purity of thought, of word, and of deed. We are grateful to God that His Word is a light to the feet, and none need mistake the path of duty. The young should make it a business to consult its pages, and to heed its counsels, for sad mistakes are always made when its precepts are departed from.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 13

If there is any subject that should be considered with calm reason and unimpassioned judgment, it is the subject of marriage. If ever the Bible is needed as a counsellor, it is before taking a step that binds persons together for life. But the prevailing sentiment is that in this matter the feelings are to be the guide, and in too many cases love-sick sentimentalism has taken the helm and guided the bark to certain ruin. It is here that the youth refuse to be reasoned with. It is here that they show less intelligence than on any other subject. The question of marriage seems to have a bewitching power over many. They do not submit themselves to God. Their senses are enchained, and they move forward in secretiveness, as if fearful that their plans would be interfered with by someone.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 14

It is this underhanded way that courtships and marriages are carried on that causes a great amount of misery, the full extent of which is known only to God. On this rock thousands have made shipwreck of their souls. Professed Christians, whose lives are marked with integrity, and who seem sensible upon every other subject, make fearful mistakes here. They manifest a set, determined will that reason cannot change. They become so fascinated with human feelings and impulses that they have no desire to search the Bible and to come in close relationship with God. Satan knows just what elements he has to deal with, and he displays his infernal wisdom in various devices to entrap souls to their ruin. He watches every step that is taken in these matters, and he has many suggestions to make; and these suggestions are more often followed than the counsels of God's Word. As the result we see wrecks of humanity everywhere. When will our youth be wise? The Bible, if carefully studied and obeyed, would prove a safeguard against the delusive snares of Satan.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 15

My brother, had you had elevated and correct views in regard to the obligations of children to their parents, you would not have pressed your attentions upon the daughter against the known wishes of her God-fearing parents. You would have seen that by urging her to disregard their counsels and to link her destinies with yours, you were influencing her to break the fifth commandment. When she looks at this matter in the light of the Bible, she feels forbidden to dishonor her parents and bring sorrow to their hearts; but when you urge your claims and set matters before her in a perverted light, she is unsettled and feels that she will be miserable if she does not marry you.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 16

The position of Christians will be to keep God's glory in view in this matter. They will not urge their views with a persistency that shows pride and self-will. The spirit of truth and righteousness in the heart will not lead to a course directly contrary to the wishes of God-fearing parents. You should both say, even if your affections do go out to each other, We will not bring unhappiness upon our parents in order to please ourselves. We will never venture another step in this direction, unless these barriers are removed and have the free consent of our parents. This is the way all such engagements would be regarded.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 17

I cannot see anything unkind or unreasonable in the letter of Brother Vuilleumier to you. The enemy has perverted this matter to your mind. I see in his letter only that which is consistent for a father to write when the interest and happiness of his daughter is concerned. As you have been instrumental in making this matter known to quite a number, and as your feelings toward Brother Vuilleumier have not been as they should have been, and as some in the church have unwisely given you their sympathy and support, this matter has become quite serious and demands careful consideration. Shall this kind of work go on? Shall children consult only their own desires and inclinations irrespective of their parents' advice and judgment? Some seem never to bestow a thought upon their parents' wishes or preferences, nor to regard their matured experience. Selfishness has closed the door of their hearts to filial affection. This is not the case with the daughter of Brother Vuilleumier, but another mind is influencing her, and she is being molded to another's will, not in any way to improve her character or to give her a valuable experience.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 18

There needs to be an awakening in regard to the matter of courtship and marriage. The fifth commandment is held lightly and even positively ignored by the lover's claim. This commandment is the only one to which is annexed a promise. To slight a mother's love, to dishonor a father's care, is a sin which stands registered against many youth. While there are weighty responsibilities devolving upon the parents to guard carefully the future happiness and interest of their children, it is also their duty to make home as attractive as possible. This is of far greater consequence than to acquire estates and money. Home must not lack sunshine. The home feeling should be kept alive in the hearts of the children, that home will be looked upon by them as a place of peace and happiness next to heaven. Then as they come to maturity, they should in their turn try to be a comfort and blessing to their parents. They should not be too ready to leave their parental roof and give their affections and services to a stranger at the very time when they are most needed at home.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 19

Parents are entitled to the love of their children, and if the children would manifest more affection in words and acts it would be a blessing to both. Every kind attention is appreciated by parents. Before a marriage contract is made, every young person should look carefully to see how his or her absence from the home would affect the happiness of the parents. Do they in their feebleness need the help that you alone can give them? Think carefully in regard to who has the strongest claims upon you. Study diligently the character of the one who asks your love. The step you are about to take is one of the most important in your life. It should not be taken hastily. While youth may love, let them not love blindly.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 20

Courtship as carried on in this age is a scheme of deception and hypocrisy. It has a bewitching influence upon the minds. I have been shown that had the purposes of many young persons been carried out, there would have been disappointments, estrangements, separation. The enemy of souls has far more to do with match-making than has the Lord whose property they are. Many youth seem to think that marriage is the attainment of perfect bliss; but if these could see one quarter of the heart-aching letters that I have received from men and women who are bound by the marriage vow in chains that they cannot and dare not break, they would not be surprised that I trace these lines. Marriage to thousands is the most galling yoke that can be worn. There are thousands that are mated but not matched. The books of heaven are burdened with the woes, the wickedness, and the abuse that are hid under the marriage mantle. This is why I warn the young who are of a marriageable age to make haste slowly in the choice of a companion. The path of marriage life may appear beautiful and full of happiness, but you may be disappointed as thousands of others have been.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 21

One of the greatest errors connected with this subject is that idea that the young and inexperienced must not have their affections

disturbed, that there must be no interference in this love experience. If there ever were a subject that needed to be viewed from every standpoint, it is this subject. The aid of the experience of others and a calm, careful weighing of the matter on both sides are positively essential. It is a subject that is treated altogether too lightly by the great majority of people. Take God into your counsel, young friends. Pray over the matter. Weigh every sentiment, and watch every development of character in the one with whom you think to link your life interest. Examine carefully to see if that life will be happy or inharmonious and wretched. Let the questions be raised, Will this union help me heavenward? Will it increase my love for God? And will it enlarge my sphere for usefulness in this life? If these reflections present no drawbacks, then in the fear of God move forward. But even if an engagement has been entered into without a full understanding of the character of the one with whom you think to link your destiny, do not think that the engagement makes it a positive necessity for you to pronounce the marriage vow and link yourself for life to one whom you cannot love or respect. Be very careful how you enter into unconditional engagements, but better, far better, break the engagement before marriage than separate after marriage, as many do.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 22

Few have correct views of marriage. They make light of this heaven-appointed institution; and after it has been entered into thoughtlessly, without a true sense of its sacredness, the obligations it imposes are often shamefully disregarded. Ignoring the personal rights of women, the husband becomes unkind and authoritative. The individuality of the wife is submerged in that of the husband. She becomes the slave of his caprice and passions, as though she had naught to do but to obey his whims. He quotes texts of Scripture to show that he is the head, and that he must be obeyed in all things, claiming that his wife must have no will separate from his. He acts the tyrant. But the same Bible that prescribes the duty of the wife prescribes also the duty of the husband. He is to be kind and affectionate, to love his wife as a part of himself, and to cherish her as Christ does His church.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 23

This question of marriage should be a study of both parties instead of a matter of impulse. Obedience to the last six commandments requires this. Crimes of every kind may be traced to unwise marriages. Then should they be entered into blindly, by ignorant and inexperienced children? Should not the parents feel their responsibility to guard the interest of their daughter when their own mature experience teaches them that should she marry the one who solicits her affections, it would only result in life-long unhappiness?4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 24

True love is a plant that needs culture. Let the woman who desires a peaceful, happy union, who would escape future misery and sorrow, inquire before she yields her affections, Has my lover a mother? What is the stamp of her character? Does he recognize his filial obligations to her? Is he mindful of her wishes and happiness? If he does not respect and honor his parents, he will not manifest respect and love and kindness and attention towards his wife. When the novelty of marriage is over, will he love me still? Will he be patient with my mistakes, or will he be critical, overbearing, and dictatorial? True affection will overlook many mistakes; love will not discern them.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 25

The youth trust altogether too much to impulse. They should not give themselves away too easily and be captivated too readily by the winning exterior of the lover. Good common sense is needed here if anywhere; but the facts in the case are it has little to do with courtship and marriage nowadays. There is serious, earnest reflection to be done before marriage, if you would not have the most miserable, unhappy reflections after marriage. This step taken unwisely is one of the most effective means of ruining the usefulness of men and women. Life becomes a burden, a curse. No one can so effectually ruin a woman's happiness and usefulness as her own husband. Heaven has registered the words and actions of men who have tyrannized over their wives. And no one can do one-hundredth part as much to chill the hopes and aspirations of a man, no one can paralyze his energies and make life a heart-sickening burden as his own wife, and she may ruin his influence and his prospects. From the marriage hour, many men can date their success or their failure.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 26

When so much misery results from marriage, why will not the youth be wise? Why will they continue to feel that they do not need the counsel of older and more experienced persons? In business, men and women manifest great caution. Before engaging in any important enterprise, they prepare themselves for their work. They devote time and money and much careful study to the subject, lest they should make a failure. How much greater caution should be exercised in entering the marriage relation, a relation which affects future generations and future life? But this holy relation is entered upon with jest and levity, with impulse and passion, with blindness and want of calm consideration.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 27

The only explanation of this is that Satan weaves this net to entangle souls. He loves to see misery and ruin in the world. He rejoices to have these inconsiderate souls lose their enjoyment of this world and of the one to come. Often a man who is entirely ignorant of the wants of woman, and of the treatment she should receive, takes her under his proposed protection when his influence and his temperament are to her as a desolating hail, beating down her will and her aspirations, and leaving her no freedom of mind or judgment. She is his slave to do just as he may decide. While women want men of strong and noble characters whom they can respect and love, these qualities need to be mingled with tenderness, and affections, and patience, and forbearance.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 28

The wife should in her turn be cheerful, kind, and devoted, assimilating her taste to that of her husband as far as it is possible to do without losing her identity, her individuality, in her husband. Both parties should cultivate patience and kindness and that tender love for each other that will make their married life pleasant and enjoyable. Those who have such high ideas of the marriage life, whose imagination has wrought out an air-castle picture that has naught to do with life's perplexities and troubles, will find themselves sadly disappointed in the reality. When real life comes with its troubles and cares, they are wholly unprepared to meet them. They expect in each other perfections and find weakness and defects, for finite men and women are not faultless. Then in the place of helping each other, they begin to find fault and express the disappointment. We all need practical godliness to help us to fight the battle of life valiantly. Our daily prayer should be, Help us to help each other, Lord, each others' woes to bear.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886,

par. 29

My heart is drawn out for you, my brother, because God has given you talents to be improved; but you will need to overcome the defects in your character in order to use your ability with success. You have not seen and understood that the inconsistencies in your character were great drawbacks to your usefulness, and that unless you war against these tendencies which have thus far controlled you to a greater or less degree, they will surely stand in the way of your attaining the future life. There must be with you and with many others the right discipline of the mind. This is the way to true happiness, faith, and confidence in God.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 30

Those who have not taken themselves in hand to control impulses, to subdue self and bring themselves in obedience to the principles of the law of God, will not, cannot, be happy or at peace and rest. They need the meekness and lowliness of Christ. They need to learn daily in His school, to wear His yoke, to lift His burdens, to deny inclination, to sacrifice a seeming present good to a future good, a personal advantage for a general advantage.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 31

The fountain of content must spring up in the soul. He who seeks happiness by changing his outward surroundings without changing his own disposition will find that his efforts will only produce fresh disappointments. He carries himself with him. His unrest, his impatience, his uncontrollable thoughts and impulses are ever present. The great trouble is in himself. He has never learned of Christ the lesson of meekness and lowliness of heart. He has never fallen upon the Rock and been broken. Self has been cherished. The will has never been trained to submit. The unyielding spirit has never been brought into subjection to the will of God.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 32

There are many youth who because they cannot find happiness in plans of their own devising will not accept it in God's appointed way. They wonder over their unhappiness and count their best friends, those who discern their difficulties, their enemies. They cling with tenacious grasp to their impressions and their ideas of just what they must have and what they must do in order to be happy, but they lose sight of the fact that the Lord rules alone, and that He is shaping circumstances. 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 33

God says, "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts higher than your thoughts." [Isaiah 55:8, 9.] Then let finite beings be humble and submissive in their desires, realizing that God uses many influences which it is beyond their power to control. We must take self in hand, we must do our duty faithfully, and in this work peace and rest and happiness will come. We must discipline self, seeking to bring it under the control of intelligent reason. We must have a true sense of what the last six commandments mean. There are opportunities daily of practicing forgetfulness of self and being a blessing to those around us. 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 34

We will surely find the peace and rest that Jesus has promised if we learn to wear His yoke and bear His burdens. "Learn of Me," says the Great Teacher, "for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest to your souls; for My yoke is easy and My burden is light." [Matthew 11:29, 30.] 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 35

Now is our probation; now is your probation. Time is valuable. You have an eternity of bliss to gain, a perdition to shun. Do not fritter away your God-given opportunities by trying to accomplish your own desires. Up to duty, and work for the Master. You have lessons to learn that you have not yet dreamed of. The books of heaven now reveal many things that you can have blotted from its pages by coming to God with a truly repentant heart and faith in the blood of Christ as the atoning sacrifice. The life that was once lived to the flesh must now be lived by faith on the Son of God. 4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 36

The question now is what education are you receiving at the present time? What advancement are you making in the divine life? The education of all is now going on. Some are educating themselves for lofty positions where they may receive the praise and honor of men. Some are training in the school of vice and deception, receiving an education that will unfit them for this life and the future immortal life. Some are educating themselves in Christ's school, seeking goodness and truth, aiming to meet God's great moral standard of righteousness, and fitting for the high school above.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 37

In the books of heaven are kept an accurate record of the manner of our education and what use we have made of our probationary golden moments. Every day we are learning lessons for time and eternity. Every thought cherished, every impulse indulged, leaves its impressions on the mind. We are under obligations to God to be constantly learning of Christ how to guide and control our thoughts, our feelings and passions. Oh how fearfully lax we are in our duty to ourselves to let ourselves be molded by our own ideas and our own faulty will. We are running great risks in allowing ourselves to be thus controlled by circumstances.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 38

We must study the Pattern, Jesus Christ. Self-culture and divine grace will strengthen us in moral power. Every faculty should be employed to make of us all that Christ has made provision that we should become. How many are losing the balance of their mind for want of heart culture. All goodness commences in the heart. God has entrusted you with abilities. With these entrusted talents you may do a good work for the Master, if they are consecrated wholly to His service. But there must first be an overcoming of obstinacy and self-sufficiency. There must be a cultivation of kindness and affection. This will have a transforming influence on the character.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 39

The critical and censorious spirit that is ever ready to find occasion for reproof and condemnation in others shows a narrow mind and plainly reveals a man who has never carefully studied and correctly read the pages of his own heart. God is in earnest with us. We should come in such close connection with Jesus Christ as is represented by the branch that is grafted into the living vine. Then we shall be partakers of the sap and nourishment from the vine and shall bear fruit to the glory of God. You are now passing through a critical experience. I entreat of you not to be hasty, not to be discouraged, but to submit your case to God. Wait upon the Lord and do His will, and in this hour of trial He will work for you and you will obtain a precious experience. Give God a chance to work. Lie low at the foot of the cross, and God will teach you precious lessons.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 40

Self-denial must be practiced in the home. Every member of the family should be kind and courteous and should studiously seek in all their words and actions to bring peace, contentment, and happiness. All members of the family do not have the same disposition, the same stamp of character; but through self-discipline one can help another, bringing them near, binding them together by words of love and forbearance.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 41

But, my brother, in your family there has not been that cultivation of courtesy, Christian politeness, and deference and respect for one another that would prepare its members to marry and make happy families of their own. The lessons that should have been learned in tender sympathy and in patience, kindness, and respect for the members of the family have not been learned. In the place of tenderness, courtesy, and love, there have been sharp words, clashing of ideas, the combative spirit, the criticizing, dictatorial spirit. There has been a great want of the spirit of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 42

In every family there should be, and will be if Christ is abiding in the heart, affection and love for one another; not a spasmodic love expressed in fond caresses, but a love that is abiding. It is an abiding principle which distinguishes the grace of love, a principle high and elevated, sacred and holy, of altogether a different character than that love awakened by impulse, a passion that is fitful and that dies suddenly when tested and tried.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 43

The home is a place where we are to prepare for the home above. If there are such temperaments in the family that they cannot live in harmony here, they would not, unless converted, be in harmony in the heavenly family. There is altogether too much careless talking, censuring, faultfinding in families that profess to love and serve God. The unkind words, the irreverence and disrespect in many families make angels weep. What a record is made upon the books of heaven of unkind looks and words that sting and bite like an adder; and it is not the record of only one day in the year, but of day after day.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 44

Oh, that these families would consider that angels of God are taking a daguerreotype of the character just as accurate as the artist takes the likeness of the human features; and it is by our deeds that we will be judged, whether they be good or whether they be evil. We should cultivate patience by practicing patience. We should be kind and forbearing, that we may keep love warm in our hearts and thus develop qualities that heaven shall approve. Those who go forth from such families to stand at the head of other families will know how to advance the happiness of the one whom they have selected as a companion for life. There will be mutual love, mutual forbearance. Marriage in the place of being the end of love will then be the very beginning of love.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 45

We have but one life to live, and nothing should be considered of sufficient value to lead to unhappy words or deeds. We must come into close relationship and be partakers of the divine nature in this life if we would be a member of the holy family in heaven above.4LtMs, Lt 3, 1886, par. 46

Lt 4, 1886

Chapman, Sr.

Refiled as Lt 12, 1886.

Lt 5, 1886

Oviatt, Brother

Basel, Switzerland

September 9, 1886

This letter is published in entirety in 17MR 140-145.

Elder Oviatt

My brother and fellow laborer:

For two nights I have not been able to sleep many hours. About two a.m. I have been awakened greatly burdened, and after devoting some time to prayer, have attempted to write.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 1

Your case with many others has been before me. Several years ago I was shown that your danger was very great on account of your attentions to other women besides your wife. You have indulged your own inclinations in this direction, and you stand guilty before God. The root of the whole matter is unchaste thoughts are entertained which lead to improper attentions and advances, then to improper actions. All this is bad enough in men who have only a common work to do, but it is a hundredfold worse in those who have accepted sacred positions of trust.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 2

I have in your presence dwelt particularly upon the importance of abstaining from the very appearance of evil. I have presented in your hearing the special temptations of the enemy, thinking to arouse your consciousness that you would barricade your soul against the temptations of the enemy. I have written especially upon the dangers of young men's, and also of married men's, showing special attention to young ladies and to other men's wives. When crossing the ocean on my way to Europe, I was mightily stirred and wrote out special warnings. This was in your behalf as well as for others. It was to stop your downward course, that you should in the strength of Israel's God arise and be a man, not a plaything for the devil.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 3

I was shown that in consequence of temptations you could not lift up holy hands without wrath and doubting. Your thoughts and actions crippled your endeavors; your earthliness and sensual thoughts dwarfed your spiritual growth. You are far from being the man God would have you to be, and you fail to qualify yourself for the work you might do because your thoughts are not pure, but tainted and corrupt. Some things were shown me that are open to the eye that never slumbers or sleeps. This is written in the books of heaven, and in a little time your case will be decided, whether your name shall be blotted out from the book of life or not. It certainly will be, unless you are a converted man and humble your soul before God and confess your sins and turn unto the Lord with your whole heart and purge from you every impure thought and corrupt action. Says the <True> Witness, "I know thy works." [Revelation 3:15.] Do not attempt to teach the people until you are a changed man; until you have in humble penitence sought the Lord with true contrition of soul and have a new heart. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 4

I was shown that Satan would make his temptations strong to corrupt the ministers who are teaching the binding claims of the law of God. If he can tarnish the virtue, confuse the sense of purity and holiness, if he can insinuate himself into their thoughts, suggest and plan for them to sin in thought and deed against God, then their defense is gone; they have separated themselves from God; they have not the power and spirit of God with them, and the sacred message of truth they bear to the people is not blessed of God; the seed is not watered and the increase is not realized. What you need, my brother, is a pure and holy heart. Cease at once from attempting to teach the truth until you know that in the strength of God you can overcome lust. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 5

If your mind had been, in the years you have professed to be a child of God, educated and taxed to dwell upon Jesus, to pray when traveling on the cars, when walking in the streets, and wherever you were, and had you been binding about your thoughts and teaching them to dwell upon pure and holy things, I should not have to address you as I do today. The Lord must be in all your thoughts, but this work is strangely neglected. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 6

There are some of our ministers who are engaged in active service who have some sense of the importance of the work, but there is a large number who are handling sacred truth about as they would engage in any common business. They have not been refined, ennobled, sanctified by the truth. They have not advanced step by step, growing in grace and the knowledge of Jesus Christ. They have not real genuine faith in taking God at His word. They have not gone on from strength to a greater strength.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 7

They have not increased in ability, but kept up the same low tone of efficiency. They have not become able men in the Scriptures, mighty men in God, and yet every privilege has been within their reach. The cause of God has not been glorified by their tame, spiritless, Christless work. These have done great injury to the truth, and why? Because the heart is not cleansed. They have not a new, clean heart, but a heart that is open to the temptations of Satan. Such can never lead the people to the true, pure fountain of living waters. They may make others acquainted with the reasons of our faith, but it will be impossible for them to do the work which a true shepherd of the flock will do, to “feed the flock of God.” [1 Peter 5:2.]4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 8

Not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being Lords over God’s heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. “And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that passeth not away. Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time: casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you. Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world. But the God of all grace, who hath called us to His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you.” [Verses 4-10.]4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 9

We must awaken to our God-given responsibilities. Your adversary the devil is intensely active, represented like a roaring lion, and we must be wide-awake and not ignorant of his devices. We shall surely be overcome by Satan's devices unless our hearts, our minds, our wills, are in complete subjection to the will of Christ. We shall surely fail of salvation unless the natural elements in our character, the discordant elements, are brought daily and hourly into unity with Christ's character. Unruly, debasing tendencies and passions cannot reign in the heart controlled by the Spirit of Christ. There are many who have never submitted their will and way fully without any reserve to Jesus Christ.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 10

There need to be far more lessons in the ministry of the Word of true conversion than of the arguments of the doctrines, for it is far easier and more natural for the heart that is not under the control of the Spirit of Christ to choose doctrinal subjects rather than the practical. There are many Christless discourses given no more acceptable to God than was the offering of Cain. They are not in harmony with God.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 11

The Lord calls upon you, my brother, to step down from the work, leave the walls of Zion, or be a converted man. When your own heart is sanctified through the truth, there will be in it no moral defilement. It will now require a most desperate resistance upon your part to unholy suggestions because your soul is tainted with spiritual malaria. You have breathed a satanic atmosphere. You have not been a man in the sight of God. When your mind should have been growing, your ideas elevated, and your plans and labors broadened, you have been growing less and less efficient as a worker, because God is not blessing your efforts.4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 12

The perversion of our gifts, or their degradations to unworthy ends, is a crime in the sight of God; and yet this is constantly prevailing. The man who has capabilities for usefulness and employs all that is winning and attractive to destroy others, to lead them astray, to bring them to a brackish, poison fountain, to quench his thirst, rather than bringing them to Christ, is doing the devil's work. There are many who profess to believe the truth who are corrupt in morals and who tarnish the purity in thoughts and impulses of others, who ruin souls under the pretense of saving souls, who utter words to the unwary, Satan speaking through them as he spoke through the serpent when he tempted Eve. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 13

For all such there is a terrible retribution. They will reap that which they have sown. It is a terrible thing to use God's entrusted gifts lent to bless the world and perverted in their use, leaving a blight, a woe, a curse, instead of a blessing. But I have written largely upon this as you have seen in different forms. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 14

And again I say, "Seek the Lord while He may be found, call ye upon Him while He is nigh. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, let him return unto the Lord and He will have mercy upon him, and to our God for He will abundantly pardon." [Isaiah 55:6, 7.] Go to work and confess your sins before God, seek God for you know but very little of this kind of work. Put your thoughts to work upon pure, holy subjects; tax your powers; send your supplications to heaven in earnest contrition of soul; let your conversation, your thoughts, your deportment be in harmony with the holy faith you claim to be defending. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 15

And when all like yourself shall repent and find the pardoning love of God, we shall see that God will work in a wonderful manner with His people. Sinners will be converted, backsliders will be reclaimed. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 16

I leave these lines with you. I had hoped that the great light shining from the Word of God would have been accepted, brought into your religious life, and you become a true, sincere Christian, doing the will of God from the heart. But I have been urged by the Spirit of the Lord to write you. The work must go forward. Everything impure must become pure and holy, or be purged from our hands; for all that is earthly, sensual, devilish is a stumbling block to others and a curse to the cause of God. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 17

The sooner the ranks are purged from all this class, the more surely shall we see the salvation of God and the power of the truth in our midst. It is because we are loaded down with those who have <not> been partakers of the divine nature, who have failed to escape the corruption that is in the world through lust, that we have so much weakness and feebleness in our midst. We must arouse. We must cleanse the camp of Israel of its moral defilement. 4LtMs, Lt 5, 1886, par. 18

Lt 6, 1886

Kellogg, J. H.

NP

December 30, 1886

Portions of this letter are published in Ev 69; 6MR 256-260.

Dr. Kellogg

Dear Brother:

There has come to us from Battle Creek an address given in Battle Creek, Michigan. I think this will do good, but I was pained to see in this book the statement, "There are undoubtedly novels, such as Uncle Tom's Cabin and a few others which I might mention, which have been active agents in the accomplishment of great and good results. Such novels are not likely to do anybody any harm."⁴*LtMs*, Lt 6, 1886, par. 1

This is the way many regard the matter, but is it really truth? My brother, the Lord has not opened before you the beginning, and carried you down through the end, showing you the influence of these works, that you can give such unqualified statements as these. Have you looked into the inward workings of these books which you pronounce "active agents of great and good results"? The fact is, my brother, you need a deeper insight to see the tendencies and the results of the reading of even Uncle Tom's Cabin. There are many things in the work that would do no harm, and there are many things which have served a purpose in the exposure of slavery, but I would not want to recommend this book to our youth for their perusal.⁴*LtMs*, Lt 6, 1886, par. 2

There are statements and pen-pictures which set the imagination upon a train of thought that has been deleterious and positively injurious. These highly wrought pictures have taken hold of nervous, susceptible youth, and they have lived them over and over again in the imagination. It has destroyed appetite for the Bible, and the desire to attend prayer meetings; for everything was stale and without interest after feasting upon the diet found in this book. The food taken into the mind was of such a character that heavenly and divine things found no place in the thoughts, and the imaginations were evil; and these youth have made confessions that this was caused by the reading of Uncle Tom's Cabin. This laid the foundations for a train of evils, and the imaginations became intensely excited, and the thoughts would recur again and again to immoral subjects which led to the sin of licentiousness and impurity, to disobedience, to secret plannings, and to deception. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 3

But let this statement be treated as it may; many individual cases have been reprov'd by testimony for a wrong course of action which was the sure result of reading this book which you have recommended, and which Elder Canright has also recommended. While I esteem your wisdom and skill as a physician, I do not praise your wisdom in making these statements. Your little pamphlet is a good work; but while this statement may increase its value in the minds of novel readers in our churches, yet I shall have to meet its results with pen and voice by saying that God has not prompted the writing of these sentences in regard to novels. I know whereof I speak. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 4

At the present time I am writing to a wealthy family of high standing, and who have been long in the truth; and the oldest daughter living is fast becoming a physical and mental wreck because of reading just such a class of books as Elder Canright and you have so decidedly recommended. Such statements are exactly of the same order as telling the poor inebriate, You must not drink a certain class of stimulating liquors which are intoxicating, but you may drink the milder kinds, such as wine, cider, and beer—just as though you could describe and define and have your word law in the matter. The only safety for the inebriate is total abstinence. 4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 5

At least those who have an understanding of the workings of the appetite, the cravings of the mind, should not have all barriers broken down by those who ought to know better, and who understand the workings of the human mind in these things. They will claim that the fictitious books that they read are among the novels that are doing great good, and this may be the popular opinion, and they declare that there is no harm in them. They say they do not read anything of an impure character; it all condemns everything of this kind; and yet the influence is demoralizing to the mind. The sense of right and wrong becomes confused; deceptions and imaginations are practiced as truth. I might go on and write a volume on this matter.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 6

Whatever you yourself may think of this class of books, for Christ's sake do not present to others the temptation to read them. You may think they do good, but in the judgment, when the matter is weighed in the balances of God, it will be found that the evil results predominate a hundredfold above the good results.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 7

This matter has been opened before me. There are many minds that are hopelessly wrecked. The beautiful girl just entering womanhood, of whom I have spoken, is, I fear, hopelessly ruined, both in physical and mental health, so that she has had a partial shock of palsy. She was encouraged in her course of reading by the storybooks and papers found on their own tables at home. Notwithstanding all the pure, elevating influences of home, her parents fully in the truth, the daughter is, I fear, hopelessly lost to the truth and ruined in health and in mind. This appetite was cultivated by the parents. Now the mother writes me in mournful strains; she knows not what to do for her daughter. She has no desire to attend meetings, although she has professed to be a Christian. She wants to do nothing but read, read storybooks. And it all comes from these good, fictitious novels. While answering the mother's piteous appeal to me for help, your address was placed in my hands; and when I read that paragraph which I have quoted, I felt a burden, a weight upon me; I felt like weeping aloud. I shall meet this statement and shall have to answer to it.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 8

I am laboring to call the attention of the young to the close searching of the Scriptures. I am laboring to have them bring to the foundation gold, silver, and precious stones that the last day cannot consume. I am working with pen and voice to awaken the youth to the stern realities just about to open before us and to lead them to leave the superficial, the fictitious in everything large and small, for living realities; that they shall not live an unreal, imaginary life, but take right hold of the verity and truth of practical life. It is realities with which we are to deal. Everything is tainted and corrupted with falsehood and fiction in this age. We want now solid truth for our foundation. Men and women are asleep. Youth are enchanted, infatuated with the false. They lay upon the foundation hay, wood, and stubble which the fires of the last day will consume. The mind will be of the same character as the food is composed of, upon which it has been fed. There is only one remedy; that is, to become conversant with the Scriptures. We cannot study the Bible too much. Christ said, "Search the Scriptures," but the natural heart would search everything else rather than the Scriptures.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 9

Every faculty is injured. The affections become depraved, and the whole heart becomes, through improper reading, even among our people, deceitful in practice, fictitious in life and character, living and acting a lie. He who made man, He who understands the working of the human heart, He who can see beneath the surface has said, "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life." [John 5:39.] Every position of truth taken by our people will bear the criticism of the greatest minds; the highest of the world's great men will be brought in contact with truth, and therefore every position we take should be critically examined and tested by the Scriptures. Now we seem to be unnoticed, but this will not always be. Movements are at work to bring us to the front; and if our theories of truth can be picked to pieces by historians or the world's greatest men, it will be done.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 10

We must individually know for ourselves what is truth and be prepared to give a reason of the hope that we have with meekness and fear, not in a proud, boasting, self-sufficiency, but with the Spirit of Christ. We are nearing the time when we shall stand individually alone to answer for our belief. Religious errors are multiplying and entwining themselves with satanic power about the people. There is scarcely a doctrine of the Bible that has not been denied and, by men of high intellectual ability, shorn of its beauty and simplicity, from the infidel to the men claiming to be watchmen upon the walls of Zion. The sincere seeker for truth who, while he believes the Bible, practices its truth, making himself a prey. The world is full of books. If we had more genuine religion and less books, we should have a different class of society. These books teach false doctrines, just as false and crooked as the Bible is true, straightforward, and infallible. These books are Satan's agents attracted by the outward and superficial adornment of error. The youth receive as truth that which the Bible denounces as falsehood, and they love and cling to every form of deception that is certain ruin to the soul. The beauty of the Bible is not seen until we bring it into the inner life. It is kept too much in the outer court. It is searching that reveals its hidden jewels. The Bible alone is our guide to heaven, and now is the time to urge it upon the attention of old and young as coming from God. It is His voice to us. It is the sure word of prophecy, profitable in all things. We must study it for ourselves, and know what saith the Scriptures.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 11

Well, I have written you now on several points and will close.4LtMs, Lt 6, 1886, par. 12

Lt 7, 1886

Kellogg, J. H.

Torre Pellice, Italy

April 26, 1886

Portions of this letter are published in ChL 45-48; 3Bio 342.

Dr. Kellogg

Dear Brother:

Your two last letters I have received, and was grateful for them. I have had much writing to do which at times has taxed me too severely, but I am much better in health now than when I wrote you before. My eyes have improved, notwithstanding I have used them almost constantly in writing. I was a cripple for some time, but am better now. Although I feel some infirmities, yet I am grateful that the Lord is so good and merciful to me.⁴*LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 1*

You made some inquiries in your first letter which I did not answer, and as your last two letters are not with me here, I fear I shall not remember the points and give you the answers you desired. I appreciate your difficulties in your position, but if you were altogether right in your management in all things, you would be something more than finite. We must then admit our fallibility. And although it may appear to you difficult to disentangle yourself from responsibilities which others cannot take, it is your duty to train others to stand in responsible positions that should you need a change and rest, which is your due, you can have it. I think you and your wife should visit California. And again you have worked intensely upon the high pressure plan. God has spared your life, but you are not immortal, and you may die as others have died before you who have lived two years in one.⁴*LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 2*

For several years as the matters of the sanitarium have been opened before me, I have been shown that you were loading down yourself to your injury, and in thus doing were depriving others of an experience. Those connected with you so closely in the sanitarium are ready to assent to every move you may make, and to any proposition, saying, yes, but without using their individual judgment and without taxing their minds to hard thinking that they may have sound opinions and clear ideas, not borrowed, but their own. Men in responsible positions have qualified themselves in this direction by just such a process as you and others have had to go through to be fitted for just such work. Now if you relieve these persons from this responsible part of the work, they are only your machines. Your head plans, devises, turns the crank, winds them up to run down, to be wound up again. This is one of the reasons why we have so few brain workers today; and this is the reason why brain workers are dropping out of our ranks into their graves, because they are brains for others. I tell you plainly as a mother would a son, you have made a decided failure here.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 3

I cannot now attempt to specify all these mistakes, but there is with you a love for supremacy whether you see it or not; and had it not been cherished, you would have had by your side men who would have been developing as useful physicians, men who would be constantly growing, and upon whom you could have depended. But you have not given them all the advantages which you yourself would have claimed had you been in their place. They needed, and the case demanded, that you should do more for them when they came to a certain point than you gave them to perfect them in the work. You have, whether you designed it or knew it or not, bound them to come thus far and no further. This is not justice to them or to you, neither is it justice to the sanitarium that so much depends upon one man. It ought not to be thus in any of our institutions, because it is not God's way.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 4

In some cases not one half has been done for the patients that should have been done in its time if at all. The simple assurance at the right time is everything. It is not right to have all look to you to do this work, while you, being subject to the frailties of humanity, and not having trained others to bear the responsibilities, the work is left undone, and then you blame your helpers. Your head sometimes refuses to act, and you are ready to cast the blame on those who disown it. You lose control of your own spirit. Your health of judgment, your discrimination may seem to you to be without any dimming of the edge; but brother, I must tell you the truth; there is certainly a change because of wear and strain, and weakness will as surely follow as it has in others. You are mortal, and you will become more sensitive of any reflections of differences of ideas and opinions from your own; you will feel, if any shall not at once adopt your plans, and if they question your ideas, that they mean to choose their own judgment and undermine your influence, and you will not care to have any connection with them.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 5

Now, my brother, I feel the deepest interest for you, else I would not write you as I have done. But with me I must be faithful. I tell matters just as they are; and while I would have all united in the sanitarium in perfect bonds of union, I would not have the union of that kind and quality that you will be mind and judgment for every one of them, and they consider every proposition and plan, word, and action as without error and fault. Among a multitude of counsellors there is safety. God would not have many minds the shadow of one man's mind. God has given men brains to use, intellect to cultivate, to employ to His glory; and He would be the One to mold, control, and fashion the minds after His own impress. Men are only men whatever may be their work. The more responsible the position, the more important that the one who stands in this position have no more honor or exaltation given him than is for his good. In fact, people are ruined through praise and honor bestowed upon them, as though they were infallible.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 6

While due respect should be given to those whom God has intrusted with more than ordinary talents, that man thus endowed needs to walk more humbly and closely with God as he advances. All the influence that these capabilities give him will make him a better, holier, more meek and humble man, or it will lead him to think as others have thought: I am not a common man, and I may do things that others cannot do, and it will be no sin. This is a common error, but it is a destructive error. That man needs to learn daily important lessons from the greatest Teacher the world ever knew. Christ must dwell in that man's heart, just as the blood must be in the body and circulate there as a vitalizing power. I cannot on this subject be too urgent. I cannot press it home to you too strongly that you shall not trust in self.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 7

There is a panoply for you which is truth, and you need to be reinforced that with Christ as a Helper, you can do all things. Without Christ you can do nothing as it ought to be done. The only dishonor to any man in any work or any position is sin, and to separate God from him. And if you would resist the temptation which assails you from without and from within, you need to make it the purpose and object of your life to be wholly on the Lord's side, that the truth in the heart will be a faithful sentinel, sounding the alarm and summoning to action against every sin and every evil of this time.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 8

With the grace of Christ in the soul, you may be mighty through God, beating back the powers of darkness. No power but truth will keep you steadfast, having the glory of God ever in view. Those who are closely connected with you have solemn responsibilities. You repose confidence in them, and it is their duty to cling to God, and have an eye single to His glory, hanging firmly upon the arm of Omnipotence, not trusting in or relying upon any human arm. They should make the most of their own God-given faculties, for they must give an account of the same to God; they are to be constantly growing; they are never to cease to progress. But all the aids that can be brought to them as soldiers of Jesus Christ in this holy warfare should be enlisted. All knowledge that the apostle would acknowledge as true science, as far as possible, should be acquired. Everything that can strengthen or expand the mind should be cultivated to the utmost individual power. And notwithstanding all this may be the privilege of those connected with you, but few are now making the standard, and there is danger of their being deceived in their own acquirements. They will be falling back if not growing, and you will be also under delusion unless the wisdom that cometh from God be interwoven into yours as well as their daily experience.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 9

Now, my brother, I cannot say or mark out what course you should take under all circumstances, but I do invite you to heed every ray of light that God has been pleased to give you. Do not become discouraged; do not go forward without heeding counsel; but pray, heed, and know that you can make changes for the better, or the warnings would never come to you. Be grateful to God that He is looking upon you in mercy. He wants you to be true to Him. He wants your heart to be cherishing faith, to become better acquainted with Jesus. Light from God must be received and heeded. You must speak and act, work and study to the glory of God. You are not your own, and the Lord has something to say about how you shall use the powers lent you in trust.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 10

I must urge home upon you the necessity of pursuing such a course, that you will not violate the laws of your being or the laws of God, and that the education shall be going to others more thoroughly, that they shall bear the burdens essential. They may not meet your mind in every particular, but this is not positive evidence that they cannot meet the mind of God and become responsible men. If they have a mind and a will to do, God will help them. Your reasons, my husband has repeated again and again, are not of sufficient weight to venture to do the opposite of what God has said. I want you to so live that you may reap the effects of your labor and have the sweet peace of Christ abiding in your heart. You have worked hard, and I want your life to be spared as God's own worker, one whom God can trust.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 11

I have thought of your reasons for your not trusting responsibilities upon your workers; but you have not been as greatly disappointed as our Redeemer has been grieved and disappointed with our bungling work. We have shown so little fidelity to Him who has bought us with His own blood. I am pleased with every bit of interest that you show in religious things. The way to become great and noble is to be like Jesus, pure, holy, and undefiled.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 12

The honor that you may receive of medical and great men is not of much value as I view it, but the honor you receive of the Lord is of the greatest value. I want that you should not be almost an overcomer, but a conqueror, and more than conqueror through Him that hath loved you and given His own life to save you from ruin. You want more and greater trust in God daily. I want you to be the happiest man that is in heaven. I want you to be at peace with God here and have heaven hereafter. You have to fight the fight of faith in order to overcome skepticism and infidelity.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 13

Your brother Willie needs special help to break the spell of infidelity in which he stands entrenched. He may be saved, but his wicked unbelief is dishonoring to God, and the last ray of light will finally depart from him unless some special efforts are made in his behalf. You can do something here, but it will not be an easy job because he has been left alone too long. But his soul is in immediate peril. He has a wife who needs help. He has a prayerless home. Jesus is not invited by him into the home as an honored guest. He knows not what he is doing, denying the only Lord God who has bought him with His own blood, who offers to him an eternal weight of glory for a life of humble obedience. Oh, come to the fountain of light and truth yourself, and from your own experience talk of the Saviour's power to save to the uttermost all who come unto Him. May the Lord strengthen and bless you; may the Lord so manifest Himself to you that you can reveal Him to others. Talk faith, act faith, and that which you sow you will also reap. I want you to share the eternal reward. I want you to have that life, that honor, that glory, which await all who love and honor God in this life. My heart is tender and true to you. I yearn over you as I yearn over my own children, and I want so much that you shall enter the gates of the city of God a conqueror, as one who has fought the good fight, finished his course, kept the faith, and to whom will be awarded the blessed benediction of "Good and faithful servant." [Matthew 25:23.] The Lord loves you. The Lord would have you as wholly His. But time is short; the period of character building is short for the future eternal life. God help you to build wisely. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 14

The lower you lie at the foot of the cross, the more clearly will you distinguish the charms that in my Saviour dwell. I want that Jesus should be to you all that He can be to mortal man; for the light you receive from Him you can and will reveal to other souls. Precious, precious Jesus! His great heart of love embraces you. My soul hungers and thirsts in your behalf. You must come in closer relation with God. You can build for time and for eternity. These words will not seem foolish to you, for they come from a heart that is deeply concerned for you. Will you give to Jesus your undivided heart? He can be more to you than He has been in your past experience. Fasten yourself decidedly to Christ as the branch to the living vine, and bear much fruit to the glory of God. I hope and trust this earnest heart-yearning for you is of the Lord and that this letter will not be in vain. I now go to Lousanne, and this must close my visit here.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 15

May 3, 1886

Lousanne, Switzerland

Our meetings here are ended. I have spoken three times in the hall in this place where our brethren have been holding meetings for about three months.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 16

I spoke for the first time in Lousanne Sabbath forenoon, followed by two interpreters Brother Bourdeau and Brother Conradi. After the sermon, we had an excellent social meeting. There were four bore testimony they were keeping their first Sabbath. Two stated they could not close up their business, having workmen under them, but they would arrange the coming week to keep the Sabbath. These were French and German. I had spoken from the 58th chapter of Isaiah, which seemed to take hold of the people. Excellent expressions were given.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 17

Twenty have already decided to obey the truth, and there are quite a number who are deeply interested. The Bible readings have awakened an interest among the higher classes, and several families are studying the Scriptures like the noble Bereans to see if these things are so. Some have come from the Methodists, some from the Baptists, and some from other churches. They seem to be men and women of good intellect, and some of them have been lively workers in the Methodist church, and with experience may do good in leading others to the truth. I felt bad as I saw the people sitting on benches with no backs because they dare not take the means for greater conveniences.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 18

I spoke twice on Sabbath, or rather once evening after Sabbath, to French, and to Germans Sabbath forenoon. Sunday evening I spoke to the French, and most of the Germans could understand the French. On Sunday evening we had an excellent congregation of intelligent hearers. I had a talk with the workers here, and now in a few hours we leave to return to Basel.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 19

The work moves slowly in Europe. When there is an interest awakened in a place, many ministers are called in to get up revivals and make a decided move to attract the attention of the people. They urge and lay commands upon the people not to attend these conferences, as they call them, of those who bring to them errors and delusive doctrines. It is wonderful how the people heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears. Heaps of teachers are on hand where an effort is commenced. Nevertheless some do take their position upon the truth.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 20

In Italy I spoke seven times. Twice in Torre Pellice, twice five miles out at Villar, up near Bobbio. One week ago yesterday the people could not get into the hall. We had the seats taken out into the yard, and those who could not get seats stood. There were between three and four hundred. The Waldensian women peasants wear white bonnets to distinguish them from the Catholics. And as young and old sat before me with their snow white bonnets and neat blue calico dressed, it was at least a new sight to me. They listened with the deepest interest.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 21

The ancient or elder of the church was present and wanted, before the commencement of the meeting, the privilege of presenting some ideas. I told A. C. Bourdeau that since they would not let us into their churches, to give them our congregation—who had come, many of them, from the highest points of the mountains to hear what we had to say—would be very unwise. Brother Bourdeau told the messenger that he must first have an interview with him and then he could better tell what to do; but he would not have the interview, so our meeting passed off pleasantly.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 22

It is considered an offense, subjecting one to be dealt with by the law, if he opens his lips in a congregation to oppose without permission. I had much freedom in speaking, and the people wept. My own heart was warmed with the love of God, which was the theme of my discourse. There were about two hundred who were standing, and all was quiet except now and then when new ones would come and try to find a place to hear; then there was a little stir. These people have to begin with their ABC's. They seem to be dull of comprehension in regard to what constitutes true Christianity. After they have attended meeting once on Sunday, they think that is all there is to it; then they can buy, sell, work, or play. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 23

This work must necessarily go slowly. May the Lord bring these people out from the errors and darkness that now enshroud them. If the Vaudois ministers see any one deciding to keep the truth, they are at once on their track and tell them that they will not get any work if they keep the Sabbath, and then they hold out inducements that will help them financially; and to a people who have not felt the importance of obeying the truth at any cost to themselves, who have hitherto relied upon their ministers, it is a great temptation to have a bribe offered to them. But every barrier is erected to prevent the truth's finding access to the people. We would certainly be discouraged if we had not faith to believe that the Lord had ways and means to reach souls that we do not always discern. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 24

I spoke at St. John's three times to good audiences. There were several educated men and women who could understand English. I felt much freedom in speaking to the people in this place, but it was hard on me. The meetings did not commence till eight o'clock, and we had to ride three miles home, so we did not get to bed till about midnight. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 25

Last Thursday, April 29, we left Torre Pellice for Geneva. We had a favorable journey. The scenery was very fine. I spoke in Geneva Friday night to an intelligent audience. These were assembled in Brother Bourdeau's house. I had special freedom here. Quite a number spoke English. Sabbath morning we came to this place. In two hours we shall take the cars for Basel. I have spoken twelve times in about fourteen days, and I am tired and want to rest. 4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 26

There have been many anxieties connected with this journey that have wearied me much more than speaking—considering fields of labor, bearing the plain testimony where I see it is needed, counseling and advising the workers. Sometimes I am much exhausted, but I gird up and, trusting in the Lord, I move forward, and the Lord sustains me. I find that I have help in every time of need. I should be surprised if the Lord should fail me once. I do not expect it.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 27

I thank you, my brother, for your interest that I should have a horse and carriage. I have one. I was enabled to hire money in England, and I invested it in this horse and carriage. It was a positive necessity, for I cannot walk much. My lame ankle becomes at times very troublesome. At times the limb seems stiff somewhat, but I can walk some without limping. This is a blessing.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 28

I thank you for your liberality, but I need not draw upon you. If I were under real necessity, I would not hesitate to accept your very liberal offer; but there are means enough in my hands if they can only be brought out of places where they are invested. I believe God will open my way in His own time, and I will hire until then what means I will have to use. The Lord is good. I trust Him with my whole heart. I am His property. All I have and am are His, and I will not dishonor Him so much as to have any fears or distrust.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 29

I have a good, gentle horse, afraid of nothing. Four years old. I can drive him myself anywhere. I had to pay $175 for him. The harness was $40; and the carriage, which was secondhand, but strongly built and very nice, we got for $110. It is so arranged that we need only to grease it twice or three times a year. It is a very comfortable carriage. I think they said the first cost was $300. The owner wanted a lighter one.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 30

May 4

Basel, Switzerland

We arrived at home last evening at eight o'clock. We were glad to get home again. We were gone two weeks and a half. We left a good interest in Lousanne. We are glad so many are accepting the truth there. When we consider how hard it is to make an impression on the minds of the people in Europe, we consider that twenty, coming into the truth, is a success under the special blessing of the Lord. I feel deeply grateful if one soul in this country is truly converted, for that one will become a channel of light to others. The Lord will work for this people here. Twenty could be more easily reached in America than one here.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 31

We have been made sad that Brother Ertzenberger has been obliged to leave his field of labor. He had an attack of malaria. I am quite sure that if he could have had someone to give him treatment, he need not have been nearly two months from his work. He has a determination of blood to the brain. Willie gave him some treatment. We prayed for him, and he returned to his field of labor last Sunday; but I am troubled on his account for his health. He is a good speaker, both in German and French. The Lord is with him.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 32

I have had much hard labor with Brethren Bourdeau. They will listen to me, but to no one else. We work and pray for them, and they are certainly in a much better condition to receive counsel than ever before. It is difficult to get organized and to have those who have no experience in our manner of working get into working order, to act harmoniously, and to counsel together. Each seems to be inclined to be an independent company of his own, building barriers about his own individual work as though no other worker should have any interest in the work he does; and it has to be line upon line and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little. May the Lord teach us that we may correctly instruct others, is my earnest prayer.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 33

The greatest and most difficult lesson to teach these new converts is that the state of the heart regulates the life and character. When we instruct them in regard to the claims of the law of God, there is need of having the spirit of the law in the heart; and unless you can succeed in impressing them with its far-reaching principles, as Christ taught in His sermon on the mount, your labors will be lost. We see the Lord is working with our efforts; and when we have accomplished the work we desire here, we will be most grateful to sail across the waters to America. I do not allow myself to become homesick. I put my whole soul into the work and write and speak to the people, and my counsel and labors are not in vain in the Lord. There is cheerfulness, peace, and joy to bring into our work here. We have blessedness here below.4LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 34

The knowledge, the fear, and the love of God are its fountain head.

We have peace with God through Jesus Christ. The adding of grace to grace daily will restore the image of God to man. It is our lifework to answer the prayer of Christ; to be one as He was one with the Father; to sanctify our souls through obedience to the truth; then our example will have a sanctifying influence upon all who are around us. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." [1 John 3:2.]4*LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 35*

Now is our time for humbling ourselves. A little in the future will be God's time for exalting the very ones who were the most meek and lowly of heart. God is our light, and He will be in the future; and not only our light, but our honor and glory, our exceeding great reward.4*LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 36*

I feel the deepest interest in you and in your wife. I love you both, and I long for you to have a deeper knowledge of Jesus Christ. I know what He has been to me; I want He should be the same to you, the Chief among ten thousand, the One altogether lovely. His service is my joy. I know in whom I have believed, that He will keep that which I have committed to His trust against that day.4*LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 37*

May the Lord bless you, my dear children. Permit me to call you thus.4*LtMs, Lt 7, 1886, par. 38*

Lt 7a, 1886

Ings, Brother and Sister

Basel, Switzerland

August 11, 1886

This letter is published in entirety in 21MR 306-309. ⁺Note One or more typed copies of this document contain additional Ellen White handwritten interlineations which may be viewed at the main office of the Ellen G. White Estate.

Dear Brother and Sister Ings:

We received your welcome letter a few days since and were so glad to hear that you had a favorable passage. I wish I were in England this moment, I want to see you both so much.4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 1

I have been very earnestly at work here. We have been seeking to do everything in our power to educate the people here to understand what it <means> to be a Christian. We have been holding morning meetings the past week at half past, lasting one hour. All who are connected with the office and all in the building attend these meetings. I talk to them about 30 minutes, and then we have a social meeting. In the past two weeks, I have spoken nine times; three times at length. I feel deeply that we must do everything in our power to educate the people to be Bible Christians. Not only must we show in our character the meekness and lowliness of Christ, but we must educate the people who profess present truth so that they will not be satisfied to merely have a nominal faith in the truth for this time, but have that faith brought into their character as a sanctifying power. How few of us see the importance of living by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God; <that is, not depart from a Thus saith the Lord.>4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 2

I feel deeply in regard to the fact that our people talk the truth, but do not live the truth, <carrying its principles in their life practices.> Every church that has been organized needs a work done for them that God alone can do. They talk consecration, mention consecration in their prayers, and say over and over again, “We give ourselves wholly to Christ” when they hold tenaciously to their own <ideas and> will and are not consecrated to Christ. Saying consecration, praying consecration, is not enough. <We must practice consecration.> We feel deeply pained to see the absence of consecration in the individual members of the church. These reach too high. When they bring their consecration down into their very words and actions, into their associations with one another, they will bring consecration into their practical life.4LtsMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 3

It is present religion we need, <not an imaginary religion.> It is a Saviour today to help us. It is to reveal Christ in our words today; it is to be kind, tender, and affectionate today; it is to esteem others better than ourselves today. Each separate word and action is to show consecration not to ourselves, but to God. <We are fitting up for heaven>—the spirit of Jesus dwelling in us richly by faith. Consecration is a very simple thing when brought daily into our individual life in practice, <but it is our spiritual power.> We shall know far more by consecration <daily> than by <trusting to our> experience.4LtsMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 4

Each day, each hour let the heart go out after God. “Here Lord, I am Thy property; take me, use me today. I lay all my plans at Thy feet; I will have no way of my own in the matter. My time is Thine; my whole life is Thine. <Thou hast bought me with a price.>” Let the heart be constantly going forth to God for strength, for grace every moment. Let not one evil word escape our lips, because our lips, <our voice,> belong to the Lord and must be consecrated to the Lord and to His service; these lips must not dishonor Jesus, for they belong to Him. He has bought them, and I must speak nothing that will offend Jesus. My ears must be closed to evil. Thus day by day we can consecrate ourselves to God. The ears must not be defiled by listening to any gossip that fault-finding ones would have us hear; for I not only cause them to sin in allowing them to talk of others’ faults, but I sin myself in listening to them. I can prevent much evil speaking in thus having ears consecrated to God; I can say before the evil is done, “Let us pray,” then ask God to enlighten both our minds to understand our true relation to one another and our true relation to God.4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 5

Let us open our hearts to Jesus with all the simplicity that a child would tell its earthly parents its perplexities, and the things that trouble them. <Tell them you are not to listen to evil speaking, to hurt others.> Thus we can restrain evil not only in ourselves, but in others. Practice consecration to God daily, then there will be no danger in the life of service to God. We want gratitude brought into our life, <words, and works.> Every word, every thought of complaining indulged in is a reflection upon God, a dishonor to His name. We want our hearts attuned to His praise, full of thankfulness, talking of His love, our hearts softened and subdued by the grace of Christ, full of sweetness and peace and fragrance. We shall be patient, kind, tenderhearted, pitiful, courteous, even when dealing with those who are disagreeable. Oh, how many precious blessings we lose because we esteem self altogether too highly and have so little esteem for others. We want to live a life that will please God, one that will bear witness that we are children of God and not children of the wicked one.4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par.

6

This is the nature of the instruction that we are giving in the morning meetings, and we hope some good is being effected. <I feel Jesus verily present.> I tell you in the fear of God, our churches are altogether too formal. The love, the tenderness of Christ is not <expressed in> practice in their intercourse with one another. We must not demerit ourselves, and lightly esteem the ability given us of God, neither should we overestimate our own importance and trust to our <human> ability. Those who have far less ability may <verily> be doing far more for the Master because they put out to the exchangers every talent they possess. They keep up an unfaltering purpose, a brave heart, and a calm, peaceful, trusting confidence in God, because they believe His word. Heaven recognizes the loyalty of the soul that is struggling to do the will of God and to grow into the likeness of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par.

7

Each has to win His way by struggles and efforts to elevation of character and noble attainments. Jesus has divine help to give every one of us in our aspirations to seek to work out our <own> salvation with fear and trembling. God is ready to give abundant grace; <and> the door of the heart <must be> open to receive. Open the door and let the Saviour in. Then we must teach this, reveal it in our own lives; what rich promises we have, how deep, how full, how abundant. If we do not grasp them, we meet with a great loss, and those with whom we associate also meet with a loss. Jesus would reflect His light and grace through us to others. Then come close to Jesus; open the door of the heart, that the bright beams of Christ's righteousness may shine into our souls to be reflected upon others. 4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 8

We are to be constantly reaching upward to God. Think <much,> and talk little of ourselves, but talk of Jesus, dwell upon His matchless charms. Talk not of our trials, brood not over our privations, but remember Jesus the Son of God. Study His life of self-denial, self-sacrifice, His life of privation, and how much abuse He endured for our sakes <on the cruel cross,> and then let us never exalt ourselves or think we have a trying time, but let us be thankful. God does not want us to be in gloom, <but walk in the light as He is in the light.> Jesus lives; He is not in Joseph's new tomb, but lives to make intercession for us. He does not forget us for one brief moment. <He encouraged His disciples to [obey] that which He commanded them, [then promised], "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." [Matthew 28:20.]> Then let peace come into the soul, joyfulness into the heart, and speak forth <the words Christ has given us,> and show forth by our piety "the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light." [1 Peter 2:9.] 4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 9

I have written altogether differently than I had designed. Well you may see some who need these words which I have written. 4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 10

I understand a tent meeting is to be held in Grimsby. I want to know about this meeting. We may be able to leave here one week or two before the council shall begin. If it is thought best, I should like to speak in the tent where I need not an interpreter. I wish to hear from you again. How are you getting along? I wish <so much> Sr. Ings were here in Basel; but it may not be best, as we are coming there so soon. 4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 11

I think in the meetings held in Grimsby that there should be Bible lessons given in the place of many discourses. There should be visiting from house to house, to get at the people. Pray with them, talk with them, and above everything else I hope those who labor will plead with God for His Holy Spirit. This is what is needed. There is the Salvation Army, the Holiness Band with their cheap Christianity, and yet it pleases because there is no warfare. They present all smooth sailing. The truth brings before the people heart religion. It is not, they will say, who are in error [or] the works we do, but it is what Jesus does for us. This is all true but our works must be like the works of Christ. Now if God works by His power, the hearts of all must feel it. This then is the way to reach the people, through God. Be in earnest, agonize in prayer, and you will see the salvation of God.4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 12

With much love and a welcome to Europe, I remain your sister in Christ.4LtMs, Lt 7a, 1886, par. 13

Lt 8, 1886

Kellogg, J. H.

Steamer Melchior en route for Copenhagen from Christiania, Norway

July 16, 1886

Portions of this letter are published in UL 211; 11MR 299-300.

Dr. Kellogg

Dear Brother:

I have the most tender love for you, and would that it were otherwise with you, that those pursuing you would let you alone. But, my brother, you must bear in mind that these perplexities and annoying things are included in the "all things" that work together for good to those who love God. [Romans 8:28.] The Lord's eye is upon you, and He beholds those who would falsify you and harm you and tear you to pieces. But if you will keep up good courage, if you will stay your soul upon God, if you will trust your heavenly Father, as a child trusts its parent, and deal justly and love mercy, God can and will work with you. Then amid all your trials you will honor God, and His promise is sure, "Them that honor Me I will honor." [1 Samuel 2:30.] 4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 1

Remember that your experience is not the first of the kind. You know the history of Joseph and Daniel. The Lord did not prevent the wicked plottings of their enemies, but He caused all their devices to work for good to those who kept their faith and loyalty amid trial and conflict. 4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 2

The furnace fires are not to extinguish, but to refine, ennoble, sanctify. Without these trials we would not feel so much our need of God and His help. We would become proud and self-sufficient. In these trials I see evidence that the Lord's eye is upon you, and that He means to draw your heart to Himself. It is not the whole but the wounded who need a physician: those who are pressed almost beyond the point of endurance need a helper. Turn unto the stronghold. Learn the precious lesson, “Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me: for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light.” [Matthew 11:28-30.]4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 3

Jesus loves you, and your experience which you have written to me makes me glad, not because you are a sufferer, but because this is evidence to me that the Lord is testing and proving you to see if you will come to Him, to see if you will put your trust in Him, if you will find peace and rest in His love. I am praying for you, that Jesus will teach you precious lessons in coming to Him, the fountain of living waters. This is the experience every one of us must have if we ever dwell with Jesus in mansions He has gone to prepare for us. You have lessons of the highest value to learn in the school of Christ, lessons that will lead you to work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 4

If you are prospered, if all men speak well of you, then will be your danger. Be on guard: for you will be tried. My greatest fears for you have been that you would have too great prosperity and fail to learn that your dependence is alone upon God. Your heavenly Father loves you. He is all-powerful. He would draw you to Himself by the very trials that seem to you so severe. You have been placed in a position of great trust and honor, and there has been danger of your becoming dizzy and not realizing your dependence upon God. You have been in a position where you could exert a wide, far-reaching influence, if the eye were constantly <kept> single to the glory of God. While climbing the ladder of progress, if your eye <ever> sees God above the ladder, if you can see the messengers of light, angels of God, ascending and descending this ladder of shining brightness: if you can see the Lord as the source of all power, and you only His humble agent, walking in the ways of the Lord, keeping the truth in the beauty of holiness, then the <distinct> inducement is before you, the precious boon of eternal life—a home of rest, and peace, a crown of glory that fadeth not away, riches that are exhaustless.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 5

I have the deepest interest that you shall enter in through the gates into the city of God, not as a culprit barely pardoned, but as a conqueror. My brother, will you think of this? You will enter if you are <ever> true and humble and faithful in your duty in keeping the commandments of God in this life. As a victor the tree of life is yours; the city whose builder and maker is God is your city. A mansion of the blest belongs to you. Now let your imagination take hold of the things unseen. Let your thoughts be carried away to the evidences of the great love of God for you. In contemplating the object of which you are in pursuit, you will lose the sense of pain which these light afflictions bring which are but for a moment. If you lose heaven, you lose everything. If you gain heaven, you gain everything.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 6

July 17

Copenhagen

Paul was a man who knew what it was to be a partaker in Christ's sufferings. You have no need that I repeat the history of his trials, but let me say that his life was one of constant activity, and yet he was an invalid, subject to infirmities and to the hatred and malice of the Jews which was intense against him. They falsified his words, they were exceedingly bitter against him, and yet we hear his voice sounding down along the lines to our time: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." [2 Corinthians 4:17, 18.] "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." [Romans 8:18.] Paul had been dwelling upon the privileges and advantages of the Christian life and their value to those who become connected with Jesus Christ. He does not magnify them too highly. I do not speak with hesitancy about this matter; for I know for myself that what he says is true.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 7

He further says: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the Spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father." [Verses 14, 15.] One of the lessons we are to learn in the school of Christ is that the Lord loves us with a love far greater than that of our earthly parents. We are to rest in His love. As His adopted children we are to believe in God, exercise faith and perfect confidence in Him. "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together." [Verses 16, 17.] 4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 8

May the Lord help you, as a diligent student in the school of Christ, to learn how to lay your burdens upon Jesus. And if you are free in His love, you will look above and away from those annoying trials. See what Jesus has endured for us, and be sure never to forget that it is a part of our Christian legacy to be partakers with Christ of His sufferings, that we may be partakers with Him of His glory. How much better I feel about you when I know that all is not smooth in your pathway. You cannot expect it, and should not be discouraged. 4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 9

Look at the dream of Nebuchadnezzar as interpreted by Daniel. [Daniel 4:10.] In some particulars it was a beautiful dream. A lofty tree was seen planted in the earth. Flocks and herds from the mountains and hills were represented as enjoying shelter beneath its branches, and the birds of the air built their nests amid its boughs. This is the representation of a prosperous king. Nations were dwelling beneath his sovereignty. Families were blessed with peace. His kingdom was firmly established in the hearts of his loyal subjects. The king too knew his prosperity, and he was lifted up because of it. Human nature in its corruptness was revealed; it prompted the king, notwithstanding the warnings God had given him, to do the very things the Lord had told him not to do. He looked upon his kingdom with pride, and exclaimed, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?" [Verse 30.] The instant the words were uttered, the sentence was pronounced which felled the tree and degraded the monarch whom the tree symbolized. The reason which God had given him was taken away; his judgment which he thought so perfect, the wisdom which he prided himself as possessing were removed. The jewel of the mind, which elevates man above the beasts as the head of the body, he no longer retained.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 10

So the Lord will magnify Himself as the true and living God. "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself as a green bay tree. I passed by, and lo, he was not. I sought him, but he could not be found." [Psalm 37:35, 36.] The sceptre is no longer held in the hand of a proud and powerful monarch. The mighty ruler is a maniac. He now herds with the cattle, to feed as the cattle feed: he is a companion with beasts. He whose brow wore a coronet is no longer crowned, but disfigured with absence of reason and intellect. The mandate has gone forth: "Hew down the tree, cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruits." [Daniel 4:14.] Let men become lifted up in pride, and God will not sustain them and keep them from falling. Let a church become proud and boastful, not depending upon God, and exalting His power, and that church will surely be left by the Lord to be brought down. Let a people glory in wealth, intellect, knowledge, or anything but Jesus Christ, and they will soon be brought to confusion.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 11

Now, my brother, remember that this earth is not heaven. Christ has told you in the world "ye shall have tribulation," but He says that in Him we shall have peace. [John 16:33.] "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven; for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." [Matthew 5:10-12.]4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 12

Jesus has not left you to be surprised and amazed at the trials and difficulties you meet. He has told you all about them, and He has also told you that you should not be cast down and oppressed when trials come. You are to look to Jesus, your Redeemer, and be cheerful and rejoice. The trials hardest to bear are those which come from our brethren, our own familiar friends; but even these trials, if borne with patience, will reflect back upon those who caused them. Jesus is not enclosed in Joseph's tomb. I wish I could make my voice heard across the broad Atlantic Ocean.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 13

Jesus has risen and ascended into the heavens. We have a living Saviour, who so loved us that He died for us, that through Him we might have hope, strength, and courage, and a seat with Him upon His throne. You have One ready and able to help you whenever you shall call upon Him. He is at your right hand. If you try to carry your burdens alone, you will be crushed under them. You have weighty responsibilities, and Jesus knows all about them; but He will not leave you alone if you do not leave Him. He is honored when you commit the keeping of your soul to Him as unto a faithful Creator. He bids you hope in His mercy, believing that He does not desire you to carry these weighty responsibilities alone. Only believe, and you will see the salvation of God.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 14

Do you feel your insufficiency for the position of trust you are in? Thank God for that. The more you feel your weakness, the more you will feel inclined to seek for a helper. "Draw nigh to God, and He will draw nigh to you." [James 4:8.] Jesus wants you to be happy, to be cheerful, to do your very best with the ability God has given you, and then trust the Lord to help you and to raise up those who will be your helpers, in carrying the burdens.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 15

But never forget that Jesus will carry you and your burdens if you will only give yourself to Him. Let not the speech of the people hurt you. Did they not say worse things about Jesus? You are mortal and erring, and may sometimes give occasion, but Jesus, never. He was pure, spotless, and undefiled; then do not expect a better portion in this life than the Prince of glory had. When your enemies see that they can make you feel keenly, they will rejoice, and Satan rejoices. Then look to Jesus, and work with an eye single to His glory. Keep your heart in the love of God.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 16

Whatever persons, even church members, may say or do, move right on, calm and trusting, ever trusting in Jesus, bearing in mind that you are not your own, that you are Christ's property, the purchase of the blood of God's beloved Son, and that you are engaged in His work, seeking to bless humanity. It is a great work, a blessed work, and do not let the perversity of even church members move you from firm trust and abiding faith in the promises of God.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 17

It hurts you when one for whom you have done much becomes your enemy, because of having been brought under an influence which was against you. But do you not do nearly the same thing to Jesus? He has been your best friend. He has done everything He could do to win your love. He has invited your confidence. He has invited you to come to Him with all your burdens and all your griefs and has pledged His word, that He would give you rest and peace if you wear His yoke and lift His burdens, which yoke He declares is easy and the burden light. [Matthew 11:28-30.] Show that you do believe. Take God at His word. You never could have stood where you are, bearing the responsibilities you have borne, unless Jesus had given you special help. Acknowledge this. Praise God for the help He has been to you, and trust Him still. 4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 18

My brother, weave Christ into your life. Do not feel that you are answerable for the wrong course of others, even in the church. There are in the church unfaithful ones who treat Jesus far worse than they treat you. Were He here upon earth, they would insult Him, revile Him, defame Him. "It must needs be that offenses come, but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh." "It were better that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." [Matthew 18:7, 6.]4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 19

Jesus sees every action of the children of men. He weighs thoughts and motives. You are carrying a heavy load. I wish that every one could feel this as I do, and would be true and faithful to you, not to hinder, not to praise or extol and glorify you, but to look upon you as one whom God is using as His instrument to do a given work, and that they must not block the wheels, but put [their] shoulder to the wheel, and help rather than hinder. 4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 20

Again I say, Rejoice in the Lord. Weave Jesus into your daily experience, and rest in Him. His power as a helper you need, and you may have it. Go forward firmly, valiantly, courageously. You may err in judgment, but do not lose your hold on Jesus. He is wisdom, He is light, He is power. He is to you as a great Rock in a weary land. Rest under His shadow. By living faith grasp the arm of infinite power, and hold fast. You are where you need wisdom, and Jesus will give it. Do not be unbelieving. Jesus is true. Let God be true, but every man a liar if need be. The more you are jostled, misapprehended, misstated, falsified, the more evidence you have that you are doing a work for the Master, and the more closely you must cling to your Saviour. Be as undisturbed as possible in your difficulties, be patient, kind and forbearing, not rendering evil for evil, but good for evildoing as did Jesus. Look up to the top of the ladder. God is above it. His glory is reflected upon every soul ascending heavenward. Jesus is the ladder. Climb up by Jesus, cling to Jesus, and you will ere long step off the ladder into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par.

21

I want you to have heaven. I know of no one who would appreciate heaven more than yourself, who have been engaged here in working to relieve suffering humanity, depriving yourself of sleep, neglecting even to take food, bringing but little enjoyment into your life. At times there does not seem to be much sunshine in your path, but one long continuous shadow. The afflictions you see, the dependent mortals looking and longing for human help, your dealing with humanity depraved, corrupted, while your soul is sick, disgusted with the pollutions of sin, this experience is of a character to undermine your faith in humanity. You must indeed look to Jesus for the glories at the top of the ladder. Have faith in God. Through Christ's righteousness alone you can make sure of heaven, where all is purity, holiness, peace, and blessedness, where are glories that mortal lips can never utter. The nearest you can come to describing it is to say that it is a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. There is an eternity, a blessed eternity, unfolding new glories throughout the ceaseless ages.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par.

22

You must be there, Jesus has purchased you an immortal inheritance. Whatever you may lose here, be determined that you will make sure of eternal life. But do not be discouraged. So many times I have seen that the everlasting arms were about you when you did not seem to realize or appreciate the great condescension of heaven. Live for Jesus. You can better work as a physician in the sanitarium if you make Christ your physician-in-chief. And still I say you must seek earnestly for the crown of life. You must make a business of serving God, and it will pay not only in this life, but in the life to come. I feel as deep an interest in you and your wife, whom I love in the Lord, as I do in my own sons and their wives. I want you and your good wife to be among the redeemed, to act a part in the coronation of Jesus Christ. I want so much that you shall come off more than conquerors through Jesus Christ, who gave His life for you.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 23

For this reason, my brother, I have spoken plainly to you. I was so desirous that you should have an eternity of bliss. Your position has been most trying. I have feared that you would lose faith and confidence and courage. But you must grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. You must be drawn close to your brethren; be spiritually minded. Whatever may come, do not lose faith in your brethren or in Jesus Christ; and hold fast the truth. Cling to your brethren, and Jesus will cling to you.4LtMs, Lt 8, 1886, par. 24

Lt 9, 1886

Harmon, Brother and Sister

Basel, Switzerland

February 8, 1886

This letter is published in entirety in 21MR 329-331.

Dear Brother and Sister Harmon:

I was very glad to receive letters from you, but I am unable to answer them at present. For two weeks I have suffered with congestion of the brain and eyes. Last Thursday I had a two hours' chill and was very sick all day. Friday morning our people arrived from America. Sabbath I had another chill, lighter, but was unable to sit up through the day. Have been quite sick today. How this will terminate I cannot tell, except that I do have faith in God that I will have strength to accomplish the great amount of work that is now in my hands in writing and arranging books. I am astonished at the amount of labor that God has given me strength to do since I have been here in Europe.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 1

I had written to Sister Lockwood that she need not be concerned in regard to the carpet after I saw the way opened to hire means. I thank you for the interest you have taken in this matter; also for the good price you obtained for the carpet. I would rather have kept it myself than to have sold it for any less.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 2

In regard to May Walling, I see there is reason in what you say. I have recently written to May, telling her to go to Brother Lockwood's at once, for I thought it was a burden imposed upon you that you ought not to have. And as my expenses were considerable here, I did not feel that while our house was open in Healdsburg it would be best to pay May's board, and you ought not to board her without pay. I feel perfectly safe with May under your care, and I did not propose her going to Brother Lockwood's because I had any lack of confidence in you, but only for the reasons I have named. I have written to Brother Lockwood to rent my house if possible. If he should do this, then I would want May to be with you, and if she makes a wise improvement of her time, continue at the school. Brother Lockwood may be able to rent the house; if not, it will be an expense to me rather than an income. You are on the ground and I am not. I leave it to you and your husband's judgment to do as you think I would do if I were there, in regard to May.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 3

In regard to the revival meetings at Healdsburg, it surely bears fruit of being the work of God, but in every such revival Satan gains advantages by coming in through unconsecrated persons who have had little or no experience in a life of piety and godliness. These elements will press to the front and on such occasions will be the most forward, the most zealous and enthusiastic.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 4

The very ones who could not be trusted with any important religious interest would take any burden, shoulder any responsibility, as though they were men and women who had earned a reputation through a life of self-denial, of self-sacrifice and devotion, that they were capable of deciding important questions and leading the church.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 5

To put confidence in these would be like committing big vessels into the hands of children to manage on the high seas. Such persons need the transforming grace of Christ daily in order to bear fruit to the glory of God. "Learn of Me," says Christ, "For I am meek and lowly of heart." [Matthew 11:29.] Such persons have never learned this lesson. If they would wear Christ's yoke and lift Christ's burdens, then they would understand better how they might help and bless others.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 6

Now I suppose these individuals were the very ones who were the most officious in the meetings in Healdsburg. From what I have been shown I would suppose that they were of that number that composed the private meetings, where only those who were wholly the Lord's met. I know what I am talking about, for these matters have been laid open before me several times; and yet I would say to my brethren and sisters in Healdsburg, I believe the Spirit of God has done a work for you.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 7

Hold fast everything that is good. Have no spirit of Phariseeism; have no loftiness and self-confidence. The lower you lie at the foot of the cross, the more distinct and the more precious will be your views of Christ our Redeemer. The one grace that is so much wanted with everyone who professes to be a follower of Christ is meekness, humility, humbleness of mind. One view of Jesus sends self-importance to the winds.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 8

If Satan can get us to enshroud ourselves in garments of self-righteousness, then we will not wear the robe of Christ's righteousness. Self-exaltation, and pride of position, and self-importance were the sins of Satan in heaven. True religion dies out of the heart when these take possession and are developed in the character.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 9

I have a deep interest for the church in Healdsburg. Their prosperity depends upon the right hold that they have of Jesus. The presence of personal home piety will tell upon their own character, upon the character of their children, and upon their behavior toward the animals which they use. The very animals will respond to the disposition of those who have charge of them. A man who has Christ abiding in his heart will not treat even his cattle disrespectfully, because they are God's creatures. One with the softening, subduing influence of the grace of God in his heart will not beat, bruise, or kick in a merciless manner his animals. He will remember that the angels of God are taking cognizance of his harsh and unkind words, and his ill-tempered actions. Heaven will never be peopled with such characters.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 10

May God help every member of the Healdsburg church to diligently search his own heart, and search the Scriptures until he is acquainted with the qualifications that are essential for him to possess in order for him to sit down with the suffering Man of Calvary on His throne. I leave these remarks with you. Make any use of them that you in your judgment may think proper.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 11

A few words more. If Christ is abiding in your hearts, by faith you will as a church have the presence of God. You will learn what it is to have the love of Christ in the heart for your brethren. You will learn how to exercise that love in your families and in the church.

First pure, and then peaceable, and then easy to be entreated, full of righteousness and good fruits. As Christ prayed that the church might be one, you will all try to be one, to see eye to eye, and speak the same words, and have the same judgment, and that there be no divisions among you. You will be united, and Christ will be your strength. We have but a little time of probation left us, and let not one neglect the preparation of the soul for eternity. It is a terrible thing to be lost. Brethren and sisters, be determined that you will labor for unity. This is the grace to cultivate, love, precious love. By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 12

May God bless you as you press close to the bleeding side of Jesus, is my prayer.4LtMs, Lt 9, 1886, par. 13

Lt 10, 1886

Gibbs, Dr.

NP

December 1, 1886

Previously unpublished.

Dear Brother in Christ:

I received your long letter remailed to me from Basel to Torre Pellice. I was much pleased to read your letter; for I have a deep and earnest interest that you should live so close to Jesus, that you will consult Him in all things, that you will have not only courage in the Lord, but the peace of Christ in your soul.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 1

I know how much you may be inclined to lean upon human support; for this is the danger with us all. There will be men of varied minds, with varied experience, who will give counsel which they think is sound; but should you follow their suggestions, their ideas and counsel, you would make serious blunders.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 2

You have a work of your own to do. The treatment of the sick in the institution requires skilful management and deep thought and power from above to deal with diseased minds. If you follow the counsel of those who have not your work to do, and who have not the best wisdom to deal with diseased bodies and ill-balanced minds, you will be in danger of making mistakes.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 3

You may trust in the Chief Physician of soul and body, seek His counsel, and then move according to your best judgment and practical knowledge. There are those who would move rashly and prematurely in some cases; but you must look to God and trust in God, the right arm of your power ever must be the Lord of hosts.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 4

Will you make the Lord your dependence and your strength? He will be to you a present help in every time of need. Trust in Him with all your heart—just with that simplicity that a child will trust in its parent. Do not let your judgment be swayed by any man’s mind; let God lead, let God direct you in all things.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 5

With Christ, the source of wisdom to guide you, you will have skill in the remedy for the soul as well as the body. You may be the occasion of spiritual joy and health, as well as the health of the body. You are in a position where you can do great good, if you are constantly relying upon God for strength and wisdom and daily counsel.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 6

The Lord is acquainted with every soul that makes Him his strength and gives Him the glory for all the good that He gives wisdom to perform. Personal religion is what you need; the peace of God in your heart will, imperceptibly to you, be imparted to the very ones who need the soothing power of God’s pure truth opened wisely in jots and titles to their understanding.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 7

He who is the guardian of the body’s health will be, if connected with God, the one who can help the diseased soul. The physician has a great missionary field before him. If he employs his talent aright, he can do good and precious work for God. He is not merely to amuse and pass away the time of the sufferer, to beguile his thoughts from the peril of his situation. No, no; he is to weave into all his ministration the consolation which true religion alone can afford.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 8

High and holy ends are to be kept in view; therefore the physician should have his soul connected with the source of all light, mercy, truth, and love, his own soul refreshed from drinking of the water of life; then he can lead others to the living fountain, turning the thoughts to Him who is ready to save to the uttermost all who come unto Him for peace and forgiveness, hope and salvation.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 9

There are precious opportunities opened up before the physician which are charged with vital results. Sick, suffering persons will have much more confidence in the physician whom they are convinced loves and fears God. His words will be relied upon. They feel a sense of safety, a confidence in the presence and administration of that physician.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 10

He who has the religion of Christ in his heart and brings it directly into the room of the suffering sick possesses a talent which will in every sense be put out to the exchanger and will reproduce itself a thousandfold. Never, never hide this precious talent in the earth. Improve it. The Word of God declares, "Them that honor Me, I will honor." [1 Samuel 2:30.]4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 11

There is a large field the physician has before him in which to work, not only with the suffering sick alone, but with the relatives of the suffering ones, who have with care and anxiety and sorrow watched the suffering ones, and feel themselves powerless to save one pang of anguish. The hearts of the relatives are softened.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 12

A godly physician can drop into the heart seeds of truth which may spring up and bear fruit to the glory of God. Grief concealed from others may be expressed to the physician. Then is the opportunity to point them to Him who has invited the weary, the oppressed, the very ones whose soul is aching for their loved ones.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 13

What an opportunity to propose a word of prayer, which will not occupy more than three minutes' time, presenting them to the Healer of all woes, the Soother of all sorrows. The physician who pursues this course can accomplish more than the minister in the pulpit.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 14

They are wise to win souls to Christ. If the physician has love for souls, he will improve these golden opportunities. Oh, if he could only know the value of these precious moments! And if wisely improved, he will see their far-reaching results in eternity.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 15

Let not the physician allow persons that are believers in the truth to talk their faith, even the truth, to patients unless questions are asked them. Then let them not feel at liberty to go on and give a long sermon. A word or two is enough. Let the anxiety be on the part of the patient, and let not the patient become disgusted or the mind braced against the truth by its being talked quite frequently to them. The true love for souls will lead to great self-control and wisdom in seeking to do them good. There will need to be constantly the grace of Christ upon helpers connected with the sick and caring for them to thus represent Christ in patience. The sick may be unreasonably exacting, fretful; but Christians should bear with this and not become disturbed and retaliate by word or gesture. They are to seek to make correct impressions that will recommend the religion which they profess, and thus honor the truth they believe.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 16

This is a missionary field of the highest order. And it is a school for those who are naturally impatient; it is a training school; and if they improve as they may, they will obtain a most valuable power of self-control. But if there are those who are not patient, tenderhearted, and pitiful and forbearing, who do not show that they are improving, learning lessons they should learn, dismiss them, and find others.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 17

Although they may claim to believe present truth, they have not been converted. They need to be fully and entirely brought under the sway of the Spirit of God before they are fitted for any position of trust. There will be those of our own people who profess to believe the truth, who will show that under affliction they are not Christians. They will manifest their own peculiar traits of character, exacting, imperious, and impatient, demanding large attention, impatient if their demands are not instantly obeyed, as if they were the only ones who have wants and who need the advice and counsel of the physician. His time may be employed with cases more needful, but they do not reason. They will not be patient and exercise self-control and look to Jesus to help them be kind and courteous. They will find fault with the physician who is doing his very utmost and taxing his physical and mental powers for those who need his care and attention. But if selfishness has been cherished in the heart, it will make itself known when any suffering comes upon individuals. If impatience has not been kept under by the grace of Christ, it will be revealed, and the physician will have a thankless set on his hands; and they are the very ones who claim to believe the present truth, fitting for the society of heavenly angels and the purified, sanctified, around the throne of God.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 18

Now, my Brother Gibbs, all these will need good Bible lessons upon the Christian graces; for they will be in your institution not the ones to recommend our faith or the religion of Christ before the unbelieving patients. They show themselves unprepared to live Christ before the unbelieving patients. They show themselves unprepared to live Christ or to die in Jesus. They show that they need the converting power of God. In the place of being exercised by the grace of Christ, who bore insult, neglect, mockery, and cruel scourgings and an ignominious death without murmuring, they show themselves to be exercised by the spirit of Satan. They are accusers, judging others freely, feeling hurt and slighted, and have a spirit of retaliation, feeling abused and neglected, as though there were [no] others that demanded attention and care as much as they. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 19

Now, do not become an infidel over these inconsistent professors of the truth. These are the ones, when the furnace fires are kindled upon them, [who] reveal that they are dross, not pure metal; not gold, not silver, not precious stones, but natures that have never been subdued and transformed by the grace of Christ. They have a false hope, a spurious religion, that will be consumed with them in the day of God's judgment. Those who claim to know Jesus, if the claim is true, will reveal that they do know Him, that they have learned of Jesus to be meek and lowly of heart, pure, uncorrupted by sinful habits. When affliction comes upon them, they will think of Jesus, that the Captain of their salvation was made perfect through suffering. They would consider Jesus every day, what He endured in their behalf, the agonies of the cross of Calvary; and they will bear their pain with patience, with fortitude, and with courage. They will think of Jesus. They trust in Jesus, and will rely on His grace, and cling to His promises, and will comfort their souls in the thought: Jesus knows every pang of anguish, and will not suffer me to be tempted above that which I am able to bear, but will with every temptation make a way of escape, that I shall not be overcome to deny Christ in thought, in word, or in action. These are precious victories to gain under the chastening rod. It is submission to reveal the precious fruits of righteousness and peace and willingness to endure all that God sees fit to send us. 4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 20

If imprudence of indulgence in intemperate appetite, if there has been a neglect to care for the health, if there has been mismanagement because ignorant of the laws of life and health, then there are lessons to be learned to become wise to avail themselves of every opportunity to learn in regard to the wonderful mechanism of the human body and become intelligent in regard to disease and its cause. If they are ignorant here, it is sin of which they need to repent. Their sufferings are of their own bringing on, not chargeable to God at all. If they give loose reign to lustful passion, disease must [be] the sure result; and to such I would say: Repentance, remorse, and contrition of soul are far more appropriate than petulance and faultfinding and complaints. You need simply pure and undefiled religion, that will make you servants of Jesus Christ, rather than to be servants of sin and Satan.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 21

Now, my brother, let all these classes be educated as far as possible; but be assured if they have a spurious religion, they will abuse your best efforts, misjudging your actions, complain of you to others, and reproach Jesus in the person of His saints. But be not troubled, be not disturbed. Just cling to Jesus. He will help you; He will vindicate you; He will be to you a present help in every time of need. When sorely pressed by the ingratitude and unhappy tempers of those who claim to know Jesus, but do not, just think that Jesus knows all about it; and if you have done the best you could, let God take care of the result. I know that you will have thankless hearts to deal with, but have faith in God. He will give you precious victories. Only be true to yourself, and true to your God, and He will work with your efforts. He will stand by your side in the difficult cases you are called upon to treat. He will be nerve to your hand, He will impart wisdom and skill, and you may trust Him fully. I want you to be every day a faithful child of God. He loves you; He wants to elevate you to His throne. May the Lord be with you, is the prayer of one who feels a deep interest in your case.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 22

I have carefully noted that which you have written in regard to Elder Loughborough. He has come at a time when he was greatly needed, and he has labored with disinterested efforts to get the institution upon the right foundation. With the means with which he has had to work, he has done nobly. He knew if he should accumulate a heavy debt, it would be discouraging to the future prosperity of the Health Retreat. He has had experience and has been a safe financier. The Health Retreat must grow up gradually. Many improvements have already been made; and how much better it is to do slowly than to dash ahead and be overwhelmed in debt! It was through the suggestion of W. C. White to Elder Loughborough that Brother Phip's money was turned into the Health Retreat, even after the papers were written for receipt of it in the publishing association. It was Elder Loughborough, I think, that secured for the Health Retreat several thousand dollars, and it is Elder Loughborough that will work interestedly in its healthful upbuilding and progress.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 23

It is no difficult matter for one to discern the improvements that might be made in enlarging the facilities at the Health Retreat. But do not become elated in regard to this matter till you know that the means are at your command. Brother Church may devise liberal things, and I hope he may make liberal donations to the Health Retreat. If he can get the means, he can be the manager of all the improvements he wishes to make, with the united judgment and counsel of others. We would be pleased to see very large improvements made upon the retreat grounds, but it must be done in the right way.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 24

Brother Church can never have the sole control of that retreat. Go to his own home, and see his management. There is not furniture or anything else sufficient to make a decent home. It will not and must not be left with him to superintend the retreat. He may superintend outside arrangements, but never to get the management of the institution in his own hands. As a surveyor, he may lay out roads; for he has experience in this work. We know him to be defective in many respects. He may be strong in some points, but very weak in other points. At a time when we needed means so badly to purchase our college, he made a visit to Healdsburg and had money in his pocket, designing to purchase the college, but learned that W. C. White was negotiating for the building which the board of directors had authorized him to do. But when Brother Church found that he could not buy the building and have the deed made out in his own name, he did nothing, but went back with the money in his pocket and has not donated a cent to the college. His own son that has been a student at the college for years could scarcely obtain money enough to pay his tuition or his board, because the father had his son's property in his charge.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 25

Now, my brother, it will not be wisdom to change a discreet, careful manager for one untried, whose own home is devoid of comforts. He does not bring into his house suitable provision to nourish the body. Brother Church has kept his money rolling about in the many ditches which he has had on hand. Notwithstanding warnings and cautions from the Lord, when he desired he could get hold of thousands of dollars to invest in a mill, when we were pleading for a small amount to set this institution on its feet. And when our college was struggling under financial pressure, we obtained nothing from him.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 26

I acknowledge that Elder Loughborough has a very close and narrow management with means—sometimes may lead him to narrow plans; but I would much rather it would be thus than to have him on the other side, extravagant in the outlay of means, laboring to extend and to enlarge, when the institution will be under debt and financial pressure. Beware of placing men where they desire to be, in having control of matters in the Health Retreat. Remember, you cannot judge of a man's capabilities and qualities by his keen discernment in regard to wonderful improvements, involving a large outlay of means. We could, any of us, see where the improvements could be made. If our brother will donate a few thousand dollars for the enterprise, to be managed by the board of directors, we will thank Brother Church, and we will thank the Lord who gave him the heart to [do] this. We will first expend the means in making suitable buildings for the retreat, for the present necessities, and then will go one step in advance, until we see the retreat standing on solid foundation, but free, unburdened by debt, and not under the control of any one man to receive any one man's mold and carry the mark of any one man's deficiencies. I believe any exchange in the managers at present would be unwise.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 27

I have many fears for Brother Church. He has already thousands of dollars pledged to the various branches of the work, but it has remained thus for years. He loves to superintend and do a large work; but when it comes to the minor, very important interests of life, he shows a surprising stupidity. So it would be with the Health

Retreat. The furnishing of the house would be woefully neglected, if left to him. I know; for his case has been presented before me. I know that his wife has not been treated as she should have been; that his relatives are indignant because of this. She has not had the essential things in the line of food and clothing, to say nothing of home conveniences. We wish to take these things into consideration. If you move slowly and surely, then you will not become embarrassed. I heartily approve of Elder Rice's movement in securing water for the retreat. This is golden—of more consequence than the erecting of large buildings, of more consequence than the laying out of new roads just now. But this will come in time, if we move cautiously and economically. We placed Elder Loughborough in the position of trust he occupies, because he would, by being thus connected, use his influence, which is not small, to secure means and turn it into the channel to build up the retreat. He feels under a responsibility to secure for it patronage; and while Brother Rice and Elder Loughborough are connected with it, the people who know them will feel safe that the evils of the past experience will not be repeated. They feel safe in the present managers; and whereas the people's confidence has been terribly shaken and abused heretofore, there is now a growing confidence, because cautious and discreet men are managing the finances. Although things may seem to move rather slowly, more has already been done than we could reasonably expect in a little more than one year. Let us make haste slowly and enlarge safely.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 28

The water privilege, I must mention again, is a wise thing. The Lord help the managers to work in His wisdom, and bear in mind that this is God's institution, that grandeur and display are not the aim, but to work discreetly as we go, to build up. The most important thing is that the religious interest keep pace with the improvements that shall be made. Let the good of souls be the aim of every effort made. May the Lord let His blessing rest upon the Health Retreat. Let the prayers ascend to heaven, that the pillar of cloud shall abide upon this retreat as God's instrumentality. We must guard its interests sacredly; and if those who claim to believe the truth will verify their faith by their words and works, we shall have a chapel on the hill, we shall have a church there, and souls will be gathered into the fold. But some who claim to believe the truth are not sanctified through it. They cannot bear the test of trial; when affliction comes, they show that they are not converted. They are impatient, fretful, and demanding great attention. They show that they have not the graces of the Spirit specified in the Word of God.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 29

“But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance.” [Galatians 5:22, 23.] Now, some very plain things will have to be spoken to our people in regard to these things; for although some claim to believe the truth, the carnal mind still remains, and they will, if evil-minded, speak against the physicians. They will not have any sense of the burdens and anxieties these men have to carry; but because their own peculiar ideas are not met on every point, in the place of seeking to build up, they will tear down, some claiming to be of Israel, who are selfish, covetous. They have very large and extravagant ideas what the institution should be, but at the same time will not give one dollar to make it after their lofty ideas; and if they are patients, they will want the best chances, and with the least pay.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 30

Brother Gibbs, our dear Saviour has very crooked material to deal with, and how patient and long-suffering He has been! Then we will try to be patient and forbearing and hopeful to the last, but we must be discreet. We must not be surprised to find ourselves disappointed in men and women, but we must remember that Jesus alone is infallible.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 31

I am very happy to learn that there is harmony between you and Dr. Burke. May the Lord bless you both in consulting together and in being a strength in sustaining each other and jealously guarding the interests of each other. The institution cannot prosper unless the physicians labor together in love and unity.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 32

In regard to our work and duty in this life, we should be sincere, true, unselfish; for God looketh upon the heart. The prayer may well go up to God, “Create in me a clean heart.” [Psalms 51:10.] It is for our eternal interest that this should be, that the heart is clean, pure, and holy.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 33

In the medical profession, none but Christian men can perform aright the high duties of their profession. All then will be subordinate to the high eternal interest of the future immortal life. This is the only way that the Saviour's example is best copied and His name exalted upon the earth. Oh, how anxious I am that the physicians that are working at the retreat shall daily learn in the school of Christ His humility, His meekness, and then they will represent Jesus to all connected with them. Blessed, thrice blessed, will you be as physicians, if you have learned from the Head of the church to watch for souls as they that must give an account, while at the same time divine wisdom combined with your skill and effort will bring relief to suffering humanity and bless the bodies as well as the souls of men for whom Christ has died. Do not fail, my brethren, to devote much time to prayer and the study of the Scriptures.4LtMs, Lt 10, 1886, par. 34

Lt 11, 1886

Gibbs, Dr.

Basel, Switzerland

April 5, 1886

Portions of this letter are published in TDG 104; 3Bio 341.

Dr. Gibbs

Dear Brother in Christ:

I have suffered severe attacks of sickness since I came to Europe, but I have not been situated so I could do much for myself, and I could only pray, urging the necessity of my case to my heavenly Father. My eyes by constantly using them gave out. I suffered intense pain in the back of the ball of the eye. I could not write, but the Lord was my physician. I put forth all the strength of the soul in grasping the hand of infinite power. I dared not do anything for fear I should do something that would make them worse. But the Lord heard me. I know that He heard my prayers. I was indeed blessed, and health came to my eyes.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 1

Next I was attacked with malaria caused by overwork and anxiety. I was unable to sit up for one week and was feeble much longer. Again my trembling faith grasped the promises of God. I knew that Jesus understood all about my feebleness. My prayer was answered. I was healed and was filled with gratitude to God.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 2

Next my broken ankle began to swell and my lame hip to trouble me. Again I sought the Lord and urged my case to the throne of grace. I was a cripple for a number of weeks. Could not walk out of doors at all; but the Lord heard my prayer, and I am now walking with a rubber band about my ankle. Last Sabbath I spoke standing. The week before, for the first time in my life, I had to speak sitting, followed by two interpreters. I have proved the Lord on this journey to be a present help in every time of need. What a privilege is prayer! How sad and lonely would we be if in our sufferings we could not go to Jesus and tell Him all about it. Oh, if every one would only know by personal experience how much of heaven's promised rest can be secured to the soul even now by sincere prayer. If one has not learned this lesson, every other lesson of life better not be learned till he shall learn in the school of Christ how to master this lesson.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 3

As Christians we want a new and living experience every day. We want to learn how to trust Jesus, to believe in Him and confide everything to Him. Jacob was raised from a man of feebleness and defects through faith in God in prayer to be a prince with God. He prevailed through faith. God is omnipotent. Man is finite. In converse with God, we may lay the most secret thing of the soul open to Him, for He knows it all; but not to man. We want more faith, greater trust, more firm reliance.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 4

"The conflict which was once urged in Scotland which gave her greatest victory was not gained in Holy Rood Palace, neither in the contest of armies, but in the secret chamber alone with God." "Men prayed all night. One man was crying in agony, and in the desperation of his faith he exclaimed, 'Give me Scotland or I die!'"4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 5

We are often brought into strait places with uncertainties and then, oh then, we must pray. I believe as I have for years that the Health Retreat will succeed if God is made first and last and best in everything. If you put God out of sight, if you sink principle into policy plans, then you separate God from you and will have the frown of God and not His blessing. I see by faith in the near future success to your institution. I see by faith that the physicians will succeed in tact and skill and wisdom because they will honor Jesus as the chief Physician. Let no man glory in his wisdom, but let him glory in this, that he knows God. And if he will make God first, angels of God will minister to those who are in the institution and have the care of it. God is at work for you. Let Him mold you as clay is molded in the hands of the potter.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 6

We are now contemplating another journey to Italy. We should visit the churches; they are calling for us loudly. They call for us to again visit Denmark, Sweden, and Norway. These places demand much hard work, and I dread it, but I may feel that I must go. Jesus lived not to please Himself. I do not know as we will get away from here this winter. May the Lord direct.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 7

It is now beautiful weather. The grass is a lovely green. Trees are leafing out, the birds are caroling their songs, and my heart is filled with gratitude to God. I will make melody to God in my heart.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 8

This is a hard field. Poverty meets us on every hand. I do not want to stay here any longer than duty demands. I want to be just where the Lord would have me to be and work with all the strength and power God has given me. There is a great work to be done here. Men and women are convinced of the truth, but poverty stands to bar the way. I wish some who had means would come into the truth and open some manufacturing establishment to give work to those who keep the Sabbath. Well, we must pray. The mightiest man on earth is the man who prays in the sincerity of his soul. He grasps the arm of Infinite Power.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 9

April 5. I received your letter and was glad that everything between myself and the Rural Health Retreat was not frozen up solid. Now spring has come, and the ice is broken up. I hope to receive more communications from that institution, in which I have had so great an interest. I received a letter this morning from R. G. Lockwood in which he speaks of the retreat in the highest terms. He reports that it is full and running over. Glad to hear this. I hope and pray that you may all have wisdom to move in the order of God. Do not let go your hold from above. Cling fast to the Mighty One. God has said, "Them that honor Me I will honor." [1 Samuel 2:30.] When Christ and the truth are not put into a corner out of sight, but made prominent, then God will work with your efforts. I believe it, I believe it. The more you feel your own weakness and make God your trust, the more will He work with all your efforts.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 10

You need Christ as the Physician in Chief in your institution. "Without Me ye can do nothing." [John 15:5.] Therefore you may be assured and have confidence in God. But do not trust to your own wisdom. Do not become careless and separate from the Source of your strength. Watch your thoughts, watch your words, and in all things you seek to do, seek to glorify God. The more closely you lie at the foot of the cross, the more clearly will you see the matchless charms of Jesus and the unparalleled love He has evidenced for fallen man. Stand, my brother, firmly for principle. This health retreat may be the means of great good. This is the object to be kept prominent. It is one branch of the work of God in these last days to fit a people to stand in the day of the Lord. It is an instrumentality in the hands of God's stewards to accomplish great good, if it will be kept pure and holy and undefiled. Satan will seek always to work through the natural inclinations. This is the reason so much is said in the teachings of Christ of a radical change in the entire man, represented as being born again. New motives must be created.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 11

There is much work to be done in your position of trust. But let not the pressure of business separate you from God, for if you ever need counsel and clear forethought and sharp ideas, it is when you have much work on your hands. It is then that you need to take time to pray, to have increased faith and implicit trust in the counsel of the Physician in Chief. Ask Him to help you. Pray the oftener the more critical [the] work you have to do. Stand firm as a rock to principle. Jesus will recognize every sincere effort made to glorify Him. Overcome defects in character. You may now, while entrusted with sacred responsibilities, be obtaining a most valuable experience. You may by precept and example be as Joseph was, a man whom God could trust. You may in all things not only be a physician to the body, but also to the soul. You should have new spiritual life in yourself, that you may impart light and knowledge to others. The love and fear of God is to be inwrought in the character. Jesus in His lessons laid down principles which should govern our efforts in all self-improvement.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 12

We should contemplate the wonderful love of God and the infinite sacrifice made for us, that we might reach the highest standard possible. Oh, what a theme to contemplate, that man, depraved and lost in his natural condition, may be renewed and saved by the gracious help that Christ gives him in the gospel. The love of Jesus in the soul will drive out the enemy who is seeking to take possession of man. Every trial patiently borne, every blessing thankfully received, every temptation faithfully resisted, will make you a strong man in Jesus Christ. All this grace may be gained in [the] prayer of faith. Jesus, precious Saviour! I hope and long to see every worker connected with the Health Retreat altogether what God would have them; but I beseech of you, do keep humble. Do not disconnect from God. Let gratitude be cherished in your hearts for every token of good. It is well to often enter into a close examination of self. Is all right between my soul and God? Is it well with my soul? Jesus taught that men ought always to pray and not to faint. Lay hold upon strength from above. Even Jesus, when preparing for some great trial, would resort to the solitude of the mountains and spend the night in prayer to His Father. May God help you and bless you.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 13

I will say a few words in reference to the cottages. Willie says: "Mother, do not sell your upper cottage; keep it; you need it." So his arrangements in regard to it may stand just as he has made it to Elder Loughborough. It stands on the very best place on the hill, and to me the most desirable; therefore I will hold it for the present and rent it to the institute. As W. C. White says, the Scott cottage must bring me something more than the upper cottage.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 14

I pay here about $14 per month for rent. It may be $15 now we have more rooms. I had to buy me a horse and carriage which cost me about $325. Since I have become so crippled, I can walk but a very little, and I must be in the open air. We live very plain because of the scarcity of means. Every worker has to be paid, for it is all he has to put bread into the mouths of his family. I never saw such a state of things in America.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 15

Well, I must close. Respect to all the workers and to the friends.4LtMs, Lt 11, 1886, par. 16

Lt 11a, 1886

Daniels, Brother and Sister E. P.

Basel, Switzerland

August 6, 1886

This letter is published in entirety in 21MR 332-335.

Dear Brother and Sister Daniels:

Again my mind is much exercised in regard to you. I dreamed that I was in your home, sitting at your table, but I could not see that the teachings that you have given others on self-denial and health reform were carried out. I groaned in spirit, and said, "Bro. Daniels, you are going into darkness." The Lord has shown me that you have such traits of character that, should you be prospered financially, you would be in danger of losing your soul. You would not be economical; you would use your means too freely; your wants would increase, and you would not practice self-denial. I was shown that the Lord in mercy has kept you in the school of poverty, that He might save your soul.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1886, par. 1

Sister Daniels has lessons to learn in economy. I saw that you, Bro. Daniels, had been tested by poverty and that the Lord would test you with prosperity. If your use of His blessings and the advantages He gives you should not be in accordance with your faith and your instructions to others; if you should not appropriate the means God brings in your hands, in accordance to your faith, then He would come closer to you by affliction, disappointment, and privations; for I saw that you do not know yourself. You would be led on by your natural inclinations, building high hopes on future prospects, but God would put His hand against you. He can in a moment remove your wisdom. He can in a moment take from you the power He has entrusted to you, by which you should glorify Him.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1886, par. 2

If left to yourself, to follow your own will and judgment, you will surely ruin your soul. Both you and your wife need to learn in the school of Christ.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1886, par. 3

Nebuchadnezzar was warned by God not to pursue a certain course; but his prosperity elevated and deceived him, and in an unguarded moment he exclaimed, "Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?" [Daniel 4:30.] The instant he uttered these words, the sentence was issued that felled the tree. The blessings God has bestowed upon him were removed, his reason was taken away, and the mighty ruler was driven from men to find his place among the beasts of the field. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1886, par. 4

There are many ways in which God can punish, and punishment will surely follow wherever pride is indulged. "Pride goeth before destruction." [Proverbs 16:18.] Let a man be lifted up by a sense of his own ability, and trust in his human strength, and he will surely be overcome by temptation. God will bring him down. He will teach him his utter weakness, that he may feel his need of divine aid. Let any one glory in his wisdom or his talents, or in anything but Christ and Him crucified, and he will learn that the Lord alone is to be exalted. 4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1886, par. 5

Now, Eld. Daniels, stop just where you are and consider; bring forth fruits unto righteousness such as you have not brought forth. A great deal was said about the injustice that was manifested when you did not receive credentials desired to labor in the cause and work of God, and could do so much good. Your credentials have been restored, and now God is waiting to see what you will do: whether you will give yourself unreservedly to His work or will please yourself. Will you connect in your work with those who will lead you to meet the world's standard rather than the standard of Christ? My heart is very sad when I think of the state of things in Healdsburg. I know the church is not in a right condition. I know that your plans and ideas have fashioned some of its members not to their spiritual advantage, but to their injury; and the end is not yet. I was in my dream led into the church, into the college, and into your house. I sat at your table and visited your rooms fitted up for your students, and I was led to see beneath the outward appearance, and I was very sad. I saw the working of things at present and what they would be in the future, which were far from being in God's order or according to His arrangements. I was shown some things in your family; the dangers that threatened your children of receiving a wrong stamp of character, a mold that will not be easily effaced—vanity, pride, love of dress, self-will, and anything but the meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price. May the Lord open your eyes to see and your heart to feel the necessity of an entire change.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1886, par. 6

You do not know how to use means, but God is proving you, and will you stand the test? But as I have written to you so fully in my former letter, I will now forbear.4LtMs, Lt 11a, 1886, par. 7

